JURIN, James, ju-rin, secretary to the Royal

Society of London, and president of the College of Physicians, wrote papers on philosophical and medical subjects in the "Philosophical Transactions," and had a dispute with Michelloti on the motion of currents; with Keill and Senac on the motion of the heart; with Robins upon distinct vision; and with the partisans of Leibnitz on the active forces. B. 1634; D. 1750. JUSSIEV, Antoine de, zhows we-u(r), a French botanist and physician, who, after travelling over botanistand physician, who after traveling over Europe, settled at Paris, where he became a member of the Academy of Sciences, and pro-fessor of botany in the Royal Garden. He enriched the memoirs of the French Academy with several valuable papers on botany and mineralogy, the result of observations made during his travels. He also wrote the appendix to Tournefort's "Institutions of Botany," and abridged Barrelier's work upon the plants of France, Spain, and Italy; he was likewise the author of a "Discourse on the Progress of Botany."

otany." B. at Lyons, 1686; p. 1758.

Jussieu, Bernard de, brother of the above, distinguished himself as an able physician and botanist. He became professor and de-monstrator in the Royal Garden, and was chosen a member of the French Academy of Sciences, and of several foreign societies. He published an edition of Tournefort's "History of Plants physician, but an excellent engineer. He published a journal of his voyages. B. at Lyon; 1704; p. 1779.

JUSSIEU, Antoine Laurent de, a celebrated French botanist, nephew of the preceding, was the greatest philosopher of his family, and author of the "Natural System of Botany." He went to Paris, in 1765, to complete his studies, under the direction of his uncle Bernard. In 1770 he took the degree of doctor of medicine, and was soon afterwards chosen professor of botany in the Royal Garden. In 1789, he published his great work, the "Genera Plantarum," in which, for the first time, the whole vegetable kingdom was arranged according to a natural classifica-He subsequently filled many important tion. The subsequency mice many important scientific posts in Paris, and continued till his eighty-eighth year to dictate valuable memoirs on the science of botany. The great work of Jussieu, in an improved and amended form, is one of the chief text-books on botany, not only in France but in England. B. at Lyons, 1719;

D. at Paris, 1836.

Jussieu, Adrien de, son of the above, was educated for the medical profession, but devoted himself to the science which his father had so greatly benefited. In 1826 he succeeded his father as professor of botany; and, although he wrote no large work on the science, he contributed a great number of valuable memoirs relative to it to the scientific annals of France. He also contributed to the "Natural History" of Milne-Edwards. He was a member, and afterwards president, of the French Academy of Sciences. B. at Paris, 1707; D. at the same place, 1853.

place, 1853.

JUSTEL, Christopher, zhoos'-tel, counseller and secretary to the king of France, published "The Code of Canons of the Universal Church," and the "Councils of Africa, with Notes," and "The Genealogical History of thouse of Advergen," B. at Paris, 1880; p.

JUSTEL, Henry, son of the above, and his successor as counsellor and secretary, was a man of learning and liberality, and so partial to England that he sent his father's MSS, to the university of Oxford, which learned body com-plimented him in return with the degree of LL.D. On the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, he went to London, and was appointed keeper

Just, John Henry Gottlieb von, yoo'-te, a German mineralogist, who devoted himself with assiduity to the study of mineralogy, and acquired such knowledge therein as to be named member of the Council of Mines. He afterwards became professor of political economy and natural his-tory at Göttingen. He wrote treatises on Miner-ellogy and on Money, for some free remarks in which, on the states of Prussia and Wirtemberg, he was confined for a considerable time in the castle of Breslau. He had projected a German Encyclopædia, and wrote some pamphlets against eminent naturalists. B. about 1705; D. 1771. JUSTINIANI, Bernard, yoos'-teen-e-a'-ne, aVene tian noble, was sent as ambassador to Louis XI.

581

THE DICTIONARY

Instiniani

of France, who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. In 1474 he was made procurator of St. Mark, the second dignity of the republic of Venice. He wrote a "History of Venice" and of venue. He wroten "History of venue" and ether works. B. 1095; D. 1489.

JUSTINIANI, Augustin, bishop of Nebio, in Corsica. Francis I. of France made him his almoner and royal professor of Hebrew at Paris. He perished in a shipwreek in sailing from Genoa

JUSTINIANI, Fabio, bishop of Ajacet, wrote a Commentary on Tobit, and a nidex of all the authors who had written commentaries on the whole or any part of the Bible.

JUSTINIANUS 1., jus-tin-c-ai-nus, emperor of the East, succeeded his uncle Justinus 1. in 527. lie was the protector of Christianity, and carried les arms with success against his enemies, for which he was chiefly indebted to his general Belisarius, who also preserved him from a formidable sarius, who also preserved munifrom a formulable conspiracy. Peace being restored, Justinianus formed into a body all the Homan laws, which was executed under the title of "Digests," or "Pandeets." After this great work was finished, the laws of modern date were collected into one volume, called the "Novella." He exerted himself against the ecclesiastical encroachments of Popes Silverius and Vigilius. He built many churches, particularly the Lamous Saint Sophia at Constantinople, and abolished the consulate. B. 483: D. 565.

JUSTINIANUS II. was the elder son of Constantine III., whom he succeeded on the throne of Constantinople in 685. He recovered several provinces from the Saracens, and made an advantageous peace with them; but his exactions, cruelties, and debaucheries tarnished the glory of his arms. He formed the design of destroying all the inhabitants of Constantinople, which being discovered, the tyrant was deposed in 694, and banished to the Crimea. Leo the Patrician gained the throne, but he was displaced by Tiberius. About 704, Justinianus, being aided by the Bulgarians, regained his crown, but was slain, with his son Tiberius, in 711, by Philippicus Bardanes, his successor.

JUSTINIANUS, St. Lawrence, the first patriarch of Venice, was canonised by pope Alexander VIII. in 1600. He was the author of several devotional works, which were printed in 2 vols. folio, with a life by his nephew. B. 1381; D.

1485

JUSTINUS I., jus-ti-nus, emperor of the East, rose to the rank of general from being a private soldier, before which, he was a swincherd. soldiers of the prætorian band forced him to accept the imperial dignity on the death of Anastasius, in 518. He recalled the bishops who had been banished by the Arians, and published several severe edicts against that seet. Hearing of the destruction of Antioch by an earthquake, he laid aside the imperial robes, clothed himself in sackcloth, and passed several days in fasting and prayer, to avert Divine judgment. He rebuilt Antioch, and other places

Justinianus I. in 565. He caused his cousin Jus-tinus to be strangled, and put to death some of his senators from a suspicion of their being disaffected. He made war against Chosrose, king custody, to make of Persia, who, being defeated at the head of a numerous array, was obliged to sue for peace. tin, he was mu Justinus married Sophia, niece of Theodora, n, 1892; p, 1603

wife of the emperor Justinianus, a woman of high spirit, who, taking advantage of her husband's weakness, governed the empire in conjunction weathess, governed the empire in conjunction with Tiberius. D. 578. JUSTINUS, a Latin historian of the 2nd century, who made an abridgment of the "Universal History" written by Trogus Pompeius, This work remains, but the original is lost.

JUSTINUS, commonly called Justin Martyr, a Christian philosopher and martyr in the 2nd century. His parents were heathens, and himself a zealous adherent to the Platonic philosophy; but, disputing with a Christian in 132, he was converted to that faith, though he still continued to wear the pallium, or cloak of the Grecian philosophers. He was an equal honour Greeian philosophers. He was an equal honour to Christianity by his knowledge, his firmness, and the purity of his life. A persecution breaking out against the Christians under Antoninus, Justinus presented to that emperor an admirable apology in their behalf, which had the desired effect. He afterwards addressed another apology to Marcus Aurelius, in which he defended his co-religionists against the calumnies of Crescentius, a Cynic philosopher. This last is said cerims, a Cynic Innosopher. This sake is said to have gained him the crown of martyrdom, about 135. Besides these apologies, his dialogue with Trypho, a learned Jew, and some other pieces in the Greek language, are extant. The best edition of his works is that of Jena, 1844.

JUVABA, Philip, yoo-cat-ra, an Italian archi-teet, who was employed by the king of Sardinia to build some fine structures at Turin. In 1731 the royal palace at Madrid being burnt, Philip V., king of Spain, sent for him to creet another, more magnificent; he made a design, which was approved of, but the commencement of the work being delayed from day to day, it is supposed the rehitect died of chagrin in 1735. B. at Messina, 1668.

JUVENCUS, Caius Vectius Aquilinus, ju-ven'us, one of the earliest Christian poets, was a native of Spain, and Hourished in the reign of Constantine. His principal performance was a life of Christ, entitled "Historia written in Latin verse.

JUVERAL, Decius Junius, ju-ve'-nal, a Roman satirical poet. He went to Rome when young, and was for some time a pleader, after which he applied himself to writing satires with great success. Domitian sent him into honourable sveess. Domitian sent him into honourable citle, by appointing him to a military command on the frontiers of brynt. The best translations of his works are those of Dryden, Gindred, and Hodgson. n. about $0; p. 120.

JENON, William, jut-on, archbishop of Canterbury, studied at $f. John's College, Oxford, of which, in 1621, he was elected president. In 1633 he was appointed clerk of the closet to the king, and the year following nominated to the bishoptie of Hereford, but, before consecration, he was advanced to the see of London. In 1635 he was appointed lord high researce, which excited great high excited present the see of London. In 1635 he was appointed lord high researce, which excited great high excite treasurer, which excited great indignation against Judgment. He rebuilt Anticch, and other places Archibishop Laud, as the means of it; but the
which were destroyed by the same calamity.
Judgment He rebuilt Anticch, and other places
Archibishop Laud, as the means of it; but the
which were destroyed by the same calamity.
Judgment He rebuilt Anticch, and other places
Archibishop Laud, as the means of it; but the irrepresentable. He sufficed, in the civil war, Irrepresentable He sufficed He suff but a great part of his temporal estate. In 1643 he attended the king upon the scaffold, after which the regicides caused him to be taken into custody, to make him reveal what Charles I. had secretly intrasted to him. At the Restoration, he was made archbishop of Canterbury, K

hand, kaub, a celebrated Arabian poet, con-temporary with Mohammed, whom he a' streamonsy copposed, but afters: As a reward for writing a poem the prophet gave him his green mantle, which a descendant of Kaab sold for 10,000 pieces of

KAESTNER, Abraham Gotthelf, kest-ner. mathematician, astronomer, and poet, who filled the situation of professor of mathematics at Gottingen with the highest reputation for more than forty years. His sciential, works are ex-

KATOUR, OF GATOU-KHALI, kat-ook, third grand khan of the Mongols, was son of Oktai, and grandson of Genghis-Khan. He completed Silver, n. 062.

Kasa, Nicholas, kaus, an eminont Danish and grandson of Genghis-Klan. He completed statesman, studied in the universities of Gerthe conquest of China, commiscately his father,

ent during the minority of Christian IV. Being attacked with a mortal disease previous to the coronation of that prince, he sent for him, and telling him that he had promised his father, in his last moments, to do all he could to see the crown placed on the head of his son, he gave him the key of the place where the crown and other regalia were kept, saying, "Take it in the name of God, and wear the crown with glory, name of God, and wear the crown with glory, sway the seeptre with wisdom and elemency, bear the sword with justice, and keep the globe with judgment." D. 1504. Kanpris, Joseph, kall-ye, a French seaman, who, being taken prisoner by the English, ob-tained permission to enter on board a South

Sea whaler, and being wrecked on the coast of the island of Noukahiwa, in the Pacific Ocean, fell into the hands of the cannibal inhabitants. While preparations were making for sacrificing him, and his doorn appeared inevitable, he was saved by the intercession of the king's daughter, who shortly afterwards became his wife, and he was made chief judge of the island, which office he exercised with reputation and comparative case, owing to the simplicity of the legal insti-tutions of the savages. Nine years had thus passed away when Kabris was carried off, as he stated, while asleep, by the Russian navigator, Captain Krusenstern. On returning to France in 1817, Kabris exhibited himself to the public at Paris and elsewhere, his face being tattooed in the New Zealand style. His object was to raise money, to enable him to return to his wife and family at Noukahiwa, where he had enjoyed haddan, ka-ar-ja, the mist whe of me-hammed, who, at the period of her marriage with the prophet, was the widow of two husbands, and forty years of age, Mohammed being only twenty-five. She had four sons and four daughters by the prophet, among whom was the beautiful Fatima. D. 621.

Kamefer, Engelbert, kame pfer, a German physician and traveller, who, in 1983, accom-panied, as secretary, the Swedish ambasador to Moscow and Ispahan. He afterwards embarked in a Dutch vessel, visited India, and then proceeded to Japan, making many valuable observations relative to the natural history of that country. He returned to Europe in 1693, and

CALB, John, Baron de, bulb, a German who served as general in the American army of independence. Having been employed in the French army, he was sent on a mission to the United States. In 1770 he espoused the cause of the Americans, and, after a voyage to France, re-turned with a number of men, among the rest turner with a manner of men, among the res-fine dissinguished Ladayette. He was appointed general, and was killed at the lattle of Camden in 1780. B. at Nurenberg, 1780. Kalckenburg, Frederic Adolphus, kalk-rog, count of, a Prussian ichi-masshal, entered the army in 1781, servel with distinction in the seven years' war; arrived, step by step, at the rank of general, and was made a count in 1788. His courage and ability were often conspicuously shown in the war with France; he took Mayence in 1793; had the chirf command of the troops in Pomerania in 1795; was appointed governor of Thorn and Dantzie, and made inspector general of cavairy, in 1806; concluded with Berthier, at Tilsit, the truce between Prussia and France, in 1807; after which, in conjunction with Golz, he concluded a peace with Talleyrand. He was then made field-marshal, and appointed governor of Berlin in

marshal, and appointed governor of Berun in 1810. n. 1737; p. 1818. KALIDASA. (See CALIDASA.) KALE, (Or EALF), William, keil, a Dutch painter, whosepaintings resembled those of Ren-brands in contrast of light and shade, and To-niers in minuteness and finish, p. 1604; p. 1698.

KALL-PACHA, kw-lil, grand vizier of Amurath II., gained the battle of Varna, in 1444, over Ladislas, king of Hungary, who perished in the fight. He also assisted at the taking of Constantinople by Mahomet II. in 1453, but was soon afterwards banished for alleged treason.

KALKBRENNER, Christian, kulk-bren-ner, a KLIKBERNEE, Christian, kull-bren-ser, as German musical composer, who resided some time at Berlin, attached to the court of the Prussian king, and, in 1703, went to Paris. His most celebrated works are "(01, mpus; Sanl," and "Faris, 1808.

"Sanl," and "Faris, 1808.

KAIM, Peter, kulm, a Swedish traveller and natural philosopher, who travelled in North America and Russia for the purpose of exploring those countries: and become professor ploring those countries; and became professor of botany in the university of Abo. His works of valuable manuscripts, which Sir Hans Sloane Sweden. B. in East Bothnia, 1715; D. 1770. published in English in 1897, under the title of "History of Japan." This work was afterwards translated into German and French. B. at elected inin their bishop, and ho founded sweral now probends in that and other churches. The

he retired to a monastery, where he wrote his "Chronicle of the Polish Kingdom." Kanes, Lord. (See Home, Henry) Kayasis, Constantine, kant-a-ris, a celebrated

Greek mariner, who, in the Greenan was of inde-pendence, signalized himself by conducting the fire-ships into the Turkish fleet. In 1824 he burnt a Turkish frigate at Samos, and a corvette in the port of Mitylene; after which he served under the Greek admiral as captain. In 1825 he attempted to destroy the squadron of Mehomet Ali, as it lay in the port of Alexandria preparing to embark troops for the Morea; but the fire-ships, driven back by a contrary wind, burnt themselves out

open sea, doing no injury to the enemy. 1827 he represented Ipsara in the Greek National Assembly; subsequently be commanded the Greek fleet, but on the assassination of the president in 1831, he resigned, and retired into private life. He was nominated minister of marine and president of the council in 1818-19. but again retired in 1855. He has been called the "Themistocles of Modern Greece," and and l Victor Hugo has popularized his daring deeds in verse. At the revolution in 1862, he became a member of the provisional government formed

after the expulsion of King Otho.

KANDLER, John Josehim, kan'-dler, master modeller in the porcelain manufactory at Moissen, executed many beautiful figures, particularly of the apostle Paul and the Death of St. Xavier. B. in Saxony, 1706; D. 1776. Kane, Elisha Kent, kuin, an American travoller, who, after concluding his education at the medical college of Pennsylvania, was ap-pointed, in 18-85, assistant surgeon in the United States navy, and accompanied the first American embassy to China. He afterwards American embassy to China. It afterwards visited the Philippines, Coylon, and travelled into the interior of India. At Java his travelling companion, Baron Loã, a Prussian, died of fatigne. Dr. Kane subsequently visited — pt and explored the Nile as far up as the frontiers of Nulvi; he walked completely over Greece, and, after a short sojourn in the United States, set out for the coast of Africa, pene-trating to the slave-markets of Whydah. Prostrated by fever, caught in that country, he returned in an enfectied condition of health to his native land. He next served with the American army against Mexico, and experienced many fatigues and dangers throughout the campaign. In 1850 he accompanied the first American expedition, despatched by Mr. Grin-nell, a merchant of New York, in search of Sir John Franklin, and four years afferwards published "A Personal Narrative of the Grinnell Expedition in Search of Sir John Franklin." In 1853 he was appointed to the command of a second expedition to the Arctic regions, for the sucona expedition to the Arctic regions, for the same purpose, and was absent two years. In 1858 he published the results of his second voyage, under the title of "Arctic Explorations." The Royal Geographical Society of Loudon bestowed upon him its large gold modal z. at Philadelphia, 1822; D. at Hawlands, 1867.

Kane, Sir Robert, M.D., a distinguished Irish chemist and writer on medicine, after being educated for the profession of medicine, became professor of chemistry to the Apo-works is the "Crit thecaries' Hall of Dublin, and was subsequently has been translated elected member of the Medico-Chirurgical berg, 1724; p. 1804.

entined al being destroyed by lightuing in 1218, Society of the same city, and of the Pais he retried to a monastery, where he wrote his societies of Pharmany and Medical Chemistry. "Chranicle of the Polish Kingdoun." thological Condition of the Fluids in Typhus Fever," which gained the prize offered by Dr. Graves; and the "Elements of Practical Pharmacy."

The following year he received the degree of M.D. from Trinity College, Dublin; and in 1811 became fellow of the Irish College of Physicians. In 1844 he published a work on "The Industrial Resources of Ireland," which excited considerable interest at the time. He was subsequently employed by government, in conjunction with Professors Lindley and Taylor, to investigate the cause of the polato disease in Ircland; but the labours of these gentlemen have tenant of Ireland, in 1816, bestowed upon him the order of knighthood. He afterwards aided in the formation of the Museum of Irish Industry, and published several works on the application and published several works on the applications, of chemistry to arrienture and manufactures. In 1818 he became president of Queen's College, Cork. n. at Dubla, 1810.

KANG-HI, keng/shi, emperor of China, succeeded Chount-chi, founder of the Mantchon dynasty, in 1698. He had a great love for the arts and sciences of the Europeans, and liberally patronized the missionaries; but, though he was found for coverantly, and directed the conwas fond of geography, and directed the con-struction of maps and charts, he would suffer none to be laid before him unless China was represented therein as the middle of the world, among other works, "Maxims for State Government," and "Moral Instructions for my Son." p. 1693. He was a voluminous writer, and composed,

Emmanuel, kant, an eminent Prussian pher. His father, who was a saddler, philosopher. was descended from a Scotch family, the name of which was spelt Cant; but it was altered by the philosopher to Kant. He received his education at the Gymnasium, and afterwards at the university of Königsberg. On the completion of his studies, he became tutor in a clergy-man's family, and afterwards in that of a nobleman, on quitting which he returned to the university, and subsisted by teaching private pupils. In 1755 he obtained the degree of M.A., and, commencing as public lecturer, obtained a number of scholars. He then became so prolifie a writer, that it is impossible, within these limits, to give a complete list of his publications in Natural and Metaphysical Philolications in Natural and Motaphysical range-sophy, Among his chief productions may be named, a treatise on the "Theory of the Winds," "Statch of Physical Geography," "New Principles of Motion and Rest," "Ex-amination of the Prize Question, whether the Earth, in turning round its Asis, by which the march, in turning round its Asis, by which the Succession of Day and Night was produced had undergone any Change since its Origin? what were the Causes of it, and how we could be assured of it?" and on Volcanoes in the Moon. But it was in metaphysics that he chiefly excelled, and upon which he published a prodigious number of works, which are ex-tremely refined and obscure. His principles attracted considerable attention in Germany, obtained many followers, and, atthough attacked by several writers, continue to exercise great influence still. One of his best known works is the "Critic of Pure Reason," which has been translated into English. B. 2 K

hand, kaub, a celebrated Arabian poet, con-temporary with Mohammed, whom he a' streamonsy copposed, but afters: As a reward for writing a poem the prophet gave him his green mantle, which a descendant of Kaab sold for 10,000 pieces of

KAESTNER, Abraham Gotthelf, kest-ner. mathematician, astronomer, and poet, who filled the situation of professor of mathematics at Gottingen with the highest reputation for more than forty years. His sciential, works are ex-

KATOUR, OF GATOU-KHALI, kat-ook, third grand khan of the Mongols, was son of Oktai, and grandson of Genghis-Khan. He completed Silver, n. 062.

Kasa, Nicholas, kaus, an eminont Danish and grandson of Genghis-Klan. He completed statesman, studied in the universities of Gerthe conquest of China, commiscately his father,

ent during the minority of Christian IV. Being attacked with a mortal disease previous to the coronation of that prince, he sent for him, and telling him that he had promised his father, in his last moments, to do all he could to see the crown placed on the head of his son, he gave him the key of the place where the crown and other regalia were kept, saying, "Take it in the name of God, and wear the crown with glory, name of God, and wear the crown with glory, sway the seeptre with wisdom and elemency, bear the sword with justice, and keep the globe with judgment." D. 1504. Kanpris, Joseph, kall-ye, a French seaman, who, being taken prisoner by the English, ob-tained permission to enter on board a South

Sea whaler, and being wrecked on the coast of the island of Noukahiwa, in the Pacific Ocean, fell into the hands of the cannibal inhabitants. While preparations were making for sacrificing him, and his doorn appeared inevitable, he was saved by the intercession of the king's daughter, who shortly afterwards became his wife, and he was made chief judge of the island, which office he exercised with reputation and comparative case, owing to the simplicity of the legal insti-tutions of the savages. Nine years had thus passed away when Kabris was carried off, as he stated, while asleep, by the Russian navigator, Captain Krusenstern. On returning to France in 1817, Kabris exhibited himself to the public at Paris and elsewhere, his face being tattooed in the New Zealand style. His object was to raise money, to enable him to return to his wife and family at Noukahiwa, where he had enjoyed

haddan, ka-ar-ja, the mist whe of me-hammed, who, at the period of her marriage with the prophet, was the widow of two husbands, and forty years of age, Mohammed being only twenty-five. She had four sons and four daughters by the prophet, among whom was the beautiful Fatima. D. 621.

Kamefer, Engelbert, kame pfer, a German physician and traveller, who, in 1983, accom-panied, as secretary, the Swedish ambasador to Moscow and Ispahan. He afterwards embarked in a Dutch vessel, visited India, and then proceeded to Japan, making many valuable observations relative to the natural history of that country. He returned to Europe in 1693, and

CALB, John, Baron de, bulb, a German who served as general in the American army of independence. Having been employed in the French army, he was sent on a mission to the United States. In 1770 he espoused the cause of the Americans, and, after a voyage to France, re-turned with a number of men, among the rest turner with a manner of men, among the res-fine dissinguished Ladayette. He was appointed general, and was killed at the lattle of Camden in 1780. B. at Nurenberg, 1780. Kalckenburg, Frederic Adolphus, kalk-rog, count of, a Prussian ichi-masshal, entered the army in 1781, servel with distinction in the seven years' war; arrived, step by step, at the rank of general, and was made a count in 1788. His courage and ability were often conspicuously shown in the war with France; he took Mayence in 1793; had the chirf command of the troops in Pomerania in 1795; was appointed governor of Thorn and Dantzie, and made inspector general of cavairy, in 1806; concluded with Berthier, at Tilsit, the truce between Prussia and France, in 1807; after which, in conjunction with Golz, he concluded a peace with Talleyrand. He was then made field-marshal, and appointed governor of Berlin in

marshal, and appointed governor of Berun in 1810. n. 1737; p. 1818. KALIDASA. (See CALIDASA.) KALE, (Or EALF), William, keil, a Dutch painter, whosepaintings resembled those of Ren-brands in contrast of light and shade, and To-niers in minuteness and finish, p. 1604; p. 1698.

KALL-PACHA, kw-lil, grand vizier of Amurath II., gained the battle of Varna, in 1444, over Ladislas, king of Hungary, who perished in the fight. He also assisted at the taking of Constantinople by Mahomet II. in 1453, but was soon afterwards banished for alleged treason.

KALKBRENNER, Christian, kulk-bren-ner, a KLIKBERNEE, Christian, kull-bren-ser, as German musical composer, who resided some time at Berlin, attached to the court of the Prussian king, and, in 1703, went to Paris. His most celebrated works are "(01, mpus; Sanl," and "Faris, 1808.

"Sanl," and "Faris, 1808.

KAIM, Peter, kulm, a Swedish traveller and natural philosopher, who travelled in North America and Russia for the purpose of exploring those countries: and become professor

ploring those countries; and became professor of botany in the university of Abo. His works of valuable manuscripts, which Sir Hans Sloane Sweden. B. in East Bothnia, 1715; D. 1770. published in English in 1897, under the title of "History of Japan." This work was afterwards translated into German and French. B. at elected inin their bishop, and ho founded sweral now probends in that and other churches. The

he retired to a monastery, where he wrote his "Chronicle of the Polish Kingdom." Kanes, Lord. (See Home, Henry) Kayasis, Constantine, kant-a-ris, a celebrated

Greek mariner, who, in the Greenan was of inde-pendence, signalized himself by conducting the fire-ships into the Turkish fleet. In 1824 he burnt a Turkish frigate at Samos, and a corvette in the port of Mitylene; after which he served under the Greek admiral as captain. In 1825 he attempted to destroy the squadron of Mehomet Ali, as it lay in the port of Alexandria preparing to embark troops for the Morea; but the fire-ships, driven back by a contrary wind, burnt themselves out

open sea, doing no injury to the enemy. 1827 he represented Ipsara in the Greek National Assembly; subsequently be commanded the Greek fleet, but on the assassination of the president in 1831, he resigned, and retired into private life. He was nominated minister of marine and president of the council in 1818-19. but again retired in 1855. He has been called the "Themistocles of Modern Greece," and and l Victor Hugo has popularized his daring deeds in verse. At the revolution in 1862, he became a member of the provisional government formed

after the expulsion of King Otho.

KANDLER, John Josehim, kan'-dler, master modeller in the porcelain manufactory at Moissen, executed many beautiful figures, particularly of the apostle Paul and the Death of St. Xavier. B. in Saxony, 1706; D. 1776. Kane, Elisha Kent, kuin, an American tra-

voller, who, after concluding his education at the medical college of Pennsylvania, was ap-pointed, in 18-85, assistant surgeon in the United States navy, and accompanied the first American embassy to China. He afterwards American embassy to China. It afterwards visited the Philippines, Coylon, and travelled into the interior of India. At Java his travelling companion, Baron Loã, a Prussian, died of fatigne. Dr. Kane subsequently visited — pt and explored the Nile as far up as the frontiers of Nulvi; he walked completely over Greece, and, after a short sojourn in the United States, set out for the coast of Africa, pene-trating to the slave-markets of Whydah. Prostrated by fever, caught in that country, he returned in an enfectied condition of health to his native land. He next served with the American army against Mexico, and experienced many fatigues and dangers throughout the campaign. In 1850 he accompanied the first American expedition, despatched by Mr. Grin-nell, a merchant of New York, in search of Sir John Franklin, and four years afferwards published "A Personal Narrative of the Grinnell Expedition in Search of Sir John Franklin." In 1853 he was appointed to the command of a second expedition to the Arctic regions, for the sucona expedition to the Arctic regions, for the same purpose, and was absent two years. In 1858 he published the results of his second voyage, under the title of "Arctic Explorations." The Royal Geographical Society of Loudon bestowed upon him its large gold modal z. at Philadelphia, 1822; D. at Hawlands, 1867.

Kane, Sir Robert, M.D., a distinguished Irish chemist and writer on medicine, after being educated for the profession of medicine, became professor of chemistry to the Apo-works is the "Crit thecaries' Hall of Dublin, and was subsequently has been translated elected member of the Medico-Chirurgical berg, 1724; p. 1804.

entined al being destroyed by lightuing in 1218, Society of the same city, and of the Pais he retried to a monastery, where he wrote his societies of Pharmany and Medical Chemistry. "Chranicle of the Polish Kingdoun." thological Condition of the Fluids in Typhus Fever," which gained the prize offered by Dr. Graves; and the "Elements of Practical Pharmacy."

The following year he received the degree of M.D. from Trinity College, Dublin; and in 1811 became fellow of the Irish College of Physicians. In 1844 he published a work on "The Industrial Resources of Ireland," which excited considerable interest at the time. He was subsequently employed by government, in conjunction with Professors Lindley and Taylor, to investigate the cause of the polato disease in Ircland; but the labours of these gentlemen have tenant of Ireland, in 1816, bestowed upon him the order of knighthood. He afterwards aided in the formation of the Museum of Irish Industry, and published several works on the application and published several works on the applications, of chemistry to arrienture and manufactures. In 1818 he became president of Queen's College, Cork. n. at Dubla, 1810.

KANG-HI, keng/shi, emperor of China, succeeded Chount-chi, founder of the Mantchon dynasty, in 1698. He had a great love for the arts and sciences of the Europeans, and liberally patronized the missionaries; but, though he was found for coverantly, and directed the conwas fond of geography, and directed the con-struction of maps and charts, he would suffer none to be laid before him unless China was represented therein as the middle of the world, among other works, "Maxims for State Government," and "Moral Instructions for my Son." p. 1693. He was a voluminous writer, and composed,

Emmanuel, kant, an eminent Prussian pher. His father, who was a saddler, philosopher. was descended from a Scotch family, the name of which was spelt Cant; but it was altered by the philosopher to Kant. He received his education at the Gymnasium, and afterwards at the university of Königsberg. On the completion of his studies, he became tutor in a clergy-man's family, and afterwards in that of a nobleman, on quitting which he returned to the university, and subsisted by teaching private pupils. In 1755 he obtained the degree of M.A., and, commencing as public lecturer, obtained a number of scholars. He then became so prolifie a writer, that it is impossible, within these limits, to give a complete list of his publications in Natural and Metaphysical Philolications in Natural and Motaphysical range-sophy, Among his chief productions may be named, a treatise on the "Theory of the Winds," "Statch of Physical Geography," "New Principles of Motion and Rest," "Ex-amination of the Prize Question, whether the Earth, in turning round its Asis, by which the march, in turning round its Asis, by which the Succession of Day and Night was produced had undergone any Change since its Origin? what were the Causes of it, and how we could be assured of it?" and on Volcanoes in the Moon. But it was in metaphysics that he chiefly excelled, and upon which he published a prodigious number of works, which are ex-tremely refined and obscure. His principles attracted considerable attention in Germany, obtained many followers, and, atthough attacked by several writers, continue to exercise great influence still. One of his best known works is the "Critic of Pure Reason," which has been translated into English. B. 2

Karajich

Karjor, or Karjor, vik Stephanovitch, karjor, karjor, and innent Seviam writer, the collector of the national ballads of his country, and compiler of a Sevriam dictionary. During the attempt of the Servians to throw off the Turkish yoke, he acted as secretary to several chiefs of his country, but, after 1813, devoted himself to collecting the ballads of Servia, writing a grammar of the language, and otherwise beneiting literature. His collection of Servian national songs is said not to be inferior to the Sectish or Spanish. These have been published at Vienna in several volumes; and Dr. Bowring has translated a small portion of them, under the title of "Servian Popular Poetry." He compiled a Servian grammar, translated the New Testament into Servian, made a collection of Servian proverbs, and edited a volume of "National Tales." He was a member of the Societies of Göttingen, Berlin, and Vienna, and received a pension from the empeor of Russia. B. at Trshich, in Turkish Servia, 1737.

Karakiski, Nicholai Michaelovitch, kar'ramsin, an eminent Russian author; who, after completing his education at Moscow, served as molicer in the Russian guards; but, between the years 1789-91, travelled in Germany, France, and England, an account of his tour being published, with the title, "Letters of a Travelling Russian." Returning to Russia, he commenced his literary career by establishing the "Moscow Journal," and afterwards published several works, original and translated. His great works, original and translated. His great work, the "History of the Russian Empire," he left incomplete at his death; but the book had an unprecedented popularity, being found everywhere throughout the empire, from the mobile's palace to the peasant's hut. He also wrote several poetical pieces of great merit. The emperor Alexander I. made him a state councillor, and conferred upon him the order of St. Anne. B. 1765: p. 1826.

of St. Anne. B. 1765; D. 1820.
KARA-YOSDON; yod-wof, the first prince of the Turcoman dynasty, called the "Black Sheen," because they bore an effigy of that animal on their banners, conquered Armenia, but was forced by Tamerlane to fiee into Egypt. After Tamerlane's death, Yousou'returned, and overran part of Mespojeania and Georgia. He was pursuing his conquests when he did-near Tauris, in 1420.

Kars, Jean Baptista Alphonse, &ar, a distinguished French novelist, who, after being employed as teacher in the Collège Bourbon, at Paris, commenced his literary career, in 1832, with the publication of a novel emittled "Sous Isr Illieuls," which at one became exceedingly popular. He subsequently wrote "An Hour too Late," "FSharp," "The Alain Family," and many other works, all excellent, and extensively read. He is best known in England by his "Tour round my Garden," which has been translated and several times reprinted. He was also editor and proprietor of various periodicals. In 1844, having published some sarcastic remarks upon a certain poetoss, the lady water in concealment near the criticis house, and, on his emerging into the street, wounded him with a poniard. The affair created much excitement at the time, but Karr took no steps to

Kaulbach

Latterly he almost exclusively devoted his time to horticultural and rural pursuits. B, at Paris, 1808.

KARSLAKE, Sir John Burgess, kars'-laik, was called to the bar in 1843, and became solicitor-general under Lord Derby, in 1866, and attorney-ceneral in 1867. B. near Northmolton, North bevon.

Keren, Captain Henry, kai'-ter, an English mathematician, who, although holding a military commission, devoted his life to seitence. He commenced his researches in physical science with two papers "On the Light of the Cussegrainian Telescope compared with that of the Oregorian." He subsequently made several valuable experiments on pendulums and other astronomical apparatus, and published two essays on the "Construction and Adjustment of the Now Standard of Weights and Measures of Great Britain." A large number of scientific treatiese were also contributed by him to the "Transactions" of the Royal and other learned Scienties. B. at Bristol, 1777; D. in London, 1835.

KAZOYA, Stephen, kend-na, an Hungartan

Karova, Stephen, ka-bé-na, an Hungarian historian, who was professor of poetry and rhe-torio in the university of Buda, and wrote the 'History of Hungary,' in Latin, in forty-one volumes. This work is the standard authority on the subject, and its value is greatly enhanced by the bibliographical notices it contains of Hungarian authors. B. in Hungary, 1732; D. 1811.

Maria, Angelica, konf-man, an eminent female artist, was the daughter of a Swiss painter, who from her earliest, years instructed her in his art. At oleven years of age sile drew portraits; after wandering in Italy to her start age and the control of the doubt, in 17th, the start age and the control of the doubt, in 17th, the start age and the control of the form of the control of the local start age and the control of the local start members of the Royal Leadenry. A storr, which does not appear to be authentic, relates that she was, while at the height of her reputation in England, cheated into a marriage with an impostor, who represented himself as Count Horn, a Swedish nobleman. She returned to Italy in 1782, after her narriage to Zucchi. Her paintings, characterized by nobleness and grace, are somewhat deficient in drawing. There is a large allegorical painting by her in the National Gallery, called "Religion attended by the Graces." n. at Chur, in the Grisons, 1742; p. at Rome, 1807.

Kaudhag. Wilhelm, koul'-bak, a celebrated German artise, was the son of a goldsmith, and was at first apprenticed to that trade, but evincing great talent for drawing, he was, after some opposition, allowed to study in the Dusseldorf Academy, under Cornelius, who was so delighted with his pupil, that when he was himself solicited to paint a grand sories of freeces in Munich, he requested the assistance of Kaulbach. The young artist went to Munich in 1282, and painted there six allegorical freeces. He exhibited his first unadded work of art, Trrenhaus," in 1820. When his great ability became recognised, he was employed to decorate the new palace of Munich with designs in fresco and concastic. He embellished the throne-room, the queen's apartment, the drawing-room, and the state bed-room. His greatest work in oils "The Destruction of Jerusalem by Titns." In his later years he worked almost exclusively at portrait-planting. Kaulbach also drew a very large number of thoughtful and elegant for hooks, and his illustrations to

afterwards hung up in his study, with the following inscription under it:—" Presented by Madame — to Alphonse Karr—in the back."

brated, not alone in Germany, but also in England. B. at Arolsen, in Waldeck, 1804.

KAUNITZ, Wenceslas, Prince of, kon'-nidz, an eminent German statesman, who during forty years was chancellor and prime minister of Austria. He commenced his political career as ministra. He commenced as portrait care restantanter of state for Hungary, in 1744, and enjoyed successively the confidence of Maria Thervsa, Joseph II., Leopold II., and Francis II. Under his prudent administration the exbinct of Vienna obtained great influence with the other courts of Europe. B. at Vienna, 1710; D. 1794.

KAYMAGH, Julia, käv'-a-na, a modern English novelist, was of an Irish family, and received her education in Paris. She com-nenced her literary career in 1814, by contri-buting small stories and sketches to the periputing small stories and sketches to the periodical press. Her first separate work was a tale for young people, called "The Three Paths," Which was produced in 1817. She afterwards publish d—"Nathality," Women in France of the 18th Century," "Women of Christianity," "Daisy Burns," "Eachel Gray," and other works. In at Trules, Tip-Perary, 1824.

KAY, William, kai, a portrait and historical painter, who e death was occasioned by grief, caused by the duke of Alya's sentencing counts Egmont and Horn to death while the duke was sitting to him for his picture. B. at Breda, 1620; p. 1609.

KAXE, Dr. John, Bishop of Lincoln, a learned relate, received his early education under Dr. Charles Burney, and afterwards proceeded to Cambridge, where he had the distinction of being highest at once in classics and mathe-In 1814, he was elected Master of matics. In 1814, he was elected master of a Christ's College, in 1815 was created D.D. by Royal Mandate; and in 1816, on the death of Dr. Watson, Eishop of Linndaff, was appointed his successor, as Regius Professor of Divinity. Some of the lectures delivered by him from this chair have been published under the title of "Ecclesiastical History, as illustrated by the writings of Tourhillon and Justin the College of the Colle trated by the writings of Tertullian and Justin Martyr." In 1820 he was nominated to the see of Bristol, and in 1827 advanced to that of Lincoln. Ecclesiastical history was his favourtitle study, and his "Account of the Writings and Opinions of Clement of Alexandria," and his "Athanasius and the Council of Nice," attest his learning and research. His publica-tions on occasional topics include sermons, charges, and some controversial pamphlets. B. 1783; D. 1813. KANH, KAN, or CAIUS, Dr. John. (See CAIUS.)

KRACH, Benjamin, keech, a Baptist teacher, who wrote an allegorical piece, entitled the "Travels of True Godliness," in imitation of Bunyan; but his greatest workis a folio volume on the Scripture Metaphors, reprinted in 1777.

p. about 1700.

KEAN, Edmund, kene, a celebrated English actor, was the son of a stage carpenter and an actress at minor theatres and in showmen's booths. Both his parents neglected him during his infancy, and he owed whatever small stock of education he obtained during his early years, to the care of Miss Tidswell, an actress at the London theatres, who generously took charge of him. This lady instructed him in the actor's art; but, when he was about twelve years of age, his mother took him away, and omployed him to assist her in hawking about perfumery 598

Citibe's "Reynard the Fox" have become cele- and flowers, and on a donally to play in showand howers, and observants to play in show-men's booths over the country. So elever was "Master Carey," as he was termed, that, when performing with his mother in Richardson's performing with his modern in incurrence booth at Windsor, George III, summoned him to the Castle, for the purpose of giving recitations. His majority was greatly pleased at the tains. This inagesty was greatly pleased at the boy's efforts, and dismissed him with a hand-some present. After leading the life of a strolling player for about fifteen years, he, in 1811, made his first appearance at Drury-lane Theatre, the playbills amounting the performance of "The Merchant of Venice; Shylock, Mr. Edmund Kean, from the Exeter Theatre." The house, on the first night, was only poorly attended, but the extraordinary merits of the provincial actor soon because known throughout the metropolis, and Drury-lane Theatre rapidly became the crowded resort of the most fashionable circles. Kenn's fame was fixed. He was universally acknowledged to be the greatest English actor since Carriek. His success remained unabated till the year 1825, when his connexion with the wife of Alderman Cox led to a lawsuit, on the termination of which Kean was compelled to pay 2500 damages. He was then hissed from the stages of Drury Lane and Edinburgh; whereupon he paid a visit to the United States. After two seasons he returned: but, though favourably received once more, his career was near its end. He had always been a loose liver, and he now indulged in constant intoxication; his constitution was weakened and his memory so impaired that he could not study a new part. In 4833 he was announced to play the part of Othello, his son Charles being east for Iago. Kem struggled through sening cast for rago. Accum struggied through the opening seenes of the play, but when he came to the speech, "Villain, he sure," he sank exhausted upon his sord's shoulder, and was led off the stage. This was his last appear-ance. His performances of Othello, Shylock, Richard IIII, and Sir Giles Overreach, are set down in the number of the storm as individual. down in the annals of the stage as inimitable cflorts of the actor's art. n. in London, about 1787; D. at Richmond, 1833.

KEAN, Charles, second son of the preceding, was educated at kion, where he won distinc-tion both in the school exercises and the athletic sports indulged in by the youths at the school. On his father's affairs getting desensor. On his father's dam's gening de-ranged in 1827, he was recalled from Eton, and was offered a cadetship in the service of the East India Company; but this he declined, in consequence of his desire to be near his mother, to whom he was warmly attached, and who was then separated from his father. He determined, therefore, to embrace his father's protession, and having been offered an engagement at Druy-lane Theatre, by Mr. Price, the then lesses, he made his first appearance there on the 1st of October, 1827, in the character of Norval in Home's tragedy of "Douglas." He had notyet reached the age of seventeen, was a mere strip-ling, and with the disadvantage of a faulty voice -a defect which he was never able entirely to overcome—he was but partially successful, and was even severely "written down" by the press. In these circumstances he offered to relieve the manager from the engagement, but this Mr. Price declined, and Mr. Kean continued to linger on at Drury-lane till the end of the season, appearing in a variety of youthful characters (while acting one of which, Frederick, in "Loyer's Yows," he made the acquaintance of

Miss Ellen Tree, afterwards his wife,) but obtained no change in the verdict which had been pronounced against him. He now went on a tour in the provinces, and while acting in four in the provinces, and while acting in Glasgow became reconciled to his father, then residing in the isle of Bute, a disagreement having occurred between the father and son in consequence of the latter persisting in going upon the stage against the former's wish. The elder Kean acted a night in the western Scottish capital for his son's benefit, which produced a crowded house and receipts amounting to nearly Coorden house and receipes andounting to nearly ($500. Mr. Charles Kean returned to Drurylane in January, 1829, and made his first decided "hit" in the character of Sir Edward Mortimer. He now visited America, and returned to England in 1833, and appeared at Covent-garden, where he again, and for the last Covening the ware to death, and to the fast inter, played in the same piece with his father, fiter his father's death, Mr. Kean played in Knowles's "Wife," with Miss Ellen Tree and Knowles himself. The piece was very successful, and had a considerable run both at Coventarden and at the Olympic. About this time Mr. Kean was offered a comparatively low salary at Drury-lane, when he replied that he would never set foot upon the London boards at less than £50 a night. "Then," said the theaces than 450 a night. "Then," said the the-atrical treasure, Mr. Bunn, "I fear you may bid a long farewell to London, for the days of such salaries are gone for ever." This prophecy, how-ever, was soon falsified, for within five years, during which had realized £20,000 by acting in the provinces. Mr. Kenn, extend Demokrain the provinces, Mr. Kean entered Drury-lane with an engagement in his pocket at £50 a night, and was paid that sum for fifty nights by the very man who had declared such a thing im-possible. He now took a leading part in his profession, and was offered an engagement by Mr. Mercady, at Covent-garden, in 1837, but declined it, and appeared again at Drury-lane, and with Mr. Webster at the Haymarket, in both houses with eminent success. On the 30th of March, 1830, Mr. Kean was entertained at a of March, 1880, Mr. Kean was entertained at a public dinner in Drury-land Theatre, and was presented with a magnificent silver vase, worth £200. He was now the most eminent actor, Mr. Macready alone excepted, in England, cyrally itself having condescended to approve his performances. He now paid a second visit to America, and returning to England in 1840, resumed his old placent the Haymarket, and also vistarred? in the provinces. In 1812, while in Dublin, he married Miss Ellen Tree, who proved a valuable cogditure to thim in his professional a valuable coadjutor to him in his professional pursuits. After once more visiting the New World, along with his wife, Mr. Kean, in 1849, was entrusted with the management of the royal Christmas theatricals at Windsor Castle. He had now become lessee of the Princess's Theatre, where he revived the plays of Shakpiece of plate worth £2,000, he went, in 1863, on a tour to Australia and America, from which he returned in 1866. He died, after a long and sovere illness, in 1868. n. at Waterford, 1811. Keln, Mrs. Charles, wife of the above, but better known by her maiden name of Ellen Tree, before

KEAN, Mrs. Charles, wife of the above, but Virgil and Feneion. The oid Greetan mybetter known by her maiden nume of Ellen Tree, thology, which he afterwards reconstructed and was born in the south of Ireland, and made her riskst appearance at Covent-garden in Olivia, in especial study. In 1810 he left school. His "Twelfth Night," for the benefit of her sister, father dying about the same time, he was left Miss Maria Tree, afterwards the wife of Mr. the sum of $2000, and was appendiced to Mr. Braddshay, a gentleman of furtune, and some Hammond, a surgeon at Edmonton. From the time M.P. for Canterbury, Sheafterwards acted in the provinces, and appeared at Druy-lane as Violante in the "Wonder." She then, in 1829, went to Covent-garden, where she met with great success in Miss Kemblés "play of "Francis the First," and in playing Romeo to Miss Kemblés "Julite, in Serjeant Tallourd's "Ion," and in Byron's "Sardanapalus." She visited America between 1838 and 1839, and in 1839 married Mr. Charles Kean, and was subsequently always associated with that gentleman in his various professional enterptiess, contributing not a little to the success which attended his efforts. p. 1905.

Kiang, John, Lord, a Dritish military communder, who entered upon his career as ensign at the age of thirteen years. In 1790 he became captain in the 48th regiment, after which he served in Egypt and the Meliterranean. In 1813 he joined the duke of Wellington's army in Spain as brigadier, in which capacity he took part in the battless of Vittoria, the Pyreness, Nivelle, orthess, and Toulouse. In 1814 he was sent, with the grade of major-general, to the West-India station, afterwards acting in the attack on New Orleans, where he received two severe wounds. In 1833 he went to Bombay as commander of the forces; and five years afterwards he dithe army which invaded Scinde. In 1830 he reduced the hitherto impregnable fortness of Churane, after a desperate defence; and for this service was rewarded with a pecrage, being created Baron Keane, of Ghuznee, in Afghanistan, The East India Compny settled upon him and his two nort successors the sum of £3000 annually, both Houses of Parliament voting him their thanks. 1.781.

of Parlament votate manas. A. 18-19, at Burton Lodge, Hampshire, ISH.

Kell, George, keets, a miscellancous writer, Having completed the tour of Europe, during which he made the acquaintance of Voltaire, at Genera, he returned to England, became a student in the Inner Temple, and was called to the bar; but, not meeting with much encouragement in the law, he abandoned that profession for literature. His first performance was "Ancient and Modern Roma," a poem published in 1750. His publications after this were very numerous; the principal being "An Account of the Fellew Islands," complied from the papers of Captain Wilson, and a translation of the "Semiranias" of Voltaire n. at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, 1759, p. 1787.

Krannes, Univer, keek'ing, an Irish ecclesiastic of the Roman church, and doctor of divinity, who wrote a history of the poets of Ireland, and the genealogies of the principal families. D. 1650.

Kears, John, ketes, an eminent English poet, was the son of a livery-stable proprietor in Finsbury, and was sent, when about the age of five years, to Mr. Clarke's school, at Endled, While there, that intellectual ambition which formed so large a portion of his claracter, became suddenly awakened. The amusements and games of youth were abandoned for study; and on the half-holidays, when all his comparisons were at play, he was busy translating Virgil and Fendion. The old Greedan mythology, which he afterwards reconstructed and reanimated by his feeling and fancy, was his especial study. In 1810 he left school. His father dying about the same time, few was left the sum of £200, and was apprenticed to Mr. Hammond. a survegon at Edmonton. From the outset, however, the youth showed that it was not in physic, but in poetry, that his name was to become pre-eminent. In 1817 he published to become pre-eminent. In 1817 he published a volume of Juvenile Poems, and shortly after-wards "Endymion." "Lamia," "Isobulia." "The Eve of St. Agnes," and "Hyperbulia." were produced during the three or four succeeding years. On the pre-presence of "Endymion," the "Quarterly Review," attacked produced and the produced by the produced produced by the produced produced by the produced produced by the produced b poet, and his kindred writers, in a most violent manner. The poet's health, always delicate, manner. The poets heatin, anyays deneate, became greatly weakened by his attentions was transferred to the upon a dying brother; and his own decease occurring soon afterwards, it was for some time erroneously attributed to the attacks of the "Quarterly" reviewer. Byron, in his "Don Juan," gave one version of the story in the following lines:— John Keats, who was kill'd off by one critique,

Keats

Koill

Just as he really promised something great If not intelligible, without Greek, Contrived to talk about the gods of late

Much as they might have been supposed to speak.

Poor fellow! his was an untoward fate: "Tis strange, the mind, that very flery particle, Should let itself be smull'd out by an article. This was quite untrue; the young poet was This was quite untrue; the young predisposed to hereditary phthisis. He went to Italy for the purpose of regaining strength, and had reached flome when his malady assumed a most alarming form, and he was soon carried off by consumption. The career of the young poet was too suddenly brought to a close, or he would have redeemed the promises of his poetical genius. Although he left behind only three volumes of verse, his rich and luxuriant fancy, his teeming brilliant imagery, his stimulating and suggestive diction, have been an honour and a glory to English litera-ture. The circumstances of his short life, and the character of his writings, compel our love and veneration; and to that which he has given us we may justly apply his own line:— "A thing of beauty is a joy for ever." B. in London, 1706; D. at Rome, 1821. Kears, Sir Richard Godwin, a British naval officer—one of the gallant band of sea war-riors who made the British navy so renowned NOTS WHO MERCE THE STRING MAY SO THE OWNER IN THE BOTH THE STRING ke became lieutement in the Ramilies in 1771, and was present in the action fought by Koppa laginst D'Orvilliers, July 27, 1778, or which occasion the Ramilies led the fleet on the thickness of the Ramilies led the fleet of the fleet of the Ramilies led the fleet of the second of the stock of the Ramilies led the fleet of the Arminies of the Ramilies led the Ramilies of the Ramilies led the Ramilies of the Rami safely be intrusted. Accordingly, he was for three years the officer of the watch in which Prince William was rated Keet watch in which

He afterwards served in the Bonetta Southampton, and Niger; and on the breaking out of the French revolutionary war, was an out of the French revolutionary war, was ap-pointed to the Galatca, 32, in which vessel, in the unlucky expedition to Quiberon, in 1705, Captain Keats did good service in rescuing a portion of the force from the clutches of the sanguinary Le Moine. In August 1700 Wash

Boulicea against the Spania

ipanied

and Spanish fleets. He was next, in February, and cleanism needs. He was next, in reprincy, 1806, in the action off St. Domingo, under Sir J. Duckworth, where Captain Keats greatly distinguished himself. In the attack on Copenhagen, under Lord Gambier, in 1807, Captain Keats was employed as commodore of a divi-Reats was employed as commonore of a division of the fleet, and after blockading Stralsund was promoted to the rayk of rea-admiral, and in the Superh, joined Sir J. Sammarz in the Batte. In 1888 he accompanied the expedition under Sir John Moore to Spain, and in August of the same year, relieved the Marquis de la Romana and 10,000 Spanish troops from Nyburg, in Denmark, whom Napoleon had sent to Hanover from their own country, preparatory to carrying out his designs against it. For his services on this occasion, Keats was the character of his writings, compel our love created a knight of the Bath. He was second in command of the fleet which accompanied the disastrous expedition to the Scheldt, in 1809. He next commanded the naval forces employed in the defence of Cadiz against the French; and, in the conclusion of 1811, in the Hibernia, 120, joined Sir Edward Pellew off Toulon, as second in command of the Mediterranean fleet. In October, 1812, ill-health compelled him to return to England, and in the following spring he was appointed governor and commander-in-chief at Newfoundland. He became majorgeneral of marines in 1818, and governor of Greenwich Hospital in 1821. In this post he continued till his death, from a paralytic stroke, in 1834, when his obsequies were performed with all martial honours by express command of William IV. B. 1757.

Kenle, John, M.A., ke'-bel, a highly popular writer of sacred poorry, for many years vicar of Sacred poorry. Hursley, in Hampshire. Soon after taking his Hursiey, in Hampshire. Soon after taking his B.A. degree, he was chosen fellow of Orde College, Oxford, and from 1831 to 1941 was professor of pootry at suiversity. His chief works are the "Christian Year," of which thousands or opies have been sold, and "Lyra Innocentium." B. 1792: p. 1862.

or copies have been sold, and "Lyra Innocentium" B. 1792; D. 1850.

KEILL, John, kile, a British mathematician, who, after taking his degree of M. A. at Edinburgh university, entered of Balliol College, and is said to have been the first who taught fig. Issue Newtonia and Company of the Control of the Con Newton's principles by experiments. In 1698 he published an "Examination of Dr. Burnet's Theory of the Earth," to which he subjoined a

- Sumous in one of the Jersey rivers, that he was rewarded with a commander's commission, and was appointed to the Rhia 588

"Remarks on Whiston's Theory." The year and hoisted his flag on board the Marlborough "Remarks on whiston's Theory." The year following he was appointed deputy professor of natural philosophy. In 1708 he defended Newton's claim to the invention of fluxions, which brought him into a dispute with Leibnitz. In 1709 he went to America with some German exiles, sent thither at the expense of the British government. In 1710 he was chosen Savilian professor of astronomy at Oxford, and the year professor of astronomy at Oxford, and une year following became decipherer to the queen. In 1714 the university conferred on him the degree of M.D., and, in 1715, he published an cition of "Commandine's Euclid." In 1718 appeared his "Introductio ad veram Astroappeared ms 'Introductio ad veram Astro-nomiam;" which treatise he translated intendigent English. B. at Edinburgh, 1671; D. 1721. Keill, James, younger brother of the above, obtained the degree of M.D. at Cambridge, and settled as a physician at Northampton. His works are: "The Anatomy of the Human Body," "An Account of Animal Secretion, the Quantity of Blood in the Human Body, and Muscular Motion." In in Scotland, 1678; In at Northampton, 1719.

Northampton, 1719.

KEISER, Reinhard, ki-ser, an eminent German musician and composer, who wrote no less than 118 operas, of which his "Cireé," brought out at Hamburgh, in 1734, was the last and most beautiful. He possessed a most fertile imagination, and is considered as the father of imagmation, and is considered as the lather of German melody. n.1673; p. 1735. Kettri, James, keeth, field-marshal in the Prussian service, was the younger son of George Keith, earl-marshal of Scotland. He attached limself to the Pretender in 1715, and was wounded at the battle of Sheritlinaur. He, however, escaped with his brother to Spain, and served as an officer of the Irish brigade for ten years. He afterwards went to Russia, and was made a general. He signalized himself in all the battles between the Russians and Turks, the battles between the Russians and Turks, and was the first who entered the breach at the taking of Otchakov. He also displayed great mulitary skill against the Swedes, and, on the restoration of peace, was appointed field-marshal, and sent on several embassies. But conceiving that his services had not been properly compensated, he accepted an invitation from the king of Prassia, who gave him a large pension, and sent on several embassic of Boults and Gold. and made him governor of Berlin, and field-marshal. That monarch also took him into his marshal. That moisred has book him into his confidence, and made him the companion of his travels. He was killed at the battle of Hochkir-chen, in 1738. n. at Kineardine, 1696. Kerrir, George, a native of Aberdeen, where he was a fellow-student with Bishop Burnet, and took his degree of M.A.; but quitted the Presbyterian church to become a Quaker, and went to Pennsylvania. At length becoming dissatisfied with this sect, he founded a new one of his own; and subsequently entered into the Church of England, took orders, and ob-tained some preferment. He wrote several books both for and against the Quakers; was a believer in the transmigration of souls, the millennium, ke.; and is described as an eloquent speaker, and an acute disputant. D. about 1715. Келтн, George Keith Elphiustone, Viscount, a famous British admiral, was a native of Dumbartonshire, received his education at Glasgow, and entered the navy in 1762, in the Gosport, then under the command of Captain Jervis, alterwards earl St. Viucent. He subsequently served at home, in China, and in India, till, in 1775, he attained post-captain's rank, at Portsmouth, and afterwards in the Pearl and Perseus frigates, in the latter of which he served on the American station under Admirals Hood and Arbuthnot, and while absent was elected M.P. for Dumbartonshire. He commanded a detachment of seamen on shore in the reduction of Charleston, was present at the attack on Mud Island, November 17, 1777, and, being sent home with despatches from Admiral Arbuthnot. was appointed to the Warwick, 50. He was again returned for Dumbartonshire in 1780; and in 1781 took the Dutch 50-gun ship Rotterdam. He now served again on the American station, and assisted in the capture of the French ship L'Aigle and 600 men, commanded by Count de If Anyte and ooo men, commanded by count of the American war, in 1783, he returned home; and, in 1786, was elected M.P. for Stirlingshire. Soon after war broke out with France, Captain Elphinstone was, in 1793, appointed to the Robust, 74, joined Lord Hood in the Mediterranean, assisted in the reduction of Toulon, on the 28th of August, 1793, and ably superintended the re-embarkation of the troops on the 18th of the following December. He was made rear-admiral of the Blue, April 12, 1794; was created a knight of the Bath on the 4th of May; and was advanced to Bath on the 4th of May; and was advanced to rear-admiral of the White on 4th of July, hoising his flag in the Barfleur, 98. In January, 1793, he removed to the Monreh, 74, on hostilities occurring between England and the Batavian Republic, sailed to the Cape of Good Hope, and, in conjunction with General Alured Clarke, compelled the Dutch commander to sur-render on the 16th of September following. He had, in the meantime, been promoted to the rank of vice-admiral, and, on the completion of the service at the Cupe, Admiral Ephinistone proceeded to the Indian Seas, and in a brief period captured Ceylon, Cochin, Malacca, and the Molacca Islands; and, on August 18, 1798, captured a Dutch squadron, under Admiral captured a buten squaron, inder Admiral Lucas, which had been sent to recover the Cape of Good Hope. He returned to England in January, 1797, and in May following was made an Irish peer by the title of Baron Keith. He next aided in the suppression of the mutiny at next aided in the suppression of the mutiny at the Nore, and then proceeded to the Mediter-ranean in the Foudroyant, as second in com-mand to card St. Vineent. He was promoted to vice-admiral of the Red in 1799; and in November of that year took the command in the Mediterranean, which ill-health had compelled Lord St. Vincent to resign. He here had Nelson under his orders, and, by the judicious arrangement of the forces, secured the capture of La Généreux, 74. In March he blockaded the harbour of Leghorn, in co-operation with the Austrians, and was mainly instrumental, by the rigid blockade maintained, in reducing the French troops under General Massena to great straits for provisions, which resulted in the surrender of that officer and his army in the beginning of June; and on the 4th of September following, Malta capitulated to a detachment of Admiral Keith's fleet. His next service was of Admiral Rent's neet. Ars next extremely in command of the ficet which accompanied Sir Ralph Abereromby to Egypt, and he greatly distinguished himself in the important operations of the command of th tions which followed. In 1801, he was made admiral of the Blue, received the thanks of Parliament, was made a peer of the United King-dom by the title of Baron Keith of Banheath, Dumbartonshire, was presented with the freedom of the city of London, and had the order of the Crescent bestowed upon him by the Sultan. When hostilities recommenced in 1803, he was appointed to the command in the Channel and in the North Seas, and made an experi-ment with a new mode of attack on the gunboats at Boulogne, which to a certain extent succeeded. In November, 1805, he was raised to the rank of admiral of the White, again assumed the command of the Channel fleet in 1812, was made a viscount in 1814, and, in 1815, after the battle of Waterloo, arranged his crui-

589

Keith

This closed the long and valuable services of Lord Keith. в. 1746; р. March 10, 1823. Кенти, Thomas, a famous mathematician, and author of several excellent works, was a native of Brandsburton, near Beverley, in Yorkshire. Having lost his parents when he was only fourteen, he became tutor in a private family; and in 1781, settling in London, soon acquired distinction as a mathematician. In 1804 his reputation as an accountant led to his being appointed professor of geography and the in 1814 the situation of accountant to the British Museum was conferred upon him, a pos! which auseum was conterred upon him, a posi which he held to his death. His principal works are, "The Complete Practical Arithmetician," "An Introduction to Geography," "Plane and Spherical Trigonometry," a "Treatise on the Use of the Globes," and "Elements of Geometry," n. 1759; p. 1824.

1750; D. 1824. Keller, John Balthasar, kel-ler, a skilful founder in brass. He east the equestrian statue of Louis XIV., which was set up at Paris in the Place Louis the Great. He was subsequently made hispector of the foundry at the arsenal. D. 1702—Ills brother, John James, also excelled in the same art. D. at Colmar, RELLERMANN, François Christophe, kel'-lerman, marshal of Franco, and duke of Valmy, served with distinction during the Seven Years War, and when the revolution burst forth, in 1788, was a brigadier in the French army. In 1792 he was named commander of the army of the Moselle, and fought, along with Dumouriez, the battle of Valmy, in which the greatly superior Prussian army was defeated and compelled to evacuate French territory. He was, nevertheless, incarcerated as a suspected person in theiess, incarcerated as a suspected person; in 1798, but was afterwards set at liberty. In 1798, because communier-in-chief of the armies of the Alps and Italy, resisting, with 47,000 men, the attacks of an army mustering 18,000 soliders. In 1804 Mapoleon created him marshal of the empire, dute of Valmy, scantor, &c., and he was afterwards charged with several commands in chief, in all of which he acquitted himself with great distinction. At

The Restoration he was created peer of France.

n. at Strasburg, 1735; n. at Paris, 1820.

KELLERMANN, François Etienne, son of the above, served with distinction in the campaigns in Prussia, Germany, Italy, and Spain, and above, seven win astinction in the campagins in Prussia, Germany, Italy, and Spain, and signalized himself at the hattles of Marongo, Austerlitz, Vimiera, Bautzen, and Waterloo. He was general of division in 1814, and was created a peer during the Handred Days. Excluded from the Chamber by Louis XVIII., he did not return to it till 1830, B. 1770; D. at Dawls 1828. Paris, 1835.

Kelly

Kelly, Edward, kell-le, an English alebs-mist, received his education at Oxford, which he quitted without taking a degree; and, while rambling about the country, for some offence or other lost his ears at Lancaster, after which or other fost his cars at Lancaster, after which be became assistant to Dr. Dee, whom he ac-companied abroad. The emperor Rode-phus II, was so much deceived by Kelly's pretensions to making gold, that he conferred the honour of knighthood on him. He afterwards sent him to prison at Prague, whence, in endervouring to make his escape by tying his helsheets together, he fell, and broke both his legs. He wrote a poem on chemistry, and another on the philosopher's stone, B. at Worcester, 1555; n. 1595, Ketly, Hugh, kel-le, an Irish dramatic writer, who, after gaining a livelihood, first as a staymaker and afterwards as an attorney's clerk, turned author with considerable success. clerk, turned attitor with consisterable success, the word raw comedies, called "False Delicary," "A Worl to the Wise," the "School far Wives," and the "Romance of an Hour," to sether with "Chementina, a Traged," Thespis," a poen in initiation of Churchilfs "Roseaut," "Memoirs of a Magalaien," a note, and the "Babbin," a notelection of csays, n. and the "Babbin," a rocketon of csays, n.

Kelly, John, a learned English dergyman, a native of Douglas, in the Isle of Man, who having paid particular attention to the vernecular dialect of the Celtie tongue which was spoken in that island, was introduced to Bishop Hildesley, who employed him in translating the Bible into the Manx language, and ordained him a minister of the episcopal congregation of Ayr, in Scotland. Through the patronage of the duke of Gordon, to whose son, the marquis the duke of Gordon, to whose son, the marquis of Huntley, hwas tutor, Mr. Kelly obtained the rectory of Cojdord, in Essex; and having entered at St. John's College, Cambridge, was there homoured with the degree of LLD. In 1803 he published "A Practical Grammar of the Ameliat Gasilio, or Language of the Sile of Man;" and in 1803 issued propossis for publishing "A Trijoto Dictionary of the Celtic Tongae," which was nearly completed when the shoots was, after seal by a College of the Celtic College, "Which was nearly completed when the sheets were destroyed by a fire on the premises of the printer, Mr. Nichols. D. 1750; D. 1809.

KELLY, Michael, a composer and singer, was the son of a wine merchant in Dublin, who for many years acted as master of the ceremonies at the eastle. Michael, at an early age, having given proofs of a genius for masic, his father placed him under Rauzzini, at that time in Dublin, who induced his friends to send him to Naples. He there found a patron in Sir William Hamilton, the British minister; studied under Fineroli and Aprili; and subsequently per-formed at most of the Italian theatres and in Germany. He contracted a close intimacy with Mozart during his stay at Vienna; was for a period in the service of the emperor Joseph; and at length returning to Britain, made his first appearance, in 1787, at Drury-lane Theatre, London, in "Lionel and Clarissa." He son acquired the position of first singer at that acquired the position of first singer at that theatry, the nuiscal performances of which he directed till his retirement from the stage. He set to music unwards of sixty pieces, most of which were successful, and amongst these are the once highly popular compositions in Col-man's musical romance of "Bluebeard." A few months previous to his death appeard is "Reminiscences," a very amusing work, replete familiar associates. B. 1762; D. 1826.

Kemble, John Philip, kem'-bel, an eminent English actor, was the son of Roger Kemble, the manager of a provincial theatre; and the manager of a provincial theatre; and although, while young, he was employed to play children's parts in the theatre, was not intended for the stage. He was educated at a intended for the stage. He was educated at a Roman Catholic seminary in Staffordshire, and afterwards at Douay College, in France; but having a natural inclination for the actor's profession, he returned to England at the age of ninetcen, and made his début on the stage at Wolverhampton. After playing with great success in various provincial theatres, he made his first appearance at Drury-lane Theatre in 1783, became a great favourite, and, in 1803, purchased a share in Covent-garden Theatre, and assumed the management of that establishment. During the subsequent fourteen years, he continued to play the leading tragedy parts with the greatest success; indeed, in the characters of Brutus, Coriolanus, Cato, King John, Wolsey, and Macbeth, he is said to have been without an equal. In 1817 he retired from the stage, and soon afterwards went to reside in the stage, and soon atterwards went to resule the the south of France, and later, at Lausanne, in Switzerland. p. 1757; p. at Lausanne, 1923. Kemple, Charles, brother of the preceding, was also a distinguished actor, but excelled chiefly in comedy. After receiving his educa-tion at the Roman Catholic college at Douay, in France, his brother John obtained for him an France, his brother John obtanest or mm an appointment in the General Post-office; but, resigning this situation, he made his first appearance on the stage as Orlando, in "As you Like it," at Shoffield. After playing in the promes, he appeared in London, in 1794. After those, he appeared in London, in 1794. After the was cast for secondary characters only, but in a few years he had so improved himself by study, that he became the first English actor in the walk of high comody, and, like his brothen, had certain characters in which he was unrivalled, such as Orlando, Falconbridge, Cassio, Benedick, Mercutio, Petruchio, and Charles Surface. He also produced on the English stage a number of also produced on the English stage a number of adaptations from the French and German. He retired from the stage in 1840, having been a short time previously appointed examiner of plays. He afterwards appeared on several occa-sions as a reader of Shakspeare. Like many other members of his family, he was an educated and accomplished man. B. at Brecon, South Wales, 1775; p. 1854,-Mr. Charles Kemble had wates, 1775; D. 1652.—Ar. Charles Reinble had two daughters, Frances Anne Kemble, who be-came a well-known actress, and who, in 1832, visited the United States, where she married a gentleman of property, named Butler. The union, however, proved unhappy, and they were divorced in 1840. She afterwards published a volume of poems, a drama, called "The Star of Seville," and some account of her travels, both in America and in Italy. She afterwards gave readings from and lectures on Shakspeare. The other daughter, Miss Adelaide Kemble, appeared with the greatest success as an operatic singer; but, on her marriage with Mr. Sartoris, she quitted the stage.

KEMBLE, George Stephen. brother of the ARMER, George Stopnen, brother of the above, was also an actor of ability. He was born at Kingstown, Herefordshire, and it is stated that his mother performed the part of Anne Boleyn in Shakspeare's Henry VIII. on the night of Stophen's birth. He was originally designed for the medical profession, and was with anecdotes of his contemporaries and apprenticed to a surgeon in Coventry; but soon followed the bent of all his family, and went upon the stage. He made his first appearance at Covent-garden Theatre in 1783; and was subsequently manager of the theatres at Edin-burgh, Glasgow, Liverpool, and Newcastle, Stephen Kemble was exceedingly stout in the latter part of his life, so much so, as to be able to perform the part of Palstaff without stulling. p. 1822.

KEMBLE, John Mitchell, son of Charles Kemble, one of the most distinguished Anglo-Asom scholars of his age, after receiving his education at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1833 commenced his labours by the publication of "The Anglo-Saxon Poems of Beowulf," which were followed by several volumes of translations and collections of the same early literature. In 1849, he produced "The Saxons in England, a History of the English Commonwealth till the period of the Norman Conquest," which is the most important of all his works. He had been period of the Norman Conquest," which is tit. omst important of all his works. He had been editor for many years of the "British and Foreign Quarterly Review," and continued to act in that capacity till the periodical cessed to exist in 1845. Mr. Kemble hold the office formerly filled by his father,—that of examiner of plays under the lord chamberlain. B. 1807; p. 1957.

KEMP, Joseph, kemp, a distinguished musical composer, was a native of Exeter, where he was a chorister, and studied under William Jackson. He was appointed organist of Bristol cathedral in 1802, and the same year composed his en-them, "I am Alpha and Omega," one of his best pieces. He left Bristol for London in 1807, and took the degree of M.B. at Cambridge in 1803, and in 1809 that of doctor, when his "Crueifixion" was performed. He then adopted the profession of lecturer on music, and invented a protession of fecturer on music, and invented a new method of teaching the science. He composed "The Siege of Ischia," an opera; "Twenty Psalmoditeal Melodies," numerous songs, ducis, glees, &e.; and was the author of a work cuttled "A New System of Musical Education, being a Self-Instructor." B. 1778; D. 1824.

KEMP, George Mickle, a self-educated archi-et, who designed the Scott monument at Edinburgh, was the son of a shepherd, and apprenticed to the trade of a millwright, at which he worked for several years in Scotland, London, and Manchester. From early youth he is said to have evinced a great inclination for the study of architecture, and while working as a journeyman at his trade, he con-trived to visit the albeys of Meirose and Jed-burgh, the eathedral of Glasgow, and several cathedrals in England: he was also an ardent lover of poetry, and of the works of Sir Walter Scott. In 1824 he sot out for the con-tinent, intending to travel over Europe, but was compelled to return in a year; he had, recompletes, seen most of the cathedrals of France and the Netherlands. He attempted, without success, to establish himself in business at Edinburgh: after this he studied drawing and perspective with so much zeal, that, in 1830, and perspective with so linear zent, that in 1890, howeve enabled to make three splendid drawings of Melrose Abbey. He was next employed to make a large model for a palace to be creeted by the duke of Buceleuch; he subsequently travelled over Scotland, taking sketches for a proposed work on the ecclesiastical antiquities of that country. When the design for the Scott monument was announced for competition,

Kemp entered the lists, and obtained one of the the war, and giving his two sons as hostages three premiums of £50. He was again successful on the second competition, and his design was adopted; the architect, however, did not live to see his work finished. In 1841 his body was found in the Forth and Clyde canal; into which it is supposed he had accidentally fallen on a dark hight. His remains were followed to the tomb by the members of the Royal Scottish Academy and most of the other public bodies in Edinburgh. B. at Newhall, on the Esk, 1791; drowned 1814.

KEMPELEN, Wolfgang, Baron de, kemp'-len, an Hungarian mechanician, who manufactured a chess-playing automaton, about 1782, which attracted considerable attention when exhibited in Paris and London. It is supposed that a boy was concealed within the figure. He also constructed a speaking figure. B. at Presburg, 1731; D. 1801.

KEMPIS, Thomas à, kem'-pis, a pious writer of the 14th century. At the age of 19 he entered the monastery of Mount St. Agnes, of which his defor brother was prior. In led a studies were subsequently completed at the life of strict devotion, occupying himself in Marischal College, there. He was admitted a copying the lible and the writings of the member of the Abeneben bar in 17-87. Kennedy early showed a predilection for antiquarian puror "Of the Imitation of Christ," so universally known under his name, was compiled and copied the history of his monastery. It wrote, also, the history of his monastery. In at Kempen, near Cologne, 1380; D. 1471.

Ken, Thomas, ken, an English bishop, was educated at Winchester school, whence he removed to New College, Oxford, where he was removal to New Conege, valorit, where he was elected fellow. About 1680 he was appointed chaplain to the Princess of Orange, whom he accompanied to Holland. He afterwards went with Lord Dartmouth to Tangier, and, on his return, was made Chaplain to Charles II., whom he attended in his last illness, but was hindered from exercising the duties of his function by the Romish priests. That monarch, who had a great regard for him, nominated him to the bishopric of Bath and Wells, which was con-firmed by James II. The bishop governed his diocese in an exemplary manner; he opposed the endeavours of James to introduce popers, and was one of the seven bishops sent to the Tower for resisting that monarch's dispensing power. He refused, however, to take the oaths at the Revolution, for which he was deprived. Queen Anne granted him a pension of 4200 a year; and he was universally esteemed for his anniable manners and unaffected piety. He multished some pious manuals, and wrote several hymns and an epic poem, entitled "Edmund."

n. at Berkhampstead, Heris, 1637; D. in Wiltshire, 1711.

t, George, ken'-dal, a Nonconformist K L. George, Ken-Jal, a Nonconformist divine, in 1637 became retor of Blissland, in Cornwall, whence he subsequently removed to London. He wnote a "Undication of the Doctrine generally received in the Churches control of the Speal Grace and Favour to his Elect in the Death of Christ," folic, the "Doctrine of the Perseverance of the Saints, against John Goodwin," folio, &c. B. in

Devonshire; D. 1663. Kennaway, Sir John, keu-a-wai, a brave offi-

Kennaway was knighted in 1788, returned to England in 1791; and died in 1826. n. 1758. KENNEDY, James, ken'-ne-de, bishop of St. AETNEDY, dames, ken-near, using of St. Andrew's, Scotland, was the founder of the college and church of St. Salvador, and also of the abbey of the Observantines. He filled the office of lord chancellor for a time; and, in the minerity of James III., was one of the lords of the regency. B. 1405; D. 1408.

Kennedy, John, a learned Scotch physician, who resided at Smyrna during several years. He had a valuable collection of pictures and coins, which, after his death, was sold by auction. He wrote a dissertation on the Coins of Carausius. D. 1700.

KENNEDY, John, rector of Bradley, in Derby-shire, was a good mathematician, and the author of "Seripture Chromology," "The Doctrine of Commensurability," &c. p. 1770. KENNEDY, William, "the annalist of Aberdeen," received the rudiments of his education at the grammar school, and his academical early showed a predilection for antiquarian pur-suits; and about the year 1813, at the request of the magistrates, spent a considerable portion of time in drawing up an index to the voluminous city records, which had been accumulating for centuries, and which extend to a more remote antiquity, and are more complete, than remote attiquity, and are more complete, that these of any other Sectistis burgh. His chief title to fanu, however, rests on his justly setemal work, in 2 vols. 3.6., "The Annals of Aberdeen." p. 1739, p. 1846. KENNER, Basil, kerd-ard, an English writer, who, in 1696, published "The Arthquities of Rome." The year following he was chosen follow of his college, and published the "Lives of the Greek Poets." In 1706 he was appointed chaplain to the English factory at Leghorn, where he narrowly escaped falling under the power of the Inquisition. He published several power of the inquisition. He published several translations of foreign writers. B. at Postling, Kent, 1674; D. in London, 1714. Kenner, White, an English prelate and antiquarian, and brother of the preceding, was educated at St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, where he distinguished himself by his abilities. In 1634 he took his degree of M.A., and was presented to the vicarage of Amersden, in Oxfordshire. While shooting, his gun burst, by which accident his skull was laid open, so that he was ever afterwards obligate to wear a patch of black velvet. In 1701 he engaged in the controversy on the rights of convocation, against Dr. Atteron the rights of convocation, against Dr. Atter-bury. In 1707 he was made deen of Peterbo-rough, but he was at this time very unpopular, owing to his Whig principles, and his opposition to Dr. Sacheverell. Dr. Welton, rector of White-chapel, presenting an allea-piece representing the Last Supper to his church, caused the figure intended for Judas Iscardio to be drawn like the dean of Peterborough, with a black patch. This giving great offence, the listop of London ordered the picture to be taken down. In 1718 Kennet was preferred to the hishop of a Order Kennet was preferred to the bishopric of Peter-Kenwawax, Sir John, keii-a-wai, a brave officer and able diplomatist, whose sphere of service was India, where he negotiated treatises tory of Englist the Wash and Tippoo Sultan. The treaty was with the latter involved the cession of half his "History of Garellind," with a worst of the dominions, paying £3,300,000 as expenses of author, and wrote "The Case of Impropriations," contains a voluminous collection of his un-printed works. B. at Dover, 1689; D. 1729. Kennere I., ken'neth, king of Scotland, reigned for one year only, 665-6. Kennere II., king of Scotland, succeeded Alpin, his father, in 834. He made war upon the Picts, and subdued their dominions beyond the Forth, which he divided among his soldiers. He removed the stone chair to Scone, where his successors were crowned till it was removed to England by Edward I. D. 854.

KENNETH HI., the son of Malcolm, subdued the Britons of Strathelyde, and was equally successful against the Danes, who had invaded his dominions; but attempting to alter the suc-cession of the crown in favour of his family, the people assassinated him in 994.

KENNEY, James, ken'-ne, an English dramatist of considerable reputation in his day, and many of whose works still maintain their position on the stage. The farce of "Raising the Wind," in which the inimitable Jeremy the Wind," in which the inimitable Joremy Diddler is a prominent character, was his first performance, and was followed by "Love, Law, and Physic," "Matrimony," "The World," "The Illustrious Stranger," and others. B. in Heland, about 1770; B. in London, Aug. 1, 1849, the day which had been fixed for his beneit at Drury-lane Theatre.

KENNICOTT, Benjamin, ken'-ni-kot, a learned English divine, who, by the liberality of some gentlemen, was sent to Wadham College, Oxford, where he applied himself to his studies with such diligence, that, while an undergraduate, he published two dissertations on the Tree of life in Paradise, and on the oblations of Cain and Abel, for which the university presented him his bachelor's degree, without fees, and before he had completed his terms. He next undertook to publish a correct edition of the text of the Hebrew Scriptures, collated from ancient manuscripts. In this great work, for which he was admirably fitted by patience, in-dustry, and learning, he met with extensive encouragement, and many sovereigns and other illustrious personages appeared in his list of subscribers. To enable him to perfect his de-sign, he was made keeper of the Radelifle Library, and canon of Christ Church. The first

Library, and canon of Christ Church. The first volume was published in 1770, and the eighth, and last, in 1780. n. at Totnes, Devonshire, 1718; p. at Oxford, 1780. Exercise, William, Rewisk, an English writer, who published, in 1760. Epistles, Philosophical and Moral, in verse. In 1760 appeared his comedy of "Falstaff's Wedding," an imitation of Shaksperre. He was some time a writer in the "Monthly Review," but differing with the proprietors, he set up another journal in opposition to it, called the "London Review." He was also editor of the "Monting Chronicle; but a quarrel with the proprietor induced his to start a paper against it, without success. He to start a paper against it, without success. He translated Rousseau's "Emile" and "Eloise," and other works, from the French, and published several original pieces. B. at Watford, and several sermons and miscellaneous tracts. was appointed principal painter and architect The British Museum library of manuscripts to the king. Although only an indifferent contains a voluminous collection of his un-artist, hey to take; and as the great improver of modern English landscape-gardening: indeed, he is regarded as the founder of the art. He also carved Shakspeare's monument in Westminster Abbey. B. in Yorkshire, 1684; D. 1748.

', James, an English musical composer. In his youth he was chorister in Winchester Cathedral, and afterwards in the Chapel Royal. He subsequently became organist of Trinity Col-lege, Cambridge, and at Winchester Cathedral. He greatly assisted Dr. Boyce in the production of his "Collection of Cathedral Music," and also wrote many anthems, several being familiar to the congregations of our cathedrals at the pre-sent time. He was admitted to be the best player on the organ in his day. B. at Winches-player on the organ in mis day. B. at winenes-ter, 1700; p. 1775.

KENT, James, a distinguished American lawyer, who was elected professor of law in Co-lumbia College in 1794; in 1890 he assisted in revising the legal code of New York; and, in 1804, was nominated chief justice of that city, this great work, "Commentaries on American Law", was concluded in 1880, and romains the standard work on the constitutional law of the United States. He was an industrious man and excellent judge. B. at Fredericksburg, New York, 1763; D. 1817. Kent, His Royal Highness Edward, Duke of, the fourth son of George III., received the rudi-ments of his education in England, but com-pleted it at Göttingen and Hanover. Entering pleted it at Gottingen and Handover. Emering the army at an early age, he seems an att.i.i.a. siastic admirer of military discipline; and having obtained the rank of colonel, he served during the years 1790 and 1791, under General O'Hara, at Gibraliar, where he rendeed himself so unpopular by his strictness, that his accessors researched to mixing of no criticism. numeri so unpopular by his strictness, that his regiment repeatedly mothined. On quitting Gibrultar, he was sent to Canada as commander of the forces, after which he was ordered to join the expedition under Sir Charles Grey, against the French West India Islands. During the campaign that ensued, the duke's impetious bravery was so conspicuous at the head of the fact division, worth plant when ordering a care. flank division, particularly when storming several strong and important posts in Martinique and Guadaloupe, that "the flank corps" became a standing toast at the admiral's table, as well as that of the commander-in-chief. In 1802 his royal highness was appointed governor of Gibraltar; but his determination to repress ir-regularities, and enforce subordination, led to regularities, and enforce supordination, set to very disagreeable consequences. Having refused to allow the soldiers to celebrate Christmas Eve as a holiday, and put the deputation who brought the petition under arrest, the men in the garrison became mutinous, and proposed makine General Burnet in command. Christplacing General Barnet in command. Christmas Day passed in confusion; and on the following night the prince headed his regime, and marched against the mutineers. It was some time before they gave up the contest; at length, after blood had been shed, discipline tength, after food had need shed, assigning wag, restored, and the ringleaders were tried by a continuarial; but it was thought prudent to recal the duke, and he accordingly soon after returned to England. On the 20th of May, 1818, inseed several original pieces. 9: a vasion, was recorded in the Inglements whet class therets p. 1779.

KENT, William, kent, an English painter and recal the duke, and he accordingly soon after architect, who at first worked at coach-painting, returned to England. On the 20th of May, 1818, but abandoned it for the higher branches of the duke of Kent married Victoria Maria Louise, act. In 1710 he went to Italy, where he beame, widow of the prince of Leiningen and sister of acquainted with the earl of Burlington, through whom he gained considerable employment, and 583 of May, 1810, the duchess gave birth to a daugh-ter, Victoria, the popular and justly-beloved numerous works on astronomy, all of them sovereign of the British Empire. Having are invaluable contributions to science, besides his companied the duchess to Sidmouth, in Devoncompanied the duchess to statuout, in Devoi-shire, where he had gone with a view to the re-establishment of her health, the duke caught a violent cold, which, being followed by fever and inflammation, the symptoms increased so rapidly inflammation, the symptoms increased so rapidly as to defy every effort of medical skill; and after an illness of one week, his royal higness died, Jan. 23, 1899; p. Nov. 2, 1767.

KENTOFEN, or ST. MUNGO, Kent-ti-gern, a Scotchman, was the disciple of Palladius, in the 6th century. Camden says he was bishop of Glasgow, and a member of the university of Oxford. Ho is also said to have founded the expected of the same of the monastery of St. Asaph. KENYON, Lloyd, Lord, ken'-yon, an eminent English judge, received his education at Ruthin school, in Denbighshire, after which he was articled to an attorney at Nantwich, in Cheshire. After serving his clerkship, he be-came a member of the society of Lincoln's Inn, and was called to the bar in 1761. Having practised as a conveyancer some years, his reputa-tion as a sound lawyer brought him into great notice at the Chancery bar; but his first great rise in the profession took place in 1780, when rise in the procession took pince in 1780, when he led the defence, with Mr. Erskine, for Lord George Gordon. In 1782 Mr. Kenyon was made attorney-general and chief justice of Chester. He was also returned to Parliament for Hindon, in Wiltshire. In 1784 he was appointed Master of the Rolls; and on the resignation of the earl of Mansfield in 1783, by the interest of Lord Thurlow, he was raised to the office of chief justice of the King's Bench, and created Baron Kenyon. As a judge, his lordship conducted himself with strict integrity, and though he was occasionally warm, it was never from petulance, but from his ardent love of justice. Lord Kenyou was correct in his mode of living, and reso-lately punished gambling and other fashionable vices, whenever they came before him. Though a stern man, he possessed a kindly nature. One day he passed sentence of death upon a One day he passed sentence of death upon a young woman guilty of theft:—she fainted; Lord Kenyon, greatly agitated, cried out, "I don't mean to hang you; will nobody tell her that I don't mean to hang her?" He passed the soverest sentences upon duellists. As an English judge, Lord Kenyon was distinguished Engissi judge, Lord Kenyon was distinguished for his stirt's administration of justice according to the known laws of the land. His legal learning was exact and profound, and the greater portion of his adjudications are at the present time regarded as of the highest value. He was in private life temperate and frugal, even to prasimony, and, although enormously wealthy, was usually attired in shabby costume; while his continger was unwested of the received of the present of the present of the present of the property of the present of the pre his equipage was unpretending, even to meanness. At his death he left a fortune of £300,000. B. at Greddington, Flintshire, 1732; D. 1802.

Kepler, John, kep-ler, a celebrated German astronomer, received his education at Tubinastronomer, received his concaton at Tubingen, and in 1693 was appointed professor, of astronomy at Gratz. In 1600 he went to Bohemia, on a visit to Tycho Brahe, who introduced him to the emperor Rudolph, who appointed him his mathematician. Kepler completed the tables left unfinished by Tycho, who died in the same year, and which he called the Rudolphine Tables. In 1604 he produced the "Supplement to Vitellion," in which appears his Tables and Ephemericles; among others, the "New Astronomy," which contains the great treatise on the Motion of Mars. Ills fame rests upon his discovery that the planets orbits are elliptical. The character and career of this magnate of science are thus criticised by of this magnate of science are thus criticised by belambre, an eminently reliable authority:— "Kepler," he says, "was ardent, restless, burn-ing to distinguish himself by his discoveries, He attempted everything; and, having once obtained a glimpse, no labour was too severe for him in following or verifying it. All his attempts had not the same success, and, in truth, that was impossible. Those which have train, that was impossible. Those which have been more fortunate appear sublime.

When in search of that which really existed, he has sometimes found it; when he devoted him-self to the pursuit of a chimera, he could not but fail; but even there he displayed the same qualities, and that obstinate perseverance that must triumph over all difficulties but those which are insurmountable." B. at Wiel, in the duchy of Wirtemberg, 1571; D. 1630.

Keppel, Augustus, Viscount, kep'-pel, a celebrated English admiral, was the second son of William, earl of Albemarle. He accompanied Commodore Auson in his voyage round the world, and afterwards raised himself to the first honours of his profession. In 1778 he commanded the Channel fleet, and in the same year fell in with the French under Count d'Or-villiers, off Ushant. A partial action ensued, which the English admiral intended to renew on the following morning, but when day dawned the enemy had retired. This affair gave great dissatisfaction to the nation, which was aggravated by hir Hugh Palliser, second in command, preferring a charge against Admiral Keppel, who was honourably acquitted by a court-martial at Portsmouth. Sir Hugh was then tried and censured. In 1782 Admiral Keppel was raised to the peerage; he subsequently acted on two different occasions as first lord of the Admiralty. в. 1725; р. 1786.

KERK, Cornad, kern, a Swiss statesman, who when the French government insisted on the extradition of Louis Napoleon, now Napoleon Hortense, in the canton of Thurgan, declared that no power had the right to interfere with the excreise of the hospitality that his country thought fit to extend to refugees from other lands. Dr. Kern was the Swiss plenipotentiary for the settlement of the dispute between Prussia and Switzerland, in 1857, and soon after was sent as ambassador to Paris. D. at Berlingen, 1893.

Keren, Cornelius, ke-tel, a Dutch artist, who came to England during the roign of Elizabeth, whose portrait he pointed, as well as the por-traits of many of the nobility. On his return to Holland he discontinued the use of pencils, to Holland he discontinued the use of pencils, and painted with the tips of his fingers, and even with his toes. D. 1602.

KETT, Henry, a divine and an accomplished soholar, was educated at Trinity College, Oxford, and became Bempton lecture in 1799, rector of Charlton, &c. He wrote "History the Interpreter of Propheny," "Elements of General Knowledge," "A Tour to the Lakes," "Emily," a moral tale, &c. n. at Norwich, 1761; drowned, while bathing, 1825.

KEPPEL, ADMIRAL.

Knox, John.

W. CHARLES.

Kossute, Louis.

KETT, William, ket, a tanner of Norfolk, who, in the reign of Edward VI., excited a revolt against the government. The insurgents, amounting nearly to twenty thousand, marched to Norwich, which they took, and Kett formed a tribunal under a large oak, called the Tree of Reformation. They first protested only against inclosures and the exactions of the nobility and necestres and the exactions of the nonthy and gentry, but they afterwards inveloped against innovations in religion, and demanded the re-storation of popery. After defeating the mar-quis of Northampion, they were routed by the carl of Warwick, and Kett, with several others, was hanged upon the tree of reformation in 1549

KRULEN, Ludolph van, koi'-len, a Dutch geometrician, who acquired great celebrity by his calculation of the approximate correspondence between the diameter of a circle and its circumference. He taught mathematics at Breda and Amsterdam. D. 1610.

Keller, Janssen van, a portrait-painter, who, before Vandyek came to England, was in great favour with Charles I. Though the latter great painter supplanted him in his pro-fession, a warm friendship subsisted between the two artists, D. 1665.

Ker, Thomas Hewitt, ke, a modern English philologist, who, after completing his education at St. John's College, Cambridge, studied medi-cine at Gny's Hospital, London; but went out to Virginia in 1824, as professor of pure matheto Virginia in 1824, as protessor or pure manne-matics in the university of that state. Return-ing to Loudon in 1827, he became Lattin professor at the university of London, on the opening of that seat of learning. He after-wards contributed articles on language to the "Journal of Education," the "Penny Cyclo-pedia," and other works. In 1842 he became head master of the junior school of University Collage. and was also elected to the chair of College, and was also elected to the chair of comparative grammar. He subsequently wrote articles for Dr. Smith's "Dictionary of Classical articles for Dr. Smiths s Dictionary of Classical Antiquities;" and, in 1846, published his Latin Grammar. He was subsequently engaged in writing a "Latin Dictionary," and a "Dic-tionary of Roots of Languages." B. in London, KHERASKOV, Michael, ker'-as-kov, a Russian poet, who published a poem on the use of science, and an epic called the "Rossiada," the subject of which is the conquest of Casan by Ivan Vasilievitch II. He was vice-president of the college of mines, councillor of state, and curator of the university of Moscow. He was curator of the university of Moscow. He was also the writer of some tragedies and dramatic

pieces. B. 1733; D. 1807.

pieces. B. 1735; D. 1897.

KHILKOF, Prince, kill-kof, a Russian nobleman, and ambassador to Charles XII., by whom he was thrown into prison when war broke our between Russia and Sweden. In his confinement he wrote an abridgment of the Russian history. He died as he was about to be restored to liberty, after an imprisonment of eighteen years. His work was published in 1770.

years. His work was published in 1770.

Knosdor, or Krossur, (See Crossoss), Knoban, Richard, Rid-der, a learned English prelate, was a native of Sussor, or according to some authorities, of Suffolk, and was educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, where have selected to a fellowship. In 1681, he was made prebend of Norwich; and, in 1689, dean Mere Peterborough, on which occasion he took his doctor's degree. On the deprivation of Dr. Ken, Kidder was consecrated hishonof Bathand Wells Kidder wasconsecrated bishopof Bathand Wells and preached the "Boyle lecture" in 1693. He and his wife were killed in their bed at Wells, during he night of the great storm, Nov. 26, 1703. Besides several sermons and religious tracts, he published a valuable work, entitled "The Demonstration of the Messiah," a "Commentary in the Pentateuch," &c.

Kien-Loong, ks-en'-loong, emperor of China, tho succeeded his father, Yung Tching, in 1735. He wrote some poetical pieces, and when Lord Macartney went to China as ambassador, he gave him some of his verses to present to the king of England. He favoured the missionaries, and was in all respects a very amable monarch.

was in all respects a very annable monarch, b. 1709; abdicated 1798; b. 1799. Kierings, Alexander, kee'-rings, a landscape-ainter of Utrecht. His views were copied from ature, and he finished them with amazing nature, and he missed them will adalazing patience, even the bark and the fibres of the trees being distinctly marked. B. 1590; D. 1646. Kilburn, Richard, kill-burn, an English topo-

RIBUEN, BICHARD, 84'-0477, an English topo-rapher, who wrote a Eurrey of the county of Kent, published in 1659. KILDEE, Richard, 84'-04, an English divine, 'ho, in 1590, was elected rector of Liucoln College, Oxford, and was afterwards made Hebrew professor and prehendary of Lincoln. He was one of the translators of the authorized ersion of the Bible. D. 1620.—There was another wine of this name, who was minister of All-allows in Derby, and wrote the "Burthen of a paden Conscience," which book went through baden Consequence, which look were thought everal editions. D. 1645.

KILLIGEREW, Catharine, kill-li-grw, the wife Sir Honry Killigrew, of Cornwall, was a ady of great accomplishments, being mistress of the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin languages. She also wrote some poems. D. in Essex, about 530; p. about 1600.

Killierew, Anne, a beautiful and accom-lished English lady, who received a liberal ducation, distinguished herself in painting, and drew the portraits of the duke and duchess of York; she was also eminent for her piety. Her poems were published in 1686, with an elegiac ode by Dryden prefixed. n. in London, 1660; p. 1685.

D. 1685.

KILLIGREW, William, an English dramatic writer, was the son of Sir Robert Killigrew.
He received his education at St. John's College, archich bewrent on genrse of travel. Oxford, after which he went on a course of trave On his return, he was made governor of Falmouth and of Pendennis Castle. For his adherence to the cause of Charles I. he suffered considerably n his fortune. At the Restoration he was

"Ormasdes; or, Love and Friendship, he wood "Midnight and Daily Thoughts," in prose and verse, and "The Artless Midnight Thoughts of a Gentleman at Court." B. at Hauworth, Middlesex, 1605; D. 1693.

ceding, which to Charles II. He wrote ni plays. He was commonly called King Charles's jester; and had more wit in conversation than in writing. B. 1611; D. 1682.

Killersw, Henry, brother of the above, in 1642 was made prebendary of Westmisster. He suffered much for his loyalty to Charles I. in the civil war, but at the Restoration recovered his prebend, and was appointed master of the Savoy, and rector of Wheathamstead, in Hertfordshire. He wrote "The Conspiracy," a tragedy; and "Pallantus and Eudora," a tragedy. B. 1612; D. 1690.

KTLMAINE, Charles Joseph, kil-main, an Irishman, who became general in the armies of the French republic. He fought against the English in America, under Lafayette, and was employed In America, dinder handyette, and was employed as brigadier in the French army sent into La Vendée. He signalized himself in Italy, at Mantua, and at Castiglione, and was nominated commander-in-chief of an army that was to have made a descent upon Ireland; but the expedition was abandoned. He was subsequently placed at the head of the army of Helvetia; but, placed at the head of the army of Heivetti; but, being unsuccessful, was superseded by General Massena. n. at Dublin, 1754; D. at Paris, 1730. Kruwa.psz, Arthur Wolle, Lord, kid-eaer-den, chief justice of the King's Bench, in Ireduction appointed king's counsel, and sat in Parliament. In 1787 hw so made solicitor-general, and two years later attorney-general, on the death of Lord Clomed he was appointed chief justice of the King's Bench, in visible district he concluded himself with innear-with a grant of the conducted himself with innear-with a grant of the conducted himself with innear-with districts of the King's Bench, in which dignity he conducted himself with impartiality and moderation. Notwithstanding this, he fell a victim to a ferocious mob, who dragged him from his coach, with his nephew, the Rev. Richard Wolfe, and barbarously killed them in Menara Wolfe, and barbarously killed them in Thomas Street, Dublin, in 1803. Miss Wolfe, his lordship's daughter, was in the coach, but one of the mob took her under his protection, and conveyed her to a place of safety. The death of the old judge has been portrayed in a popular picture called the "Assassination of Lord Kilwarden."

Kimber, Isaac, kim'-ber, an English dissenting divine, who was editor of the "Lendon Magazine" for many years, and wrote the "Life of Oliver Cromwell," the "Life of I'ishop Deveridge," the "History of Eugland," and Boveridge," the "History of Eugland," and twenty posthunous sermons. B. at Wantage, Berks, 1692; D. in London, 1753.

KILIBER, Edward, son of the above, was brought up a bookseller, but entered the army, and served in America with some reputation. He succeeded his father as editor of the "Jondon Magazine." B. 1719; D. 1769.

KIMBELTS, John Wockebuse, Earl of, kimber-le, succeeded his grandfather asBronWodeness in 3184 bearen undfar secreture of state.

house in 1846, became under-secretary of state for foreign affairs in 1852, and was sent as amfor foreign amars in 1952, and was sent as ann-bassador to St. Petersburg in 1856. In 1858 he resumed his former post in Lord Palmerston's ministry, which he held till 1861. In 1864 he succeeded the Earl of Carlisla as lord-lleutenant of Ireland, retaining office until the fall of Earl Russell's ministry in 1866. On the accession of Mr. Gladstone to office in 1863, he became lord privy seal. n. 1826.

King, Hon. Peter John Locke, king, a collateral descendant of the eminent John Locke, and an earnest reformer, represented EastSurrey from 1847 to 1869. He carried the "Real Estate from 184/ to 1899. He carried the "Real Estate Charges Act" through parliament in 1854, and in 1856 procured the repeal of about 120 uscless statutes. In 1861 he introduced the "Religious himself in his laboratory. He attended that monarch in his last illness, and was ordered one thousand pounds, which he never received. In the "Philosophical Transactions" are some observations by him on ants and the animal culie in pepper; also a paper on transfusing blood from a calf to a sheep. D. unknown when.

KING, Peter, Lord Chancellor of England. His father was a greeze, and intended him for the same business; but a love of learning ren-dered him superior to trade, and he was suffered dered nim superior to trade, and no was sauccon to follow his inclination. The philosopher John Locke, who was his maternal uncle, left him half his library at his death, which was of great service to him. By the advice of the same great man he went to Leyden, and, on his return, entered of the Inner Temple, where he applied himself to the study of the law with great assiduity. He also devoted some time to other studies, particularly theology, and in 1691 published anonymously, "An Enquiry into the Constitution, Discipline, Unity, and Worship published anonymously.

Constitution, Discipline, Unity, and Worship of the Primitive Church, that flourished within the first 300 years after Christ." This work was well received, and soon reached a second edition. In 1000 he was chosen member of the control o parliament for Recruision, in Devonshire. In 1702 appeared his "History of the Apostles Creed," a book of considerable information. In 1708 ho was chusen recorder of London, and this hie was entered recover or Lounday, and knighted. In 1709 he was appointed one of the managers of the House of Commons on the trial of Dr. Sacheverell. At the accession of George I., in 1714, he was made chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and, in 1725, created Lord King, baron of Ockham, in Surrey, and shortly after was appointed lord chancellor. He resigned the scals in 1733. B. at Exeter, 1609; p. 1734.

King, William, an English writer. In 1718 he was chosen principal of St. Mary Hall, but, on offering himself as a candidate to represent disappointed, he went to Ireland; but how long he remained there is not known. While in Ireland he wrote a satirical poem, entitled "The Toast." In 1749 he spoke the oration in the theatre at Oxford, on the dedication of Rad-eliffe's library. He was a zealous Tory, and generally considered as disaffected to the Brunswick family, which brought him into discredit. He published several curious tracts of his own, and five volumes of South's Sermons. B. in London, 1685; D. 1763.

King, John Glen, an English divine, and chaplain to the English factory at St. Petersburg, became medallist to the empress of Russia. He wrote the "Rites and Ceremonies of the Greek Church, containing an account of its Doctrine, Worship, and Discipline; "Observations on the Climate of Russia and the Northern Countries," and some "Observations on the Barberini Vase." p. 1787.

KING, Thomas, an eminent comedian, in 1866 procured the repeal of about 120 useless statutes. In 1861 he introduced the "Religious ceived a good education, and was niteauled Worship Act" for obtaining greater freedom for clergymen of the Church of England in the certain of the Church of England in the certain of the control of the control of the control of the certain of the certain restonat toll. B. in London, 1700; B. 1800.

Krss, Edward, an antiquary, studied at Lincoln's Inn; was called to the bar, and became recorder of Lynn. He was F.R.S. and F.S.A. and produced an excellent work, entitled "Munimenta Antiqua." B. at Norwich, 1785; p. 1807.

KING, Rufus, an American statesman and diplomatist, was entered at Harvard College in 1773; studied the law, and was admitted to the 1773; studied the law, and was samitted to ber in 1778; and was elected a member of Congress in 1784. In 1796 he was appointed by Washington minister plenipotentiary to the court of St. James's, the functions of which office he continued to discharge till 1803, when he returned home. In 1813 he was a third time sent to the senate by the legislature of New York; and his speech on the burning of Washington by the English was a most brilliant display of senatorial oratory. In 1816 he lost his election; but in 1820 was once more returned to Congress, and continued a member of that body until the expiration of the term in 1825. He then accepted the appointment of minister plenipotentiary at the court of London; minister plempotentary at the court of Loddon; but was taken ill, returned home, and died soon after. B. in Maine, 1765; D. 1827. KITSGLARS, Alexander William, king-laik, an English barristor, and author of "Esthen," a celebrated book of Eastern travel. He received lits education at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and was called to the bar in 1837. He supplied several articles to the newspapers, supplied several articles to the newspapers, during the Crimean war, descriptive of the military and naval operations; he also wrote a short blography of the Hungarian here, General Gryon, and some papers for the "Quarterly Review." He is now writing a "History of the Crimean War," of which 4 volumes have appeared. B. at Taunton, Devonshire, 1809. KINGSBOROWE, Edward, Vissount, Kingstour-vo., a nobleman distinguished for his literary tasks and attainment was the anthree.

bur-ro, a nobleman distinguished for his life rary tasts and attainments, was the author of an excellent work on "The Autiquities of Mexico." He was the eldest son of the third earl of Kingston, and a fellow of the Autiquarian Society. B. 1795; p. 1837.
KINGSLER, Rev. Charles, kings-le, a distinguished modern novelist and essayist. At 14

years of age he became the pupil of the Rev. Derwent Coleridge, son of the poet; he afterwards went to Cambridge university, where he distinguished himself both in classics and mathematics. He was at first intended for the law, but the church was afterwards chosen. In 1842 he was appointed curate of Eversley, in Hampshire; two years later he succeeded to the same living. He married, about the same time, a daughter of Mr. Grenfell, who represented Truro and Great Marlow in Parliament for many years, and whose other daughter became the wife of the eminent historian J. A. Froude. His first acknowledged contributions to literature were a volume of "Village Sermons," and "The Saint's Tragedy," a drama in verse, published in 1848. "Alton Locke, Tailor and Poet," was in 1848. his third essay, and, from its first appearance, it commanded the greatest attention. The bold and earnest views of its author—"the Chartist and earness views of its additional and characteristic consistency as he was called—sank deeply into the public mind. This novel has been several times reprinted; its treatment of social and times reprinted its treatment of social and Mortex, John Godfrey, kin'.kzl, a German political questions remaining as fresh and political questions remaining as fresh and retained as when the book first came before 1848 burst forth on the continent, was prothe public. A second novel,—"Yeast, a Professor of philosophy at Bonn, and, declaring gaming, he lost the fruits of many years' pro-fessional toil. n. in London, 1730; p. 1805. — 21ne," and afterwards reprinted, in 1851; this KTree, Edward, an antiquary, studied at Lin-is, a philosophical trather than a political novel. His subsequent works were "Hypatia; or New Foes with an Old Face," a beautiful descriptive fiction, illustrating the times of the early Christian church in the East; "Westward Ho! or. the Voyages and Adventures of Sir Amyas Leigh in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth;" and "Two Years Ago." These novels, by their great excellence, have placed their author among the foremost of recent writers. Mr. Kingsley also produced a volume for juvenile reading, called "The Heroes," in which the deeds of some great chiefs of the Grecian mydecis of some great enters of the Greenan my-thology are narrated in eaptivating manner. Among the more important of his religious writings may be enumerated, "The Message of the Church to Labouring Men," "Sermons on National Subjects, preached in a Village Church," and "Sermons for the Times;" all of these being and "Sermous for the Times;" all of these being inspired by a pure, generous, and enlightened Christian feeling. He expounded mental philosophy in his "Phachton; or, Loose Thougaits for Loose Thinkers," and his "Alexandria and her Schools;" while, for natural philosophy and the observation of nature, he contributed his "Glaucus; or, the Wonders of the Shore." He likewise wrote for "Fraction of the Shore." ne meeting. He inserting wrote for "Fra-ser's Magazine," the "North British Re-view," and the "Encyclopedia Britannica." His last works of importance are "The Roman and the Teuton, "Jectures delivered at Cambridge in 1864, and a novel entitled "Hereward the Wake; or, the Last of the English." A bold, independent, and earnest thinker, Mr. Kingsley, in every one of his popular and excellent works, contributed to elevating the tone of modern society, and to giving it a more enlarged and refined appreciation of the good, beautiful, and true, whether in art or nature. He suc-ceeded Sir James Stephen as professor of modern history in the university of Cambridge in 1859. B. at Holne Vicarage, Devonshire, 1819.

Kingsley, Henry, brother of the preceding, was educated at King's College, London, and at was educated at King's College, Loudon, and at Corford. In 1859 he went to Australia, from which he returned in 1858. He contributed to Frasor's and "S Macmillan's" magazines, "Ravenshoe," "Geofiry Hamlyn," and "The Hillyars and the Burtons," being the best known of his productions. 2, 1830.

KINGSTON, Elizabeth Chudleigh, duchess of, a celebrated English adventuress, was at first maid of honour to the Princess of Wales, and carried on an intriume with the dulte of and carried on an intrigue with the duke of Hamilton. She afterwards secretly married Captain Hervey, but separated from him in a short time. Going abroad, she was well reshort time. Going abroad, she was well coived by Frederick the Great at Berlin. her return to England, she married the Duke of Kingston, who left her a widow, with immense wealth; but the relatives of the duke prosecuted her for bigamy, and stripped her of her title; they could not, however, recover the great wealth which her second husband's will and given her. She went abroad a second time, and succeeded in inspiring Prince Radziwill with a lively impression. B. in Devonshire, 1720; D. near Paris, 1788.

himself a partisan of the republicans, was in a few months compelled to fly from Prussia; but, being taken prisoner in Baden, was tried and sentenced to imprisoment for life. He was confined in the celebrated fortress of Spandau, but contrived to effect his escape, and reached England. In 1851 he visited America, réached Éngland. In 1881 he visited America, but in a short time returned to London, where he established himself as a teacher of the German language and literature. His poetical works are exceedingly popular in Germany. He also wrote several volumes of tales and sketches, a history of painting, sembuture, and achitecture, and many other philosophical and historical works. n. at Obereassel, 1815.

Kernature, the Hon. Douglas, kin'wird, received his early education at Eton, and afterweets exceed some time at Göttlingen, when wards passed some time at Göttingen, where he made himself master of the French and German languages. On leaving Göttingen he went to Cambridge, and there became the associate of the first characters of the day. In 1813 he accompanied Mr. Hobbouse (Lord Broughton) in a tour through Sweden, and to Vienna, and was present at the battle of Culm. He became was present at the battle of Calm. He became an active partner in the banking house of Ransom and Morland; and after the old partnership was dissolved, took the principal management of the business. He possessed great energy of mind, was a lover of literature, a liberal patron of the arts, and an intimate friend of Lord Byron. n. 1786; p. 1820.

KIPPINGINS, HENLY, kippingi-tag, a learned German Lutheran, who, after completing his education at the university of Rostock, was pressed for a soldier; but a Swedish councillor of state observing him with a Latin book in his hand took him from the army, made him of state observing him with a Latin book in his hand, took him from the army, made him his librarian, and procured him the place of sub-rector of the university of Bremen. He wrote a supplement to the "History" of John Pappus; a "Treatise on Roman Antiquities;"

rappus; a "Treasse on Roman Antiquines;" and another on the Creation. p. 1678.

Krpers, Andrew, kip-pis, an English Unitarian divine and biographical writer, who was educated under Dr. Doddridge, at Northampton. His first settlement as a minister was at Boston. His first settlement as a miniscer was as Descap, in Lincolnshire, in 1746; thence he removed to Dorking, in Surrey, in 1750; and in 1753 became pastor of a congregation in Princes Street, Westminster. He was a writer in the "Monthly Land as blood as bloo Westminster. He was a writer in the "Notthiny Review" for some time, and in 1761 had a share in a periodical work called the "Library." In 1777 he became the editor of the new edition of the "Biographia Britannica," in which capacity he greatly distinguished himself. The volumes of this work were published him his lifetime, and the greatest part of the sixth was prepared before his death. In 1789 he myblished he "Library his death." In 1789 he myblished he "Library his death." In 1789 he myblished he "Library his death." the greatest part of the sixth was prepared oc-fore his death. In 1788 he published the "Lile of Captain Cook," in one volume, and the same year, a "Lile fol Dr. Lardner." Dr. Kippis also wrote the "History of Knowleder," and a variety of other pieces, particularly sermons and bracks. He received the degree of D.D. from the university of Eduburgh, and was a fellow of the Royal and Antiquarian Societics. He was an intelligent and industrious writer,

He was an intelligent and industrious writer, and his style is pure and perspicuous. B. at Nottingham, 1725; D. 1795.

Nottingham, 1725; D. 1795.

Khouga originally only a house-painter, had a good knowledge of art; and on settling in London was introduced by Lord Bute to George III., and in consequence became clerk of the works at Kew, and had the honour of teaching the 598 queen the principles of perspective. He was F.R.S. and F.S.A., and published, at the ex-pense of the king, "The Perspective of Archi-tocture." The celebrated Mrs. Trimmer was tecture." The celebrated Mrs. Trimmer was this daughter, n. in Suffolk, 1716; p. 1774. Kraus, Rev. William, an eminent English naturalist, whose first lessons in natural history were received from his mother, who came of a good Suffolk family, by name Meadows. This estimable woman had before her youthful son a estimatic woman and octore ner youanus son a collection of shells and field-plants, and the early love for nature thus imbibed, lasted throughout Mr. Kirby's life, and led him to become one of the first English naturalists, He received his education at Caius College, Cambridge, and entered upon holy orders in 1782. Up to this period, although he had been a diligent botanical observer, he had paid scarcely any attention to entomology. To this science his notice was attracted by accident. In 1835 he thus described the circumstance in a letter to a friend;—"About half a century since, observing accidentally, one morning, a very beautiful golden bug creeping on the sill of my window, I took it up to examine it, and finding that its wings were of a more yellow hue than was common to my observation of these insects before, I was anxions carefully to examine any other of its peculiarities; and find-ing that it had twenty-two beautiful clear black spots upon its back, my captured animal was imprisoned in a bottle of gin, for the purpose, as I supposed, of killing him. On the following morning, anxious to pursue my observation, I took it again from the gin, and laid it on the window-sill to dry, thinking it dead; but the warmth of the sun very soon revived it; and hence commenced my further pursuit of this branch of natural history." From this period branch of natural instory.

From the percent he became an earnest student of entomology. In 1783 he was nominated one of the original members of the Linnaum Society, to which, in 1793, he forwarded his first paper, entitled, "A Description of three New Species of Hirado." He furnished to the "Transactions" of the same learned body a succession of valuable papers during the ensuing four years. In 1802 he published his first separate work, "A Monograph concerning English Bees," which, from the novelty of its observations, and the lucid style in which they were conveyed, excited the liveliest interest in the entomological world, In 1805 he made the acquaintance of Mr. Spence, and the friendship subsisting between these two gentlemen led to the production of a work on natural history, which ranks among the a work of material most of popular science in the Sag-lish language. This was the celebrated "Intro-duction to Entomology," which model scientific work was completed in 1826. In 1830, when 70 years of age, he wrote his "Habits and Instincts of Animals," one of the well-known Bridgewater treatises. Mr. Kirby also wrote the descriptions of insects contained in Captain Parry's "Voyage for the Discovery of the North-west Passage," and likewise those found in the "Zoology of the Northern Parts of British North America," In addition to these, he, throughout his long life, firnished many of the learned societies with papers on his favourite study. He was honorary president of the Entomologial Society, fellow of the Royal and Geographical Societies, and corresponding member of many scientific bodies on the continent and in the United States. His life, written by the Ker, best contributions to popular science in the Eng-

Sonn Freman, was published in 1892. B. in Suffolk, 1759; p. 1850. Kirch, Mary Margaret, keersh, a learned German lady, distinguished for her skill in astronomy. She married M. Godfrey Kirch, an astronomer, and assisted him in his observations, and in the calculation of his Ephemerides. When the king of Prussia founded the Academy of Sciences at Berlin, in 1700, M. Kirch was appointed astronomer, with a pension. There his lady acquired the friendship and admiration of many learned men. In 1702 she discovered of many learned men. In 1702 she discovered a comet, of which her husband published the observations. In 1707 she made a discovery of a remarkable aurora borealis, of which mention was made by the Academy of Sciences at Paris. In 1711 she published a discourse on the approaching conjunction of Saturn, Jupiter, &c.

B. near Leipsie, 1670; D. at Berlin, 1720.
Kircher, Conrad, keersk'-er, a Protestant divine of Augsburg, who, in 1602, published a Greek Concordance of the Old Testament, in-serting therein the Hebrew words alphabetically, and under them the corresponding Greek words.

KIRCHMAN, N., keersh'-man, a Russian pro-fessor of philosophy, celebrated for his electrical respondents, and particularly for the manner of his death. Being engaged near St. Petersburg in attracting, with apparatus, the electric fluid from the clouds, a ball of fire struck him on the head and killed him on the spot, in 1753.

Kirk, Colonel, kirk, an English officer, noto-rious for his brutality. Being sont against the followers of the duke of Monmouth in 1685, he committed great barbarities in the west of Eng-land, James II. solicited him to turn Catholic, but Kirk roughly replied, "that when he was at Tangiers he had promised the dey that, if he everchanged his religion, he would turn Moham-medan." He afterwards served in the army of He afterwards served in the army of William III. D. at the close of the 17th cen-

Kirkaldy, Sir William, of Grange, kir'-ka-de, distinguished military leader in the time of Mary Queen of Scots. He originally adhered to the party known as the Lords of the Congregation, but subsequently attached himself to secretary Maitland, the leader of the partisans of queen Mary. Kirkaldy, after a chequered career, having learned the military art on the career, naving learned the initiary art of the continent, where he gained the reputation of being one of the most skilful leaders of the day, and taken a prominent part in the troubles in his native country consequent on the Reforma-tion, was ultimately executed at Edinburgh, in 1573.

1873.

Kirkiand, Thomas, kirk'-land, an eminent physician, who published an "Enquiry into the State of Medical Surgery," a "Treatise on Child-bed Fevers," "Thoughts on Amputamon," and a "Commentary on Apopletic and Paralytic Affections." B. 1771; D. at Ashly. dela-Zouch, Leicestershire, 1798.

Kirkiand, Mrs. Caroline Stansbury, an American novelist, and the wife of Mr. William Kirkland, a critic of some celebrity in the United States, was engased. In 1847. to the United States, was engaged, in 1847, to edit "Sartain's Magazine," which was pub-lished first at New York, and afterwards at Philadelphia. Subsequently, Professor Hart became her assistant in the direction of that periodical. Her principal works, for the most gastronomy, than by the practice of medicine, part characterized by an acute perception, rich. He wrote a book, under the title of "The Cook's ness of observation, and a light and somewhat Oracle," in which the laws of the oulmary art,

John Freeman, was published in 1852. E. in Smifolk, 1759; n. 1850. Kirch, Mary Margaret, keersh, a learned German lady, distinguished for her skill in Essay on the Life and Writings of Spenser: "Holidays Abroad, or Europe from the West;" and "The Evening Book;" these latter appearing at intervals of about two years. She was also the authoress of a volume designed for youthful reading, entitled "A Book for the Home Circle." B. at New York, about 1815.

Kirkfatrick, James, kirk'-pa-trik, a skilful orientalist, was a major-general in the British orientains, was a mijor-general in the British service, and passed a great part of his life in India. He published a "Description of the Kingdom of Nepaul," a "Biography of Pessis. Poets," and the "Letters of Tippoo Saib." D.

1912

Kirstenius, Peter, ker-ste'-ni-us, an eminent physician, and professor of medicine at Upsal, in Sweden. In addition to his native tongue, he is said to have understood twenty-five other languages. B. at Breslau, Silesia, 1577; D. 164). Kirwan, Richard, kir'-wan, a chemical philosopher, who shortly after concluding his education at the Jesuits' College of St. Omer's, inherited his family estate, and thenceforth devoted his life to chemical science. He was elected fellow of the Royal Society in 1780, and was subsequently nominated president of the Royal Irish duently nominated president of the noyal risal Academy. He was also a member of nearly all the learned societies in Europe. His chief works were "An Essay on the Constitution of Acids," "Geological Essays," and "An Essay on the Analysis of Chemical Waters." B. in on the Analysis of Chemical Waters. In Ireland, about 1750; p. 1812.

Kirwan, Walter Blake, an Irish divine, eminent for his popularity as a preacher, was educated at St. Omer's and Louvain; took orders as a Catholic priest; and, in 1778, was ap-pointed chaplain to the Neapolitan embassy in London. In 1787 he became a convert to the principles of the Anglican church, and obtained successively the prebendary of Howth, the living of St. Nicholas, in Dublin, and the deanery of Killala. As a pulpit orator he excelled all his contemporaries; so great, indeed, were his at-tractions, that we are told it was often necessary to keep off the crowds, by guards and palisades, from the churches in which he was preaching. It was natural, therefore, that his exertions in favour of charitable institutions should be in great request, and that he should succeed in an astonishing manner in augmenting their funds. Avolume of his sermons was published after his death. B. at Galway, 1754; D. 1805.

atter his death. B. at Galway, 1754; D. 1805.
Kiss, Augustus, kiss, a German artist, who studied under Rauch, the eminent soulptor, and first attracted notice by his colossal group, the "Amazon attacked by a Tiger," which was east in bronze by public subscription in Germany. A copy of this work formed one of the chief attractions in the Great Exhibition of 1851. He was professor of sculpture in the Royal Acedewyre fields: his figure as an artist how. Academy of Berlin; his fame as an artist, how-ever, is greater in that city than elsewhere. B. at Pless, Upper Silesia, 1802; D. 1865. KITCHENER, William, kit-chin-er, a physician and miscellaneous writer, the son of a respect-able coal-merchant in London, who left him a large fortune, was educated at Eton, and settled in London as a physician; but he distinguished himself far more by his precepts on the art of professedly founded on his own practice, were promulgated; and, by appointing a "committee of taste" among his friends, who had regular invitations to his dinner-table, the fame of this epicure spread far and wide, while his evening conversaziones were the resort of privileged conservationes were the resort of privileged wits and literary bo violands. He was a great stickler for punctuality; and, for the regulation of these meetings, a placerd was fixed over the chimney-piece, with this inscription, "At seven come, at eleven 90," to which the facetious George Colman once added the word "it." making the last sentence, "at eleven 90 it!" He strongly condemned many of the ordinary methods of cooling, preserving, &c.; and in one instance, after giving an elaborate recipe for repearing pickles, finished by advising that the "whole mess should be thrown out of the window"—a recommendation which considering dow"-a recommendation which, considering dow"—a recommendation whien, consucering how such preparations are usually got up now-a-days, was not an injudicious one. Optics and music were also particular objects of Kitchener's study; and on these and other subjects he displayed a very commendable amount of research, Besides "The Cook's Orneic," which was his most popular work, he published "The Art of Invigorating and Prelonging Life," "The Beonony of the Eyes," "The Traveller's Oracle,"

"Observations on Vocal Music," and "The Loyal and National Songs of England." B.

about 1775; D. 1827.
Kitro, John, kit-to, a modern English writer, chiefly known as the editor of "Knight's Pictorial Bible," who in his carlier years displayed great aptitude for acquiring knowledge. His father had been a respectable builder, but was reduced to the condition of a journeyman mason, in which labour young Kitto assisted him. his thirteenth year, he had the misfortune to fall from a high scaffold, and, after suffering for some time from the injuries resceived, remained permanently deaf. Owing to the intemperate habits of his parent, some years were spent by Kitto in greatdestitution. He contrived to acquire knowledge, however, and, in 1823, contributed some essays to the "Plymouth Journal," and in the essays to the "rymouth Journal; and in the following year Mr. Grove, a dentist of the town, took him into his service. He was afterwards sent out, as a printer, to Malta, having pre-viously been taught the trade in the Missionary College at Islington. His constitution being too weak for this work, he returned to England in 1829, and, in the same year, accompanied Mr. Grove in an extensive Eastern tour. He visited St. Petersburg, Astrakan, the Calmuck Tartars, the Caucasus, Armenia, Persia, and Bagdad, returning home in 1833. In that year he obtained an introduction to Mr. Charles he obtained an introduction to sir, chartes Knight, by whom he was subsequently engaged to edit the "Pictorial Bible," the "Pictorial History of Palestine," and other works. He also wrote for the same publisher, "The Lost Senses—Deafness and Blindness," &c. He like-tic works for Masers Olivhent of Edithursch wise wrete for Messrs. Oliphant, of Edinburgh, a work entitled "Daily Bible Illustrations," a work entitled Daily Bible Independent in 8 vols, being readings on passages of Scrip-ture for each day for two years, in which he displayed a minute acquaintance with the man, ners, customs, and antiquities of the East. He was attacked by a paralytic stroke in 1854, and became greatly embarrassed in his means. A pen-

Dr. Kitto, by the Rev. J. E. Ryland, was published at Edinburgh in 1856.

the military college of Vienna, and served, in various grades, with the Austrian army; but, on the outbreak of the Hungarian revolution, in 1818, he offered his sword to his countrymen. In 1849 he distinguished himself in the Hungarian defence of the fortress of Comorn, before which the Austrian army was defeated, with the loss of 30 pieces of artillery, 3000 muskets, large stores of ammunition, and 2000 head of eattle. General Klapka com-General Klapka comnumicated the news of his victory to Kossuth and Görgei, but the latter had by that time capitulated, while the former had fied into Turkey, He, however, made terms with Haynau, the Austrian general, by which all the gallant defenders received a safe-conduct to go whither they pleased. He went first to England, and afterwards to Switzerland. He published, in 1850, "Memoirs of the War of Independence in Hungary. On the outbreak of the Crimean war, Klapka went to the East; and on his return, after the taking of Sebastopol, he produced a work, entitled "The War in the East; from the Year 1853 to July, 1855." B. at Temeswar, in Southern Hungary, 1820. Кълготи, Martin Henry, klup'-rot, an eminent German chemist, who greatly advanced the science of mineralogy by his discoveries; and, for his distinguished services as an analytical chemist, was, in 1778, elected member of the Berlin Academy of Sciences: he had previously been appointed professor of chemistry in the Royal Mining Institute. In addition to 207 treatises on mineralogy and chemistry, he pubished a "Chemical Dictionary," in conjunction with Professor Wolff. n. at Wernigerode, Upper Saxony, 1743; n. at Berlin, 1817.

Klarrorn, Julius Heinrich von, n. distinguished German Oriental scholar, was the son of the preceding, who desired to educate him for his own profession; but he evinced little inclinahis own profession; but he evinced intie menina-tion for chemistry, or, indeed, for any scenee. When about fifteen, he was examined with his follow-pupils of the college of levilin; but was found so backward in his studies, that one of the professors cried out, "Why, you know no-thing at all!" "Beg your pardon," he answered, "I know Chinese." It was subsequently al-sovered that he had learn't Chinese without any recorded this he had fearly talked with a saistance whatever; and his father becoming reconciled to his son's pursaing his favouries studies, he was sent, in 1801, to the university of Halle to acquire the clarifical languages. His fame as an Oriental scholar led to his being employed by the emperor Alexander of Russia. went to St. Petersburg in 1805, and, after re-ceiving several marks of favour, was sent as in-terpreter in the suite of the ambassador to China. The embassy had not proceeded more than 200 miles across the Chinese frontier, when they were detained, and finally informed by messengers from Pekin, that the court did not wish to see them. Klaproth did not return direct to the Russian capital with the other members of the embassy, but travelled alone through Southern Siberia. In 1807 he arrived at St. Petersburg, and was soon afterwards sent came greatly camera assess in ms means, a point sign of £100 per annum was soon as electrific mission of £100 per annum was accorded him in to the Caucastan provinces on a scientific mission. He came back, with a large store of cruti his health. B. at Plymouth, 1964; p. at knowledge, in 1800. He went to Berlin in 1811, Camestadt, Wirtemberg, 1854. A "Memoir" of avowedly for the purpose of superintending the casting of types for the printing of his Chinese books; but it was generally known at the time. that he had incurred the displeasure of the ezar. The following year he resigned his Russian ap-pointments. After wandering about Germany for some time, he visited Napoleon, for whom he had great admiration, in exile at Elba. The emperor promised him an appointment, which he afterwards forgot to fulfil. Klaproth was after this reduced to straitened circumstances, but, through the influence of Wilhelm von Hum-boldt, he became royal professor of Oriental languages and literature to the king of Prussia, a post which was accompanied by a liberal pension. Klaproth was, moreover, allowed to live in Paris: there he commenced the publication of a long list of works on Oriental learning, of the greatest possible value, which it is said would fill more than thirty volumes. At his death, he left behind, "A Geographical, Statistical, and Historical Description of the Empire of China," intended to be published in French and English. Klaproth was one of the greatest linguists that ever existed. B. at Berlin, 1783;

Klahar

D. at Paris, 1835. Kleber, Jean Baptiste, klai'-bair, a French general, was educated as an architect, and sent to Paris for improvement in his profession. Being in a coffee-house where some strangers Being in a coffee-house where some strangers were insulted, he took their part with so much spirit, that they prevailed on him to accompany them to Munich, where Kaunitz, son of the Austrian minister, gave him a lieutenancy in his regiment. After eight years' service, he returned to his own country, and became inspector of public buildings in Upper Alsace, the revolution in France relichable his military are always and be detailed a commission in the reministration of the control o dour, and he obtained a commission in the republican army. He displayed great skill and bravery at the siege of Mayence, after which he was em-ployed in La Vendée; but the sanguinary scenes enacted there so disgusted him, that he obtained his recall, and was engaged in the north, where his recall, and was engaged in the horse, where he defeated the Austrians, took Mons, and drove the enemy from Louvain; he also captured Maestricht, and contributed to the taking of Dusseldorf and Frankfort, and to the victory of Butzach. Discontented with the Directory, he left the army, and returned to Paris, where he led a private life, writing his "Military Memoirs," till Bonaparte, being appointed general of the army of Egypt, chose Riebor as his companion. At the class of Alexadria he made panion. panion. At the siege of Alexandria he was wounded in the head, while scaling the ramwounded in the head, while scaling the run-parts, but did not retire till he received a second wound. He defeated the Turks in several actions, and Bonaparte, on quitting Egypt, left Kleber in the chief command. Soon afterwards he signed the treaty of El-Arish with Si Sidney Smith, by which the French agreed to leave Egypt; but it was annulled by the British go-vernment, and hostilities were renewed. Kleber, though greatly reduced, opposed to his un-favourable circumstances a determined mind, and defeated the Turks at the obelisk of Heliopolis. He next took Cairo by storm, and formed an alliance with Murad Ley; but was assas-sinated by a Turkish fanatic at Cairo in 1800. B. at Strasburg, where there is a statue to his memory, 1754.

KLEIN, Johann Theodor, kline, a German naturalist, who published a "Natural History of Fishes and of Birds." He was also secretary to the senate of Dantzic. B. at Königsberg, 1635; D. 1759.

601

Klingenstierna

KLEIST, Ewald Christian de, kliste, a Prussian officer and poet, who served under Frederick II.; and, although he only cultivated literature during the leisure allowed by his military emauring the lessure allowed by his military em-ployments, acquired a great poetical reputa-tion. He published, in 1753, a collected edition of his poems. He likewise wrote some reflec-tions on the art of war, which appeared in 1750, B. at Zeblin, Pomerania, 1715; killed at the battle of Kunnersdorf, 1759.

KLEIST, Henry, a German dramatic author, who served for some time in the Prussian army but was afterwards employed at Berlin in a civil capacity. His most celebrated play is "Cathebut was afterwards employed at Berlin in a civul capacity. His most celebrated play is "Catherine of Hallbronn;" he also wrote poems and a collection of stories. B. 1777; D. 1811.

Keess, Emilias Frederics, Count, a distinguished Prussian officer, who, having risen by ability and courage to the rank of general, commanded a corps of Prussians, in 1812, as auxillaries to Napoleon's grand army; and afterwards, when Prussia threw off the domination of Donaparte, signalized himself in the battle of Bautzen, May 20, 1813, and was one of the plenipotentiaries who concluded the armistice. After the retreat of the cluded the armistice. After the retreat of the allied troops from Dresden into Bohemia, Kleist anied troops from Dresden Into Bonemia, Kleiss-gave battle to the army under Vandamme, and by his victory at the village of Nollendorf saved Bohemia, against which Napoleon had directed his best energies. He was afterwards known by the affix of "von Nollendorf," B. at Berlin, 1762; p. 1821.

KLENZE, Leo von, klain'-tse(r), a distin-guished German architect, studied his profession at Berlin, and afterwards went on a tour in France and Italy. While at Genoa he be-came acquainted with a distinguished lover of art, who introduced him to Jerome, king of Westphalia, whose court architect he became, In 1813 he went to Munich, and there attracted the notice of Ludwig, crown prince, and after-wards king, of Bavaria, who invited him to stay in that city, and appointed him court architect. Ludwig was a great lover of classical architec-Ludwig was a great lover of classical architecture, in which Klenze excelled, and he commissioned his protégé to prepare designs for the Walhalia, or Hall of Heroes, and for the Glyptothek; these works however, were not commenced till after Ludwig had ascended the throne of Bavaria. This event took place in 1825, and from that time Klenze was constantly employed in designing one great structure after amother, to adorn the great art-capital, Munich, The Glyptothek was finished in the year 1830, the Walhalla being commenced immediately afterwards. He was about the same time ap-pointed president of the council for buildings, a privy councillor, and raised to noble rank. He subsequently built the War Office, the Odeon, the palace of Prince Maximilian, and two new wings to the palace of the king, the street in Munich called "Linden-strasse," and many edi-Munich called "Lindon-strasse," and many edi-fices, public and private. He was likewise the architect of the New Imperial Museum at St. Petersburg, In 1834 he was invited to Athens to improve King Otho's capital. On his return be published a series of designs of Greek architecture. He was a member of almost every artistic academy in Europe. B. at Hildesheim, 1784; p. 1864.

KLINGENSTIERNA, Samuel, kling'-en-ste-air'a, a Swedish mathematician, who was intended for the profession of the law, but abandoned that pursuit for mathematics. He made a tour of study in Germany and France, between the years of his life, and completed his "Messiah" years 1727 and 1730, and, soon after his return, at Hamburg, in 1771. Besides that cpic poem, was appointed professor of mathematics, and he wrote edes, dramas, and other poetical tutor to the prince-royal of Sweden. In 1762 pieces; but his writings are not now held in or scary in Germany and France, between the years 1727 and 1730, and, soon after his return, was appointed professor of mathematics, and tutor to the prince-royal of Sweden. In 1762 was published, at St. Petersburg, a treatise on the means of correcting the aborration of light in achromatic telescopes, a valuable scientific contribution which the Swedish astronomer had sent to the Russian capital. He afterwards made a number of experiments on the same made a number of experiments of the same subject, transmitting an account of them to England. These papers enabled Mr. Dollond to discover a combination of flint and crownglass lenses, which, by correcting the aberration of light in the chromatic telescope, greatly in-proved that valuable philosophical instrument. He published an edition of Euclid's "Elements," Swedish translation of Musschenbrock's a Swedish translation of Aussementors as "Treatise on Physics," and two scientific dis-courses. He was a member of the Royal So-cieties of Upsal, of Stockholm, and of London. B. at Tolifors, near Linkoeping, 1680; D. at Stockholm, 1785.

KLINGER, Frederick Maximilian von, kling'er, an officer in the Russian service, and a literary character, commenced his career as a dramatic writer; but, in the war of the Bavierian succession, entered the military service, and was made a lieutenant in the Austrian army. In 1750 he went to St. Petersburg, and was appointed an officer and reader to the czarevitch Paul, with whom he aftewards travelled through Poland, Austria, Italy, France, travelect inrough Found, Assimi, Louis, France, &c., and, in the reign of Catherine, rose to the rank of colonel. He was made major-general, and director of the corps of cadets by his former pupil; and, when Alexander ascended the throne, received other offices and further promotion; and spent 40 years in the Russian service. His works, which are of a peculiar character, and written in an exaggerated style, form 12 volumes. B. at Frankfort-on-the-Maine, 1758; p. 1831.

KLINGSTADT, kling-stat, an eminent minia-ture painter, who excelled in making designs for snuff-boxes, for which he received extravagant prices. B. at Riga, 1657; D. at Paris, 1734.

KLOPSTOCK, Frederick Gottlieb, klop'-stok, a KLOSTOCK, Frederick Gottled, Mop-stoc, a distinguished German poet. While at school, during his earlier years, his poetical talents were evineed, and he formed the idea of writing along epic poem. He received a classical education at Naumburg, and studied theology at Jena, in 1745. Three years afterwards, he commenced his epic poem, the subject being "The Messiah." He at first published only three cantos of the work, and the reception they received was very extraordinary: while they were universally read, the author was regarded by some as a modern type of the old prophet, and by the rest as an irreverent and presumptuous writer upon a sacred subject. In 1750 he went to Switzerland, where he was received as a great poet. The Danish minister Bernstorff great poet. The Danish minister Dernaston, having read the three cantos of Klopstock's having read the poet to Copenhagen, offering poem, invited the poet to Copenhagen, offering him a pension of 400 dollars, in consideration of his residing in that city and there finishing, his epic. In 1751 he set out for Copenhagen, his epic. In 1761 he set out for Copenhagen, and was received with the greatest respect; subsequently, he accompanied the king, Frederick V., on his travels. In 1764 he settled in Hamburg, where he married. He resided in several parts of Germany during the remaining that extraordinary estimation which was for-merly the case. B. at Quedlinburg, 1724: D. 1803.

KMETY, George, met'-e, a Hungarian general, who studied at the Protestant college of Presburg; but, by a mistake, lost a German scholar-ship it had been his ambition to obtain. Thereunon he entered the Austrian army as a private soldier; and when the Hungarian revolution broke forth, in 1848, he had attained the grade of commissioned officer. Throughout the great struggle maintained by his countrymen in their efforts to gain independence, he figured as a brave and scientific officer; but when Görgei surrendered, with the entire corps under his command, Kmety fled into Turkey, where he became a Mussulman, and adopted the name and title of Ismail Pacha. At the memorable defence of Kars he commanded the Turkish army; and his bravery and skilful dispositions contributed in a great measure to the repulse which the Russian army at first sustained. n.in Hungary, 1810; p. in London, 1865. KNAPTON, George, nap'-ton, an English portrait-painter in crayons, was the pupil of Richardson, and surveyor and keeper of the king's pictures. B. 1693; D. at Kensington, 1778.

KNELLER, Sir Godfrey, nel'-ler, an eminent painter, was educated at Leyden for the milipanier, was cudated as Leyden for the infratary profession, but having a strong inclination for drawing, resolved to apply himself to painting. He studied first under Rembrandt, and afterwards went to Rome, at which place he greatly improved himself, and then visited England, where he soon acquired unrivalled distinction as an artist, becoming state painter to Charles II. and James II. William III. con-ferred on him the honour of knighthood, and the university of Oxford the degree of LL.D. He painted a prodigious number of portraits of illustrious personages, and to a striking like-ness he always added grace and elegance in his subjects. He was created a baronet by George L. and the emperor Leopold gave him a patent of nobility. B. at Lubeck, 1618; D. in London.

KNIBB, Rev. William, nib, a distinguished Baptist missionary, was originally apprendiced to a printer at Bristol, but offered, on the death of his brother, to supply his place as a teacher of a Baptist school in Jamaier; and having repaired thitter in 1824, was in 1829 appointed pastor of the mission church at Falmouth, where his efforts to ameliorate the condition of the negroes were rewarded by their gratitude towards him. But these very efforts excited such hostility among the planters, overseers, and others in the slave-holding interest, that when in 1832 a formidable slave insurrection was threatened, Mr. Knibb was not only compelled, despite his sacred calling, to serve in the militia, but was treated with marked indignity, and shortly afterwards arrested for having instigated the threatened rebellion. He was, however, released, there being no evidence against him; but his chapel and mission premises having been burnt down during the disturbances, Knibb resolved to proceed to England to explain all the circumstances connected with his mission, and in a series of harangues all over the country, boldly advocated the entire and immediate abolition of slavery; and had no unimportant share in bringing about the Eman-cipation Act of 1833. In 1834 he once more cipation Act of 1833. In 1834 he once more returned to Jamaica, where he vigilantly watched the operation of the new act, exposed the evils of the apprentiaceship system, raised subscriptions for building new churches, founded schools, and after ten years spent in these aimilar undertakings, he was suddenly seized with yellow fever, and died at the village of Kettering, in Jamaica, Rov. 15, 1845. B. at Kettering, Northamptonshire, near the opening of the 19th century.

KNIGET, Samuel, nite, a learned English divine, who was educated at St. Paul's School, whence he removed to Trinity College, Cambridgo. He obtained several church preferbedings.

bridge. He obtained several church prefer-ments, and was chaplain to Goorge II. He wrote the lives of Dr. Colet and Erasmus.

D. 1746.

D. 1/46.

KN16HT, Edward, an eminent comic actor, whose Tim, in "Wild Oats," was esteemed a chaste and natural delineation. He logg performed at Druy-lane Theatre and at the Lyceum, but was ultimately compelled by ill-health to quit the stage. B. in Birmingham,

1774; D. 1826.

KNIGHT, Gowin, an English physician and philosopher, was educated at Oxford, and pracbiniosopher, was educated at Oxford, and practised in London. He did not, however, succeed well in his profession, at least it would appear so, as it is said that, having fallen into distress, he applied to Dr. Fortingale, who, after hearing his statement, gave him a cheque for a thousand guineas and told him to go home, and set his heart at rest. Dr. Knight published "An Attempt to demonstrate that all the Phenomena in Nature may be explained by Attraction and

Repulsion."

Kynour, Thomas, an actor and dramatic writer, was intended for the profession of the law, but having received lessons in oratory from Macklin, he imbibed a taste for the stage, became mackin, he indicate the stage, became an actor, and was a favourite with the public, particularly in rustic characters and flippant coxcombs. He wrote "The Honest Thieves," "The Turnpike Gate," and several other dramatic pieces. n. in Dorsetshire; p. 1820.

Matte pieces. E. in Dorselshire; B. 1920.

Knight, Richard Payne, an English philologist and writer on art. In his earlier years, his health being very delicate, his father would not allow him to be sent to school, but instructed him in the rudiments of knowledge at home. He was not allowed to study either Latin or Grock, but on the death of his father he went to a grammar-school near his native place, and there made considerable progress in the former language. When he had attained to the age of 18, he began to learn the Greek language, and this pursuit, combined with the investigation of Grecian plastic art, became his chief occupation Greenan plastic art, occame his cinet occupation throughout his after years. He subsequently visited Italy, where he imbibed a strong taste for the fine arts. On the death of his grandfather, he inherited a considerable estate near Ludlow. In 1780 he was sent to Parliament as member for the borough of Leominster, and in 1784 was returned for Ludlow. He became a trustee of the British Museum in 1814; ten rustee of the british kuseain in lora; ten years afterwards, he bequeathed his magnificent collection of antique art, estimated to be worth $50,000, to the Museum. Mr. Knight wrote many works on Greek literature, some of which were devoted to the task of proving that the Homeric poems are the production of a single individual. (See Homer.) He also published "An Analytical Inquiry into the Principles of Taste," and a great number of volumes on fineart subjects. B. at Wormesley Grange, Hereford, 1750; D. 1824.

KNIGHT, Henry Gally, M.P., a distinguished traveller and accomplished virtuoso and antiquary, who, soon after succeeding to his father's estates in Nottinghamshire, in 1808, set out on a course of extensive travel in Spain, Sicily, Greece, the Holy Land, &c.; and on his return oreace, the Holy Land, &c., and on his return published an account of his four. In ISI4 his gave to the world a poem, entitled "Buropa Rediviva;" which was followed at different intervals by "Phrosyne, a Grecian Tale," "Alastor, an Arabian Tole," and "Hannibal in Bithynia." Mr. Kuight's chief title to fame Bithynia." Mr. Knight's chief title to fame consists, however, in the zeal with which he devoted himself to the investigation of archidevoted himself to the investigation of archi-tectural history both at home and abroad; and the fruits of which he published in an "Archi-tectural Tour in Normandy," "The Normans in Sielly," and his last and greatest work, the "Ecclesiastical Architecture of Italy," &c. Ho was a member of the commission for the advancement of the fine arts, and his best encouragement ment of the me area and its best encouragement was always given to the cultivation of literature and art. In 1824 he was for a short period M.P. for Aldborough; in 1830 he represented Malton, and from 1835 to 1816 sat for the northern division of Nottinghamshire. p. 1750; D. 1846.

KNIGHT, Charles, a modern English author ANTIGHT, charles, a modern Engine attention and publisher, distinguished for his services as a projector and producer of cheap and valuable literature. His father had for many years conducted business as a bookseller at Windsor, and on his death Charles Knight succeeded him. He for some time published the "Etonian," a periodical which contained the contributions of the best scholars educated in the great public The success of this work school of that town. The success of this work encouraged Mr. Knight to establish in the metropolis a magnaine on a more ambitious plan. This was the origin of "Knight's Quarterly Magazine," to which Macaniay, then a young man fresh from college, contributed. Mr. Knight next published the "Penny Magazine," school of that town. mign next punished the "Penny Magazino," Penny Cyclopedia," in 1827, and other works, unique in their day for extensive, exact, and generally excellent contents, no less than for the lowness of price at which they were issued to the An exceedingly large circulation was obtained for these productions, which were admirably suited at once to gratify the intellectual appetite of thousands of readers, and to stimualact their minds into a desire for more of the same character. Mr. Knight also published many more works of a like value; such as the "Pictorial History of England," the "Pictorial Haskepere," and the "English Cyclopadia." Lord Brougham, Mr. English Cyclopadia." Lord Brougham, Mr. Chane, Professor Long, and many other eminent men, wrote treatises, &c., for "Knight's Shilling Volumes." which, for some time, appeared weekly. Mr. Knight was himself an agreeable writer, and reprinted his contributions to various periodicals, under the title of "Once upon a Time," "The Old Printer and the Modern Press," &c. His Life of Shakspere is without a superior in English literature; while the notes to his edition of the same poet an ogenerally adlate their minds into a desire for more of the to his edition of the same poet are generally admired for their good sense and learning. Among his numerous works we must not omit to men-humble position, and who designed his son for a like pursuit, but had to use him in a menial capacity, which, not being agreeable to the boy, he ran away, but was compelled to return to his native village of Steinach, in the Tyrol. Here he continued to assist his father, practise his art, and aid in household duties till about twenty years of age, when the painter, Paul Troger, happened to see some of his performances, and took him with him to Vienna. His progress was very rapid, and in 1753 he obtained the prize of the Austrian Academy for historical painting. He visited Rome in 1755, where he spent three years, and greatly improved his style. He then went to Naples, where he was employed by the Austrian ambassador in decorating his palaces there and at Milan. Knoller paid several other visits to Rome, and contracted a close intimacy with Winckelmann and Mengs; buthe finally settled at Milan, where he married, and had a large family. Llewasennobled at Vienna, by Maria Theresa. His works are very numerous, and are to be found in most of the leading towns in Germany, the Tyrol, and Austrian Italy. He was gay in colouring, correct in design, and his works are distinguished for their dramatic and effective composition, strong expression, and vigorous and uncommon attitudes. He painted history, sacred uncommon attitudes. He painted instory, sucrea subjects, portraits, &c., and worked both in oil and fresco. n. 1795; p. 1804. Knotles, Richard, nois, an English historian, who in 1864, became fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, and afterwards master of the grammer-school at Sandwich, in Kent. He wrote the Oxfort, and intervales interval or the grammar-school at Sandwich, in Kent. He wrote the "History of the Turks," of which there have been several editions and continuations, par-ticularly by Ricaut. Knolles also wrote the "Lives and Conquests of the Ottoman Kings," "Lives and Conquests of the Octobrai Kings, a "Discourse of the Greatness of the Turkish Empire," and a "Compendium of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew Grammar." p. about 1510; p. in

Kent. 1610.

KNOLLES, Sir Robert, an English commander in the reign of Edward III., was of a humble family in Cheshire, but being of an enterprising disposition, obtained the rank of general and the honour of knighthood. His name was formidable in France, where he took several places. was made grand-seneschal of Guienne, and by his prudence quelled an insurrection in that province. At the close of life he retired to his estate in Kent, where he built Rochester bridge. в. 1317: р. 1407.

KNOLLIS, Sir Francis, noll-lis, an English statesman, who received a university education, went to court, and became a zealous partisan of the Reformation in the reign of Edward VI, at whose death he went abroad. On the necession of Elizabeth he returned, and was made a privy councillor, and vice-chamberlain of the household. He was also employed in several important matters of state. He was one of the commissioners who sat in judgment on Mary queen of Scots; was appointed treasurer of the tion his "Knowledge is Power"; the "Popular royal household, and knight of the Garter. He History of England," in 7 vols, 8 vo.; "Half words a "Treatise against the Usurpation of English History"; "Half Hours with the Best Authors"; "Half Hours with the Knowledge and "Papal Bishops," printed in 1608. In 1890. Working Life during Half a Century," Mr. to composition was raide at the early age of 12 Knight is also the editor of the "British years. Two years afterwards he wrote an opera Almance and Companion." In 1701.

KNOLLER, Martin von, noll-ley, a distinguished Refrand artist of the eighteenth century, was quickly followed by a tragedy and a drama, the son of a painter of some sort, but in a very After becoming acquainted with Haziltit, who humble position, and who desired his son for a gave him much coold active relative the sine much cool delive relative to the mental son of the composition of the cool and the relative to the composition and who desired his son for a gave him much cool delive relative to the composition of the cool gave him much good advice relative to his studies, and whom Knowles terms his "mental father," the young playwright removed to Dublin, where he soon afterwards appeared on the stage, but without success. In 1800 he was engaged as an actor and vocalist in the Waterengaged as an actor and vocates in the water-ford Theatre, and, Edmund Kean having Joined the company, Knowles wrote a play called "Leo the Gipsy," in which Kean canceted the principal part. He published, about the same time, a volume of poetical "Fugitive Pieces." He next became a teacher of elecution at Belfast, and there produced a play called "Brian Borothme," which was very successful. "Caius Gracchus" was also played at the same theatre, and with the greatest success. His tragedy of "Virgi-nius" was first produced at Glasgow, and, on being performed at Covent Garden Theatre, in 1820, its author became an established writer for the stage. During the succeeding twenty years he continued to write tragedies, dramas, and comedies with great industry, and enjoyed the very highest reputation as a dramatist, The best of these plays were the "Hunchback," the "Wife, a tale of Mantua," the "Love-Chase," "Love," "William Tell," and the "Lose of Aragon." In 1817 he produced a novel called of Aragon." In 1817 he produced a novel called "Fortescue," and later, "George Lovel;" but these were very inferior to his dramatic works. In 1849 the government granted him a pension of £200 a year. Mr. Knowles subsequently became a Baptist minister, and wrote several sermons and a couple of controversial works, called the "Rock of Rome, or the Arch-heresy," and the "Idol demolished by its own Priest," B. at Cork, 1784; D. 1862.

KNOX, John, nox, a bookseller in London, who wrote a "Systematic View of Scotland,"

and planned a herring-fishery and settlement on its N.E. coast. p. 1790.

KNOX, John, the celebrated Scotch reformer, received his education at the university of St. Andrew's, and entered into priest's orders before he had attained his 25th year; but an examination of the writings of SS. Augustine and Jerome is said to have occasioned his renunciation of popery. Being accused of heresy before Cardinal Beaton, he addressed to that prelate a confusion of faith, which was con-demned. The dectrines of the Reformed religion rapidly spread throughout Scotland. Cardinal Beaton, a determined supporter of the Romish church, was murdored. Knox shortly afterwards began to preach the new faith openly from the pulpit. The French fleet, with a considerable body of troops, appeared, in 1547, before St. Andrew's, and made prisoners of Knox and the other reformers who had defended the place. Knox was afterwards condemned to the galleys at Rouen, and remained there nine-teen months. After his liberation, he went to England, where he was well received and made chaplain to Edward VI., who offered him a bishoprie, which he declined, being averse to episcopacy and the common prayer. In the reign of Mary he went to Frankfort, where he preached the new doctrines to the English exiles. Being accused to the emperor as a seditious person, he retired to Geneva, where he seattlous person, at rearrent to Geneva, many many was greatly esteemed by Calvin, to whose doctrines he was zealously attached. He there wrote his "Blast of a Trumpet against the Monstrous Regiment of Women." In 1559 he returned to his native country, and commenced his ministerial office at Edinburgh by denouncing the acts of the queen and the clergy. His sermons produced a general commotion, and the Roman Catholic cathedrals and parish churches were not only deprived of their ornaments, but reduced almost to ruins. B. probably at Gifford, East Lothian, 1505; D. at Edinburgh, KNOX, Rev Vicesimus, an English writer, pursued a brilliant career at St. John's Colpursued a brillant career at St. John S College, Oxford, after which he became master of Tunbridge school, in Kent. He was an admired preacher in his day, and an excellent pastor. He published—"Moral and Literary Essays," in 1777; "Liberal Education; or, a Essays," in 177; "Internal Education; of, a Practical Treatise on the Methods of acquiring Useful and Polite Learning," in 1791; and "Elegant Extracts," in prose and verse, the latter enjoying the greatest popularity. He was likewise the author of several volumes of sermons and theological essays, and was an elegant and correct writer. B.in London, 1752; tegate and correct which is a fin boldon, 1925, n. at Tunbridge, 1821.

Knox

Kolha

KNYGHTON, Henry, nö-ton, an English ecclestastic and historian, who wrote a "Chronicle of the English History, from 950 to 1305;" also a "History of the Deposition of Richard II." He was a canon regular at Leicester.

was a canon regular at Leuesser. Korkl, Franz von, ko-le, a German mino-ralogist and poet, who, after completing his edu-cation at the university of Munich, was ap-pointed, at the age of 23, assistant professor of mineralogy in that learned establishment. In 1831 he completed his work on the "Characteristics of Minerals," and from that period pro-duced a succession of valuable treatises on the duced a succession of valuable treatises on the same science. The principal of these, with the dates of publication, are—"Elements of Mine-rulogy," 1838; "Mineralogy," 1847; "Sketch of the Mineral Kingdom," 1859; "Mineralogical Nomenelature," 1853. For his eminent scientific services, he was appointed member of the Academy of Sciences of Bavaria, and chief conservator of the Munich mineralogical collection. His poetical efforts consist of a volume of lyrics in pure German, and several others in the Bayarian idiom, and in the patois of the Palati-These latter are marked by great liveli-landscape painter, the son of poor parents, landscape painter, the son of poor parents, living in the valley of the Lech, in the south of Germany, was sent by bishop Umgolder, vicar-general of Augsburg, to the Carls-Academy at Stuttgart, where he spent seven years, and became an excellent painter of landscapes. He then went to Rome, where he settled and married, and enjoyed a great reputation for nearly half a century, being long regarded as the Nestor of German artists in that city. Although specially distinguished in landscape, Koch also specially distinguished in Induscape, Koon also painted other subjects, among which may be mentioned illustrations of Daute, "Hofer's Liberation of the Tyrol," "The Flight of Liberation of the Tyrol," "The Flight of Laban," &c. b. 1768; b. 132. French comic novelist, the son of a Dutch banker, was originally educated for commerce, and placed in a French banker's establishment. While thus engaged, he commenced writing, "he know not why." He produced a great number of vandevilles, operas, and melodramas, and afterwords were a novel which being successful. wards wrote a novel, which being successful, the author went on composing similar works, displaying great fertility of invention, and was the author of a considerable amount of humorous fiction, which, unfortunately, is defaced by loose morality. B. at Passy, 1794.

Koenig, Daniel, ke(r)'neeg, a Swiss, who translated "Arbuthnot's Tables of Coins" into Latin, printed at Utrecht, in 1756. He died of the ill-usage he received from the populace of Transler, who mistock him for a French spy.

KOERIG, Samuel, brother of the preceding, was professor of philosophy and law at Francker, and librarian to the Frince of Orange. He was a great mathematician, and had a dispute with Maupertuis. D. 1757.

with Maupertuis. D. 1787.
Kozerne-Bloor, Joanna, ker'-ten, an ingenious Dutch lady, who had a taste for drawing in water-colours and for embroidery. She also modelled in wax, and made artificial ornaments and flowers; but her principal excellence was in cutting figures out of paper with scissors, and her portraits and landscapes exceuted in this way became so celebrated, that foreigners visited Amsterdam to see them; among the rest, Peter the Great of Russia. She made a magnificent work for the consort of the emperor Leopold I., consisting of trees, arms, eagles, and crowns, for which she received about 4000 guilders. She also executed the portrait of that emperor. B. at Amsterdam, 1650; D. 1715.

emperor. B. at Amsterdam, 1650; D. 1715. Kort., John George, kole, a German traveller and writer, who roceived a legal education at Göttingen, Heidelberg, and Munich. In 1832 he became tutor in the family of Baron Man-teuffel, and afterwards in that of Count Medem. nata. These latter are marked by great livelines, freshness, and grace, and are greatly and an anti-base, freshness, and grace, and are greatly restricted Countain Livering. St. admired for their piquancy both of though and language. As a Munich, 1893.

Koer, Christopher William, kok, a native of Masco, and professor of public jurisprudence at of Europe. Among his most important works Strasburg, who chiefly occupied himself with of the country of the country of the contraction of the country of t

Tica." B. at Bremen, 1808.

KOLDE, Or KOLDEN, Peter, kolle, a traveller, studied at Halle, in 1700; soon after which he was sent by the king of Prussia to the Cape of among which may be mentioned his "Yilow of was sent to the king of Prussia to the Cape of the Revolutions of Europe." n. 1737; n. 1813. Good Hope to make astronomical observations. Koun, Joseph Anton, a celebrated German He remained there ten years, and was afflicted 6005 with blindness, but recovered his sight on his return to Europe. He wrote a "Description of the Cape of Good Hope," and was the first who gave a full and circumstantial account of that colony. B. at Dorfas, in the principality of Bayreuth, 1674; p. 1728.

KOLLAR, Jan, kol-lar, a Bohemian poet and preacher, who originated the idea of Panslavism. le studied at Pesth and Jena, and subsequently became paster of an Evangelical congregation secame pastor or an Evangelical congregation at the former place. Between the years 1821 and 1835, he published several collections of loems, written in Bohemian, the object of which was to unite in one common bond of union the Slavonic nations. Sir John Bowring translated some of his sonnets; and in one of Kollar's works he wrote, —"This is a very remarkable book, and how its true and flery spirit should have burst this Austrian censorship is altogether

n. at Moschowze, in Hungary, 1793; D. 1852. Köntoskatox, Philip Christopher, Count, Le(r)'-neezh-mark, a celebrated Swedish adventurer, was descended from an ancient noble family of Brandenburg, a branch of which had naminy of Brendenburg, a branch of which had passed into Sweden, where it had produced many distinguished soldiers. Philip went to Hanover, where the elector Ernest Augustus appointed him colonel of a regiment of dragons. The electoral prince, George Louis afterwards George L. king of Great Drain, had the colonial three colonials of the colonial three colonials of the colonial three colonials. married his cousin Sophia Dorothea, a beautiful, witty, and accomplished princess. This prin-cess did not love her busband, whose cold, brutal nature repelled her. She bestowed her affections upon the handsome Swede. The pair were about to fly together to France, when Könisgmarck was assassinated. Many incorrect versions of the tragedy were for a long time current in the works of various writers; but Mr. Thackeray, in his first lecture on the Four Georges, thus truthfully describes the event:—"Her husband was away at Berlin: her carriages and horses were prepared, and ready for the elopement. Meanwhile, the spics of Countess Platen had brought the news to their mistress. She went to Ernest Augustus, and procured from the elector an order for the arrest of the Swede. On the way by which he was to come, four guards were commissioned to take him. He strove to cut his way through the four men, and wounded more than one of them. They fell upon him, cut him down... he was dispatched presently, his body burnt the next day, and all traces of the man disappeared." The princess was afterwards consigned to the The princess was interwards consigned to the castle of Ahlen, where she was confined for 32 years, "and her silent husband no more uttered her name." Königsmarek was slain in 1601.

Königsmarck, Marie Aurora, Countess of, was sister of the above, and celebrated for her beauty and accomplishments. Despoiled of a beducy and accomplishments. Despoted of a succession to which she had a claim, she went to Dresden to enlist the services of Frederick, Augustus, elector of Saxony. That prince became inspired with a lively passion for her, to which she responded, and became the mother of the celebrated Marshal Saxe. On being aban-doned soon afterwards, she retired into privacy, and exclusively occupied herself with the educa-

grand-vizier of Turkey during the minority of Amurath IV. He remained in power till his death. He was a sagacious governor, and filled the treasury, which had been emptied by the prodigality of the previous reigns. He was, however, cruel and relentless to those who gave him offence. D. 1661.

gave him offence. p. 1661.

Kopsou, Achmet, son of the preceding, succeeded his father as grand-vizier. He made war in Hungary, in 1662, and lost, in 1684 no beattle of St. Gothard, against Montecuentl, but concluded an advantageous peace at Temeswar. In 1696 he took Candia. p. 1075.

Kopsou, Mustapha, son of the preceding, was grand-vizier under Soliman III. He made wars in Hungary, he took Widdin and Park war in Hungary; he took Widdin and Bel-grade; he was killed at the battle of Salankemen.

Koproli, Niuhman, son of the preceding, was nominated by Achmet III. grand-vizier in 1710, but remained in power only two months. He was the victim of a strange hallucination, believing that he had a fly constantly on his nose. A French physician cured him, by feigning to perform an operation upon the feature, and afterwards showing him a dead fly, with which he had previously provided himself.

Which he had previously provided minsent.

Korners, Karl Theodor, Kor'-ner, an eminent German poet. In early youth, his health being delicate, he was not sent to a public school, but educated by private teachers. At the ago of 17;
he was sent to the School of Mines at Freiburg. he was sent to the School of Aimes an Frenurg; subsequently completing his studies at Leipzig and Berlin. His health giving way, he was sent to Vionna, where, on his recovery, he engaged in poetical composition. He there wrote two plays for the Vienna stage—"The Bride" and the "Green Domino," which, meeting with some success, he produced two trage-dies, one of which had for its subject the story of the English "Fair Rosamond." In 1813 he of the English Fair Rosamond. In 1813 no joined the eclebrated volunteer corps of Major Lützow, organized to resist the French, and was severely wounded at the battle of Kitzon. In a subsequent engagement he was shot, on the road between Gadebusch and Schwerin, and buried under an oak-tree, on the trunk of which his name was engraved by his trunk of which his hame was engraved by his comrades. Hels chiefy famous for his collection of warlike songs, called the "Lyre and Sword," mostly composed in the intervals of hattles, or by the bivonae fire. His song, "Männer und Buben" (Men and Cowards), and his "Schwerthide" (Sword-Song), were, and are still, extremely popular with his countrymen. Lord R. Gowen has given a fine translation of the F. Gower has given a fine translation of the latter song; and selections from his poems, dramas, and tales have been produced by Mr. G. F. Richardson. n. at Dresden, 1791; p. 1813.

Kosciusko, Thaddeus, kos'-ke-us'-ko, the great Polish patriot, studied for the military profession, first at Worsaw, and afterwards at Paris; he then accompanied Lafayette to America, and fought against England on the side of the American colonists. On the conclusion of the war he returned to Poland, and was created major-general. In 1794 he was put at the head of the Polish army, when his countrymen at-tempted to gain their independence. In the same year he defeated the Russians at Raelawice; but was himself beaten by the combined Russians and Prussians, in an engagement near Warsaw, shortly afterwards. On the arrival of tion of her son. B. about 1673; D. 1725. Warsaw, shortly afterwards. On the arrival of Koproll, or Kuiferli, Mehemet, kep'-ro-le, fresh Russian troops from the interior, under Sawarrow, he marched forth to meet them at the head of $2,1000 men. The Pusians numeroached Vienna soon after the ministre, Prince forted, after a desperate battle; Kosewick was in a most excited state. The deputation being wounded, and taken prisoner, exclaiming "Finis Polonin;" Warsaw was taken being wounded, and taken prisoner, exclaiming "Finis Polonin;" Warsaw was taken bether request, and decreed that a new and liberompletely subdued. The patriot was conducted and the proposed to Sc. Petersburg, but was subsequently released by the emperor Paul, upon which he went to America. In 1793 he wort to France, and was repeatedly solicited by Napoleon to join is The Servians and Croats were, at the outset, subsequent. On the establishment of the more kingdom of Poland, in 1815, he wrote to the emperor Alexander, thanking him for his on after wards led to believe, by Austrian generosity. In 1816, he settled in switzerland, and applied thimself to the pursuits of agreed the settlement of the Austria with arms and stores, and commanded by dissipated of the Austria army.

Kossuth

1517.

Kossuti, Louis, koś-suths (kos-shoot), the late provisional governor of Hungary, was son of a small land proprietor in Northern Hungary, and was educated at the Protestant college of Sacropatak. In 1319 he began to study the law at the local court of Epories, and the royal court of Pesth. Three years afterwards, lawing completed his legal education, he went to Monok, where he obtained a good prac-tice. He left that place for Pesth in 1831, and was sent the following year, as representative of a magnate, to the Hungarian diet or parliament, in whose deliberations he was allowed to partiin whose deliberations are was allowed to parti-cipate by speech, but without voting. The debates of the dick were soon afterwards circu-lated by Kossuth in manuscript, and were engerly sought after; so popular, indeed, did they become, that he set up a lithographic printing-pross, to multiply copies of the speeches to meet the demand for them. This proceeding soon become distantful to the Anstrian condisoon became distasteful to the Austrian government, and Kossuth was compelled to abandon his lithographic printing; but he still continued his lithographic printing; but he still continued to circulate manuscript reports. In 1886 a number of young men were imprisoned for anleged political conspiracy: Kossuth warmly defended them, and charged the prosecution with illegal procedure and injustice. For this he was himself arrested, brought to trial, and thrown into prison at Buda, remaining therein three years, from 1837 until 1840. His release was obtained in the latter was theoreb the was obtained in the latter year, through the Hungarian diet's refusal to grant the supplies Hungaman diers retusal to grant the supplies until he was set free by the Austrian government. With the commencement of the year 1944 Kossuth brought out the first number of the "Pesti-Hiripp" (Pesth Journal), whileh at starting was issued four times a week, and, soon after, daily. The success of the new journal was very great the standards and a supplied to the starting was supplied to the after, daily. The success of the new journal was very great, the circulation st one period reaching the number of 10,000. About this time Kossuth married. Throughout the ensuing six years the "Posth Journal" was a bold and unceasing opponent of the Austrian design of substituting for the constitutional government of Murray was passed in the invarialist ment of Hungary, one based on the imperialist principles. In the dict, the liberal opposition, headed by Count Louis Batthyany, was likewise very decided. In 1847 Kosanth became the representative of the city of Pesth in the diet, and in March, 1848, he proposed that a deputa-tion should be sent to the king of Hungary (the emperor of Austria), asking that a new ministry, composed of Hungarians, together with certain constitutional reforms, should be granted.

Kossuthwas a member of this deputation, which reached Vienna soon after the minister, Prince Metternich, had quitted it, and while the city was in a most excited state. The deputation was received by the emperor, who acceded to their request, and decreed that a new and liberal ministry should be formed, with Count Louis Batthyany as president, and Kossuth as minister of finance. Many more reforms followed this decree, in the benefits of which the Servians and Creatians naviticinated with the Hungarians. Croatians participated with the Hungarians. The Servians and Croats were, at the outset, greatly pleased with the new concessions, but were soon afterwards led to believe, by Austrian were soon atterwates fed to believe, by Austrian agents, that Hungary sought to enslave them, and to destroy their religion and nationality. Accordingly, in June, 1848, they rose against the Hungarians, being secretly provided by Austria with arms and stores, and commanded Austria with arms and stores, and commanded by disguised officers of the Austrian army. Several desperate encounters took place on the frontiers, and many villages were laid waste, Kosenth, by his great eloquence and energy, roused his countrymen into fisce activity: one battalions of Honvols, or defenders of none, batalions of Honveds, or defenders of home, were organized, and these, with some regiments of hussars and of the line, formed the nucleus of what was subsequently the great Hungarian army. Three months afterwards, Jollachich, ban of Croatia, invaded Hungary at the head of 30,000 Servians and Croats. (See JELLACHICH.) He was met by the Hungarians, under Guyon and other leaders, and defeated. About the same time, Field Marshal Count Lemberg was sent from Vienna as commander-in-chief of the Ulmeavilen army. He work for Postif to assume Hungarian army. Hungarian army. He went to Pesth to assume his post; but the infuriated populace murdered him on the Buda-Pesth bridge. The rupture between Hungary and Austria was now com-plete, the parliament of the former addressing the nation in a "Remonstrance," which roused the entire population. In October, the Hungarian army crossed the frontier, and advanced to within a short distance of Vienna, but was then defeated. The Hungarian parliament now retired from Pesth to Debreczin, where they retired from Pesth to Debreezh, waster Unsy proclaimed the deposition of the house of Haps-burg, and the independence of Hungart, This measure, proposed by Kossuth, is said to have led to that great-division among the Hungarians, which ultimately proved fatal to their cause. It certainly furnished to Görgei a protext for surrendering unconditionally to the Busslans, Kossuth was nominated by the parliament provisional governor of Hungary. Mcantime, the Austrians, under Prince Windischgrütz, invaded Hungary. The Austrians were defeated in severiungary. In e austrans were defeated in several engagements; but, in May, 1819, a livasim army entered Hungary, and closely pursued offered to Arad. In the south, the Hungarians were defeated by the Austrian army, under General Haynan, in August, 1949. On receiving news of this disaster, Kossuth resigned his civil and relition to the control of the disaster. news of this disaster, Kossuth resigned his elvil and military power as dictator, to Görgei, who, on the 14th of the same mouth, surrendered himself and his whole army to the Russians, The Hungarian struggle was thus tarminated, Karsth led into Turkey, and was detained as prisoner at Schumla, being subsequently sent to Kutayia, in Asia Minor. He remained in prison about two years, during which ha, with the aid of Shakspeare and of Johnson's Dictionary, mustered the English language. In August, 1851, the ambassadors of the English and American governments obtained his release. and American governments obtained his release, despite the threats of Austria. He embarked at Smyrna in an American vessel, and arrived in England in October. He was received in London and the provincial towns with the utmost and the provincial towns with the dulinost enthusiasm; his eloquent speeches, delivered in stirring English, exciting the greatest admira-tion. He sailed for the United States in Novemion. He sailed for the United States in November of the same year, but returned to England in 1852. During the Crimen war, he spoke at Shedfield, Notlingham, and other places; and continued to watch over the interests of his country. During the war between Austria and country. During the war between Austria and Italy, in 1866, he attempted to excite the Hun-garians to revolt, but ultimately urged them to accept the concessions then offered by Austria. In 1867 he was elected deputy for Waitzen. B.

607

at Monok, 1802.

Koster, Lawrence, or Laurent Janszoon, Koster, Lawrence, or Laurens Janszoon, kos'-ter, the real inventor of printing, according to the Dutch. Adrian Junius, a learned Dutch historian of the 16th century, in his "Patavia," historian of the 16th century, in his Thatavia, states that Koster was a native of Haarlem, about the middle of the 15th century, and that in the course of his afternoon rambles in the suburbs of the city, he was in the habit of amusing himself with cutting letters out of the bark of the beech-tree. To amuse his grand-children, he afterwards put these letters together, and printed short sentences with them. Being an inventive man, he is stated to have subsequently compounded a glutinous ink for the printing of his wooden letters, and that, finally, he set up an establishment in which many, he see up an escanisamene in mini-entire pages, adorned with engravings, were printed. In course of time he made his letters of lead, and later of pewter, that being a harder metal. His establishment flourishing, he was induced to augment the number of his assistants. but all were bound by an oath to keep the invention a secret. One of these assistants, by name John, after making himself acquainted by name John, after making himself acquainted with the whole process of easting, joining the characters, and taking impressions from them, is said to have fied, while Koster and his family were at church, hearing a midnight mass, taking away with him all the implements of his master's art. He is alleged to have gone first to Amsterdam, thence to Cologne, and finally to have taken up his residence at Mayence, and there established printing-presses. The thiel, called John by Junius is surpaced to he there established printing presses. The thief, called John by Junius, is suspected to be Faust, but he is never named. (See Faust.) This story having been carefully sifted by competent authorities, has been pronounced un-worthy of credit. Certain books stated to have come from Koster's press, have never been satisfactorily discovered. Even admitting the possibility of John's being able to carry away the whole of the apparatus of a printing establishment, why did not Koster exert his ingenuity once more, and replace the loss? Again, Junius, the author of the work in which the claims of Koster have been enforced, died twelve years before his book was published, and it is believed that the whole story was inserted in the volume by some person anxious to ad-vance the reputation of Haarlem.

vance the reputation of mattern.

KOTZEDER, August Frederick Ferdinand von, kotz-boe, a German writer and dramatist, who, after completing his studies for the legal profession at the university of Jena, went to litussia; where he became secretary to a general, defined in the company and the Governprofession at the university of Jean, went to Hissis, where he became secretary to a general, and after filling several posts under the government, was emobled by Catharine II., and appointed governor of Esthonia. He resigned 608

this office after a few years, and, resolved to devote himself to dramatic literature, accepted the directorship of the theatre of Vienna. After a short period spent there, he returned, in 1 to Russia: but had scarcely crossed the fron to tousian the mas scarcely crossed the froi of that country when he was arrested by, of Paul, and conveyed to Siberia. He accused of having written a pamphlet at the czar. About a year afterwards Pau wit-nessed a play by Kotzebue, translated into kussian, and was so delighted with it that he recalled the author, and appointed him director of the German theories at 25 Partial Affice quarrelling with Gorthe, he removed to Berlin, where he established a satirical journal. Going to Russia in 1813, he edited a journal directed against Napoleon I., and in 1814 was appointed Russian consul-general at Königsberg. After having again visited St. Petersburg, in 1

ment. About this time he established a weekly paper, in which, as in all his previous works, he derided every aspiration for freedom and constitutional government. It was this scotling at liberal institutions which caused him to be assassinated by a German student and political enthusiast, named Sand. From his earliest years he had been an industrious writer for the stage; at his death, he had composed nearly one hundred dramas. The best of these, with duced in E

Lovers vows," "Pizarro," and "Benyowski," are the most meritorious of his works played on the English stage. B. at Weimar, 1701; killed. 1819.

Kotzerue, Otto von, son of the preceding was an officer in the lius sign navy, and in 1814 went on a voyage round the world, an account of which he published in 1821. In 1824 he again undertook the same task, and discovered two islands in the South Sea. D. 1818.

wwo islands in the South Sea. D. 1849.

KOUL-KHAN, (See NaDIE Sham.)

KOZLOV, Ivan Ivanovich, k-w-lof, a Russian poet, who produced numerous translations of English poetry, chiefly from Byron, Wordsworth, and Sir Walter Scott. His mastery of English was so complete that he translated a buginst was so complete that he translated poem by the Russian poet Pushkin into our language, a specimen of which published in the "New Monthly Magazine," for 1830, was as correct as if written by an a complished Englishman. His poems, composed during intervals of pain, and dictated to an amanueusis, the author being afflicted with blindness, are included in two volumes. B. 1774; D. 1838.

ACHENINNIKOW, Stephen, kra'-ken-nin'-ni-ACERMINIKOW, Stephen, kra-ken-uw-na-kous, a Bussian naturalist, was educated at the Academy of St. Petersburg, and, when young, went to Kantsi-india. He returned in 1745 with a number of observations made during ten years' travel. The Academy nomi-nated him on associate, and, in 1758, he was made professor of botany and natural history. He wrote an account of his travels and discoveries in Chappe d'Auteroche's Account of Siberia. B. 1713; D. 1755.

Kranach

the church of St. Lawrence, Lorenzkirche. It is Virginia," "Charlotte and Werter," and some in the form of a square open Gothic spire, the others. B. at Versailles, 1767; D. 1831.

REUDENER, Juliana Vietinghoff, Baroness crozier, to avoid one of the arches of the church. It is a very curious structure, and is ornamented with the figures of saints, and with bassi-fillevi representations of Christ taking leave of his mother, the Last Supper, Christ on the Mount of Olives, the Saviour before Caiaphas, the Crowning with Thorns, the Scourging, the Crucifixion, and the Resurrection. This elaborate work is said to have been executed by Kraft for a citizen named Hans Imhof, for the small a citizen named Hans Imnot, for the small sum of 770 forts, which, if the common florin is meant, would only amount to £70. B. about 1435; D., it is supposed in the hospital of Schwabach, in 1507, but this is uncertain.

Kranach, Lucas, kra-kag, a famous German painter, whose proper name was Sunder, but who became known by the name of the place of who became known by the hance of the place whis birth, in Bamberg. Frederick, elector of Coburg, took Kranach under his patronage, and they together made a tour through Palestine in 1493. Soon after their return, the artist began 1430. Soon after their return, the artists begain his career as an historical painter, and, both for the number and excellence of his works, is considered inferior to none of his countrymen. He was on intimate terms with Luther, Melancthon, and other eminent reformers, and his portraits of the two great leaders of the Reformation are among the most interesting memorials we have of them. B. 1472; D. 1553 .- His son, whose works are sometimes mistaken for his father's, also became distinguished as a painter. D. 1586.

panner. D. 1898.
Kranz, Albert, krantz, a German chronicler, studied philosophy and theology at Rostock and at Hamburg, and was sent on several diplomatic missions to France and England by the confederation of the Hanseatic towns. He composed in Latin the "Chronicles of the Kingdoms." posed in Latin the "Chroniciss of the Kingdoms of Sweden, Demmark, and Norway," the "Ecclesiastical History of Saxony," and other works. B. at Hamburg, about the middle of the 15th Century; D. at the same place, 1517.

Kasioxx, Ignacy, kra'-shiek-s, an eminent Polish poet, and archibishop offensesn. His wit and accomplishments made bim the favourite of the North Chronic March 15th Polish Poets and Polish Poets of the North Polish Polish ann accompissments made min the tavourite of King Stanislas Ponistowsky. On the partition of Poland, in 1773, he became the subject of Frederick the Great. His poetry takes rank in Polish literature in about the same degree as Pope's in English. He wrote both prose and verse, nearly all of which was collected and pub-lished is not vote in 1804, in at Dublock verse, nearly all of which was collected and published, in 10 vols, in 1804. n. at Dubiecko, 1734; n. at Berlin, 1801.

Kax, Baron de, krai, an Austrian general, embraced the military profession early in life, and first distinguished himself in the war with the Turks. It the accordance is the North the Turks. In the campaigns in the Nether-lands, and on the Rhine, from 1793 to 1797, he mans, and of the most active of the imperial com-manders. The brilliant manner in which he opened the campaign in 1799, made way for the future triumphs of Melas and Suwarrow, and in 1800 Kray replaced the Archduke Charles in the command of the army of the Rhine. D. 1804.
KREUTZER, Rodolph, kroot-sai, a celebrated

RESUTER, MODDIN, Errors-tax, a celebrated in piral library of St. Petersburg, and English Germany, Holland, and Italy; and, having restablished a reputation as one of the first per author by W. R. S. Ralston, appeared in 1869. The ormogenest at the grand opers of Paris.

He composed the music for the operas of ker, afformed with the production of the order of the music for the operas of ker, afformand twine and theological writes, who published various works of a religious character; products of the production of the fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the translation of his fables, with a memoir of the transl

KEUDENER, Julians Vietinghoff, Baroness von, kwoo'd-ener, a celebrated German mystic, was the daughter of the governor of Riga, and was married, at the age of fourteen, to the Baron von Krudener, Russian ambassador at the court of Berlin. After spending mag agy and brilliant life, she sudde from the world, and gave herself up to an extension of deposition.

altation of devotion. Imagining she had a mission from heaven to regenerate Christianity, she forthwith travelled over Germany, visiting prisons, preaching in the open air, and distribut-ing alms layishly: being followed throughout her ress by some thousands of disciples.

she had several interviews with the allied princes, who had entered Paris, and greatly im-pressed the emperor Alexander, to whom it is said she predicted the return of Napoleon from the isle of Elba, and his approaching fall. From Paris she visited Switzerland, and afterwards farms she visited Switzerland, and alterwards Germany, where she recommenced prophesying; but her great influence being feared, she was banished. About 1822 she retired to the Crimea, in order to found a refuge for criminals. She published at Paris, in 1803, a romance entitled Valerie." which was in great part her own autobiography. B. at Riga, 1766; D. in the Crimea, 1824.

Kruilov, (or Krilor,) Ivan Andreevich, kri'-lof, a clever Russian fabulist, was the son of an officer in the Russian infantry, who, at his death, in 1780, left to his son nothing more than a small box of well-read books, which the youth eagerly perused. Some plays and operas were included in this collection, and the perusal of included it this collection, and the person of these led Ivan to attempt something drama-tic himself. He wrote an opera called the "Kafeinitza; or, Fortune-Teller by Coffee," when only fifteen years of age. On his mother removing to St. Petersburg, soon afterwards, he took his opera to a German bookseller, who offered him sixty roubles for the manuscript. Young Krullov took out the money in books, Young Armiov took out the money in books, selecting Racine, Molière, and Bolleau. Three years afterwards, he wrote a play, entitled "Philomela," but could not get it produced on the stage. He obtained a post in a government office, and continued, during his hours of leisure, office, and continued, during his hours of leisure, to write essays and dramas, till the year 1801, when he became secretary to Prince Galitzin, when he became secretary to Prince Galitzin, governor of Riga, with whom he grew into great favour. The prince invited him to his country house, where he spent three years. He subsequently produced half a dozen plays, which obtained some popularity. At forty years of age he accidentally discovered where his real powers lay. He translated several of La Fontaine's fables, and was advised by Dmitriey, the Russian poet, to persevere. He accordingly wrote some original fables, which rapidly attained the utmost degree of popularity. He continued to produce fables in verse, and, during continued to produce fables in verse, and, during continued to produce fables in verso, and, during several subsequent years, list lines were quoted by every class in Russia, from peasant to noble. He wrote 197 fables; 160 of which were original. In 1812 he obtained an appointment in the immerial library of St. Petersburg. An English translation of his fables, with a memoir of the author by W. R. S. Ralston, appeared in 1860. R. St. Moscow, 1768; D. at St. Petersburg, 1844. KRUNKLORER, Prederick Adolf, kroon-micker, a German divine and theological writes, who multished various works of a relitious character:

the most widely circulated of which were, "The the most whele creatment of which were, The Life of St. John," "Cornelius the Centurion," "Parables," and a book of religious poetry for children. The three first of these have been condern. The three tires of these have been translated into English, and have become popu-lar, the "Parables" particularly so. n. at Teck-lenburg, Westphulia, 1768; p. 1815. KRUMMACHER, Geltfried Daniel, younger brother of the preceding, officiated as preacher in the reformed church at Elberteld. He published "Sermons on the Wanderings of the Children of Israel," and "Daily Manna," both of which have been reproduced in an English or when have oven reproduced in an Edgish form, the latter under the title of "The Chris-tian's Every-Day Book." p. 1774; p. 1837. KRUMMACHER, Frederick William, son of Frederick Adolf, acted for some time as pastor to a Lutheran community at New York. tor to a Lutheran community at New 10rs.

He wrote a great number of religious works, many of which have become very popular in Brighand. His principal works are "Elijah the Tishbitte," "Elisha," "Solomon and the Shnalite," "Emphatien of Christ," "Gilmpos into the Kingdom of Grace," and the "Church's Voice of Instruction." In 1850 nattended the annual conference of the Evangelical Alliance at

Glasgow. D. at Polsdam, Dec. 10, 1868.
KUBLA-KUAN, koo'-bla-kan, in Clinese, Chi-Tsou, founder of the twentieth Chinese dynasty, that of the Mongols or Yen, was the grandthat of the mongois or 1en, was the grames son of Genghis-Khan, and was proclaimed em-peror of the Mongois in 1280, in succession to his brother Mangou-Khan. He reigned, at first, only in Mongolia and the countries conquered by Genghis-Khan; but invaded China in 1267, captured the Chinese emperor in 1279, and thus overthrew the Song dynasty, which had ruled for 319 years. He extended his conquests over Thibet, Pegu, Cochin-China, and formed the greatest empire known in history, embracing the whole of Asia and part of Europe, from the Dnieper to Japan. He patronized letters and encouraged agriculture, industry, and com-merce. Marco Polo passed seventeen years at his court. D. 1201.

RISCOUTE. D. 1201.

KUGLER, Francis Theodore, koog'-ler, an eminent German art-critic, who, after completing his collegiate studies, devoted himself to the elucidation of the early history of painting and rescarches thereon. His great work, the "Hund-book of the History of Painting from the Age of Constanting of the Present Time," was published in 1837. It was almost immediately translated into the leading European languages. In England, it was reproduced by several trans-lators. The "Schools of Painting in Italy" was done into English by Lady Eastlake, with notes by Sir Charles Eastlake. The "German, Flemish, and Dutch Schools" were rendered by Sir Edmund Head. Kugler also wrote, "Description of the Art Treasures in Berlin and Potsdam," a very important work; the "History of Frederick the Great," and other valuable contributions to literature. B. at Stettin, Pomerania, 1808; D. at Berlin, 1858.

Kupetzky, Johann, koo-pait'-ske, a celebrated portrait painter, was a native of Hungary, and after visiting Rome and undergoing great hardships, was invited to Vienna, where he soon obtained the reputation of being the first por-trait painter of his day, and had among his patrons and admirers the emperors Joseph I. and Charles VI., together with Prince Eugene and Peter the Great of Russia, the latter of whom wished him to go with him to Petersburg, but this Kupetzky declined, as he would burg, but this kupictky declined, as he would on no account surrender any portion of his liberty. He was a member of an association called the "Bohemian Brothersy," which occa-sioned an accusation of heresy to be made against him, and he secretly left Yienna, and settled in Mirounberg. It has been said of Kupictka, 's pictures that they combine the vigour of Rubens, the truth and elegance of Vandyck, and the effect of Rembrandt, Though principally devoted to portraits, he also painted historical and other subjects; and many of his works have been engraved. B. in 1666 or 1667; D. 1740.

D. 17-10. Kuserer, Ludolph, koos'-ter, a German literary critic, who studied at Berlin, afterwards tra-velled on the continent, and visited England, where he completed his edition of Suidas, printed at Cambridge in 1705, and for which that university conferred on him a doctor's degree. Thence he went to Rerlin, where he have the reference and library to the help to. became professor and librarian to the king. He did not, however, long retain these honours, but went to Amsterdam, where he published lamblichus's "Life of Pythagoras," and a new edition of the plays of Arist ophanes, with the Scholia. In 1713 he went to Paris, and through Schotta. If 115 he were OF arts, and chrough his friend, the Abbé Bignon, obtained a pension, Besides the above, he published "Historia Critica Homeri," and other works. n. at Blom-

Critica Roman, and Other Works. B. at Dom-berz, Westphalia, 1670; p. at Paris, 1716. Kutusuff, Michael, Prince of, koo'-to-sov, a celebrated Russian field-marshal, was educated at Strasburg, and entered the Russian army in 1759; served in Poland from 1764 till 1769; and afterwards against the Turks under Romanzoff. He behaved with great gallantry at the siege of Otchakoff, where he was dangerously wounded; and on his recovery joined Suwarrow at the storming and capture of Ismail, when he was advanced to the rank of lieutenant-general. In the subsequent Polish war, he was particularly conspicuous during the memorable day of Praga. In 1805, the emperor Alexander gave him the chief command of the first Russian corps against the French, and he headed the allied army at Austerlitz, where he was wounded. In 1810 and 1811 he obtained several advantages over the Turks; and, in 1812, when 70 years of age, the chief command of the Russian army, destined to oppose Napoleon, was be-stowed upon him. To commemorate his victories, he received the surname of "Smolenskoi."

1103, in 1813, Kuvr, Jacob, koip, a celebrated landscape painter, who founded the Academy of Painting at Dort, in 1612. He copied nature with great finish and exactness.

Kurr, Albert, son of the preceding, a distinguished Dutch painter. Very little is known of the creumstances of his life, although he excelled both in landscape and cattle-painting; and, though highly esteemed in England, is and, though highly esteemed in England, is comparatively unknown abroad. A picture by him, for which the late Sir Robert Pol paid 350 guines, was originally purchased at Hoorn, in Holland, for one shilling English money. n. 1000; n. about 1635. Krn, Thomas, kid, an English writer in the reign of Elizabeth, who published, in 1358, a play called "Pompey the Great," taken from the French of Garafer: he wrote, also, two other plays, The three are included in Dodley's "Old Plays." Shakspeare caused several of his comic characters to parody the most bombastic remained twelve years, acted as an engineer in portions of Kyd's dramas.

KYNASTON, Sir Francis, ki-näs'-ton, an English poet, was knighted by Charles I .: became nish poet, was highted by Charles, I became president of a literary institution called the "Museum Minerve," translated Chaucer's "Troilus and Cressida" into Latin, and was the author of "Leoline and Sydanis," and other pieces. B. in Shropshire, 1587; D. 1642.

Kynlston, John, an English divine, was educated at Brasenose College, Oxford, of which he was chosen fellow in 1751. He wrote "De Impietate C. Cornelio Tacito falsò objectata;" "Oratio habita in Sacello Collegii Enei Nasi."

B. at Chester, 1728; D. 1783.

Kenwelmarsh, Francis, kin'-wel-marsh, an English writer of the leth century, was a friend of Gascoigne, whom he assisted in trans-lating Euripides' tragedy of "Jocasta." He and his brother Anthony wrote a collection of poetical pieces, some of which are to be found in the collection called the "Paradise of Dainty Devices," 1576, KYBLE, John, kirl, a benevolent Englishman. Though he had only an estate of £500 a year, he bestowed large sums, in the course of his life, in charity, and built a church; but towards this last good work he obtained subscriptions from other pious and charitable persons. On all accounts, however, he deserved the fine eulogium bestowed upon him by Pope, who emphatically calls him "the Man of Ross." B. at Ross, Herefordshire, 1634; D. 1724.

LABADIE, John, la'-ba-de, a French religious impostor, who received his education among the Jesuits, and was admitted a member of that order, which, however, he quitted, to become an itinerant preacher. He pretended to have received visions, declared himself another John the Baptist, and prophesied the second coming of the Messiah. The austerity of his manners, his zeal, and affected piety, procured him many fol-lowers, particularly at Amiens, where he obtained a canonry, but, being detected in some criminal intrigues, the bishop ordered him to be put under arrest. Labadie, however, escaped to Toulouse, and became director of a convent of nuns, among whom he introduced a new rule, and the notions of the Quietists, with some additions of his own; viz., that the Scriptures are not necessary to salvation; that outward worship is of no use, but that all prayer should be mental; and that there are two churches, that of Christians in degeneracy, and the other regenerate, or "Labadists," as his followers were called. He renounced the Romish oligion at Montauban, in 1650, and after exer-" ing the ministry there some time, went to Geneva: being expelled thence, he removed to Middleburg, where he obtained many followers, among whom was the famous Anna Maria Schurmann. Labadie sent disciples to propa-gate his doctrines, and to gather contributions, in different parts of Holland; on which account he was obliged to withdraw to Erfurt, and thence to Altona. His works, which are full of mysticism, are now disregarded. B. at Bourg, Guienne, 1610; D. at Altona, 1674.

Labar, Jean Baptiste, la'-ba', a Dominican missionary, who possessed great mathematical knowledge; and while in America, where he 611 remained twere years, acted as an engineer in defence of Guadaloupe when attacked by the English in 1703. On his return to Europe in 1703, he surveyed the environs and coast of Andalusia; soon after travelled into Italy and Andanisas, soon after travelled into Italy and other parts; and finally returned to Paris. He wrote numerous works, the chief of which are his "Yoyage aux Illes de l'Amérique," "Travels in Spain and Italy," a "Description of the Countries of Western Africa," &c. B. at Paris, Countries of "International 1663; p. 1738.

Libe', Louise Charly, la-bai', a French poetess, surnamed the "fair rope-maker," on account of her marriage with a manufacturer of cables at the death, a large for-Lyons, who left her, at his death, a large for-tune. Her first passion was that of arms, and she distinguished herself, in a masculine dress, at the siege of Perpignan. She had a taste for literature, and her library was enriched with the best writers, French, Italian, and Spanish; but her fine qualities were tarnished by liber-tinism. Her poems were printed at Lyons in 1555, and again in 1762. B. at Lyons, 1526; D. 1566.

LA BEAUMELLE, Laurent de, bo'-mel, a French writer, who, in 1751, became professor of French literature in Denmark. He subsequently went to the court of Frederick the Great, but his quarrels with Voltaire caused him to leave Prussia. He returned to Paris, and obtained an appointment in the Bibliothèque Royale. He wrote "Memoirs of the History of Madame de Maintenon," and other Instory of Madaine de Maintenon, and once works. B. 1728; D. 1773. LABEDOTERE, Charles Angelique François Huchet, Count de, lat-bat-do-yair, a famous general, who served as an officer in the Imperial Guards at the battle of Eylau, and in 1808 and 1809 was aide-de-camp to Eugène Beauharnais. He was present in the retreat from Moscow, and distinguished himself at the battles of and distinguished misself at the patties of Lutzen and Bautzen. After the abdication of Bonaparte, he was, in 1815, appointed to a regiment stationed at Grenoble; but on the return of Napoleon from Elba, Labedoyere was the first to join him with his regiment. was the first to foin him with his regiment. He was rapidly promoted by the emperor, and eventually raised to the peerage; but after the occupation of Paris by the allied army, was tried by court-martial, and shot, August, 1815.

Libbo, Quintus Fabius, lai-be-o, a Roman general, who defeated Antiochus, king of Syria, 188 E.C., and became consul 182 E.C. He was a man of liberality and talent, and is said to have assisted Terence in writing some of his LABEO, Quintus Antistius, a Roman lawyer, who refused the consulship when offered him by Augustus, whose projects he opposed. He composed several works, which are lost. His father was one of the conspirators who assassinated Casar, and was killed at the battle of Philippi.—There was another Labeo, who was tribune of the people, B.o. 184. He caused the censor Metellus to be thrown from the Tarpeian rock.

LABERIUS, Decimus, lai-beer'-e-us, a Roman height, who wrote mimes or satirical productions for the stage. Casar obliged him to perform one of his own mimes against his will; on which occasion Laberius spoke a satirical on which occasion Lauretrus spone a served in Aulus Gellius. Fragments of his other works are also extant. D. 44 B.O.

LABLACHE, Louis, la-blash, a celebrated R R 2

La Bletterie

inal Laws of the ation and Juris.

active pursuit of ms profession, he | took up his residence at a villa near Naples. B.

at Naples, 1799; D. 1858. La Bletterie, Réné de, blet-tre, an eminent rench professor of rhetoric, studied ecclestastical history at the seminary of St. Magleire, and subsequently became professor of rhecize at the College of France, and was admitted a member of the Academy of Belles Lettres in 1742. He wrote a "Life of the Emperor Julian," in 1783, a "listory of Joviannes," in 1748. He likowise translated Cassar and Tactus. B. at Rennes, 1869, b. at Paris, 1773.

L. Bonn, John Benjamin de. (Ser Bonne.)

L. Bonn, Heart Frances Canata a Demanda siastical history at the seminary of St. Magloire, LA BORDE, John Benjamin de. (Ser HODRE.), LA BORDE, Hemri François, Countde, a French general, who commanded a division at the siege of Toulouse, in 1793. He served in all Napoleon's campaigns, and, in the Russian expedition, was wounded while commanding the Young Guards at Dresden. He was created a peer of France during the Hundred Days, but was banished in 1815. p. 1794; p. 1835.

LA BORDE, Alexandre Louis Joseph, Count de, a French author, whose father was a peasant of Bearn, and is said to have come to Paris on foot, in wooden shoes, and to have been suc-cessful in making his way in the world by shrewdness and perseverance, and accumulasing some money. He took care to give his son a good education, but fearing for his safety in Paris when the first signs of the coming outbreak of the French Kevolution shewed themselves, sent him to Vienna, where he entered the Austrian army and served against his native country; but, in 1797, went to France, and devoted himself to literature. He was aideand devoted himself to literature. He was aide-de-camp to Louis Philippe, general of brigade of the National Guard, and prefect of the Seine, or first magistrate of Paris. He was the editor of many splendid works, a few of the most im-portant being. "Petorial and Historical Travels in Spain," "Petorial Travels in Austria," "The Monuments of France," "Travels in Ayria," and "Versailles, Ancient and Modern." B. at Paris, 1778; D. 1842.

1773; D. 1842.

LA Borde, Leon Emmanuel Simon Juseph, Count de, son of the preceding, a modern French writer, who in 1830 became secretary of legation to the French embasy in London, and was subsequently appointed conservator of the collection of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance in the Museum of the Louvre. He was a distrimentable archeologist and like hig father sance in the auseum of the Mouve. He was a distinguished archeologist, and like his father, produced many magnificent pictorial works descriptive of foreign countries. The chief of them are, "Travels in Arabi Petrea," "Travels in the East," "Researches on the Early History in the East," "Researches on the Early History of Printing," "Studies on the Arts, Letters, and Industry of the Fifteenth Century," and "The Revival of the Arts at the Court of B. at Paris, 1807.

French and Foreign Law." He was also suc-French and Foreign Law." He was also suc-cessful in other departments of literature; his "Political History of the United States," "Slavery," and "Studies of Germany and the Slavonic Nations," are all excellent. In addition to the above-mentioned works, which are selected to represent the character of his writings, a charming volume of light literature must be included in this enumeration of some of the results of his literary life, viz., the "Souvenirs d'un Voyageur," published in 1857. B. at Paris, 1811.

LA BOURDONNAIS, Bertrand Francois Mahé de, boor'-don-nai, a French general, who entered the service of the French East India Company at an early age, and signalized himself on several occasions, particularly at the capture of Mahé, which name he was thenceforth permitted to bear. In 1734 he became governor-general of the Isles of France and Bourbon, both of which were much benefited by his discreet adminis-tration. In the war of 1743, between France and England, he went to the succour of Dupleix at Pondicherry. He besieged the English at Mairas, and compelled them to capitulate, in 1716. Dupleix, however, disregarded the terms that La Bourdonnais had entered into with the English, and he was sent in disgrace to the Isle of France. He returned to France in 1748, in order to defend his conduct against his accusers. He had no sooner landed than he was incarcerated in the Bastille, where he remained several years. His innocence being at length established, he was released in 1752, but died of a broken heart shortly afterwards. He left behind him some "Memoirs," in which his misfortunes were vividly depicted, and which were first published in 1760. The author of " l'aul and Virginia" has done full justice to the wisdom and generous qualities of the governor of the Isles of France and Bourbon, and has immortalized his name. B. at Saint Malo, 1699; D. 1753.-His grandson, B. 1795; D. 184), 1899; b. 1703.—His granutson, b. 1796; b. 1896; b. 1898. was a celebrated chess-player, a French botanist, and physician to Louis XIII., presented to his sovereign the ground upon which the Jardin des Plantes was founded, and was apointed the first keeper thereof. He wrote a "Treatise on the Plaguic," and several works on botany. D. 1641.

I.A BRUYERE. (See BRUYERE, John de la.)

LA CAILLE, Nicolas Louis de, kail, a French mathematician and astronomer, was educated for the priesthood; but, having attained the degree of deacon, devoted himself entirely to science. He allied himself with Cassini and Maraldi, and was employed with those astronomers in the verification of the arc of the meridian. The result of his labours was the France." R. at Paris, 1907.

Linoutary, Edouard Refa Lefsbrs, la'-bood demonstration of the gradual increase of the lawyer and litteratura, after completing his legal education, made retrief by actual measurement. At the age of himself known by his "History of Landed Pro-twenty-five, he was nominated professor of madelia."

Lacepede

thematics in the Mazarin College, in which capacity he highly distinguished himself, and published for the use of his pupils treatises on geometry, optics, mechanics, and astronomy. In 1751 he went to the Cape of Good Hope to observe the astral system of the southern heavens. He remained there four years, and neavens. He remained there four years, and compiled during his stay a catalogue of stars. On his return to Paris, he collected his seientific works, published new editions of some, and laboured incessantly at astronomy. His devotion to science at length cost him his life; for he contracted a fever by passing his lights on cold stones, observing the heavens. B. at Purvious 1273, p. 1899.

Rumigny, 1713; p. 1762.

LACEFEDR, Bernard Germain Stephen de la Ville, Count de, las-e-paid, a celebrated French naturalist, who applied himself to the study of natural science from his earliest youth, and, at the age of eighteen years, made himself known to Buffon, by addressing to him soveral interest-ing memoirs. In 1776 he went to Paris, and obtained the post of assistant-demonstrator at obtained the post of assistant-temonstrator at the Royal Garden, through the interest of Buffon, to whom he proposed to continue his Natural History. On the breaking out of the revolution, Lacepède adopted its principles, and became successively commandant of the Nabecame successively commandant of the National Guard, and deputy-extraordinary for Agen in the Legislative Assembly. He was subsequently nominated senator, and, in 1903, grand chancellor of the Legion of Honour; he also held many offices of distinction under Napoleon. I. His chief works are "Natural History of Quadrupeds and Serpents," and "Fishes," both of which formed continuations to Buffon's great work. B. at Agen, 1756; D. at Paris, 1825.

1825.

LA CEEDA, Bernarda, Donna, thair'-da, a Portuguese lady, who distinguished herself by her poetical talents, and was invited to the court of Spain by Philip III., where she taught Latin to the royal children. She wrote several comedies and poetical pieces. B. at Oporto,

1595; D. 1644.

La Chaise, François d'Aix, shaise, surnamed
Father, a celebrated French Jesuit, who was, ranner, a celebrated relief Sestin, who was, for some time, professor of philosophy at Lyons, and became provincial of his order. In 1676, Lonis XIV, chose him for his confessor, an office which the father filled till his death, thirty-four years afterwards. He was actively engaged in all the intrigues of the court; his interest was sought by Madame de Montespan and Madame de Maintenon; but he embraced the cause of the latter, and favoured her marriage with Louis XIV. In religious questions, he took part in the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in 1695; and in the condemnation of Fénélon. He was and mergetic opponent of the Jansenists; and on every occasion endeavoured to advance the interests of his order. Although a man of only slender abilities, his adrotiness and insinuating manner enabled him to gain a great ascendancy over the king, of whose conscience he was the keeper. He was the author of several works, particularly "A Course of Philosophy," composed in Latin, and published at Lyons in 1662. Louis XIV, built for his con-Lyons in 1662. Louis A.V. Butte of the con-fessor a beautiful rustic dwelling near Paris, which was called Mont-Louis. The grounds which surrounded this house have since been converted into a burial-place, and called the Cemetery of Père la Chaise. n. at the castle of Aix, in Forez, 1624; p. 1709.

Lacordaire

LA COLONIE, John Martin de, kol'-o-ne, a field-marshal in the Austrian service, who published his military memoirs at Frankfort, in 1730. He was also the author of the "History of Bordeaux." B. at Perigord, 1674; D. at Bordeaux, 1759.

La Combe, Jacques, kome, a French miscellaneous writer, who translated into the French language, Orrery's "Life of Swift," and Shaftes-bury's "Letters on Enthusiasm." He also edited "The Letters of Christina of Sweden," and afterwards added a continuation, entitled "The Secret Letters of Queen Christina," but which Secret Letters of Queen Christina," but which has since been pronounced a literary forgery. B. 1783; D. at Montpellier, about 1795. LA CONDAMINE, Chates Marie de, koné-damene, a celebrated French traveller, who, actuated by an indefatigable desire for knowledge, travelled over almost the whole world, and studied nearly every science. In 1735 he was selected, with Bouguer, to make a voyage to the equator, for the purpose of determining the dimensions and the figure of the earth. In the dimensions and the figure of the earth. In this expedition, betravelled over nearly the whole of South America, and was absent from France for ten years, during which he experienced the atmost fatigue and hardship. On his return he published his "Travels in South America," and "The Figure of the Earth, as determined by the Observations of Messieurs De la Condamie and Suguer." He also produced several works in English and Spanish; contributed to the setartific arounders of Petra and Basilia and the scientific memoirs of Paris and Berlin; and maintained a correspondence upon scientific subjects with distinguished men in every European city. He was a member of the Paris Academy of Sciences, of the Academie Fran-çaise, and of the Royal Society of London. B.

taller, and of the charactery of London. In at Paris, 1701; n. 1774.

LACORDAIRE, Jean Baptiste Henri, La'-kordair, a celebrated French presaller. The regions zeal, which was afterwards to form so prominent a trait of his character, gave no sign of its existence in his earliest years; for, until the age of 22, he diligently pursued his studies for the profession of the law. Whatever opinions of a religious nature his mind had formed up to that period, were strongly tinetured with the scepticism of Voltaire. Suddenly, in 1824, he scopticism of Voltaire. Suddenly, in 1824, he entered the college of St. Subjec, and, after an interval of three years, was ordained a priest. Becoming acquaintee with the author of the "Essay on Indifference," he soon showed himself one of his most ardent followers, (See LAMENNAIS, During the revolution of 1880, Lacordaire, in conjunction with M. de Montal Carbon and Car lembert, commenced the publication of "L'Avenir," giving to the new paper the motto, "God and Liberty." The task they set themselves to accomplish by the aid of their journal was religious, civil, and political liberty. The strong language and bold opinions of this new religious paper brought Lacordaire before the Court of paper orought Lacortaire before the Court of Assize in the following year. Here he defended himself with the utmost eloquence, and was triumphantly acquitted. He had endeavoured, a few months previously, to join to his priestly function the title of advocate; but the council of that body refused to inscribe his name on their rolls. Not long afterwards, he, with Messrs. Montalembert and De Chour, openad, without authority, a "Free School." In France, without authority, a "Free School." In France, such a proceeding was in direct opposition to law; accordingly, he and his coadjutors were ordered to close the establishment. This demand was unheeded, and it was not until force had been employed, that the heads of the school could be induced to leave the place. Lacordaire, Montalembert, and De Choux, were cited before the Chamber of Peers. Condemned to pay the minimum fine, 100 francs, the bold innovators were admitted to have gained the victory. The French clergy were strongly moved by the burning eloquence of Lacordaire and his fellow burning cloquence of Lacordaire and his fellow reformers. What the result would have been it is difficult to imagine; but it is certain that the paper felt itself threatened, for Grecory XVI., in 1832, put forth his "Encycle cal Letter," in which he declared that "the regeneration of the Church' was an absurdity, 'liberty of conscience' a mad dream, and 'liberty of the press' a fatal delusion." If Lacordaire, and the other chiefs of "L'Avenir" had given so much uncasiness to the head of the established religion of their country, their submission was most sudden and complete. The three journalists went to Rome: of Lacordaire it is said, "He prostrated himself on the tomb of St. Peter, and rose submissive and transformed." On his return to Paris he devoted himself to preaching. In 1835 he com-menced his pulpit orations at the cathedral of Notre Dame, and gathered about him, says one of his French critics, "the worldly crowd by other attractions besides the sacred word. He held forth as to every topic: under the pretext of religion, he discoursed of the present generation, of every-day emotions and interests, of nationality, of liberty, of political economy, of railroads, and of Napoleon. The brilliancy of his language, the energetic audacity of his movements, captivated his hearers." From this it would appear, that a certain style of pulpit eloquence, lately exceedingly successful pupit eloquence, interference vecestingly successing in England, is nothing else than an initiation of Lacordaire's manner. In 1836 he made a second journey to Rome, where he was well received, and soon afterwards composed a complete retructation of his former opinions as expressed in "I/Avenix". In 1840 he assumed the habit of a Dominican friar, and wrote his "Life of St. Dominic," wherein he justifies, with more poetical power than historical truth, the Inquisition. Juring the revolution of 1848 the Inquisition. During the revolution of 1848 he revived his old republican ideas, and took his seat among the "Mountain" party in the Constituent Assembly. His parliamentary efforts were not very successful, however, and he soon resigned his seat. Subsequently, his voice growing very weak, he became director of the college of Sorrèze. He published several theological works, some sermons, and funeral control of the college of Sorrèze.

613

Lacretelle

orations; among others, one upon Daniel O'Connell. B. 1802; D. 1881.
LACRETRILE, Pierre Louis, Le'-kre-tel, usually called Lacretelle the Elder, a French writer, was a parliamentary advocate during the French revolution, and afterwards sat in the Legislative Assembly, and acted as a membe. of the Legislative Corps. During the Empire and the Restoration he remained unemployed, his republican principles not permitting him to Labratus III. succeeded Stephen V., his serve under these governments. He was a professional and voluminous author. A complete and divorced his lawful wife. He also illused edition of his works was commenced in 1823, and included tentiess on eloquence and plude universal hatred, was assessinated in 1920. sophy, as well as dramatic pieces, &c. He was, for some time, one of the editors of the Minerve," a lamous paper, whose politics and elected to the throne of Hungary in 1440. were in opposition to the Empire and the Restoration. He also compiled the articles 'Logic," "Metaphysics," and "Moral Philosophy," for the "Encyclopédie Methodique." n. at Meta, 1751; n. 1824.

Ladislans

LACRETELLE, Charles Joseph, a distinguished

Freuch historian, was brother of the preceding. and is generally styled the Younger.

LACROIX, Autoine Nicolas de, la-krwaw', an minent French geographer, who embraced an seclesiastical life, and devoted himself to the pursuit of geographical knowledge. His "Géographic Moderne" was produced in 1747 and has been several times reprinted, remaining a standard work in his own country. B. at Paris, 1701; D. 1760.—He must not be confounded with another of the same name, who was a cacher of languages and of geography at Lyons, and who produced a "Universal Geography,

Ke. D. about 1715.
LACTANTIUS. Lucius Celius Firmianus. 188an'-she-us, an eloquent father of the Church, vas, according to some, an African, and, to vas, according to some, an African, and, to thers, a native of Ferme, in Italy. He studied under Arnobius, and became so famous as a heleorician, that Constantine appointed him preceptor to his son Crispus. He formed his style upon that of Geere; but though he wrote with great purity and force, particularly a confuting the pagan errors and folities, he was page of a phytorician. Have nore of a rhetorician than a theologian. He blended philosophy with divinity, and thereby involved the truths of religion in considerable obscurity. A complete edition of his works was published at Göttingen, 1736; but the best edition is that of Paris, 2 vols. 4to, 1748. Lived at the end of the 3rd and beginning of the 4th entury. LACY, John, lai'-se, an English actor and dramatic writer in the reign of Charles 11., with whom he was a great favourite. He produced "The Dumb Lady," "The Old Troop; or Monsieur Ragout," and "Sir Hereules Buffoon." D. 1681 .- lie is not to be taken for John Lacy, an English gentleman, who became the zealous friend of the French impostors who called themselves prophets at the beginning of the 18th century. This person wrote some incoherent tracts on that subject, and was imprisoned for his zeal. his zeal.

ACYDAS, la-si'-das, a Greek philosopher of Cyrene, and disciple of Arcesilians, whom he succeeded as master of the second Academy. Attalus gave him a garden in which to read his bectures. He foolishly morned the loss of a favourite goose, which he caused to be buried magnificently. Lived about 290 n.c.

LADISLAUS I., (sometimes written Ledislas and Vladislas), la-dis-laws, king of Hungary, the son of Bela I., succeeded his brother desiration 1077. He added to his dominions Dalmal and Croatia, reduced the Bohemians, who had revolted, expelled the Huns, and conquered part revolted, expelled the Huns, and conquered part of Bulgaria and Russia. He also defeated the Tartars, and was as distinguished for his piety as for his valour. He died in 1095, and was canonized in 1198.

employed as his general John Hunniades, who has since been repeatedly enlarged; a "Hebrow was very successful. Ladislaus, however, made Grammar," &c. n. at Vancouleurs, 1700; p. at peace, which gave such dissubstiction to the Paris, 1765. pope and other Christian princes, that he was induced to break it; but he was very unfortu-nate afterwards, and lost his life in the battle of Varna, in 1444.

LADISLAUS V., the son of Albert of Austria, was made king on the death of Ladislaus IV under the guardianship of John Hunniades. He was very zealous against the Hussites, by whom he is said to have been poisoned in 1458.

Ladislaus VI., was the son of Casimir IV., ELEDISACES VI., WAS EN 68 off Of CLEMINI IV., on the death of Matchins Corrinns, in 1390, in opposition to his own brother, Albert, and to John, the natural son of his preciseosor, and to John, the natural son of his preciseosor, and to Alaximilian of Austria. His reign was very turbulent, being constantly at war with the Turks and other neighbouring powers. He died in 1516.

ADISLAUS, Or LANCELOT, king of Naples, called the Liberal and Victorious, succeeded his father, Charles III., in 1386. He had been pre-viously count of Provence and king of Hungary. He obtained the latter crown in 1403, during the imprisonment of Sigismund, who compelled him to return to Italy. On the death of his father, he was opposed by Louis II., duke of Anjou, which occasioned some bloody wars. Pone John XXIII. at first espoused the cause of Louis, but afterwards took the part of Ladislaus, who, however, marched against Rome, and having taken it, turned his arms on the Florentines, whom he compelled to sue for peace, in 1413. B. 1376; D. at Naples, it is suspected of poison, 1414.

Ladislaus I., king of Poland, succeeded his brother, Boleslaus II., in 1082. He defeated the armies of Prussia and Pomerania, D. 1102.

Ladislaus II., king of Poland, succeeded his father, Boleslaus III., in 1138. He made war against his brothers on frivolous pretences, and, after several battles, was driven from his throne; but Boleslaus IV., his successor, gave him Silesia at the request of Frederic Barbarossa. D. at

Oldenburg, 1159. Ouemourg, 1169, Ladrstans I. (some reckoning him as the first of this name) or IV, king of Poland, came to the throne in 1296. He pillaged his subjects and seized the goods of the clergy, for which he was expelled, and the crown given to Wenceslans, king of Bohemia. Ladislans retired for Rome, but on the datch of Wanasahara was cesiaus, king of Bohema. Ladishus Februa to Rome, but, on the death of Wenceslaus, was recalled to Poland, where he governed with moderation and wisdom. Pomerania having revolted, he called to his aid the Teutonic knights, who repaid themselves by seizing Dant-zic and other places; but Ladislaus marched

ZIC and other places; DUL LAGISLAUS BATCHER against the knights, and defeated them. D. 1833. LADISLAUS II., or V. (See JAGELLON.) LADISLAUS III., or VI. (See LADISLAUS IV.) LADISLAUS IV., or VII., king of Poland, succeed-ed Sigismund III. in 1682. Before his advancement to the throne, he signalized himself against the Turks, whom he defeated in several actions. He also repulsed the Russians, and forced them to make peace. D. 1649.

LELIUS, Caius, le'-li-us, consul of Rome, 140 B.C., distinguished himself as a soldier in Spain, and was no less celebrated for his eloquence and poetical genius. He was the intimate friend of Scipio Africanus the younger, and is said to have assisted Terence in his comedies.—There was another consul of this name, 190 B.C. He accompanied the clder Scipio to Africa, and took part in the victories over Asdrubal and Syphax.

LAENNEC, Réné Théophile Hyacinthe, lan'nek, a distinguished French physician, inventor of the stethoscope and of the art of "mediate are of the art of "mediate auscultation." After completing his medical adscattation." After completing his medical education at Nantes, under his uncle, a celebrated physician, and at Paris, he obtained the degree of doctor of medicine in 1814. His literary acquirements were extensive, and he rapidly grew into fame as a lecturer and writer on medicine. In 1816 he became chief physician at the Hopital Necker, and soon afterwards made known his important discovery in his "Treatise on Mediate Auscultation." His health, which had been always delicate, now grew so infirm that he was compelled to resign his large private that he was compense to resign his large privace practice and his official appointments, to repair into Brittany. In 1821 he returned, with re-stored health, to Paris, and was appointed pro-fessor of medicine in the College of France, Five years later his health again gave way; and it was found, by means of the system he had himself invented, that he was attacked with consumption. He retired to Brittany, and soon afterwards died. His great invention of the stethoscope, as well as his valuable works, elucidated the pathology of diseases of the chest, which till his time had been involved in the greatest obscurity. His most invaluable work, on "Mediate Auscultation," has been translated into English by Dr. Forbes. Besides this, he also produced a number of excellent treatises on medicine, and was altogether one of the reatest advancers of medical science the world reatest advancers of medical science the world as seen during the last century. In at Quimber, Brittany, 1781; D. 1826.

La FAXFETS, Louis Mottier, Mademoiselle de, Interpretated for the property of the pro with a lively passion for her, but she resisted his entreaties, and sought, in 1637, the retirement of a cloister, where she assumed the name of Sister Angelica, p. 1665. Madame de Genlis made her the heroine of a romance, first published in 1812, entitled "Mademoiselle de la Fayette."

LA FAYETTE, Countess de. (See FAYETTE)
LA FAYETTE, Gilbert Mottier, Marquis de, a celebrated soldier and patriot, came of a noble family in Auvergne, and, at the age of 20 years, fitted out a frigate at his own expense and sailed for America, to fight in the ranks of the insurgents against British domination. Returning to France at the end of two years, he again sailed for America, with reinforcements Ladvocar, Jean Baptiste, Ladro-La, alearned "sings, men, and money, and distinguished French writer, who became doctor, librarian, and professor of the Sorbonne. The duke of two. In the series of two states of two states of two. The series of the states of two. The series of th 1789 deputy in the National Assembly. In this capacity he warmly defended the republican ideas then in vogue, and proposed the first declaration of the rights of man, which ultimately formed the basis of the constitution. In July, 1789, he was appointed commandant of the national guard, upon which occasion he caused his soldiers to assume a tri-coloured cockade,blue and red, the colours of the commune of Paris, and white, the colour of the French lily, -this being the origin of what afterwards became the national colours. He protected the royal family on the 5th and 6th October, and when the people broke out into insurrection in July, 1791, he defeated them with his national guards on the Champ de Mars. On being ap-pointed to command the army of the north, he defeated the allies at Philippeville and Mau-beuge. In August, 1792, he was outlawed for having arrested the commissioners of the National Assembly sent to watch him at his camp at Complègne, where it is said he had previously invited the king to seek an asylum. Upon this, he, with a few friends, crossed the frontier, inne, with a few friends, crossed the Founter, in-tending to take up his residence in a neutral country, but was arrested by the Austrians, and confined in the fortress of Olmütz, in Moravia. conning in the lorvers of omittae, in about and the remained there during five years, but was released by a special article in the treaty of Campo-Formio. Strongly opposed to Napoleon's ambition, La Fayette took no part in public affairs during the Consulate and the Empire Consulate and the Empi On Napoleon's return from Elba in 1815, pire. On Napoleon's return from Eloa in 1010, La Fayette was returned to the House of Representatives, where, after the defeat at Waterhos, he replied, in answer to Lucien's appeal:
"We have followed your brother through the burning sands of Syria, as well as to the frozen deserts of Russia; the bleached bones of two millions of Frenchmen scattered all over the globe attest our devotion to him. That devotion is now exhausted, for his cause is no longer the cause of the nation." As a member of the Chamber of Deputies under the Restoration, he was the untiring advocate of constitutional liberty. In 1824 he visited the United States, where his journey was a perpetual ovation. During the revolution of 1830, he was nominated for the second time chief of the national guard, and was one of the first to propose Louis Philippe as king of the French. The new monarch, however, soon became jealous of his popularity, and sought to counteract his great influence by proposing a counteract his great inhumes by proposing a measure for the abolition of the post of com-mander-in-chief of the national guard. This attack La Fayette forestalled by tendering his resignation, and henceforth the relations of La Fayette and Louis Philippe were of the most uncordial character. La Fayette took a dis-tinguished part in some of the greatest events of his epoch, in the American revolution, and in those of France in 1789 and 1830. Although not possessed of commanding genius, he was ever actuated by patriotic and disinterested motives, But perhaps with him the qualities of the heart were superior to those of the mind. Through-out his long career, he showed a want of fore-sight and decision, and proved himself a general signt and decision, and proven immedia a general more fitted to excite popular commotion than to direct and establish national security. La Fa-yette left behind him "Memoirs," which were published by his family in 1837-40. B. at Cha-vagnac, in the department of the Haute-Loire, 1757. at Davis 1931.

1757; D. at Paris, 1834. LAFITAU, Joseph François, la'f-e-to, a French

Jesuit, who was a missionary among the Iro-quois in America. He wrote the "Manners of guois in America. He wrote the "Mannes of the Native Americans compared with those of the Primitive Times," a "History of the Discoveries of the Portuguese in the New World," and other works. D. 1740. LAKTER, Jacques, in 1976, the chief banker of France during the Empire and the Restoration, was the son of a poor carpenter at Bayonne, and in 1787 walked to Paris, where he obtained the situation of assistant clerk in the banking-house of Perregaux, at £48 per annum. He became successively book-keeper, cashier, chief clerk, manager, junior partner, and, in 1809, succeeded to the business, and theneforth carried it on in his own name. His eminently profound and practical talents for finance procured for him the posts of regent of the Bank of France, and president of the Paris Chamber of During a monetary crisis, in 1815. Commerce. Lafitte lent the government the sum of 2,000,000 francs. In the same year, Louis XVIII., on his departure for Ghent, deposited with the banker a very considerable sum, which Napoleon I. re-spected. Four months afterwards, the emperor himself, when leaving Paris for the last time. lodged in the same hands the sum of 5,000.001 francs. Latitte wished to give Napoleon a re-ceipt, but the latter replied. "It is unnecessary. I know you, M. Lalitte; you never liked my government, but you are an honest man." In 1830 he was said to be possessed of a private fortune of upwards of £2,000,000 sterling, but in the following year the great European mone-tary panie took place, and the house of Lafitte fell, along with those whose creditor he was. At this juncture Lafitte sold off the whole of his private property, amounting to 10,000,000 of francs, and subsequently, after the full discharge of his liabilities, he was ascertained to have a surplus of 8,000,000 francs. At his death, his remains were attended to the cemetery of Pèrela-Chaise by the most eminent personages of Paris, and his funeral oration was pronounced by Arago. B. at Bayonne, 1767; D. at Paris,

DE LADEBAT, André Daniel, laf-fawng de la-dai'-ba, a French statesman and financier, who, having inherited considerable procier, wao, having innerited considerable pro-perty, was able to devote his leisure to the study of political economy and the fine arts. He was one of the founders of the Academy of Painting at Bordeaux, and became a member of the Academy of Arts and Sciences in that city, and also of the Agricultural Society of Paris. M. Laffon was president of the Legislative Assembly when Louis XVI. and his family took refuge in its midst, on the 10th of August, 1792; and in the massacre in September following, he saved the life of the Abbé Sicard. He was subsequently himself exposed to much danger; but quently himself exposed to much danger; but having survived the Reign of Terror, was chosen, in September, 1795, a member of the Council of Ancients for the department of the Seine. In 1797 he was among those who were condemned to deportation, and sent to Cayenne; but re-turned from exile on the establishment of the Consulate. In 1815 he visited England, and col-lected much information concerning its finances, commerce, and public institutions; and on his return he presented to Louis XVIII. a valuable work on the finances of France. B. 1746; D. 1829.

La Fontaine. (See Fontaine, John de la.) LAFONTAINE, Augustus Henry Julius, la'-fon-

La Galissonniere

Lainez

tane, a German romance writer, among whose numerous works are, "Blanche and Minne, or the Manners of the Burghers," "Moral Systems," "The Country Clergyman, or New Family Pictures," and "Clara du Plessis and Clairaut, or the History of Two Lovers," B 1756; D. 1831.

LA GALISSONNIERE, Marquis de, ga'-lees-son'-ne-air, a French admiral, who, in 1745, was appointed governor-general of Canada, and became one of the most esteemed of the French viceroys of that colony. In 1756 Louis XV. con-fided to his charge the fleet destined to act against the English in the Mediterranean. He against the English in the Mediterranean. He was opposed to Admiral Byng at Minorea, and co-operated at the taking of Melnon. p. at Rochefort, 1693; p. 1756.

Lacyr, Thomas Fantef de, Law'ye, a clover French mathematician, who was designed for the bar, but preferred geometry to jurisprudence, and was educated accordingly at Paris, by the liberality of the duck de Noailles. He became a member of the Academy of Sciences, and Louis XIV. appointed him royal hydrographer at Rochefort; but, sixteen vears afterwards, he was recalled to Paris, and made liberaian to pner at Monecort; but, sixteen years atterwards, he was recalled to Paris, and made librarian to the king, with a considerable pension. He wrote: "New Methods for the Extraction and Approximation of Roots;" "Elements of Artinatic and Algebra;" "The Cobature of the Sphere;" "A General Analysis or Method of Sphere; A General Analysis of metalog of Resolving Problems;" and several papers in the "Memoirs" of the Academy. He was a fellow of the Royal Society of London. B. at Lyons, 1660; D. at Paris, 1734.

LAGRANGE, Joseph Louis de, la grang, a celebrated mathematician, who, at the age of centrated mannematician, who, at the age of eighteen years, took rank among the most learned men of his time, by addressing to Euler some answers relative to the isoperimetrical problems which had engaged his attention from his tenth year. In his nineteenth year he became professor of mathematics in the School of Artillery at Turin, and soon afterwards, in conjunction with a few friends, founded the Royal Academy of the same city. In 1764, and the following years, he bore off the mathematical prize offered by the Paris Academy of Sciences. In 1766 he was invited by Frederick the Great to Berlin, to succeed Euler as president of the Academy, and remained in that city during twenty years. After the death of Frederick he went to reside at Paris, where Louis XVI. had provided apartments for his use in the Louvre. He passed unscathed through the revolutionary period, and was appointed professor at the Poly-technic School. Napoleon I, gave him a seat in the Senate, and loaded him with dignities. His illustrious friend Laplace thus characterized him in his funeral oration :- "Among those who have most effectually extended the limits of our knowledge. Newton and Lagrange appear to have possessed in the highest degree the happy art of detecting general principles, which con-stitutes the true genius of science. This art, joined to a rare elegance in the exposition of the most abstract theories, characterized La-grange," "Lagrange," says Professor Hamil-ton, "has perhaps done more than any other ws of motion), "by showing that the most varied consequences respecting the motions of systems of bodies may be derived from one radical formula; the beauty of the method so suiting the dignity of the results as to make his great work a kind of scientific poem." Of the works of this luminary of ma-thematical science we have space only to enu-merate the most important: these are "Analymerate the most important; these are "Anny-tical Mechanics," the second edition published in Paris, 1811-15; "Theory of Analytical Functions," second edition published 1813; "Resolution of Numerical Equations," 1826; "Lessons on the Calculus of Functions," In addition to a crowd of highly important contributions to the "Transactions" of the learned Societies of the "fransactions" of the learned Societies of Turin, Berlin, and Paris, he produced treatises "On the Origin of Comets," "On the Calculation of Eclipses," and on the "Method of deter-mining the Orbit of a Comet from Observa-tions." h. at Turin, 1788; b. at Paris, 1813. Laguerre, Louis, id-yoo-cir, aFrench painter, was the godson of Louis XIV, who had him is tructed by Le Brun, and in the Royal Academy of Paris. In 1823 he came to Enceland and was of Paris. In 1683 he came to England, and was much employed in painting ceilings, halls, &c. He was first engaged by Verrio on the large work at St. Bartholomew's Hospital; subsequently he had lodgings assigned him in Hampon Court Palace, where he painted "The Labours of Hercules." B. 1863; D. 1721.

Lagus, lai-que, a Macedonian of mean extraction, who married Arsinoë, daughter of Meleager, who, according to some accounts, was then preg-nant by King Philip, and being willing to hide the disgrace of his wife, Lagus exposed the child in the woods. An eagle preserved the life of the infant, and fed him with her prey. This uncommon preservation was divulged to Lagua, who adopted the child, and called him Ptolemy, conjecturing that as his life had been so singularly preserved, his days would be spent in grandeur and affluence. This Ptolemy bein grandeur and affluence. This Folomy be-came king of Egyptafter the death of Alexander. The first of the Ptolemies was called Lagus, to distinguish him from his successors of the same name. Ptolemy, the first of the Macedo-nian kings of Egypt, wished it to be believed that he was the legitimate son of Lagus, and he preferred the appellation of Lagides to all other appellations. The sumame of Lagides was transmitted to all his descendants on the Egyptian throne to the reign of Claopatra, An-ton's mistrees.

ony's mistress.

Li Harpe. (See Harpe, John Francis de la.)

Lihier, Philippe de, la here, a French ma thematician, who was professor of astronomy and mathematics in the College of France, and became a member of the Academy of Sciences, n 1678. He was employed in many important in lots. He was employed in many important public works; among the rest, one for the de-ermination of the water-levels, preparatory to the construction of the aqueduct for supplying Paris. His chief works were treatises "On Conical and Cylindrical Sections," "On Surveying," and "On Mechanics." B. at Paris, 1640;

ing," and "On Mechanics, o. at ham, at the same city, 1718, b. at the same city, 1718, b. Latnuz, James, lei-naith', a Spaniard, and me of the companions of Loyola, whom he succeeded in the generaliship of the Jesuits, in 1558, He assisted at the council of Trent, where he has the hammal submirty to an extravagant ported the papal anthority to an extravagant free. He obtained from Paul IV the per-nal generalship of the order, and the following extraordinary privileges: the right of making all manner of contracts without the matrix an institute of the society; that of giving uthority and authenticity to all comments and explanations of the constitutions; the power of making new and altering old rules; and that of having prisons independently of the secular power. Lainez refused a cardinalship. B. in Dower, Lainez refused a cardinalship. B. in Castile, 1512; D. at Rome, 1505. LAING, Malcolm, laing, a Scottish historian, who studied at the university of Edinburgh, where he became a member of the celebrated Speculative Society. He was subsequently called to the Sectish bar; but, although he displayed high forensic abilities, he never succeeded in obtaining much practice. In 1793 he comobtaining much practice. In 1795 he con-menced his literary career by editing Henry's "Illstory of Britain." Five years later, he pro-duced "The History of Seotland, from the Union of the Crowns, on the Accession of James VI., to the Union of the Kingdoms in the Reign of Queen Anne." He afterwards appended to the second edition of this work a "Preliminary Dissertation on the Participation of Mary Queen of Scots in the Marder of Darnley." He represented Orkney for some time in Parliament, and enjoyed the friendship of Fox. B. in Orkney, 1762; p. 1819. LAING, Samuel, an English traveller and writer, brother of the preceding, composed some valuable works, the chief of which were "Notes of a Traveller," "Travels in Norway," and the "Heimskringla."

LAING, Alexander, an antiquarian and miscellancous writer, of whose early history but little is known, latterly followed the calling of an itinerant vender of old books; and, being a man of much humour and eccentricity, obtained access to many sources of information, which he turned to account in the "Donean Tourist," in verse, with copious notes, giving an account of the battles, castles, families, gentleaccount of the battles, casses, families, gentle-men's seats, &c., on the banks of the river Don; and "The Caledonian Itinerary, or a Tour on the Banks of the Dee," a poem, with historical He was also the compiler of the "Eecentric Magazine," which contains many curious and whimsical epitaphs gleaned from church-yards in Aberdeenshire. B. 1778; D. 1838.

LAKE, Gerard, Viscount, laik, a distinguished English general, who entered the army at the age of fourteen, served in the Seven Years' War, and subsequently participated in the campaigns in America and in Holland. During the rebellion in Ireland in 1797-98, he acted as commander-in-chief of the British force. In 1800 he went out to India as commander-in-chief, and three years afterwards took the field against the Mahrattas, whom he sig-nally defeated before the city of Delhi. On entering that city, he obtained possession of Shah Allum, the Mogul emperor, nominally the sove-Alten, the Mogule emperor, nominally the sovereign of India, but in reality the tool of the Mahrattas. He afterwards reduced Agra, and, by a series of brilliant successes, took from Scindiah all his possessions beyond the river Chumbul. He operated in 1804-5 against Holkar, when he defeated after an obstinate resistance. For his distinguished services, he was created, on his return to England in 1807, a viscount, having been previously raised to the peerage as Baron Lake of Delhi and Laswarec. B. 1744; D. 1808.

LALANDE, Michael Richard de, la'-land, a French musician who, when young, became a chorister in the church of St. Germain instrument, and studied the organ. The duke of Noailles recommended him to Louis XIV, who appointed him musical instructor to the court. He was also composer and chapel-master to the king. n. at Paris, 1657; n. at Versailles.

L'ALANDE, Joseph Jérome le Français de, an minent French astronomer, who was sent to Paris for the purpose of studying jurisprudence. but his attention having been early directed to Fontenelle's 'Discourses on the Plurality of Worlds," he secretly devoted himself to the pursuit of astronomical science. He attended the lectures of Lemonnier and Delille, and made such considerable progress as to be able to undertake, before he had attained his nineteenth year, a series of observations for determining the moon's distance from the earth, at the ob servatory of Berlin. On his return to Paris, the Royal Academy, in token of their admiration of the manner in which he had completed his task, elected him a member of their body. His reputation as an astronomer was thus permanently fixed. In 1762 he became professor of astronomy at the College of France, and filled that office during forty-five years with the greatest success. None of his contemporaries surpassed him in presenting a succinet exposition of the science of astronomy. As an author, he was eminently. successful in conveying, in a clear and popular manner, the truths of his favourite science to the ordinary reader. He was an industrious observer, and contributed largely to the scientific memoirs of the French Academy. His principal works were, "Treatise on Astronomy," "Reflections on Eclipses of the Sun," "Compendium of Historical and Astronomical Navigation," "Astronomy for Ladies," "Letter on Saturn's Ring," and "Astronomical Biblio-graphy." B. at Bourg, in the department of Ain, 1732; p. at Paris, 1807.

LALLI, John Baptist, lal'-le, an Italian poet, who was employed by the duke of Parma and who was employed by the direct of retriffs and the pope in the government of several cities. He wivele, among other works, "The Nefarious French," "Jerussiem Forlorn," and the "Mneid Travestie." In at Norein, 1572; D. at Norsino, in Umbria, 1637.

LALIX, Thomas Arthur, Count de, Ial-Is, a distinction of the property was conversely the converse of the property was conversely and the conversely and the conversely was conversely and the conversely and the conversely was conversely and the conversely and th

LALLY, Thomas Arthur, Count de, lat-le, a distinguished French general, was sprung from an Irish family that had followed James II, to France. He signalized himself at the battle of Fontenoy, and was appointed brigadier in the field by Louis XV. In 1756 he was sent to the East Indies as governor of the French posses-sions. He took Gondalore and Fort St. David, but was defeated before Madras; on which he retired to Pondicherry, which he was obliged to reured to Fondischerry, which he was obliged to surrender to the English in 1761. On his arrival in France, he was accused of betraying French interests in India, and the popular clamour was so great that he was sent to the Instille, and afterwards tried by the Parliance, which condemned him to be beheaded, on the absurd change of having sold Pondischery to the enemy. He underwent his sentence with event dividuals in 1768. great fortitude, in 1766.

LALLY TOLLENDAL, Marquis de, son of the above, was educated at the College of Harcourt. He wrote, when only 15, a Latin poem on the story of John Calas, who had been sacrificed to the tury of a mob; and when he had attained a more mature age, warmly exerted himself to retrieve from obloquy the memory of his father; a consister in the current in the Tauterre, but on reaching manhood lost his the furry of a mob; and when he had attained fine voice, and applied himself to the study of a more mature age, warmly exerted himself to the violin, in hopes of being employed by Lulli retrieve from obloquy the memory of his father; at the opera; but, being refused, he broke his and in 1783 regained possession of his pater-

LAMARTINE, ALPHONSE.

LAMORICIERE, GENERAL.

Lindseer, Sie Edwin.

LAVATER, JOHN GASPARD.

the States-general. He soon became one of the most popular members of the Constituent | Assembly, gave his support to the declaration of the rights of man proposed by Lafayette, and subsequently suggested as an amendment, that all citizens should be eligible to public employ-ments, which was adopted by acclamation. But though a democrat, he was not an anarchist, and proposed the British constitution as a model of government; but perceiving that principles prevailed at variance with his ideas of what was just, he resigned his seat in the Assembly, and just, he resigned his seat in the Assembly, and retired into Switzerland. He composed a work, entitled "Quintus Capitolinus," in which he reviewed the proceedings of the National Assembly, pointed out the faults of the constitution, and condemned the suppression of the higher orders of the state. Having returned to France in 1792, he was arrested and sent to the Abbaye, but, escaping the massacres which took place in the prisons in September, effected his escape to England, where he obtained a pension from the government. On the trial of Louis XVI. he wrote to the Couvention to offer himself as he wrote to the Convention to other himself as the official advocate of that prince, and after-wards published the speech which he had com-posed in his defence. When Bonaparts became Consul, the marquis returned to France, where he resided till the restoration of the Bourbons in 1814. He accompanied Louis XVIII. to Ghent, as one of the members of his privy council, and is supposed to have drawn up the manifesto of the king to the French nation. He wrote an excellent work, entitled "The Defence of the Emigrants," published in 1796; also an "Essay on the Life of the Earl of Straf-

also an "Essay on the Lift of the Earl of Straf-ford, the Minister of Charles I," and a tragedy on the fat of that nobleman. B. 1751; p. 1830. Lamarcz, Jean Baptiste Pierre Antoine de Monet, Chevalier de, Id-mark, an eminent French lotenist and zoologist, served for some time under Marshal de Broglie, but quitted the carcer of arms for that of science. He at first devoted himself to botany, and made the acquaintance of Buffon, who greatly assisted him. In 1779 he became a member of the Andenny of Sciences and was desnathlyd on a Academy of Sciences, and was despatched on a travelling tour over Europe to collect rure specimens of plants for the Jardin du Roi. In specimens of piants for the 3-ratin au Rol. In 1794 he was appointed professor of zoology in that institution, a post he retained until his death. His principal works were "The Natural History of Invertebrate Animals," and the "French Flora." He also wrote botanical articles for the "Encyclopédic Méthodique." B. 1744; D. at Paris, 1829.

B. 1744; B. at Faris, 1832.

LAMARQUE, Maximilien, Comte de, la'-mark, a distinguished French officer and statesman, entered the army as a private, and soon became captain of grenadiers in a famous corps commanded by Latour d'Auvergne, first grena-dier of France. He served in the wars of the republic, and in the campaigns of Austriltz, the Tyrol, Naples, and Wagram; rendered him-self eminently conspicuous in Italy, especially by the capture of Caprea; and was afterwards sent to Spain, where he added to his military reputation. On the return of Bonaparte from Elba, he conferred on Lamarque the command of Paris, and afterwards nominated him general-nal estates. Previously to the Revolution, he 1818, and wrote numerous articles for the was captain of cuirassiers; and in 1789 was opposition journals, chiefly relating to forcein nominated deputy from the nobility of Paris, to polities. In 1826 he was elected to the Chamber of Deputies, and after the accession of Louis Philippe, became a leading member of the progressive party. B. 1770; D. 1832.

LAMARTINE, Alphonse, la'-mar-teen, an illustrious French poet, whose family name was Du Prat, but he assumed that of Lamartine from a maternal uncle. His father was a major of cavalry in the royal service, and was imprisoned during the Reign of Terror; but, after the fall of Robespierre, the family retired to their country seat at Milley, where the future poet received his first education, in the midst of a domestic serenity he afterwards depicted in his "Confidences." He was subsequently sent to finish his studies at Belley, with the "Pères de la Foi." After a short sojourn at Lyons, he made Fol." After a snore sojourn as byons, ne mane his first visit to Italy; and, towards the close of the Empire, repaired to Paris, where he devoted himself to study, to the composition of verse, and to social enjoyment. On the exile of Napoleon to Elba, he took military service under Louis XVIII.; but after the Hundred Days, he left the military for alterary career. He visited Italy for the second time in 1818. In He visited Italy for the second time is 181. In 1820 his fame suddenly and unexpectedly commenced; in that year he produced a small and modest volume, for which he could hardly find a publisher; this was entitled "Meditations Poetiques." With the exception of some translations from Byron, French literature had, for a considerable period, been without anything like sentimental or impassioned poetry. Accordingly, this new style of verse was received with universal medications. universal admiration; 45,000 copies of the volume were sold in the course of four years, and its author was hailed as a great French puet, worthy to take rank with Beranger; the latter being the poet of imperialism and the Revolu-tion, the former that of religion and royalty. A diplomatic career next opened to the popular poet; he was appointed to a post at the French embassy at Florence, and afterwards became secretary of embassy at Naples and at London, where he married a young and beautiful English lady, who was possessed of a large fortune. About this time his maternal uncle made him About this faine his inherent under made him his heir, on condition that he should assume the name of Lamartine. He was next charge-d'affaires in Tuscany, when some remarks made by him in his "Derniter chant de Childe Harold," derogatory to Italian national character, led to a duel between himself and Colonel Pepé, afterwards celebrated as an Italian patriot general, wards celebrated as an italian patriot general, wherein the poet was dangerously wounded. He composed several poetical works while sojourning in Italy; among the rest, his "Nou-velles Meditations," first published in 1823; the "Mort de Socrate," and the "Harmonies Poé-tiques et Religieuses." In all these a strong religious sentiment and a spirit of loyalty to the Bourbons, as well as a bitter feeling towards sue nouroons, as weil as a bitter feeling towards the Empire and the Revolution, were displayed. He was recalled to France in 1829, and was elected a member of the Academic Française, the the outburst of the French Revolution of 1830, he was about to proceed to Greece, as minister plenipotentiary of Charles X. The new members in the Delivery of the Process of the monarch, Louis Philippe, offered to retain him in his appointment, but Lamartine declined. events which had brought about the fall of in-chief of the army of La Vendée. He was the elder Bourbons produced a profound im-proscribed in 1815; but returned to France in pression on his enthusiastic spirit. He had

Lamartin

Lamb

from power by a succession of foolish acts. This year was to prove the turning point of his career. He was henceforth to commence a life enreer. He was henceforth to commence a life of political activity; his career as a poet may almost be said to have ended at this time, for, except "Jocelyn," "La Chute d'un Ange," and a few songs, he wrote no more verse. As a politician and a prose writer, he resolved to spend the remainder of his life. Speaking of this crists in his career, he said, "The past may be regretted, but the day must not be wasted in dile tears. I wish to enter the ranks of the people; to think, speak, act with them." He now sought to obtain a seat in the Chamber of Deputies, and successively presented himself as candidate for the suffrages of Toulon and Dunkirk, but without success. Prevented for the time from taking an active part in political affairs, he resolved to repair to the land of his aspirations and his dreams, the East. In 1832 he set sail from Marseilles, with his wife and daughter, on board a vessel which he had himself equipped, carrying with him a collection of princely presents for the chiefs of the lands he was about to visit. He travelled in oriental was about to visit. He traveled in ordered countries for sixteen months, but was recalled, just as he had reached Jerusalem, by the news that he had been elected deputy by the Legitimist constituency of Bergues. He was now actively engaged in politics, and soon became a leader of the "Progressive Conservative" party; but, in 1845, he openly expressed his dislike for the government of Louis Philippe and his minister Guizot, which he characterized as one of "vulgar utility." He became an influential member of the opposition party. It may be mentioned, by the way, that his greatest oratorical achievements in the Chamber of Deputies, up to this period, had been his speeches on Eastern questions, on the abolition of the punishment of death, and against M. Arago in defence of literary studies. He wrote, too, at the same period, many small works expressive of his opinions on passing events. In 1835 he published his celebrated "Souvenirs. Impressions, Pensées, et Paysages pendant in voyage en Orient," which was almost as popular in an English translation,—"Pictures of the in an English constant, returnes of the East," as in its original language. His great effort, however, during the last years of Louis Philippe's reign, was the "History of the Girondins," which had an immense influence in producing the fall of the minister Guizot, and in bringing about the Revolution of 1848. During that eventful period, Lamartine became one of the most prominent, if not the most prominent, man of the day. It was owing to his eloquence that the Chamber of Deputies refused a compromise between the Revolution and the Orleans family. He risked his life in withstanding the demands of the leaders of the withstanding the demands of the leaders of the insurgents and their followers, that the red flag should be the colours of the new republic. "For myself," he said, "I will never consent to adopt it. The tricoloured flag has waved all over the wordt. I is identified with your liberties and your glory. The red flag has never waved but over the Champ de Mars, and has only been imbrued with the blood of the people." He became a member of the provisional excernment and the foreign minister of sional government, and the foreign minister of stonic government, and are foreign furtherser of the republic. He did good service to his country in that capacity, by preventing a gene-ral war of revolutionary interference, which 620

seen his much-loved Bourbon dynasty hurled the more violent revolutionists desired. His popularity during several months was immense: he was the particular idol of the middle classes, who beheld in him a bulwark between themselves and anarchy. Curiously enough, after a few months, his countrymen grew so indifferent few months, his country men grew so manuerent towards him, that it was with difficulty he was elected to the Chamber of Deputies. When his name was announced with that of Louis Naponame was amounted what that of Louis rappo-leon and Cavaignae for the office of president, he obtained by far the fewest votes of the trio. After the coup d'état of December, 1851, he retired from politics and devoted himself exclusively to literature. Indeed his means had become so straitened that a most strenuous effort had to be made by him to ward off total pecuniary ruin. A French critic observes of this circumstance, "Notwithstanding the illusory wealth bestowed upon him by the Sultan in the shape of territorial grants, notwith-standing the enormous sale of his works, notwithstanding the vast subscriptions started for his benefit in France and abroad, the ruin of his beuefit in France and abroad, the ruin of his fortune by public disturbances, and by his own life of princely munificence, has con-demued him to a species of literary drudgery to which he has nobly submitted, but in which he has consumed, in a number of ephemeral productions, more force and power of intellect than would have been required to produce three or four great and immortal works." In obedience to the call of pressing necessity, he was, after his retirement from political life, one of the most industrious authors in France. We can only particularize a few of his most important pro-ductions, these are: "The History of the Revo-lution of 1848," "Raphael," "Les Confidences," sia," and "Fresh Travels in the East." Most of these have been translated into English and the other European languages. He was the proprietor and director of two newspapers, the "Bien Publique," published at Macon, and the "Pays," published at Paris. His poetical and prose works have been collected and republished in several forms; but, in addition to these, he produced numerous pamphlets and political effusions. B. at Macon, 1792; p. 1869.

LAMB, Lady Caroline, lim, dane/her of the End of Besborough, and wife of the Hon. William Lamb, afterwards Lord Melbourne, was distinguished for her literary talents and the decided part she took in political affairs, particularly at the time her brother-in-law, the Hon. Goo. Lamb, was a candidate for Westminster, when she personally canvassed the electors, when she personally canvassed the electors, and made herself the subject of great notoriety. She possessed a masculine mind, and was on terms of friendship with several literary characters, but more especially with Lord Byron, for whom she entortained an attachment fatal to her domestic happiness. She wrote the novels of "Glenarvon," Graham Hamilton," and "Ada Reis," besides contributing to various newspapers and periodicals. n. 1786, p. 1828. LAMB, Charles, a distinguished English

Laur, Charles, a distinguished English essayist and humorist, was the son of a click to Mr. Sait, a bencher of the Inner Temple, in which legal stronghold he first saw the light. He was sent at an early age to Christ's Hospital, where Coleridge was his schoolfellow. Reared in the very heart of the metropolis, he throughout life evinced a strong perception, the splandows, qualidness, excitement, an oddities of the great world of London. "often shed tears," he said, "in the motie Strand, for fulness of joy at so much life." Ar impediment in his speech prevented his gaining an exhibition at the university, and, i 1792, he became a clerk in the India House, post he retained during hirty-three years With the exception of one terrible circum stance, his life was very uneventful. In 1796 his sister, worn out by constant toll at hen needle, as well as weakened in nerves by connecting the strong the strong the strong three strong the strong three stro throughout life evinced a strong perception needle, as well as weakened in nerves by con finement, took her mother's life in an uncon trollable fit of frenzy. Her insanity being established, she was allowed to remain in the charge of her brother, a duty which Lamb re ligiously fulfilled to the end of his life. Sh subsequently recovered her reason, and he brother, who was never married, passed his days with her, both evincing the utmost affec tion and devotedness to each other. He first appeared as an author in a small book of poems appends as a water in siniar over poems published in conjunction with Coleridge and Llayd. Although this was severely handled by the "Anti-Jacobin," Lamb was not deterred from authorship; for, some time afterwards, he produced a drama, entitled "John Woodvill." His delightful "Essays of Elia," upon which his fame mainly rests, were first printed in the "London Magazine." He was highly esteemed by a large intellectual circle, among which may by a large intellectual circle, among which may be named his life-long friend Coleridge, Leigh Hunt, Southey, Rogers, and Talfourd. The last gentleman published "Lamb's Letters, and "Final Memorals," in 1848; and those who would fully appreciate his captivating essays, and morsels of autobiography scattered the contraction of the cont through his writings, should consult these tributes to a genial and estimable man. His combutes to a genial and estimable man. His complete works include two volumes of verse, the Essays of Elia," and "Specimens of English Dramatic Poets who lived about the time of Shakspeare." The "Farewell to Tobacco," "Essay on Roast Pig." Christ's Hospital thirty years ago," and the "Old Benchers of Lincoln's Inn." may be mentioned as representative bits of his refined, quaint, casy humour. In one of the last essays of "Elia" he records his feelings on being released from drudgery at the India Hospi in a delichtful drudgery at the India House in a delightful manner. The paper is called "The Superan-nuated Man;" and the event happened in 1825. huated Man; and the event happened in Assat His death was the consequence of what was at first thought but a slight accident. For quaint, genial, and unconventional humour, Lamb has, perhaps, never been excelled. B. in London, 1775; D. at Edmonton, 1834.

Lambert

Lamp. Sir James Bland Burges, D.C.L., the son of George Burges, Eq., comptroller of customs in Scotland, was educated at Oxford, and after travelling on the continent, was called to the bar in 1777. In 1787 be became M.F. for Helston, Comwall; and in 1789 was appointed under-secretary for Foreign Affairs. He about this date established the "Sun" evening newspaper, and for a time fook an active share in conducting it. His contributions to this journal were signed "Alfred," and were collected into a volume in 1792. He was created a barnout in 1793, and was named for life knightmarshal of the royal household, and spent the residue of his life in literary pursuits, producing numerous works on the drama, poetry, politics, &c. In 1821 he was allowed to assume the name of Lamb, by which he was subsequently known. B. 1752; D. 1825.

LAMMALN, Maria Theresa Louisa, of Savoy-Carignan, Princess de, Lam'bal, was married to the duke de Bourbon-Penthièrre, but became a widow in the flower of youth and beauty. Being appointed, in 1774, superintendent of the household to Marie-Autoinette, queen of France, she became the particular favourite of that unfortunate princess. On the flight of Louis XVI, and his family, she came to Bugland; her attachment, however, to the queen was so great that she returned to France, and entered the prison of the Temple with her royal friend. She was draged thence to La Force, and alastly, in September, 1782, brought before a ferocious tribunal, where she was butchered with sabres, her head and breasts cut off and her heart taken out. These, borne on pikes, were carried about in savage triumph, and inhumanly taken to the king and his family. 2. at Turin, 1749.

LASTARD, William, lam'-bord, an English lawyer and antiquary, who published a collection and translation of the Anglo-Saxon laws and, in 1574, established an hospital for the poor at Greenwich. In 1579 he became justice of the peace for the county of Kent, and subsequently produced a work on the duties of his office, entitled "Eirenarcha." He also wrote "Archelon; or, a Discourse upon the High Courts of Justice in England," and collected materials for another work on Great Britain; but on finding that Camden was engaged upon a similar task, he abandoned his intention of publishing it. It was subsequently issued under the title of "Dictionarium Anglie Topographicum thistoricum." B. 1538; p. 1601.

LAMBERT, John, major-general in the parliamentary army in the reign of Charles I, is tated to have been a student of law on the reaking out of the struggle between the King and the Parliament; but, joining the popular standard, he became a colonel, distinguished himself at the battle of Naseby and in Fife, and assisted Cromwell in his advancement to the Protectorate, but opposed his taking the title of king. For this, Cromwell deprived him of its commission, but, from prudential motives, cranted him a pension of £2000 a year. Being ivested of all employment, be withdrew into private life, but, on the death of the Protector, was chosen by the Rump Parliament to recrease the royalist insurrection. A short time reviously he took an active part in deposing tichard Cromwell; for which services he was appointed one of the council of state, and colonel a regiment of horse. The Parliament, how-wer, growing jealous of his influence with the army, directed him to resign his commission; this he absolutely refused to do, and, marching > London, dispersed the assembly by force, in the cottoer, 1639. He was then appointed major-eneral of the army, and sent to command the roces in the north; but General Monk having lefeated him, and restored the Parliament, how-most dependent of the force of the Parliament, he as deserted by his army, submitted, and was ommitted to the Power. At the Restoration was deserted by his army, submitted, and was ommitted to the Tower. At the Restoration was closer to the parliament, he unersey, where he remained during upwards fullity years. B, about 1620; D, at Guernsey, 592.

LAMBERT, George, an English artist who osely imitated the style of Poussin, and produced some pictures of considerable merit. him to acquire, almost unassisted, a consider-He was engaged in decorating the India House, in Leadenhall Street, with pictures of the Indian Settlements. He is believed to have been the founder of the famous Beef Steak Club. B. 1710; D. 1765.

LAMBERT, John Henry, an eminent German mathematician, who wrote a "Treatise on the Orbits of Comets," a "Treatise on the Properties of Light," and other works. He was an estimable man, and profoundly versed in the mathematical sciences, as known during his mathematical sciences, as known during its time. B. at Milhausen, Upper Alsatia, 1728; D. at Berlin, 1777. Lambeso, Charles Eugène de Loraine, Prince de, lam-besk, was the relative of Marie-Antoinette, whom he accompanied to France, and became colonel-proprietor of the royal German regiment. A determined enemy of the revolution, he charged the mob assembled at the Tuileries, in 1789, and wounded several persons with his own hand. He was afterwards tried for the act, but obtained an acquittal. Upon this, he left France, served in the Austrian army, and reached the grade of lieut.-fieldmar-He left no issue, and was the last representative of one branch of the house of Lorame.

B. 1751; D. at Vienna, 1825.

LAMBRUN, Margaret, limboron, a Scotch heroine, was a servant of Mary Stuart, a her husband, who died of grief for the death of that queen. Margaret resolved to avenge the death of her husband and mistress upon Elizabeth, and, to accomplish her purpose, assumed a man's habit, and repaired to the English court; but, as she was pushing through a crowd to get near the queen, she dropped one of her pistols, This being observed, she was seized and brought before Elizabeth, who examined her strictly, and Margaret replied, "Madam, though I appear in this habit, I am a woman. I was several years in the service of Queen Mary, whom you have unjustly put to death; you have also caused that of my husband, who died of grief to see his innocent queen perish so iniquitously.

able store of knowledge. In 1807 he became teacher of mathematics in the College of St Malo, and, in the following year, produced his first work, entitled "Reflections on the State of the Church in France during the 18th State of the Chiter in France during size ion (Century," In 1811 he assumed the tonsure; in 1814 he went to Paris, where he wrote a pamphlet against Napoleon I., then in exile at Elba, for which he was forced to make his at bing, for which he was lored to make his occape from the capital during the Hundred Days. He went to England, where he resided for some time as usher at a school in the vici-nity of London. In 1816 he returned to France, and was ordained a priest. His remarkable "Essay on Indifference in matters of Religion" appeared the following year, and produced a profound impression. He visited Rome several years afterwards, and was offered a cardinal's hat by Leo XII., but declined the honour During the French revolution of 1830 he warmly embraced the democratic cause, declaimed against the temporal abuses of the Church, and in "L'Avenir." with Lacordaire and Montalemm b Avelir, with Lacordine and Montagen-bert (see Lacordaire), while he defended the interests of the Roman Catholic Church, desired that religion should be "regenerated" by being brought home to the bosoms of the lower classes, since the educated people had grown indifferent to its truths. He advocated the separation of the temporal from the spiritual separation of the Chirch. These views cycked a remonstrance from the Holy See; upon which the journal was suppressed. In 1834 he pro-duced his "Paroles d'un Croyant," a work which completely shut him out from the ranks of the Roman Catholic clergy. The pope condemned the book, but the republican party necepted its author as an apostle of civil and religious liberty. In 1840, for his "Pays et le Gouvernement," he was sentenced to undergo a year's imprisonment. He subsequently wrote other works, all expressing his views with the old earnestness and eloquence. Before his death, every effort was made to cause him to retract, but without this design, but in vain: I found myself necessitated to prove by experience the truth of the maxim, that reason nor force can hinder a woman from vengeance, when she is impelled by love." The queen calmly heard this dis-course, and answered: "You are then persuaded that in this action you have done your duty, and satisfied the demands which your love for your mistress and your spouse required from you; but what think you is my duty to do to you?" Margaret asked if this question was put as a what assurance can you give," said the queen,

"that you will not repeat the attempt?"
"Madam," Lambrun rejoined, "a favour which is given under restraints is no favour when so doing, your majesty would act as a judge."

The queen was so struck with her behaviour, that she gave her a pardon and a safe condret out of the kingdom.

out of the kingdom.

LAMENNAIS, Félicité Robert, Abbé de, lémen-nai, a celebrated French divine, was the son a shipowner at St. Malo, and was intended by his father to follow mercantile pur-to be printed according to their author's last wishes. I. at Saint Malo, 1742; D. 1854.

Lam, Giovanni, lat-me, an Italian author, who wrote in defence of the Nicenc creed against Leelere and others. In 1732 he became librarian of the Riccardi collection, and professor of rian of the incertal concessor, and processor we coclesiastical history at the Florence Lyceum. In 1740 he commenced the publication of a literary journal, called "Novelle Letterárie." He likewise made a selection of the incelted works contained in the Riccardi Library, and worss contained in the Ricearch Library, and published them under the title of "belief Eruditorum," in eighteen volumes. He had projected a History of the Eastern Churches from the Council of Florence, in 1439, but his death interrupted the plan. He was throughout life a warm opponent of the Jesuits. E. at Santa Croce, Tuscany, 1687; p., at Florence, 1770. 1770.

LAMORICIERE, Christophe Louis Juchault de, lu'-mo-riss'-e-uir, a celebrated French general, was educated for his profession at the Polytechnic School, between the years 1824-26, after men-vai, a celebrated French divine, was the which he passed to the school of Metz. In son a shipowner at St. Malo, and was in- 1830 he had reached the grade of lieutenant, tended by his father to follow mereantile pur- and subsequently, in the African war, he rose suits; but an unconquerable love of learning led | with great rapidity. He was appointed captain of the Zouaves on the organization of that corps, and, in 1837, had risen to the rank of colonel. He was wounded by the explosion of a mine at the siege of Constantine; after a short sojourn at Paris, he returned to Africa, where he distinguished himself on several occasions. In 1844 he became commander of the sons. In 1934 he became commander of the Legion of Honour, and was appointed tempo-rary governor of Algeria. Under Marshal Bugeaud, between the years 1841-45, he dis-played the highest qualities of a commander, played the nignest quantees of a communer, and terminated his career two years later, by skilfully surrounding Abd-el-Kader, and causing him to surrender himself prisoner to the due d'Aumale. During the revolution of 1848, he rode amongst the insurgents in the costume of a colonel of the National Guard, proclaimed the abdication of Louis Philippe, and the regency of the duchess of Orleans; but his horse was killed and himself wounded, and he narrowly escaped death at the hands of the mob. The provideath at the hands of the mob. The provi-sional government offered him the office of minister of war, which he refused. In the insurrection of June, he acted under Cavaignac, and fought against the insurgents at the Bastile, and elsewhere. At the time of the election of President, he was sitting in the Legislative Assembly, and offered no opposition to the new head of the nation. In 1819, on the Russian intervention in Hungary, he was dispatched on an extraordinary mission to the court of on an extraordinary mission to the court of Russia, but did not arrive until after the Hun-garians had been subdued. On again taking his seat in the Legislative Assembly, he became a streamous opponent of the President and his party. On the coup d'dud of December, 1851, he was arrested and at first conducted to Ham, but afterwards released, and conducted as far as Cologne by the agents of the police. He then took up his residence at Brussels, where he usually continued to live up to the year 1860, when Monsignor Merode, one of the pope's household, and formerly a soldier, sought him in his retreat, and induced him to undertake in his recreat, and induced him to undertake the chief command of the papal troops, a task he commenced with great zeal, but without accomplishing anything of note, the papal troops having been completely defeated and dispersed by Cialdini at Castelfidardo, Ancona, dispersed by Glaldini at Castelfidardo, Ancona, and elsewhere. In at Nantes, 1806; p. 1805.

La Morra, Antoine Hondar de, Lo-mor, and was educated for the legal profession; but having a love for dramatic composition, resolved to devote himself entirely to the theatre, In 1693 he produced his first drama-tiles of the control of the con subsequently wrote a number of comedies and tragedies, which obtained some success; only one of them, however, keeping possession of the stage—the tragedy of "Inez de Castro," praised by Voltaire. Lamotte became a member of the French Academy, and was appointed dramatic censor. But he is chiefly remarkable for his presumptuous attempt to translate the Illad of Homer, without any knowledge of Greek. By way of improving that poem, he abridged is to twelve cantos, and added to it a discourse, in which he stated that the admiration for Homer and other ancient writers was only a prejudice of the time. About the age of 40 he became blind, and lost the use of his limbs. B. at Paris, passion of Cardinal Rohan for Queen Marie-Antomette, suggested to the prelate the idea of purchasing for that princess a magnificent diamond necklace. She engaged herself to deliver the present to the queen, and to procure for the cardinal an interview with her. For this she was, in 1785, convicted of imposture and swindling, and was condemned to make and swindling, and was condemued to make honourable amends with a cord about her neek, to be whipped and branded, and to be confined in La Salpetiriero. She found means of making her escape, and took refuge in England, where she printed a book containing reflections Queen Marie-Antoinett's moral character. 2.

1672; p. 1731. LAMOTTE, Jeanne de Valois, Countess de, a lady, who, becoming aware of the ridiculous, 623

Queen Maric-Antoinette's moral character. B. at Bar-sur-Antoinette's moral character. As the Marie Treiber of the himself entered the Prussian army in 1796, but after serving for some time, and attaining the rank of major, he resigned, in consequence of illhealth. Thereupon he retired to his estate of Nennhausen, near Rathedow, and devoted him-self to literature. Under the pseudonym of Pellegrin, he published a translation of the "Numantia" of Cervantes, as well as several poems; the novel of "Alwin," and the "History of the noble Knight Galmy and a beautiful Duchess from Brittany." He subsequently proceeded to write a succession of poems and novels of great freshness and power, chiefly in the style of the old German poets, or founded upon the olden Northern mythology. apon the olden Northern mythology. In 1818 he gave to the world his exquisite tale, "Undie," which has been reproduced in every European language, and has become an establishment. lished favourite, in virtue of its feeling and fancy, and the decided originality of its construction. During the thirteen subsequent years he produced poems, dramas, and novels, all imbued with a romantic and chivalric feeling. In 1840 was published his "Tidings for the forman Nobility, and, son after his death, a work entitled "Apostasy and Repentance; or, the Looking-glass of the Soul." He edited a selection of his works, in twelve volumes, in 1841. B. at Brandenburg, 1777; D. at Berlin, 1843.

LAMOUROUX, Jean Vincent, la'-moo-roo, a French naturalist, who devoted himself to the French naturalist, who devoted himself to the study of marine productions, animal and vegetable, and was professor of natural history at Cean. He wrote many treatiess for the "Classical Dictionary of Natural History," and composed a dictionary of Zoophytes for the "Encyclopédie Méthodique." In 1817 he described a new variety of wheat, which was afterwards cultivated with success in the northern provinces. of France, under the name of ble lamma, B. at Agen, France, intre the mane of the team. A. A. Agen, France, 1779; D. at Caen, 1825.

LAMPLUGH, Thomas, $\tilde{L}imp^i - \tilde{L}u_i$ an English prelate. He took part with the Presbytarians in the civil war, but conformed at the Restoration. tion, and became D.D., principal of Alban Hall, and vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. In 1676 he was ordained bishop of Exeter. When the Prince of Orange landed, the bishop made a speech to the clergy and gentry, exhorting them to be loyal to James, who gave him the arch-bishopric of York. Notwithstanding this, he took the oaths to William and Mary. n. in Yorkshire, 1615; n. at Thorp Castle, 1691. LAMPRIDIUS, Ælius, läm-prid-e-ue, a Roman historian of the 4th century, who wrote the dentally, by copying a group of fruit as a study lives of the emperors Commodus, Antoninus of colour. Indeed, as a copyist, he was exceeding the colour of the "Boar Hunt," and the colour of the "Boar Hunt," the wonderful restoration of the "Boar Hunt,"

Landen

Augusta

LANA, Francis de, la'-na, an Italian mathe-LANA, Francis de, la-na, an Italian matne-matician, who is stated to have been the first to conceive the idea of aërostation, and to have described the subject in a work called "Magiste-rium Nature et Artis," published at Brescia, in 1684. A particular dissertation on the subject, entitled "Navis Volans," tending to abute the claims of Montgolifer to this discovery was published, from Lana's work, at Naples, in 1784, B. at Brescia, 1631; p. 1687.

LANCASTER, Sir James, län'käs-ter, an Eng-lish navigator, who, in 1591, sailed as commander of a squadron to the East Indies, where he touched at Ceylon and Sumatra, and, after taking several vessels and losing some of his own, shaped his course for England; but in the own, snaped ins course for England; but if the voyage, meeting with adverse winds, he was driven on the coast of America. He landed on a small island, and the crew, taking advantage of his absence, cut the cable, and sailed for England; land. He afterwards obtained a passage on board a French ship, and arrived at Rye in 1594. He went out again with another fleet, with which he committed many depredations on the coast of Brazil, and took the town of Pernambuco, where he obtained immense treasure, which he brought to England in 1595. He next commanded the fleet sent out by the newlyestablished East India Company, and obtained the grant of a settlement at Acheen, and also at Bantam, after which he returned to England. He maintained the existence of a north-west passage, and encouraged many attempts to dis-cover it during his lifetime, and was knighted by Queen Elizabeth for his services. D. 1620.

LANCASTER, Joseph, was the founder of the Lancasterian schools in most parts of the civilized Lancasterian scincois in most parties of the civilization world. Before he had attained his nineteenth year, he set up a school for poor children in a room lent him by his father, in the Boroughroad, Southwark, and, in a short time, had ninety children under his charge. He continued his philanthropic effort of disseminating education among the lowest classes, and, in 1805, was honoured with an audience by George III., who said, "I wish that every poor child in my domi-nions may be able to read his Bible." The Established Church made him many overtures, which he, as a member of the Society of Friends, was constrained to decline. Almost unaided, he travelled over the United Kingdom, and lectured to upwards of $0,000 people on the system which he had organized: this system consisted in teaching the elements of education by mutual or monitorial instruction Becoming insolvent, he emigrated to the United States in 1818, and pursued his educational efforts with much suc-cess in that country. He visited Canada in 1829, and obtained several grants from the Par-liament of Lower Canada in furtherance of his educational projects. He became embarrassed in his means once more; but his friends subscribed to purchase a small annuity for him.

sorbed to purchase a small annuity for him, by in London, 1771; n. at. New York, 1838. " Lancs, George, Cance, a modern English painter, celebrated for his fruit-pices and stilllife productions, studied high or historical art under Haydon; but it was not until he had discovered where his true powers lay that he made any marked progress. This he did acci-by Velasquez, now in the National Gallery, and which had been injured by a clumsy "restorer," to whom it had been intrusted to clean.

Almost from the first moment of his bringing his skill to bear on the peculiar line of art for which he afterwards became distinguished which he arrevated became usingusteen Lance proved that a great painter in an original line had appeared. For many years, he sent to the exhibitions of the British Institution and the Enionions of the British institution and the Royal Academy productions marked by skilful composition, brilliant colour, and har-monious effects. His "Fruit," "Game," "Just Shot," "Fresh from the Lake, "Just Gathered," and a host of similar works, have charmed heand a host of similar works, have enarmed be holders, as splendid reproductions of grapes, melons, fruit, flowers, dead birds, game, or hish. The Vermon collection contains three good examples of his manner—"Fruit," 1882; Fruit," 1818; and "Red-cap," n. at Little Easton, Escox, 1802; D. 1861.

Lindslot, Dom Claude, Jance'-lof, a cell-bated examplation, who hopems probeses at

brated grammarian, who became professor at Port Royal in 1638, and composed for the use of the pupils a series of excellent works. shared in the persecutions to which the estab-lishment of Port Royal was subjected, on account of its attachment to Jansenism. He account of its attachment to Jansenson. He wrote "New Method of Learning the Latin Language," generally known as the Port Royal Latin Grammar; "Greek Grammar," "Greek Roots," "Italian Grammar," and other works. B. at Paris, 1615; D. at Quimperié,

1695

LANCISI, Giovanni Maria, lan-che'-se, a learned Italian, who studied medicine, chemistry, botany, and geometry with equal success. He was physician to popes Innocent XII, and Clement XI, and was the author of several valuable his death, he left to the hospital of San Spirito, at Rome, a library of 20,000 volumes, on condition that it should be free to the public. n. at Rome, 1654; p. 1720.

LANCEINCE, Prosper H mry, lan-krink, a painter of the British school, though of Flemish birth. He was well educated, having been birth. He was well educated, having been originally designed for the Church, but on indicating a love for art, was allowed to follow the bent of his genius. After studying under various masters in his own country, and making great progress, especially in landscape, where he took Titian and Salvator Rosa for his models, he went to England, and was employed by persons of distinction. He also assisted Sir Peter Lely in painting the accessories-such as grounds, landsenpes, ornaments, draperies, &c.
—in his principal pictures. Lancrinck was particularly happy in his skies, and his landscapes were also much admired for the invention, and harmony and warmth of colour, they displayed. F. 1628; D. 1692.

Linder, James, län'-den, an English mathe-matician, was a self-taught genius, and acquired a profound knowledge of abstract mathematics. He wrote some curious papers in the "Philosophical Transactions," and in 1755 published a volume called "Mathematical Lucubrations." He was appointed agent to Earl Fitzwilliam, which position he held till within two years of this death. In 1768 he was chosen a fellow of the Royal Society. He published two volumes of "Mathematical Memoirs," full of curious and original theorems. p. at Peakirk, near Peterborough, 1719; p. at Melton, 1709. LANDER, Richard and John, lan-der, two brothers, whose names are associated with African discovery, were both appronticed to a printer; but the elder abandoned his cocupation. printer; but the elder abandoned his occupation to accompany Clasperton in his expedition to the Niger in 1935; and after his death, in 1827, returned to England, where he submitted to government a plan for exploring the Niger, which was adopted. Accompanied by his younger brother, he set out for Badagry in 1830, and, after encountering many dangers, they reached Kirree, but were taken prisoners at Eboe, and only, after the promise of a high ransom, succeeded in getting arrangements ransom, succeeded in getting arrangements made for conveying them to the sea. This they reached by the channel called by the Portuguese Nun, and by the English Brass River; and Aun, and by the English Brass River; and thus solved one of the grandest problems in African geography. This important discovery, opening a water communication into the very heart of the African continent, made a great impression on the mercantile world; and soon after the brothers' arrival in England, an association was formed for making a settlement on the Upper Niger; but the expedition fitted out for this purpose at Liverpool, in 1832, proved a failure; and the Landers, together with nearly all that joined it, fell victims either to the unhealthiness of the climate, or in contests with the natives, in 1833. Richard was born in 1804, and John in 1806, in Cornwall, LANDON, Letitia Elizabeth, lün'-don, generally known as L. E. L., an English poetess, who at the early age of thirteen displayed a vivid and inventive imagination, and produced several small poems. Her father was an army agent, and resided at Brompton, where he had for a neighbour Mr. Jerdan, the editor of the "Literary Gazette." She submitted some of her poetical effusions to that gentleman, who pub-lished them in his journal, in 1820. These first efforts were soon followed by others in the same paper, and were received with a considerable amount of attention. Her father dying soon after, and leaving his family in reduced circumstances, Miss Landon devoted herself to litestances, ans Landon devoted herself to literature, as a means of supporting herself and assisting her relatives. Her poems in the "Literary Gazette," signed L. E. L., were not eagerly looked for, and excited great admiration. She likewise wrote criticisms of poetry and works of footies for the Coarties and works of footies for the Coarties. tion. She likewise wrote criticisms of poetry and works of fiction for the Gazette, and, as Mr. Jerdam afterwards stated, her labours for the print were little less than his own. With respect to her poems, "The Fate of Adelaide, a Swiss Romantic Tale," was published in 1821. This, her first collection, was followed by "The Improvisatore," "The Troubadour," "The Golden Violet," and others. At that period the annuals were popular, and to these L. E. L. con-tributed larevie. She was less successful as a tributed largely. She was less successful as a novelist than as a poet, for her three works of fiction, "Romance and Reality," "Francesca Carrara" and "Ethel Churchill," were soon for-gotten. In 1838 she was married to Mr. gotten. In 1838 she was married to ma. George Maclean, the governor of Cape Coast Castle. She left England with her husband then a vear was found lying on the floor of her apartment, dead. In her hand was a small philal that had contained prussic acid. At the inquest the jury discovered no cause for suspicion in her death, neither could it be thought that her end had been due to her own intentional act; for she had been in the habit of taking, according to her physician's advice, small doses of prussic acid, and she had, auvice, small doses of prussic acid, and she had, moreover, written to some female friends in London expressing herself perfectly happy and contented. As a poet she evinced a sentimental contented. As a poets are evinced a softmental and melancholy east of thought, but in private life she was of a lively and mirthful disposition. Her "Life and Literary Remains" were published by Laman Blanchard, in 1841. B. at Old Brompton, 1802; D. 1839.

LANDOR, Walter Savage, län'-dor, a modern English poet, essayist, and miscellaneous writer, was the son of Walter Landor, Esq., a wealthy landed proprietor, of ancient family. His mother was Miss Savage, a rich Warwick-His mother was Miss Savage, a rich Warwick-shire heiress. Watter Savage was educated at Rugby school and Trinity College, Oxford. The professions of the army and the law were successively proposed to him, and both in turn declined; he preferring to live an un-trammelled life of literary ease on the income allowed him by his father. At the close of the last century, just as Burns, Words-worth, Coleridge, Rogers, and other great writers, were appearing on the poetical arena, Walter Savage Landor published his first volume of poems. In 1809 he went to Paris, where he of poems. In 1802 he went to Paris, where he witnessed the accession of Bonaparte to the consulship for life. On succeeding to the family estates, by the death of his father, he began by expending vast sums in buildings and improvements thereon; but, in a few years, he suddenly sold off all his property, some of which had been in his family's possession during 700 years, and went abroad, intending to become a citizen and went aproad, intenung to become a citizen of the world. During the struggle between the Spanish patriots and Napoleon I., he raised men, joined the former, and materially aided the Junta by gifts of money. He was appointed a colonel in the Spanish service; but, at a later period, when the restored king, Ferdinand, had overthrown the constitution which the Spaniards and obtained for themselves he resigned his overtnrown the constitution which the Spaniards and obtained for themselves, he resigned his commission, declaring that though "willing to aid the Spaniard he people in the assertion of their liberties against the antagonist of Europe, he would have nothing to do with a perjure and a traitor." He had married Miss Thuillier, a a trator. He fad married aiss intuiner, as young lady of Swiss extraction, residing at Bath, in the year ISI1; and, after the fall of Napoleon, he and his wife took up their residence at Florence, where he purchased some estates, there, during thirty years, he lived, making only a few visits to England at wide intervals. It was while a resident at Florence that he commended to the state of th posed his most important works. In 1820 he printed his "Idyllia Heroica," in Latin, at posed his most important worsh. In the printed his "Idylia Heroica," in Latin, at Pisa, Between the years 1824-29 he brought out, in London, his "Imaginary Conversations of Literary Men and Statesmen." In 1831 he orpoblished "Gebti," a poem, first produced in English, but translated by himself into Latin in 1813. In 1838 he published "A Satire on Satirists, and Admonition to Detractors," and the Felmalogue." Besides these, he wrote many inforter and less important works; his drams, "Andrew of Hungary" and "Giovanni of Naples," were first published in 1839. His latest productions were, "Last Fruit of an Old Tree," published in 1853, and "Letters of an American," first given to the world under the assumed name of Pottinger, in 1854.

Landseer

Altogether, Mr. Landor was one of the most engraver in the Royal Academy. Having considerable literary ability, he subsequently abandoned his profession to engage in controversy on art, and to deliver lectures. He started several publications, which met with only a short-lived success. Among others, he established "The Probe," in opposition to the "Art Journal." In 1834 he wrote a "Descriptive, Explanatory, and Critical Catalogue of the Earliest Pictures in the National Gallery," which contained some amusing matter, although the criticisms therein contained were of little value. His best engraving was from his celebrated son's "Dogs of Mount St. Bernard." Indeed Mr. Landseer is more remembered as the father of the greatest English animal-painter, than for any particular merits of his own. B. at Lincoln, 1769; p. 1852.

AIROGENER, AIR, LAMIOR WAS ONE Of the MOST remarkable English writers the ninctecuth cen-tury produced. B. 1776; D. 1864. LANGBLE, LOUG. (See DICKERSENER, Henry.) LANGBLE, John, And. sec., an eminent bug-lish engraver, who was a pupil of Byron, and in 1788 attracted some notice by his engravings of Technologies. Loutherbourg's vignettes for Maclise's lible.

LANDSEER, Thomas, an English mezzotint engraver, and eldest son of the preceding. He is known as the engraver of Sir Edwin Landseer's pictures, and for his spirited etchings, called "Monkeyana." The most important of his later works was his engraving of Rosa Bon-heur's "Horse Fair." B. near the end of the last century.

LANDSRER, Charles, R.A., a modern English painter, and brother of the preceding, painted many pictures of merit, chiefly illustrative of the works of popular poets and novelists. He was elected an academician in 1845, and six years afterwards became keeper of the Royal Academy, B. 1799.

LANDSEER, Sir Edwin, R.A., an illustrious member of the English school of artists, was the son of John Landseer and brother of the preceding. From his earliest years he evinced extraordinary skill as a draughtsman, and when only fourteen exhibited successful pictures of terriers, spaniels, horses, and other small sub-jects. Under his father's direction he was in the habit of sketching sheep, donkeys, and other animals, on Hampstead Heath; and to this early familiarity with nature we may attribute early immunity with meater we may attracted this wonderful skill and fidelity, as exhibited in his pictures during after-life. When he was 18, he painted "The Dogs of Mount St. Bernard," and from that time became the leading English animal-painter. Although so early successful, he never lost the habits of a student, but went on increasing in power year after year. He became a Royal Academician in 1830. Sir Edwin's pictures are familiar to thousands of his countrymen, through the medium of scores of engravings. To mention even the most important of ings. To mention even the most important of his works would require a great deal of space; but a fair idea of his wonderful powers may be eathered by all who have visited the Brompfan Museum, where lang the "Peaco" and "War," "High Life" and "Low Life," "Highland Music" and the "Dying Stag." In almost every phintseller's window we may see "The Return from Deer-Stalling," "Jack in Office," "Bolton Abbey in the Olden Time," "Return from 669.

Langeland

Hawking," "A Distinguished Member of the Royal Humane Society," "A Piper and a Pair of Nuterackers," "Bottom and Titania," etc., etc. The colossal bronze lions at the foot of the

The colossal bronze ions at the 100t of the Nelson Column in Traflajar Square were modelled by Sir E. Landseer. n. 1802. Laxs, Jane, Ivin, an English herome, who was the principal instrument in effecting the escape of Charles II., after the battle of Woccester. That monarch, disguised in her factors. cester. That monarch, disguised in the cester in the set of Mr. Lane, about twelve miles from Boscobel Wood, in which twelve miles from Boscobel Wood, in which the cester is the set of th Norton's, near Bristol; and thence he went to Brighton, where he embarked for France. She was well rewarded at the Restoration, and mar-ried Sir Clement Fisher, a baronet of Warwickshire.

LANGRANC, län'-fränk, archbishop of Canterbury, whose early manhood was spent as an advocate in the law courts of Pavia; after which he went to France, and established a school at Avanches, which was attended by students of the highest rank. On a journey to Rouen, he was robbed and left bound in a wood. Some peasants released him, and conveyed him to the abbey of Bee, where he was so kindly treated, that he became a monk therein, and, in three years, was chosen prior. William, duke of Normandy, gave him the abbey of St. Stephen, at Caen, and, after the conquest of England, advanced him to the archbishopric of Canterbury. In 1071 he went to Rome to receive the pallium from Pope Alexander II. He rebuilt the cathedral of Canterbury, and founded several churches and hospitals. He wrote against Berenger on the Eucharist, and other works, which were published at Paris, 1648. B. at Pavia, 1005; D. 1089

LANGBAINE, Gerard, lung'-bain, a learned divine, who rose from the position of servitor to be fellow of Queen's College, Oxford. He edited "Longinus," and several other learned works. In 1615 he was chosen provost of his college, which, with the office of keeper of the archives, he held till his death. He was esteemed by Selden, Usher, till his death. He was esteemed by Solden, Usher, and other great men, his correspondence with whom has been printed. n. in Westmoreland, about 1609; n. 1653.—His son, Gerard Langbaine, made a collection of old plays, and published an "Appendix to the University Catalogue of Graduates," and "An Account of the English Dramatic Poets," n. at Oxford, 1669; n. 1693. LANGENGOS, James, Jamy-Lok, a learned Danish writer, who studied theology, and the modern languages with yould success. Fre-modern languages, with much success. Fre-deric V. employed him to travel in Sweden, to collect information relative to Danish history. He was also made keeper of the archives of the realm, councillor of justice, and councillor of state. His most important work is the histo-rical collection, entitled "Scriptores Rerum Decisions" in 1770 Daniearum," &c.

Daniearum," &c. B. 1710; D. 1774.

LANGDALE, Marmaduke, lang-dail, a gallant English gentleman, who, in the civil war, raised a troop in the king's service, gained some advantage over Fairiax, raised the siege of Pontefract Castle, and made himself master of Berwick and Carlisle. On the ruin of the royal cause, he went to Flanders, and was created, by cause, ne went to Francers, and was accompany. Charles II., Lord Langdale. D. 1661.

LANGELAND, Or LONGLAND, Robert, läng-länd, an old English poet, and one of the first disciples of Wickliffe, who distinguished himself by a curious poem, entitled "The Visions of Piers differences between the Church of England and by a carrous poem, entitled "The Visions of Piers Plowman," written about 1369, and intended as a satire on almost every description of men, but especially the clergy. It is written in blank verse, with wit and humour, in an alliterative measure. The latest edition is that issued by measure. The latest edition is the Early English Text Society.

Lannes

the Early English rext Society.

Lingular, Simon de, ling'-hom, an English prelate and cardinal, abbot of Westminster, and atterwards bishop of Ely, and lastly archibishop of Canterbury, in 1866. Edward III. made him treasurer of England, and Urban VIII. gave him a cardinalship, with the title of legate. D. at Avironal 1874.

Avignon, 1376.

Avignon, 1376.

Ling-Horne, Dr. John, läng'-horn, an Eng-lish divine and poet, who, on entering into orders, became tutor to the sons of a Lincolnshire gentleman, whose daughter he subsequently married. He wrote a poem entitled "Genius and Valour," in which he defended the Seotch against Churchill, and for which the university agains containing the stowed upon him the degree of D.D., in 1766. He was a writer in the "Monthly Review," and published "Poems," "Letters of Theodosius and Constantia," "Solyman and "Alachies and Constantia," "Fables of Almena," a tale; five sermons; "Fables of Flora, in Verse," and a translation of Plu-tarch's "Lives." B. at Kirkby-Stephen, West-tarch's "Lives." B. at Kirkby-Stepnen, west-moreland, 1735 p. 1779.

Langle, Louis Matthew, langle, a celebrated French circularist, who particularly devoted himself to the study of the Mantchou language of which he published an ahphabet, and a cic-tionary Mantchou-Français. He also published as also published as a local published to the published as a local published to the local published to t specimens of Arabian, Persian, and other eastern authors, with translations. In 1792 he was authors, with translations. In 1792 he was named keeper of the Oriental MSS, in the royal library; and had barely entered on his office, when the mob demanded that all books relating to genealogy in his charge should be destroyed. Langle asked for time to look out the works indicated, and proceeded to conceal all the more valuable, and gave up to popular fury a large quantity of duplicate copies and other unimportant lumber, and thus saved upwards of five thousand volumes, besides sundry valuable do-euments illustrative of the national history. He afterwards organized a school for the living Oriental languages, in which he was professor of Oriental languages, in which ne was protessor of Persian; he was also a member of the institute, and a memoir by him upon Egypt first sug-gested to Bonaparte an expedition to that country. Napoleon wished Langte to accumpany him to the East, but this he declined to do, and thereby gave great offence to the First Consul. He published numerous works on Oriental subjects, besides new editions of the books of travellers and others connected with that region. B. 1763; p. 1824.

LANGLE, Jean Maximilien de, a French Protestant minister, who officiated in the reformed testant minister, who discinct in the reformed church at Rouen for twenty-five years. He wrote a "Defence of Charles I, King of Eng-land," two volumes of sermons, and translated from the English the "Whole Duty of Man." B. at Evreux, 1569; p. 1674. LANGER, Samuel de, son of the above, was which the Charles of the Deverter above by the service of the property and the presence of the service of minister of the Protestant church at Rouen, whence he removed to Charenton, where he was wance he removed to Charenton, where he was greatly esteemed for his learning and virtues. On the persecution breaking out against the Protest-ants, he went to England, and became a pre-bendary of Westminster. The university of Ox-ford conferred on him the degree of D.D. Bi-shop Stillingdiest printed a letter of his on the differences between the control of binginus and the Dissenters. B. in London; D. 1800.

Langley, Batty, läng-le, an English architect, who published many useful practical books; such as the "Builder's Buvel," the "Builder's Price-Book," and other works for masons, bricklayers, and carpenters. D. 1757.

Langvort, Peter, läng-toft, an old English chronicler, who translated from the Latin, into French verse, Herbert Bosenham's "Life of Thomas à Becket," and also composed a chronicle in verse, which began with the Trejans and went down to Edward I. An English metrical translation of this was made by Robert de Brunne, and published at Oxford in 1725. A manuscript of the Chronicle is pre-served in the Cottonian collection of the British Museum, and another is to be found in the Arundel MSS. contained in the Heralds' College. Langtoft lived at the end of the 13th and lege. Langton lived at the end of the 1stn and beginning of the 1stn century. Langton, Stephen, läng-ton, archbishop of Canterbury, and cardinal of St. Chrysogonus, studied at, and became chancellor of, the uni-versity of Paris, and was created an archbishop by the pope, in opposition to King John and the clergy. John forbade Langton from en-tering England, and banished the monks of Canterbury, for which the kingdom was laid under the papal interdict. The king was afterwards excommunicated, and his subjects absolved from their allegiance; on which he made his submission, by complying with the papal terms, after which he received the papal absolution from Langton, who, however, refused the pope's bull of excommunication against the barons for leaguing against John, at Runny-mede, for which he was suspended at Rome. where he suffered also many mortifications. At length he purchased his pardon, and was permitted to return to England. He was a stanch adherent to the cause of national liberty. B. in England, in the earlier half of the 12th century; D. 1228. He composed some theological works.

LANGUET, Hubert, lan'-gai, minister of state DANGUST, rubert, ear-gas, minister of same to Augustus, elector of Saxony, was a native of France, and converted to the Protestant faith by Melancthon. He was at Paris during the massacre of St. Bartholomew, as ambassador from the elector, and narrowly escaped with his From the elector, and narrowly seagles with an is-life, after saving that of Wichelus, a printer, in whose house he lodged, and also the famous De Mornay. He was employed in several other embassles; but being suspected of favouring the Zwinglanns, he quitted the service of the elector, and entered into that of the Prince of Orange. He were a letter to Sir Philip Sidney, and other pieces. p. at Antwerp, 1581

Lantener, Nicholas, lind-e-air, a painter, engraver, and musician, who was employed to collect pictures in foreign countries for Charles couses, pactures in Ioreign countries for Charles I. He phaced a particular mark on all which he brought to England. Pepps says, in his Diarry, "that Lamiere did, at the request of Mr. Illi, bring two or three of the fancet prints for my life." He was also chapel-master to Charles I.

The was subsected to the content of Born of humble parents, he worked as a dyer in early life; but, joining a battalion of volunteers in 1792, he, by his courage, rapidly rose to the chancellor of the Exchequer, and followed Bit in 1792, ne, by ms courage, rapinly rose to the grade of major. In 1794 he attracted the notice of Bonaparte, who procured him a command in the army of Italy. At the battles of Montenotte and Millesimo he displayed considerable bravery, and became colonel in 1790. He was made general of brigade in the following year, and sustained a brilliant part at the taking of Mantua and at the battle of Arcola. He went with the French expedition to Egypt, and rose to the rank of general of division. The French victory at Aboukir was in part due to his bravery victory at Abourtr was in part due to ins bravery and coolness. At the siege of Aere he was severely wounded. He left Egypt with Bona-parte, and after returning to Paris, rendered good service to his chief during the revolution of the 18th Brumaire (9th November), 1799, for which Napoleon appointed him commander of the consular guard. After various employments, he commanded the advance gnard of the French army crossing the Great St. Bernard into Italy, in 1800. At the great battle of Montebello, where the Austrians were completely beaten, Lannes displayed such great skill and brayery. that Napoleon gave him the title of Montebello when he raised him to a dukedom. He was no less distinguished at the battle of Marengo. On his return from Portugal in 1804, whither on as recurs from Foreign in 1804, watter he had been sent as minister-plenipotentiary of France, Napoleon created him marshal of France, and afterwards duke of Montebello. In the German campaigns of 1805-6, he commanded the advance guard, and rendered the most signal service to his master at the battles of Austerlitz, Jena, Eylau, and Friedland. His last great exploit was the defence of the village of Essling, where, while resisting the fierce on-slaught of the Austrians, a cannon-ball struck off his right leg, and the foot and ankle of the left. Napoleon evinced more emotion at the sight of his brave marshal's mortal wound than he had ever before been known to exhibit, Lannes, throughout his military career, evinced a con-stantly increasing knowledge of war. Long afterwards, Napoleon, speaking of this intrepid commander, thus expressed himself—" I found him a dwarf, and I lost him a giant.

him a dwarf, and I lost him a giant.

He had great experience in war, having been in fifty-four battles and three hundred combats.

He was cool in the midst of fire; possessed of a clear, penetrating eye, ready to take advantage of any opportunity that might present itself. Violent and hasty in his temper, even in my presence, he was ardently attached to me."

His young widow, a beautiful and accomplished lady, was afterwards lady in waiting to the empress Maria Louisa. B. at Lectoure, Guienne, 1769; D. 1809.

Larspowni, Henry Petir Fitzmauriee, third Marquis of, Mad-down, after receiving a preliminary course of education at Westminstor school, went, in 1795, to study under Dugaid Stewart at Edinburgh, where he formed the equanisticate of a small circle of young men, nearly all of whom subsequently became amous in one line or another. These young friends formed the celebrated Speculative Society, in which Brougham, Jeffrey, Syfney Smith, Horner, and others, first practised the art of debate. From Edinburgh he went to Cambridge, in 1801, and, after a continental tong, entered the House of Commons. As Lord Henry LANSDOWNE, Henry Petty Fitzmaurice, third entered the House of Commons. As Lord Henry Petty he became a prominent member of the city of Valetta. He afterwards c Whig party, and, on the death of Mr. Pitt, and the accession of the Whigs to power, he became D. of the plague, at Candia, 1570.

in the representation of the university of Cambridge. He succeeded to the peerage as marquis of Lansdowne, in 1809. In both Houses of Parliament he was a stanch advocate of the abolition of slavery, and some of his best oratorical efforts were made in furtherance of the repeal of the penal laws against Roman Catholics. In 1820 he proposed a measure in favour of the principle of free trade; and in 1822 sought to obtain an inquiry into the suffering condition of Ireland inquiry into the sunering condition of freland. After eighteen years' retirement from office, he became secretary of state for the Homo department, under the premiership of George Canning, in 1828. He was in opposition during the Wellington administration of 1829-31, but on becoming president of the Council in the latter year, he was an active participator in the measures taken to pass the Reform Act. He was the opposition leader of the House of Lords during Sir Robert Peel's rule, which commenced in 1841, and when his own party returned to power under Lord John Russell, in 1846, he once more led the peers from the ministerial John Russell, in 1852. B. 1780; D. 1863.

LANTIER, Stephen François de, lantierai, a

French author, who produced some celebrated works of fictitious travel, similar to Barthélemy's "Anacharsis," but in no way copied from it. These were entitled, "The Travels of Antenor,"
"The Travellers in Switzerland," and "Travels in Spain." He also wrote some comedies, and in Spain." He also wrote some comeads, and other works. B. at Marseilles, 1734; D. 1828.

Lanzi, Luigi, land'-se, an Italian archeologist and writer on art, who entered the Society of Jesuits at the age of 17, but on the suppression of the order, devoted himself to literary pursuits. He was appointed keeper of the cabinet of medals at Florence in 1775, and thenceforth produced works on archæology and art, some of which have since been translated into every European language. His "History of the Painters" was translated by Thomas of the Painters" was translated by Thomas Roseoe, and republished in Bohn's "Standard Library." Lanzi composed many other works, the chief of which were "Saggio di Lingua Etrusca," and others on the ancient Etruscan. vases. He was likewise a graceful poet. B.1732; D. at Florence, 1810.

LACTSE, OF LACTSEU, la-o-tse', a Chinese philosopher, who lived a short time before Confucius. He held the doctrine of the metumpsychosis, or transmigration of souls, like Pythagoras (see Pythagoras). He wrote a book which the Chinese place among the number of their sacred works, and founded a sect which rivals in numbers that of Confucius. M.

Stanislas Julien published a complete edition of his writings, at Paris, 1841. Lived about 600 r

LAPARELLI, Francis, la-pa-roil-le, an eminent Italian architect and mechanician. His knowledge of the art of military engineering recommended him to Cosmo I., grand-duke of Tuscany, and Pope Pius IV. intrusted him with the construction of the defensive works of Civita Vecchia, which place he strongly fortified.
Michael Angelo confided to him the execution menner Angelo connect to him the execution of his designs for the church of St. Peter. In 1565 he was sent to fortify Malta against the attempts of Solyman, and there planned the city of Valeta. He afterwards engaged in the service of the Venetians. E. at Crotons, 1521; LA PEROUSE, J. P. Galaup de, personeé, a celebrated French navigator, who, after serving as captain in the French navy with much distinction, was sent by Louis XVI., in 1785, on a vorage of discovery. He salled with two frigates from Brest, and visited the coasts of Tartary, of Japan, and of New Holland, when, in 1788, he ceased to be heard of. Several expeditions were dispatched to discover traces of him, but in vain. In 1827, however, the wreck of his vessel was observed by Captain Dillon, in one of the Vanikoro islands. In 1828, a French earbain visited the place and discovered that captain visited the place, and discovered that La Perouse and his men had been wrecked among the reel's surrounding the island. B. at

Albi, in Languedoc, 1741.

LARLACE, Pierre Simon, Marquis de, la-plass', a celebrated French mathematician and astronomer, who, as early as his 19th year, taught mathematics in a military school. He obtained letters of introduction to the celebrated philosopher D'Alembert, and went to Paris with the view of seeking an interview with him; but, view of seeing an interview with nim; out, finding no notice taken of his letters, he wrote a short paper on some points of mechanical philosophy, which immediately procured for him the attention to his claims that he desired. D'Alembert sent for him, and, about 1769, had D'Alemoert sent for min, and, aboue 1709, ma-him appointed professor of mathematics at the Paris Military School. By his treatises, me-moirs, and larger works, Laplace rapidly ob-tained the reputation of the greatest living mathematician since Newton. Napoleon, when First Consul, appointed him minister of the First Consul, appointed him minister of the Interfory but, as a politician, he was very unsuccessful, and was in a short time removed to the presidentship of the Senat Conservateur. Napoleon afterwards related of his minister, that "a mathematician of the highest rank, he lost not a moment in showing himself below mediocrity as a minister, He looked ato mediority as a minister, He looked ato mouestion in its true point of view. He was always searching after subtletics; all his ideas were problems, and he carried the spirit of the infilitational calculus into the meanagement of infinitesimal calculus into the management of business." He was created a count by Napoleon, business." He was created a count by Napoleon, and a marquis by Louis XVIII. His principal works were the "Mécanique Céleste," "Analytical Theory of Probabilities," and an "Essay on Probabilities," A complete edition of his writings was published by the French government in 1843. It is quite impossible, in any snort notice of the life of Laplace, to convey a proper idea of the extent and value of the great "Mécanique Géleste." To enumerate the bare contents thereof would require several pages. That inestrimable contribution to science con-That inestimable contribution to science contained 2000 quarto pages; and, it is said, might easily be expanded to thrice that number. The intention of the work was to deduce, from the discoveries of the great astronomers who had discoveries of the great astronomers who had preceded Laplace, a complete and harmonious system, and to perfect the marvellous work commenced by Newton, in his discovery of the law of gravitation. He subsequently wrote his work of the subsequently wrote his "Exposition on Systems of Monde," as an explanation of what was abstruced in his "Medarations". Die Ramylitche and Avandese Willed. nique." Dr. Bowditch, an American writer, translated, in part, the "Mécanique Céleste." The popular work of Mrs. Somerville is a selection from it; and no inconsiderable share of what was most attractive in the earlier por-tions of the popular "Vestigos of Creation" was based upon the same source. Few will refuse to admit that Laplace was the greatest astronomer since Newton, a near Honfleur

LARDNER, Nathaniel, lard-ner, a learned English dissenting divine, who, after receiving his academical education at London, went to Utrecht, and thence to Leydon, and, in 1703, returned to England. Soon afterwards, he became private chaplain to LadyTreby,in which situation he continued until her ladyship's death in 1729. He then became pastor of a congregation in Crutched Friars. He wrote an congregation in Crutenea Friars. He wrote an answer to Woolston on the Miracles, a "Letter on the Logos," and the "Credibility of the Gospel History," a work admirably executed. His writings abound in critical elucidations of the Scriptures and early ecclesiastical history, evincing profound learning and intense application. B. in Kent, 1684; D. 1768.

Lerder, Dr. Dionysius, a modern mathema-

tician and philosophical writer, was the son tician and philosophical writer, was the son of a Dublin attorner, and, after receiving some education at school, was placed in lis father's office. Evincing, however, a decided distaste for the profession of the law, he was entered at Trinity College, Dublin, and soon began to devote himself to scientific pursuits, It was speedily made apparent that he had chosen the right path in life, for he gained a great number of prizes in pure astronomy, in natural philosophy, and other branches of study. In 1817 he obtained a B.A. degree, and, during the ten following years, remained at the uni-versity, publishing, at first, treatises on mathematics, and subsequently on the steam-engine. He likewise delivered a course of lectures on the latter subject at the Royal Dublin Society, for which he received the gold medal of the society. His reputation being in a great measure established, he began to contribute to the "Edinburgh Encyclopædia" and the "Encyclopædia Metropolitana," for which he wrote elaborate treatises on pure mathematics as well as on the applied sciences. In 1828, on the establishment of the London University, he was estationment of the hondon University, he was appointed to the chair of natural philosophy and astronomy, and, removing to London, set on foot the scheme of the "Cabinet Cyclopædia," toot the seneme of the "Calonet Cyclopean," which he gradually perfected, obtaining the co-operation of many eminent men. Sir John Herschel wrote for the series a "Preliminary Discourse upon Natural Philosophy," and a "Treatise on Astronomy," but most of the scientific works were due to Dr. Lardner him-elf. In 1840, oreting downstrin gircumstances elf. In 1840 certain domestic circumstances caused him to repair to Paris, after which he went to the United States, where he delivered, with considerable success, a course of lectures, which were afterwards several times reprinted. He subsequently devoted much time to railway economy, and wrote a good deal on that and other subjects. In 1854 he started his last important work, the "Museum of Science and Art." Few men did more than he to-wards extending scientific knowledge among the people, and none were more eminently qualified for the work. Not only were his acquirements of the profoundest nature, but he possessed, in a peculiarly high degree, the happy faculty of throwing into popular and graphic language the most elaborate theories of science, and leading minds unaccustomed to abstruse reasoning to an appreciation of truths which would have been altogether incompre-hensible if involved in the obscurity of technical phraseology. B. at Dublin, 1793; p. at Paris, 1859.

To Rochefoucauld

Lascaris

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, François, Duke de robl-foo-kolle, a celebrated French author and statesman, was at first known as the Prince de Marsillac, and signalized himself ou various scensions by his courage; but was chiefly re-markable for his profound knowledge of nammarkable for ms protound knowledge of man-kind, and for his intriguing spirit. Smitten with the duchess de Longqueville, he, to please her, joined the ranks of the Fronde, but being afterwards restored to favour, was appointed. in 1661, chevalier of the king's commands, and next, governor of Poiton. He spent his old meas, governor or routon. He spent his old aga in the society of Madame de la Fayette and Madame de Sévigné. He wrote "Memoirs of the Reign of Anne of Austria," and a book of maxims, first printed in 1665, under the title of "Reflections and Sentences, or Moral Maxims." This little work has made the author celebrated as much by the perfection of its style as by the boldness of its paradoxes. According to it, self-love is the sole motive of all human actions. which was an opinion sufficiently natural with a man who had dwelt all his life at court. An egotist, an intriguer, and loose liver, Rochefou-cauld had only too frequently given practical effect to his own maxims. B. at Paris, 1613:

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD-LIANCOUR, François, Duke de, was grand-master of the wardrobe to Louis XV. and Louis XVI., and in 1789 deputy to the States-goneral. Although attached to the king, he showed himself zealous for the the king, he showed himself zeatons for the well-being of the people. He took part in the recall of Necker, after the fall of the Bastille. Named military commandant at Rome after the closing of the Assembly, he offered as asylum to Louis XVI. Deprived of his rank in 1792, he visited the United States, but returned to France after a lapse of about six years. He carnestly devoted himself to philanthropic enterprises, established manufactures, founded a school of art and science, and materially a school of art and seience, and materially contributed to the introduction of vaccination throughout his native country. He entered the Chamber of Peers in 1814; but his liberal opin-ions subsequently brought him under the dis-pleasure of Charles X., whereupon he occupied fainself with his philanthropic schemes. He was long known under the name of Liancourt only, but added to it that of Rocheforeauld upon othy, but and to it that of recencement upon the death of his cousin. He wrote, among other works, "The Prisons of Philadelphia," and "Travels in the United States" B. 1747; D. 1827.

La Rochejaquelein, Henri de, vosit-zhak-lä, a famous Vendean chieftain, who commanded at the battle of Fontenay in 1793, and preserved the Vendeans from total rout at the battle of Luçon. He likewise took part in the disastrous engagement at Chollet. On the death of Les-caire, he was, although only 22 years of age, proclaimed general-in-chief. He twice comproclaimed general-in-chief. He twice com-bated the republican troops near Antrain, and took possession of Laval, La Flèche, and Le Mans. Driven from the last city, he crossed Mans. Driven from the last city, he crossed the Loire, and intrended himself in the forest of Vézin. He was slain in an engagement near chollet, in 1794. His address to his soldiers, on being appointed to the chief command, was, "if I recoil, kill me; if I advance, follow me; if I fall, avenge nea!" n. 1772.

Lenery, Issac de, law-rai, an historian, who went to Holland, where he was made historiargapher to the States-general. His works are. "The History of Augustus," "The History of 830

Eleanor, wife of Henry II.," "History of England," 4 vols. folio; "History of the Seven Sages of Greece," and "The History of France under Louis XIV." B. at Montvilliers, 1038; D. 1719. LARREY, Dominique Jean, a celebrated French surgeon, who became surgeon-in-chief of the imperial army. After completing his education under his uncle, and at the hospital of Tou-louse, he repaired to Paris, where he obtained touse, as repaired to vary, where he obtained composition as neval surgeon. In that capacity he visited North America; but, returning to Paris at the outbreak of the Revolution, he joined. French army of the Rhine in 1792. joine." French army of the Rhine in 1792, the first attracted the notice of his superiors by his invention of "flying ambulances," which enabled the wounded to be carried off the field, even under a warm fire. He first met Napo-leon at the slege of Toulon, where the future comperor was at the time acting as licentants artillery. After alling, for some time, the func-tions of professor of military surgery, he, in 1798, went with the French expeditionary army to Egypt, and on his return published his "Historical and Surgical Account of the Army of the East in Egypt and Syria." This work was written in 1803, and from that time Larrey's rise was very rapid, till, in 1812, he became baron of the empire and surgeon-in-chief. His numerous papers attest his profound theoretical knowledge, while his many bold and successful operations, conducted during Napoleon's wars, have established his fame as one of the first of modern surgeons. Napoleon said of him, that "he was the most virtuous man he had ever known." An instance of his courage and humanity occurred after the battles of Bautzen and Wartzehen. Among the wounded were some 12,000 men who, it was suspected, had voluntarily multilated themselves. Napoleon ordered his surgeons to examine them, and declared that if found guilty they should be shot. Larrey, with some difficulty, obtained time to properly examine them, for, as none doubted the guilt of the men, their instant execution was called for. But after a time, Larrey drew up a report de-claring that all the accused were innocent. The excellent man expected dismissal, but reccived, instead, a handsome present from Napoleon. B. in France, 1766; D. at Lyons, 1841. LA Salle, Count de, la-sal', a gallant soldier, who began his career, with the rank of officer, at eleven years of age, under Prince Maximilian, subsequently king of Bayaria, and, from his high birth and connexions, might have risen to the most prominent position; but he preferred to owe his promotion to merit alone, and accordto owe nis promotion to merit atone, and accordingly threw up his commission, enlisted as a private soldier, and at length attained, after eight years' arduous and dangerous service, the same rank he had resigned. At the buttle of Rivoli, he, by his decisive conduct, possessed himself of the colours, upon which the general commanding addressed him thus: "Rest your-self town three does are not provided than?" self upon these flags; you have descreed them."

He likewise distinguished himself in Egypt, and defeated the Prussians on the walls of Königsberg, and finally fell, in the midst of victory, on the field of Wagram. B. at Metz, 1775; killed, 1809.

LASCARIS, Theodore, las-kar'-is, emperor of Nicea, was the son-in-law of the emperor Alexius Angelus. After the taking of Constantinople by the crusaders, in 1204, he formed in Asia

Latimer

Minor a new kingdom, comprising Bithynia, Lydia, and Phrygia, of which Nicca was the apital. He combatted simultaneously the Latin emperors and the sultan of Iconium: but nevertheless maintained his throne until his death in 1222. His successors were his son-inlaw, John Ducas (see John III.), and his grand-son, Theodore Lascaris, called the Young, who reigned from 1255 to 1259. This latter was reigned from 1259 to 1259. Ins latter was succeeded by John Lascaris. (See John IV.)

Lascaris, Constantine, a learned Greek, descended from the imperial Greek family of that name, who went to Italy on the taking of Constantinople by the Turks in 1453. He settled at Messina, where he taught Greek with reputation, and had a number of scholars. He wrote a Greek grammar, and other works. D. about the close of the 15th century.

LASCARIS, Andrew John, surnamed "Rhyndacenus," a learned Greek, of the same family as the preceding, who was employed by Lorenzo de Medici to collect books in Greece. On his return he was invited to France by Louis XII.,

who appointed him ambassador to Venice. When Leo X. ascended the papal chair, Lascaris went to Rome, and became director of the Greek college. He revived the use of the capital letters of the Greek alphabet, and wrote epigrams in that language. B. about 1445; D. 1535.

Las Cases, Marin Joseph Emmanuel Auguste
Dieudonné, Count de, la-kas'-ai, at the outbreak of the French Revolution, 1789, was a lieutenant in the navy. He then emigrated, joined the army of Condé, and took part in the expedition to Quiberon, but returned to France after the 18th Brunaire. Having been long engaged in literary pursuits, he now published, under the name of Le Sage, an "Atlas Historique, Chronologique, et Geographique," which went through several editions. In 1809 he enrolled himself as a volunteer to resist the British attack upon Flushing : and from this time attracted the attention of Bonaparte, who soon afterwards made him his chamberlain, created him a member of the council of state, and intrusted him with various confidential missions. In 1814 Las Cases refused to vote in the council of state for the dethronement of the emperor, took up arms for him after his return from Elba in 1815. and was one of the four attendants who accom-panied him to St. Helena. There he lived panied him to St. Helena. There he lived eighteen months with the ex-emperor, enjoying his intimacy, and noting down all that he said in a journal, subsequently published under the title of "Mémorial de Sainte Hélene." Having, however, become an object of suspicion to Sir Hudson Lowe, the governor, he was seized, and conveyed first to the Cape of Good Hope, and thence to England as a prisoner, and was not permitted to return to France till after Bonapermitted to return to Falacte that after Sola-parte's death. He was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1830, and acted with the oppo-sition. B. 1766; D. 1842. LASCY, Peter, Count de, lai-se, a native of Ireland, who, after the conquest of that country by William III., entered the French service, and was subsequently an officer in the Austrian, Polish, and Russian armies, in the latter of which he rose to the rank of field-marshal, and was appointed governor of Lithuania. B. 1678; D. 1751.

LASCY, Joseph Francis Maurice, Count de, son of the preceding, entered the Austrian service, and obtained the rank of general, after having exhibited considerable military ability at the battles of Lowositz. Breslau, and Hochkirchen. In 1760 he penetrated to Berlin, at the head of 15,000 men; for which held exploit he was made a commander of the order of Maria Theresa, and in 1762 received the baton of marshal. He was employed against the Turks in 1788, and remained in active service under the emperor Joseph II., during great part of the remainder of his life. B. at St.

Petersburg, 1725; p. 1801.

Lassus, las-us, a dithyrambic poet, born at Hermione, in Peloponnesus, about 500 years B.C. He is particularly known by the answer he gave to a man who asked him—" What could best render life pleasant and comfortable?"

"Experience.

Latham, John, M.D., F.R.S., &c., lai'-tham, an eminent ornithologist and antiquary, was the son of a surgeon and apothecary at Eltham, in Kent. Dr. Latham for many years followed similar professional pursuits at Dartford, but subsequently removed to Romsey, and during the latter period of his life resided at Winchester. the interperson of ins lite resided at Winchester. He wrote soveral professional works, besides treatises on subjects relating to medicine, antiquities, and natural history, which appeared in the "Philosophical Transactions," &c. Among his productions are, "A General Symposis of Birds," "Index Ornithologicus," "Heald's Pharmacopaia Improved," and others; but his great work, which he commenced in his 82nd year, was "A General History of Birds," in 10 vols, 4to, the whole of the plates of which he designed, etched, and coloured himself. Notwithstanding his great age, Dr. Latham was active. cheerful, and in the possession of all his faculties up to the moment of his death. B. 1740; D. 1837.

LATHAM, Robert Gordon, an eminent modern philologist and ethnologist, who received his education at Eton and King's College, Cambridge, where, in 1833, he took the degree of B.A. He afterwards became fellow of his college, and took the M.D. degree. He displayed, even from the outset of his career, a profound acquaintance not only with the classical but also with the European languages. On being appointed pro-fessor of English literature at University College, shortly after its establishment, he com-"semend the publication of a suries of works which have entitled han to the foremost place as a philosophical investigator of the English Language. The chief of these works is his "English Language," but he followed up the subject with his "listory and Ermology of the English Language," and other smaller works. As an ethnologist, he laboured with distinguished success; the "Varieties of Manid," "Ethnology of the British Colonies," "Ethnology of Europe," and "Man and his Migrations," having thrown immenselight upon the relation between the languages and the races of mankind. After he ceased to fulfil the active duties of the medical profession, Dr. Latham held many important appointments in connexion therewith, he was fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, and officiated menced the publication of a series of works the Royal College of Physicians, and officiated as assistant physician of Middlesex Hospital. The ethnological department of the Crystal Palace was arranged by him. In addition to the numerous works he has written on ethnology, he has edited a new and valuable edition of Johnson's Dictionary, in two large volumes, 4to. B. in Lincolnshire, 1812. Latrings, Hugh, lat'-i-mer, an English pre-late and martyr, received his education at Cambridge, where, at the beginning of the was written by him, although published under Reformation, he was very zealous for popery; Reformation, he was very zealous for popery; but on conversing with Bilney, the martyr, he renounced the Romish tenets, and became as ardent on the other side. He now laboured earnestly in preaching the gospel, and his fame reaching Henry VIII., he sent for him, and was so pleased with his discourses as to confer on him the bishopric of Worcester. But Latimer, was no time-servers, no the contravy he exposwas no time-server; on the contrary, he expostulated with the king for his cruelties. He afterwards resigned his bishopric; and, on the fall of Lord Cromwell, his patron, was sent to the Tower, where he remained till the accession of Edward VI., who would have restored him to his diocese, but he refused. He then resided with Cranmer, whom he as-isted in resided with Cranmer, whom he assisted in framing the Homilies, and in completing the work of reformation. When Mary came to the throne, he was committed to the Tower, whence he was sent, with Ridley and Cranmer, to Oxford, to hold a conference with some popish divines. In that dispute he argued with reawares, in the dispute he argued with remarkable clearnoss and simplicity; and when it was over, sentence was passed upon him and Ridley, who were burnt at the same stake, 1855. Latimer, after recommending his soul to God, thus cheered his brother sufferer: "We have the same took the same look like to the same look." shall this day, my lord, light such a candle in England as shall never be extinguished." His sermons have been often reprinted. R. in Leicestershire, about 1472.

LATIMER, William, a celebrated scholar of the 16th century, who taught Erasmus Greek, and was tutor to Reginald, afterwards Cardinal Pole. He was a prebendary of Salisbury, and held two livings in Gloucestershire D. 1545.

LATOUGHE-TREVILLE, Louis de, la-toosh' tre-veel', a French admiral, who became captain in 1780, and, during the wars between the English and French, signalized himself by many acts of bravery. In 1799-1801 he commanded the fittilla collected at Boulogne, estensibly for the invasion of England. B. at Rochefort, 1745;

D. at Toulon, 1805.

LATOUR, General Count Theodore, la'-toor, an eminent Austrian officer, was educated at the Imperial Engineers' School, and early obtained distinction in the field by his zeal, merit, and courage. During the long peace that succeeded the campaigns of 1813-1815, his great adminis-trative abilities were repeatedly called into action by his native government; and for many years he was president of the military board of the German Confederation. Shortly after the revolutionary outbreaks in 1849, he was nominated minister of war, the duties of which office he discharged with firmness and moderation: but being suspected of intriguing for the re-establishment of the absolute form of govern-ment overthrown in the spring of 1848, the populace, during the insurrection in Vienna in populace, during the insurrection in Vienna in Cotober of that year, broke into the War office, seized the minister of war, murdered him, and suspended his eorpse upon a gibbet. B. 1780.

LA TOUR D'AVYERONE. (See AUVERGNE.)

LATRILLE, Pierre André, La-trail', a cele-brated French naturalist, who, from his earliegt years, devoted himself to entomology, and ultimately became the most distinguished wearened.

mately became the most distinguished pro-

the name of Cuvier. Of this part, Mr. Swain-son says, "It is the most elaborate and the son says, "It is the most elaborate and the most perfect in its details that has yet been given to the world, and possesses the advantage of being founded on a consideration of the entire structure of these animals; and henos gives us the first example in theory of the natural principle of classification." Latroille natural principle of classification. Laterille wrote a general history of insects for an edition of Buffon; "Genera Crustaceorum et Insectorum;" and "General Considerations on the Natural Order of Animals composing the classes Crustacea, Arachnides, and Insects." He was a chevalier of the Legion of Honour, a member of the Academy of Sciences, and correspondent of the Linnwan Society of London. B. at Brives. France, 1762; D. at Paris, 1833.

LATUDE, Henri Mazers de, la-tood, a Frenchman, who was confined in the Bastille and other prisons during 35 years. When about the age of 24, hoping to gain the patronage of Madame de Pompadour, mistress of Louis XV., he in-formed her of a plot against her life; but the intelligence proving to be an invention of his own, he was mercilessly condemned to the long incarceration he endured. He made his escape in 1784, and left behind him memoirs, containing many interesting details. B. in Languedoc.

1725; D. at Paris, 1825.

LAUD, William, lawd, a celebrated English prelate, was the son of a clothier at Reading, in Berkshire, and received his early education at the grammar-school of his native town. In 1550 he entered at St. John's College, Oxford, of which he was elected fellow in 1593. While at the university, Laud showed himself "at him for a papist, or at least popishly inclined, that it was almost made an heresy (as I have heard from his own mouth) for any one to be seen in his company, and a misprision of heresy to give him a civil salutation as he walked in the streets." These are the words of his contemporary, Heylyn, who wrote his life. Laud's first preferment was the living of Stanford, in Northamptonshire. In 1608 he took the degree of D.D., and became chaplain to Neill, bishop of Rochester. In 1611 he was elected president of his college, and, in 1616, preferred to the deanery of Gloucester by the king, one of whose chaplains in ordinary he had previously become. The year following he attended King James to The year following he attended King James to Scotland. In 1620 he was made a precendary of Westminster, and, a year afterwards, was made bishop of St. David's. In 1622 he held his celebrated conference with Fisher, the Jesuit, in presence of the marquis of Buckingham. In 1628, he was made bishop of Bath and Wells, and also dean of the Chapel Royal. He succeeded archbishop Abbot, in 1633, in the sec of Canterbury. At this time he had reached the height of power, and was generally regarded as the prime minister of Charles I. Laud's as tatesmanship began with a fierce persecution of the Puritans. Alexander Leighton, for having published a book entitled "Sion's Plea," was sentenced by the Star Chamber to have his ears maray pecame the most distinguished pro-fessor of that department of sedence in his nativecomity. He contributed treatises thereon. Similar severities were subsequently practised to the "Encyclopédie Méthodique," and to the proceedings of many learned bodies. The ento-Land termed "libels against the hierarchy of mological portion of the "Animal Kingdom" | the Church." The high-placed and zealous 632

LAUD, ARCHBISHOP.

LAWRENCE, SIR JOHN.

LEF, GENERAL ROBERT.

LEICESTER, ROBERT DUDLEY, EARL OF.

Land

chman did not consider these sentences ciently severe, for he says in his diary, in ,"I have received the copy of the sentence ast Paterson, and am verily of your lord-'s mind, that a little more quickness in the rnment would cure this itch of libelling, something that is amiss besides." of his intolerable reign speedily arrived, of his intolerable reign speedily arrived, ever: on the breaking out of the Revoluhis palace was assaulted by the mob, and, 640, he was impeached by the House of mons, and sent to the Tower, but not ight to trial till three years afterwards, a he ably defended his conduct. Though reason was proved, the House of Commoss ed an act of attainder against him, which Lords were compelled to affirm, and he was aded on Tower Hill, January 10, 1645. In ce to archbishop Laud, it must be said that as a man of piety, and was possessed of iderable learning; while his benefactions he university of Oxford proved him an nt supporter of learning. B. at Reading,

AUD, Edmund, a learned prelate, who was op of Carlisle, to which see he was elevated 769, and was the author of numerous works heology, among which may be mentioned, nsiderations on the Theory of Religion," effections on the Life and Character of st," an "Inquiry into the Ideas of Space, e, &c." p. 1703; p. 1787.

UDER, William, law'-der, a native of Scotland, a literary impostor, who acquired notoriety a literary impostor, who acquired notoriety deavouring to hold up Milton as a plagiarist. 747 he began an attack upon Milton in the miltonary Magazine," which he followed y a pamphlet, entitled "An Essay on Milton Sus and Initiation of the Moderns in his dise Lost." His allegod quotations from tius, Massenius, and others, passed as ine for a time, until they were exposed by Douglas, bishop of Salisbary, which forced the tharicator an acknowledgment of his ries. Yet after this he returned to the get in a tract, with this title, "The Grand cotor detected, or Milton convicted of Forgagiast Charles I." b. in Barbados, 1771. Anders, who contributed to "Blackwood's rating," "Simon Roy, gardener, of Duml," and other papers. In 1830 he wroot interesting account of the great didning richamples, with Long Tales to Shorten the "" "Legendary Tales of the Highlands," a morain of the Royal Poperses in Scotland 342," and other works. He was a fellow of Royal Society. "1784; p. near Edinburgh, attracts, John Duke of Low-der-dail, was trues and the contract of the Royal Popers in Scotland." ideavouring to hold up Milton as a plagiarist.

AUDERDALB, John, Duke of, lau'-der-dail, was of the commissioners charged by the Coveters to treat with Charles I. He subsequently tht under the royal standard; and when rles I. was beheaded, entered England with rles II., but was taken prisoner at the battle Vorcester, and thrown into prison, where he ained during nine years. In 1670 he came, power as one of the famous "Cabal" istry. D. 1682.

Laurence

returned to Parliament for Newport in Cornwall, and subsequently for Malmesbury. As a mem-ber of the lower house he joined the party of Fox, and took an active part in opposing Lord North's administration, supported Mr. Fox's India Bill, and was one of the managers of the impeachment of Warren Hastings. In 1789 he succeeded to the title, and was in the following vear elected to the House of Lords as one of the year elected to the House of Lords as one of side Scottish representative peers. In 1792, residing in France for the benefit of his health, he witnessed the attack on the Tuileries, and the imprisonment of the royal family. In 1806 he was created a peer of the United Kingdom, sworn a privy councillor, and received the great seal of Scotland. In August of the same year he was sent as minister plenipotentiary to France, with powers to negotiate a peace. The short-lived administration of "all the talents" being broken up in 1807, Lauderdale had to resign the great seal of Scotland to its former custodier, the duke of Gordon. He subsequently held no office, but was, to a late period of his life, punctual and active in his parliamentary duties. B. 1759; D. 1839. LAUDOHN, or LAUDON, Gideon Ernest, Iou'- done, an eminent German general, was of a noble family which came originally from Scot-land. In 1731 he entered the Russian service; but although he behaved with great gallantry, he only obtained a lieutenancy; on this he went into the Austrian service in 1742, and obtained a captain's commission. After the peace, in 1748, he was raised to the rank of major. At the beginning of the Seven Years' War, he was appointed lieutenant-colonel of Croats, and displayed brilliant military talents against the king of Prussia. In 1757 he was made major-general, and the year following invested with the military order of Maria Theresa. The same year was gained the great Theresa. The same year was gamed any group battle of Hochkirchen, the merit of which is generally attributed to Laudohn, who also gained the battle of Kunnersdorf, for which gained the battle of Runnersdorf, for which the empress Elizabeth of Russia presented him with a magnificent sword. He afterwards de-feated the Prussians at Landshut, and took the reacted the Friestatts at Landsont, and rook the town of Glatz. At the conclusion of the war, in 1763, he was rewarded with a pension and a barony. In 1768 he was nominated a member of the aulic council of war, and, in 1778, elevated to the dignity of field-marshal. In the Tur-kish war he served with additional reputation, and, in 1789, added Belgrade to the imperial dominions. Being seized with fever at his head-quarters in Moravia, in consequence of an operation he underwent for an obstruction in the urethra, his impatience under the medical applications, the impetuous ardour of his character, and the knowledge, above all, of his importance in the war, contributed to irritate his mind, and promote the violence of the disorder. He resisted the application of cataplasms, before and after the incisions were made, with a fatal obstinacy, which raised the inflammation to such a height that his death ensued. n. at Totzen, in Livonia, 1716; p. 1790.

MAURA. (See PETRAECH.) LAURENCE, Dr. Richard, lau'-rens, archbishop istry. D. 1682.

AUDERDALE, James Mattland, Earl of, a tith statesman, whose opinions were at one to dement to be of great weight, both by his 1 party and by his opponents, was, in 1780, the statesman at Bath, was a theological writer and general scholar he had be deemed to be of great weight, both by his 1 party and by his opponents, was, in 1780, his zeal in upholding the rights and authority 633 of Cashel, the son of a tradesman at Bath, was of the church, as well as its purity and attention to its duties. His "Doctrine of the Church of England upon the Efficacy of Baptism," and his sermon "On Singularity and Excess in Theological Literature," are valuable to theological students. B. 1761; D. 1839.

LAURENS, Henry, law'-rens, a distinguished American statesman, who was chosen president of the Council of Safety in 1774; and, being elected a member of Congress, was selected to fill the presidential chair in that body. This office he resigned in 1779, was appointed minister plenipotentiary to Holland, but was captured by the British on his way thither, and committed to the Tower of London, where he remained for upwards of fourteen months, many ineffectual attempts being made during that inencetial attempts being made during that time to shake his fidelity to the new republic. Shortly after his release, he was appointed by the Congress one of the commissioners for negotiating peace with Great Britain, and, in that capacity, signed the preliminaries at Paris. which eventuated in the recognition of American independence in 1783. B. at Charleston, S. Carolina, 1724; D. 1792.

LAUNEY, Bernard Réné Jourdan de, lon'-e, the last governor of the Bastille in Paris, which was creeted in 1383, and destroyed July 14, 1789. He was a son of the former governor, and his residence in that abode had given to his character a bluntness of manner, and inflexibility of ser a numeress or manner, and inflexibility of temper, which led to his destruction. Fifteen days before the attack, three individuals came disguised to the prison, and asked the came disguised to the prison, and asked the governor how he purposed to act in case the Bastille was assailed. "My conduct is regulated by my duty; I shall defend it," was regulated by my duty; I shall defend it, was his reply. In fact, he resolved rather to set fire to the magazine, and perish in the ruins, than yield up his charge. He adhered to his inten-tion as long as possible, but was at length over-powered, and sacrificed to the popular fury.

Lauriston, James Alexander Bernard Law, Count de, lor'-restawng, a descendant of the brother of the famous projector, John Law, entered the French army at an early age, and became the favourite and aide-de-camp of Napoleon I., who enabled him to rise rapidly Napoleon 1., who enabled nim to rise rapidly in his profession. He was employed by Blonaparte in soveral important missions, one of which was to bring to England the preliminaries of the peace of Amiens, on which occasion Lauriston met with a most enable of the peace of the pea entaussasae reception from the people of Lon-don. He was engaged in every campaign of importance in Germany, Spain, and Russia, and, at the battle of Wagram, decided the vic-tory by bringing up 100 pieces of artillery at full trot, which opened upon the enemy at a critical and important moment. After the final conclusion of peace, Lauriston received the grand cor-don of the Legion of Honour from Louis XVIII., and subsequently attained the rank of marshal and subsequency assumed the rank of maisher in the army. B. 1768; D. 1828.

LAUZUN, Antoine, Duke de, lo-zu(r)n, a celebrated favourite of Louis XIV. The French king had already appointed him governor of Berri and mareschal-de-camp, and promised him the grade of grand master of artillery; but the duke having been indiscreet enough to boast of the king's favour, the latter revoked his promise. Upon this the irritated Lauzun so far forgot the Bastille, but was released after a few days' continement, restored to favour, and even proconlinement, restored to favour, and even price mised the hand of the duchess de Montpenier, grand-daughter of Henry IV. A court intigue broke off the marriage, but, according to some, it was secrelly contracted. To recompense him for this disappointment, Louis XIV, in 1671, grave him the command of the French army in grave him the command of the French army in Flanders. Lauzun, however, soon afterwards gave offence to Madame de Montespan, then all-powerful, and was suddenly disgraced and thrown into prison, where he stayed for some years. He went to London in 1683, and was entrusted by James 11, with escorting the queen of England to France. He afterwards appeared of England to France. He alterwards appeared at court, but never regained his former high position. B. in France, about 1632; p. 1733.

LA VALETTE, G. Parisat de, ac'eler the forty-eighth grand-master of the Knights of Malta, to which dignity he was elected in 1557. Under his command, Malta withstood the attacks of a force sent against it by Solyman II., consisting of 40,000 men and 200 vessels, during four months. He subsequently built the town called after his name, and rendered the island of Malta impregnable. n. 1494; D. 1568.
LAVALETTE, Marie Chamans, Count de, was at first destined for the clerical profession; but when the revolution broke out, he became an officer of the national guards. Though concurring in the revolutionary movement, he displayed moderation, voting, by petition, against establishing the camp under the walls of Paris, and was proscented for leading his detachment of the national guards to the defence of the Tuilcries. He joined the army of the Alps as a volunteer, and obtained promotion on several fields of battle in Italy and on the Rhine. In 1796, after the battle of Arcola, Bonaparte appointed him his aide-de-camp, and he was frequently charged by him with delicate mis-sions. In 1797 Napoleon sent him to Paris, to judge of the state of public feeling previous to the memorable crisis of September. After the revolution, he returned to Bonaparte, with whom he arrived at Paris towards the end of whom he arrived at Paris towards the end of the same year, and through whose friendship he was united in marriage to Emilie de Beau-harnais, Josephine's niece. Lavalette accom-panied Ronaparte to Egypt, and there acquired a still higher title to public estimation. On his return to France, he was first appointed a commissary, and subsequently director-general of the missary, and subsequently director-general of the post-office, and countillor of state. After Napoleon became emperor, in 1804, Lavalette was created a count. In 1814 he was removed from the post-office; but on the 20th of March, 1815, by order from Napoleon, who entered Paris in the evening, he resumed his former duties, and stopped the departure of the journals, described and it revaller, north-laves without spatches, and travelling post-horses without signed orders. At the same time, he sent a courier to Napoleon, to inform him of the actual condition of the capital. On the 2nd of June he was nominated a peer. At the second restoration, in July, 1815, he was deprived of his functions, arrested by the sub-prefect of police, Decazes, and condemned to death as an accomplice in Bonaparte's treason against the royal authority. An appeal having been rejected, and Madame Lavalette's application for pardon being refused, his execution was fixed for the 21st of December. On the evening of opon this the irritaged lauxin so har lorgor parton being tenteen, he capeana a ministif as to break his sword before the king, for the 21st of December. On the evening of declaring he would no longer serve a faithless the 20th, his wife, her daughter, twelve years monarch. He was thereupon incareerated in of age, and her governess, were admitted to the prison as usual. A short time after the daughter arison as usual. A short time after the daughter and governess reappeared, supporting Madamo Lavalette, apparently in great affiliction. On the turnkey entering the cell shortly afterwards, Lavalette had disappeared—his wife, Madame Lavalette, having taken his place. The alarm being given, the carriage which brought the visitors was overtaken, but only the daughter found in it. Orders were issued to close the barriers, and descriptions of the person of the fugitive were despatched in all directions. Meanwhile Lavalette was engaged in devising the means of quitting Paris, and passing the the means of quitting Paris, and passing the frontiers. These were supplied by Sir Robert Wilson and Messrs. Bruce and Hutchinson. Vision and assess, but a the third with a pressed as a British officer, Lavalette went to the quarters of his English friends, and, starting with Sir Robert Wilson in a cabriclet at seven o'clock in the morning, passed the barriers without being detected, reached Mons, and there obtained permission to settle at Munich. The sentence of death to settle at Munica. The sentence of cears was revoked five years afterwards, when hie was permitted to return to his family in France. The wife of Lavalette was arrested on his secape becoming known, and, along with the governess, Sir Robert Wilson, and Messrs. Bruce and Hutchitson, was tried by the corryale. The three latter were condemned to a royac. The three latter were contemned to a short imprisonment, while Madame Lavalette and her governess were acquitted; but the shock her constitution and nerves had sustained was too great to be overcome, and a permanent disorder of her intellect was the consequence. Lavalettewas B. 1769; and D. 1830.

La Vallière, Louise Françoisc de, val'-le-air, a favourite of Louis XIV., was sprung from a distinguished family, and became the French king's mistress in 1661. She was granted vast posses-sions, and was created a duchess. Her feeble nature had something of the religious in its composition, and in a freak of remorse she twice took refuge in a convent, whence the king each time recalled her to court. At length, after being neglected by Louis for Madame de Montespan, she, in 1674, finally took refuge in a Carmelite convent, and there passed the remainder of her life in the exercise of an austere piety. She left be-hind some pious reflections on the forgiveness of God. B. in Louvain, 1644; D. 1710.

LAVATER, John Gaspard Christian, la-va'-ter, the author of the celebrated works on physiognomy, was a Swiss divine, and became pastor of the church of 5t. Peter, at Zurich. He cultivated letters, and produced a variety of works, religious and poetical, besides his famous writings on physiognomy. About the age of 25, Lavater began to study the faces of those whom he met, and sought to discover a corresponding resemblance between their minds and features. During several years he collected portraits of the people with whom he had be-come acquainted, made sketches of others, and places. Massena stormed Zurich in 1799, and Lavater, while encouraging his townsmen to repel the aggressors, was wounded by a grenadier, or, as some assert, by an assassin whom he knew, but whose name he would never divulge. Lavater was a pious man, of brilliant talents, mingled with a considerable share of mysticism. He died of the effects of his wound. 1801. B. at Zurich, 1741.

LAVOISIER, Antoine Laurent, la-vivoi'-se-ai, a celebrated French chemical philosopher, was the sou of a wealthy man, and was educated with the greatest care at the Collége Mazarin, and became equally versed in mathematics, and became equally versed in mathematics, botany, astronomy, and chemistry. But the great discoveries recently made by Dr. Black and others in chemistry, induced him to devote himself to that branch of philosophical learning. In 1764, when only 21 years of age, he obtained the prize from the Academy for the best treatise on lighting the streets of Paris, so as to combine the several properties of economy, distinctness of vision, and facility of observation. Two years afterwards, he was chosen member of the Academy, to whose "Proceedings" he contributed a number of valuable scientific papers. In 1769 he became one of the farmersappointed superintendent of the saltpetre-works of France. He was the inventor, or rather compiler, of a new theory of chemistry, which was received with applause in Germany and France, though strenuously opposed by Dr. Priestley, whose "phlogistic" hypothesis it rriestey, whose "phlogistic" hypothesis it tended to overthrow. In 1789, he published his "Elements of Chemistry," a work of great value and importance. Besides this work, he wrote "Chemical and Philosophical Miscellanies," and a "Beport of the Commissioners belonged with the Premistration of the Commissioners. ntes," and a "keport of the Commissioners charged with the Examination of the Principles of Animal Magnetism." During the Reign of Terror he was, quite unjustly, accused of having mixed certain noxious ingredients with tobacco; and, notwithstanding his talents and virtues, was dragged before the revolutionary tribunal, who condemned him to death, He asked for time to complete some experiments with which he was engaged, but was informed that the republic did not want chemists. Brande, the celebrated English chemist, thus characterizes the French philosopher:—"He has in some measure suffered by the misguided has in some measure suffered by the misguided casel of some of his admiring commentators, who, not satisfied with allowing him due merit for the logical precision and sagacity of inducion which he brought into chemistry, have represented him as having the experimental activity of Priestley and the laborious diligence of Scheele. But Lavoisier, though a great architect in the science, laboured but little in the quarry; his materials were chiefly shaped to his band and his still was disclosed in these to his hand, and his skill was displayed in their arrangement and combination." 1743; guillotined, 1794.

come aquainted, made sketches of others, and arter much observation, endeavoured to raise 1743; guillotined, 1792, at Paris, after much observation, endeavoured to raise 1743; guillotined, 1792, and the "Saays on Paris, ordined by Physiognomy," and the "Saays on Paris, stormory," and the "Art of knowing Mankind by Physiognomy," His books have been transplated and reproduced in many forms, and are spoular throughout the world. At first head the French revolution with enthusiasm; but after the death of Louis XVI, his mid mind wowards finance. He was at first, how-mid underwent a complete change, and when the Prench invended Switzerland, Lawater preached life, and for his talents as a gambler. Forced against them, in the pulpit and other public duel, he wandered over the continent of Europe, during his subsistence mainly from the gaming-table. In 1716 he went to Paris, and suc-ceded in gaining the confidence of the Regent Orleans, who authorized him to establish a bank, and appointed him manager of it. To this was soon afterwards added the Mississippi Company, a scheme which had for its objects the paying off the national delt, and the entiching of its subscribers. Ultimately, the the paying of the national dent, and the emiching of its subscribers. Ultimately, the Company was granted the entire monopoly of the trace of France, from the Cape of God Hope eastward to all the other parts of Africa, to Persia, India, China, Japan, and the six, even to the Straits of Magellan and Le Main. Finally, Law's establishment was created the Royal Bank in 1718, and, in 1720, he was nomi-nated comptroller-general of finance. The project became extravagantly popular, and every one appeared anxious to convert his gold and silver into paper; but the bubble at length burst, and many thousands of families, once wealthy, were reduced to poverty. Law became the object of general execration, and was obliged the opiete of general execution, and was conliged to quit France. He wandered about Germany during several years, and died in indigence at Venice, in 1729. B. at Edinburgh, about 1681. Law, Edward, first Lord Ellenborough, a celebrated English judge, who, after completing the education at $4. Points Callace Callacidad.

THE DICTIONARY

Lawrence

his education at St. Peter's College, Cambridge, became a student of law at the Inner Temple. became a student of law at the Inner Tempic.
On being called to the bar, he rapidly rose to the first posts of his profession. Between the years 1788-95 he was engaged as the leading counsel in defence of Warren Hastings: in 1801 he became attorney-general, entered the House of Commons, and received the honour of knighthood. The following year he was created

Common the common commo hinghandow. The following year he was created Lord Ellenborough, and was appointed lord chief justice of the Court of King's Bench. In 1813 he was one of the commissioners to investigate the conduct of the Princess of Wales: in 1814 he was one of the judges at the trial of Lord Cochrane (see Dundonald, Earl of), and, Lord Cochrane (see Dundband, Lan G.), Man-four years afterwards, acted in the same capacity at the trial of William Hone. (See Hone.) He retired from the bench in the same year. Lord retired from the bench in the same year. Lord Brougham thus describes him:-"The Term Reports bear ample testimony to the vigour of this eminent individual's capacity during the eighteen years that he filled the first place among the English common-law judges. . . He was somewhat irascible, and even violent; but no one could accuse him of the least partiality. His honest and manly nature ever disdained as much to trample overbearingly on the humble, as to crouch meanly before the powerful. . . . He dispatched business with great celerity, and, for the most part, with success. But causes were not sifted before him with that closeness were not sitted beaver min who cance cookers of scratiny, and parties were not suffered to bring forward all they had to state with that fulness and freedom, which can alone prevent misdecision, and insure the due administration of justice." B. at Great Salkeld, Cumberland, of justice. B. at Green Community, 1750; p. in London, 1818.

LAWES, Henry, laws, an English musician, who became a gentleman of the chaptel royal, and one of the band of Charles I. In 1653 no published his "Ayres, Dialogues, &c." He set to music the "Comus" of Milton, with whom he was intimate. He also wrote music for the songs of Waller and other poets of his time, and composed the coronation anthem for Charles II. B. at Salisbury, 1600; p. 1662,-

His brother William was an excellent musician: he was commissary in the royal army, and was killed at the siege of Chester, 1645.

LAWRENCE, Stringer, law'-rence, an eminent general in the service of the East India Company, general in the service of the lass monacompany, who, out of gratitude for his services, erected a monument to his memory in Westminster Abbey. B. 1697; D. 1775.

LAWRENCE, Thomas, a distinguished physical memory is the memory of the company of th

cian, was chosen anatomical reader at the university of Oxford, in 1740; elected fellow of the College of Physicians in 1741; became president in 1767, and was re-elected during the succeedin 1767, and was re-elected during the succeed-ing seven years. He was the author of "De Hydrope," and other medical productions, in Latin. B. 1711; D. 1783.

LAWRENCE, Dr. French, a native of Bristol, was educated at Winehester, and at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and became eminent as a civilian and a man of letters. Among his a civinan and a man of letters. Among his writings are, "Remarks on the Apocalypse," and several beautiful poems. He edited and partly composed "The Rolliad" and "Probationary Odes;" and published an edition of the works of Edmund Burke, of whom he was the bosom friend and executor. D. 1809.

LAWERNOE, Sir Thomas, a celebrated English painter, was the son of an innkeeper, first established at Bristol, and afterwards at De-vizes. The latter place, being on the road to Bath, was much frequented by the rich and fashionable. Young Thomas Lawrence, while yet in petti-coats, drew likenesses with astonishing skill, and, as he was moreover possessed of great personal beauty, he soon attracted the notice of his father's customers. At the age of 13 he obtained a prize from the Society of Arts for a crayon copy of the Transfiguration. In 1787 his father went to London, and obtained an introduction for his son to Sir Joshua Reynolds, who liberally encouraged the young artist. In the same year he exhibited seven female portraits at Somerset House, and from that time his fame rapidly became established. After becoming associate of the Royal Academy, he was nominated prin-cipal painter in ordinary to George III., in 1792, George IV., when Prince-regent, commissioned him to paint the portraits of those sovereigns, warriors, and statesmen who had restored peace to Europe; and in 1814 he began his work with to Europe; and in 1914 he began his work with the portraits of the king of I'russia and Blincher. The whole collection is now exhibited in the Waterioo Hall of Windsor Castie. Of these portraits Dr. Wangen says: 'All cannot be equal in merit. I was particularly pleased with those of the pope, Cardinal Gonsalvi, and the emperor of Austria. Besides the graceful and unaflotted design, the clear and brilliant colouring, which are peculiar to Lawrence, these are distinguished by greater truth of character, and a more animated expression, than is generally met with in his pictures." In 1815 he was knighted, and from that time to his death he was the most rrom that time to his death he was the most popular portrait-pointer in England. On the death of Benjamin West, he was chosen president of the Royal Academy. Three of his best works are in the National Gallery,—John Kemble, Mrs. Siddons, and Benjamin West, B. at Bristol, 1769; p. in London, 1830.

LAWSHON, Sir Henry Montgomery, a distinguished British officer, was the eldests on of Lieutenant-Colonel Alexander. William Lawsens.

tenant-Colonel Alexander William Lawrence, some time governor of Upnor Castle, who distinguished himself by his gallantry at Seringapatam. Having received his early education at the diocesan school of Londonderry, received the thanks of both Houses of Parlia-and afterwards at the Royal Military College ment. He served under the duke of York, as at Addiscomb, he entered the military service rear-afmiral, and was killed in the encarement of the Hon. East India Company, in 1821, as a cadet in the Bengal artillery. He soon acquired the reputation of being one of the most intelligent officers in the service: and, having seen some active service in the Cabul campaign in 1843, was raised to the rank of major. In the same year he became British resident at Nepaul. He afterwards played a distinguished part in the campaigns on the Sutlej, soon after which he was made a military companion of the Bath, and at the same time promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. In 1846 he was ap-pointed resident at Lahore. It was for his able services in the administration of this important office that he was made a K.C.B. (civil) in 1848. In the following year he was appointed by Lord Dalhousie president of the board for the reduc-Dalhousie president of the poard for the recur-tion and government of the recently-annexed province of the Punjab, where his administra-tive talents were admirably proved. On the outbreak of the Indian mutiny, he was governor of Oude, and showed himself one of the firmest and most able officers in the Company's service. He fortified and defended Lucknow with great skill and bravery : but his valuable life was lost to his country when most required, he having been killed while commanding a sortie from the garrison. B. at Mattura, Ceylon, 1806; killed near Lucknow, 1857. LAWRENCE, John Laird Mair, Baron, G.C.B., K.S.I., brother of the above, who has been de-scribed as the man who saved India during the mutiny, received his education in Londonderry and at the East India College, Haileybury. He went to India as a civil servant in 1829, and in 1831 became assistant to the Resident at Delhi. He subsequently filled a variety of offices, principally in connexion with the collection of the revenue, and in 1846 was appointed commissioner of the trans-Sutlej provinces, which had recently been annexed to the British empire in India. He here showed great powers of orga-nization and administration. On the annexa-tion of the Punjab after the final defeat of the tion of the Funda after the man deat of the Sikhs at Ferozepore and Goojerat, Mr. Law-rence was appointed, along with his brother Sir Henry, one of the board of three named to conduct the affairs of that territory. Here he aided in organizing a comprehensive system of law and justice, and social and financial im-provement; and so successful were these meabrovenent; and so successful were takes the sures, and so thoroughly appreciated was British rule in the Punjab, that when the mutiny of 1857 broke out, the Sikhs adhered faithfully to the new government, and, by the supplies of men, materials, and provisions which Sir John Lawrence was enabled to send which Sir John Lawrence was enabled to send to the revolted districts, contributed largely to the restoration of order and the final suppression of the revolt. In 1856, Sir John was made a K.C.B., and in 1857 was advanced to the dignity of a G.C.B., in acknowledgment of his scruces in the critical period of the mutiny. He was made a baronet, 1853; succeeded Lord Elgin as already of Video in 1864; and on his returns. was made a minet, most as successful to the man as vicercy of India in 1863; and on his return to England in 1869 was raised to the peerage as Baron Lawrence of the Punjab and Grately. I.810.

Leake

Lawson, Sir John, law eeen, a brave English

officer, who rose from the lowest station in the navy to the rank of admiral. He served the Parliament with great fidelity, but co-operated with Monk in effecting the Restoration for which he with the Dutch fleet in 1665.

Layard, Austen Henry, lail-yard, a modern English politician and traveller, the greater portion of whose youth was spent at Florence, where he devoted himself to literature and the fine arts. He went to London, with the intention of becoming a student of the law, but, abandoning that idea, set out for the East, where he acquired the Turkish and Arabian languages, and adopted the dress and manners of the people with whom he sojourned. He subsequently went to Persia, with the intention subsequently went to Persia, with the intention of exploring the remains of Susa, and discovered the tomb of Daniel. About the year 1944 he began examining the ruins of Nimroud, and, under great difficulties, succeeded in excavating many sculptures, which have proved of the highest value in elucidating the history of Assyria and Babylonia. The immense remnants of antiquity now in the British Museum, were floated down the river Tigris upon rafts sus-tained by inflated skins, and were shipped for England at Bagdad. An account of his labours was afterwards narrated by him in his works, entitled "Nineveh and its Remains," "Monu-ments of Nineveh," and "Discoveries in the Ruins of Nineveh and Babylon," In 1848 he became attaché to the British embassy at Con-stantinople, and, in the following year, again examined the mounds at Nineveh. When it is remembered that, as Mr. Layard says, "Nineveh had been almost forgotten before history began," and that, until his discoveries, all that remained of that city, as well as of Babylon, might have been carried in "a little hand-box," might have been carried in a new manu-box, we may conceive how great have been his ser-vices to the cause of historical investigation. In 1851 he acted for a short period as undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, and, in the year following, was returned to the House of year following, was returned to the mouse or Commons as member for Aylesbury. He be-came D.C.L. of the university of Oxford in 1843, and, in 1856, was elected lord rector of the university of Aberdeen. His visit to the Crimea, while the allied French and English armies were before Sebastopol, caused him to become one of the principal advocates for the commission of inquiry into the condition of the British army, that subsequently sat. He visited India in 1857-8, during the time of the mutiny. Since 1860 he has represented Southwark. From 1861 to 1866 he was under-secretary of state for foreign affairs under Lord Palmerston and Earl Russell, and, in 1868, took office as commissioner of works and public buildings under Mr. Gladstone. E. 1817.

LEAKE, Richard, leke, master-gunner of Eng-and, who distinguished himself in several naval actions, and particularly in the engagement with Van Tromp, in 1673. He was then on board the Royal Prince, which had lost all her masts; most of her guns were dismounted, and 400 of her men killed or wounded; notwithstanding which, Leake defended the ship against a superior force, and brought her to Chatham. He was afterwards made master-gunner of fing-

He was atterwards made master-gunner of Eng-land, and storekeeper of the ordnance at Wool-wich. B. at Harwich, 1629; p. 1686. Leaks, Str John, an English admiral, son of he preceding, with whom he served in the action with Van Tromp. In 1702 he expelled the French from Newfoundland, and on his return was made rear-admiral of the blue. The year following he assisted admiral Rooke in taking Gibraltar, for which he was knighted. In 1705 he sayed that important for ress from the combined attacks of France and Spain. The same year he was engaged in the reduction of Barcelona, and in 1706 so seasonably relieved that place, that Philip V. was obliged to raise the siege. On the death of Sir Cloudesley Shovel, he was appointed admiral of the white, and com-mander-in-chief of the fleet. He became a lord of the admiralty in 1709, but retired on a pen-of the diministry in 170s, but retired on a pen-sion, on the accession of George I. B. at Rotherhithe, 1656; p. 1720. Lehrur, Charles, le'-bru(r), a celebrated French painter, who went to Rome, where he studied under Poussin. On his return to France, he was presented by Cardinal Mazarin to Louis lie was presented by Cardinal addrant to Lodius XIV., who appointed him court plainter, and director of the Academy of Artists and of the Gobelin manufactory. His chief works were "The Battles of Alexander? he was likewise the author of several valuable works, the principal of which were "The Physicalmy of Men and Animals," and "On the Character of the and Animals," and "on the character of the Passions." B. at Paris, 1619; p. 1690. Lebeum, Charles François, Duke of Placentia, was born at Coutances, in Normandy; at an carly age went to Paris; and being nominated deputy to the States-general in 1789, occupied hinself with affairs of police, finance, and do-nestic administration. In 1795 he was elected to the council of ancients, and became president in 1798. He was appointed third consul in De-cember, 1799; nominated arch-treasurer of the empire in 1804; and, in 1805, was appointed governor-general of Liguria and created duke of Placentia. Having signed the constitution that recalled the house of Bourbon to the throne. he was created a peer of France by the king, and, in the beginning of July, was appointed president of the first bureau of the Chamber of Peers. After the return of Napoleon, he accepted a peerage from him, and likewise the place of grand-master of the university, a pro-ceeding which rendered him incapable of sitting in the new Chamber of Peers, formed in August. 1815. In the early part of his life he translated the "Iliad" and "Odyssey," and Tasso's "Jerusalem." B. 1739: D. 1824.

LE CLERC, Sebastien, le(r)Mair, an eminent French artist. Pope Clement XI, knighted him, and Louis XIV, appointed him his engraver in He engraved above three thousand ordinary. He engraved above three thousand pieces, and was the author of treatises on Geometry, Architecture, and Perspective. B. 1637; D. 1714.

LE CLERC, Jean, an eminent writer and critic, brother of the last-mentioned, was ordained a minister; but, having embraced the Arminian doctrines, he left his native country, and in 1682 went to London, where he officiated for some time in two French congregations. The climate of England not agreeing with his con-stitution, he went to Amsterdam, and became professor of philosophy, Hebrew, and belles lettres in the Remonstrant College. In 1686 he lettres in the Remonstrant College. In 1986 ne commenced a literary journal, entitled "Biblio-thèque Universelle et Historique," which gained great celebrity, and was continued till 1693. From 1703 to 1713 he continued another, entitled From 1793 by 1712 he continued another, catáled prosecute his journey, with only ten guiness in 'Bibliotabene Choiste,' which was followed by his pocket. He travelled through Demnark and his 'Bibliotabene Choiste,' which was followed by his pocket. He travelled through Demnark and his 'Bibliotabene Choiste, which was the State of the Choiste of the

these he published several miscellaneous pieces editions of ancient and modern authors, a translation of the Dible into French, &c. He was, with all his learning and industry, a man of excessive vanity. B. at Geneva, 1657; D. at Amsterdam, 1736.

LECUERC, Charles Emmanuel, a distinguished French general, who obtained the hand of Pau-line, sister of Bonaparte, whom he greatly assisted after his return from Egypt. In 1802 he was appointed commander-in-chief of the expedition to St. Domingo, where he fought against the negro general, Toussaint L'Ouver-ture, but fell a victim to the climate, in the same year. B. 1772.

LECOMTE, Felix, le-komp', a famous French sculptor, who, having obtained a prize for a basrelief of the Massacre of the Innocents while he was a pupil of Vassé, was sent to Rome as a pensionary of the French School of Arts. His statue of Phorbas preserving Edipus procured him admission into the Academy; but the statue of Fénélon, in the hall of the National Institute, is considered his chef-d'aurre. During the re-volution he lived in retirement; but, at the restoration of the Bourbons, was nominated professor in the Academy of Sculpture. B. 1787: D. 1817.

LEDBU-ROLLIN, Philippe, lod'-roo rol'-la, a French politician and political writer, was edueated for the profession of the law, and com-menced practising as an advocate in 1832. From that year until 1819, he was extensively em-ployed in defending political prisoners, and, both in his speeches and writings, proved himself one of the most vehement members of the ultraliberal party in France. When the revolution of 1848 burst forth, his influence in the Chamof 183 bitts forth, his instance in a classifier of Deputies became only second to that of Lamartine; and, on the establishment of the provisional government, he was nominated minister of the Interior, in which position he zealously endeavoured to republicanize his native country. On becoming a candidate for the pre-sidency, his name was third on the list; Louis Napoleon and Cavaignae being first and second, and Lamartine last. Subsequently, he became a most violent opponent of Louis Napoleon's government, and, after stirring up the people of Paris into an insurrection, in June, 1849, he fled to England, where he afterwards resided. In 1850 he published a work called "The Decline of England," wherein he severely condemned the country whose hospitable laws shielded him from the resentment of the authorities then paramount in his native country, and from which he had fled. B. 1807.

LEBYARD, John, led 'yard, an American, readered remarkable by his adventures. His father dying while he was young, he was left poor and friendless. After spending some years and the standard to the s friendless. After spending some years among the Indians, he took passage from New York to Loudon as a common sailor. In 1776 he went with Captain Cook on his third voyage, as corportal of marines; was with that great naviga-portal of marines; was with that great naviga-tor when he was killed, and, sune years after-wards, wrote an account of the voyage. Con-ceiving the daring idea of traversing the un-explored regions of America, from Nootka Sound to the eastern coast, he left England in 1786, to Lee Lefebvre

He entered that city without money and almost without clothing, but contrived to obtain mother country. Having exhibited both skill without cioning, but constitued to obtain small sum, and permission to travel with convoy to Yakutsk, in Siberia. He had reached the latter place, in 1788, when he was suddenly arrested by order of the empress Catharine, escorted to the frontiers of Poland, and informed the hard and the back are also as a constant of the contract of the formation of the contract o that he would be hanged were he again found in Russia. He arrived in England after undergoing the severest hardship, and very soon afterwards set out, under the auspices of the Society for Promoting African Discovery, to explore the regions of Africa. It is narrated that on being asked when he would be able to start, his reply was, "To-morrow morning." He left London was, "To-morrow morning." He left Longon in June, 1788, and two months afterwards reached Cairo, where, being attacked by a bilious disorder, he died at the beginning of the follow-ing year. B. at Groton, Connecticut, 1751; D.

LEE, Nathaniel, le, an English dramatic writer, was the son of a clergyman, and educated at Westminster school, whence he removed to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took his bachelor's degree. Being disappointed of a followship, he went to London, and made an attempt as an actor, but without success, on which he turned tragic poet. His first piece was "Nero, Emperor of Rome," which came out in 1875, and had a favourable reception. He continued to write a play every year till 1681, when he began to show symptoms of insulity.

These increasing, he was confined in Bedlam, whence he was discharged in 1888. He wrote whence he was discharged in 1005. He wrote two plays after this, but never entirely recovered his senses, and died in 1691, in consequence of a drunken frolic. Lee had some power in depicting the passions, but his language is raut and bombast. Of all his plays, "Alexander the Great" is the only one remembered. E. at Great" is the only one rememorer. u Hatfield, Herrfordshire, about 1659.

Luz, Charles, a military officer, distinguished during the American War, was a native of North Wales. Entering the army at a very early age, he served under Burgoyne in America, and afterwards in Portugal. In the control between the colonies and England, he wrote on the cide of the former, and entred their service. the side of the former, and entered their service. In 1775 he received a commission from Congress, and, as a major-general, accompanied Washington to the camp before Boston. He was afterwards invested with the chief command in the southern department, where his conduct in the attack of the British upon Sullivan In the attack of the British upon Sunvain Island raised his military reputation. While tharching through New Jersey to join Washing-ton, Lee was made prisoner by the English, as he lay carelessly guarded, at a considerable distance from the main body, and carried to New York. Sir William Howe, affecting to regard him as a deserter from the British army, treated him in a manner unworthy of a generous enemy, until the surrender of Burgoyne; after which event he was exchanged. Lee was brave which event evens the was believed in action, and possessed military talents of a high order; but he was jealous of the power of Washington, and at the battle of Monmouth, in 1778, disoboyed that general's orders. For this he was tried by court-martial, and suspended for a year, on which he resigned his commission.

commission. b. 1731; b. 1782.

Lee, Henry, also an American general, was born in the state of Virginia, and commenced his military career as captain of one of the six companies of cavalry raised by his native state, arter see had thrown on the authority of the mother country. Having exhibited both skill and energy on several occasions, Lee was raised to the rank of major, and intrusted with the command of a separate corps. In the re-treat of Greene, before Cornwallis, into Vir-ginia, Lee's legion formed the rear-guard of the American army, and repelled every attempt of the enemy to impede its march. From that time to the termination of the war, General Lee was constantly engaged, and performed many valuable services to the republic. When the independence of the United States was ratified, he was elected a member of the house of delegates, was made governor of Virginia in 1792, chosen a member of Congress in 1799, and retained his seat till the accession of Mr. Jefferson tamen as seat the accession of Mr. Joneson to the president's chair, when he retired into private life. B. 1756; D. 1818.

Lies, Robert Edmund, son of the preceding, was born in Virginia, and after graduating at West Point, entered the United States army in 1829. He served with distinction until 1861, when he resigned his commission in consequence of the secession of Virginia from the Union, and became commander-in-chief of the troops supplied by his state to the Confederate States army. His protracted defence of Richmond from 1862 to 1864, when he was compelled to evacuate to 1864, when he was compelled to evacuate that city and surrender to Grant, has placed him among the first generals of the 19th century. In 1868 he became president of Washington College, Virginia. B. 1808.

LEEGH. John, Leech, a modern English draughtsman, who gained great popularity by the effectiveness of his sketches, which appeared in "Punch" and other periodicals. He was educated at the Charterhouse school, and studied drawing at the Royal Academy. B. in London, 1817; D. 1864.

Leechman, William, leech'-man, a learned Scotch divine, particularly celebrated as a lecsource arme, particularly celebrated as a lecture on theology, was educated at the university of Edinburgh. Elected professor of theology at Glasgow, he signalized himself by alloy combating the reasonings of Voltaire, Bolingweke, and Hume; and in 1761 was raised to the fiftee of principal of the university. n, in Lausebinks 1764 n, 1768 narkshire, 1706; D. 1785. Leeves, the Rev. William, Leeve, rector of Wrington, in Somersetshire, was the composer of the beautiful plaintive air of "Auld Robin Gray," which he wrote in 1770, but was not known to be the author until 1812. He also composed much sacred music, distinguished by considerable taste and feeling. B. 1749; D.

LEFERVEE, François Joseph, le(r)-faibr', duke of Dantzie and marshal of France, was the on of a miller, and, on the outburst of the French revolution, had reached the grade of ergeant-major in the French guards. During ergeant-major in the French guards. During he subsequent events, his rise was extremely upid; in 1794 he became general of division. After distinguishing himself at Fleurus, at the assage of the Rhine, at the battles of Altensirchen and of Stockach, he was made marshal in 1804. He fonght at Jena, and took Dantzie, hitherto considered imprepathle in 1807. He performed signal services in Spain, in the Peninsular War, and in Austria, in 1814. Marshal Lefébyre was a stanch adherent to the artmos of Nanoleon, and while in nommand of ortunes of Napoleon, and while in command of the 17th military division, whose head-quarters ere at Paris, greatly assisted him on the 18th

On the death of that prince, he greatly assisted in obtaining the proclamation of Peter I., whose intimate friend and counsellor he became. The eran noninated him general of his troops, admiral of his navy, and viceroy of Novgorod. Lefort urged his master to carry out many important reforms, accompanied him in all his journeys, assisted him to civilize the Russians and to create a marine and an army. He likewise defeated the Turks, and organized a system of finance. On learning his death, Peter is reported to have said, "Alas I have lost my best friend," B, at Geneva, 1656: D. at Moscow. B. at Geneva, 1656; D. at Moscow, 1699.

LEGENDRE, Louis, le(r)'-zhandr, a French historian, who was canon of Notre Dame, and abbot of Claire Fontaine, in the diocess of Chartres. His principal work (for he was the author of several) is a "History of France," 3 vols. folio; reprinted in 8 vols. 12mo. B. at Rouen, 1659; b. 1733.

LEGENDRE, Louis, one of the leading French revolutionists, after having made himself notorevolutionists, after having made himself noto-rious by heading street processions, was em-ployed by Marat, Danton, and other leaders of the popular party, to forward their schemes; and became one of the chiefs of the Jacobin club. In 1793, he was chosen a deputy from Paris to the National Convention, and voted for the death of the king. For a long time he figured as one of the most violent terrorists under Robespierre; but he afterwards joined Tallien and his party, in the destruction of his former leader; and signalized himself by dispersing the members of the Jacobin club, locking up their hall, and delivering the keys to the Conven-tion. From this time he retended to be the hall, and delivering the keys to the Convention. From this time he pretended to be the friend of moderation, declaimed against the saugularay measures in which he had before participated; and when the Jacobins revolted against the Convention, put himself if the head of the troops who defended the legislative body, and contributed much to the defeat of his old associates. He ultimately became a member of the council of ancients, and died in 1797.

LEGENDE, Adrien-Marie, a celebrated French mathematician, who, in 1797, was emged with Cassini and Mechani in connecting the observatories of Greenwich and Paris by a chain of triangles. His whole life was devoted chain of triangles. His whole life was devoted to teaching and enlarging the boundaries of mathematical science. His "Elements of Geometry" metry" is a standard work, and has been trans-lated into English by Sir David Brewster. His principal works, in addition to the preceding, were an "Essay on the Theory of Numbers," and "New Method for determining the Orbit of Comets." He was likewise an industrious contributor to the Memoirs of the Paris Academy of Sciences. B. at Paris, 1751; D. 1833. LEGGE, George, Baron Dartmouth, leg., an eminent naval commander, was brought up under Admiral Spragge, and at the age of twenty their authers sprage, and as he age to wrenty the state of the case, but his work has taken such a hold obtained the command of a ship. In 1873 he the case, but his work has taken such a hold was appointed governor of Portsmouth, master on common opinion, that she his generally be of the horse, and gentlemen to the dake of lieved to have been nurdered at her husband's York. In 1832 he was elevated to the peerage, in sufjection Formany years Elizabell's favorable and the year following sent to raze the fortificar-remained single, but, in 1872, he is said to have

Brumaire. n. at Rousseh, in the department Upper Rhine, 1755; p. at Paris, 1890.

Lipor, Francis, le(p)-for', a general and admiral in the service of Kussia, served at first in the French Swiss Guards, but afterwards went to Russia, where the ezar, Theoderical and of the devite when the Prince of Orange and of the devited the part of the winds of the service of Russia, where the ezar, Theoderical and of the flex when the Prince of Orange and of the flex winds when the Prince of Orange in the Prince of the service of the borse, general of the ordnance, and constable of the Power. He had also the control of the service of the service of the service of the service of the borse, general of the ordnance, and constable of the Power. He had also the service of the borse, general of the ordnance, and constable of the Power. He had also the service of the service of the borse, general of the ordnance, and constable of the Power. He had also the service of the borse, general of the ordnance, and constable of the Power. He had also the service of the borse, general of the borse, general of the ordnance, and constable of the Power. 1647.

LEIBNITZ. Gottfried Wilhelm, Baron von, libe. nitz, a celebrated German philosopher, whose father was professor of jurisprudence in the university of Leipsic, but died when his son was six years old. At the age of fifteen, Gettfried began his studies at Leipsic, whence he removed begain his studies at helpsic, whence he removed to Jena. In 1664 he graduated at the former university, and about the same time applied him-self to the study of the Greek philosophers; but, having chosen the law for his profession, took his doctor's degree at Altdorf, after which he obtained a post at the court of the elector of Mayence. In 1672 he was at Paris, where he formed an acquaintance with several mathemaiticians. He next visited London, where he was introduced to Newton, Boyle, and other emimen men. He subsequently engaged in a bitter dispute with Sir Isaac Newton, relative to the discovery of the method of fluxions, to the merit of which invention Leibnitz laid claim. The Royal Society of London, however, decided in favour of the English philosopher. The elector of Hanover, George I., employed Leibnitz in writing the "History of the House of Brunswick," 1700 he was admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, and on the erection of that of Berlin, was appointed perpetual president. In 1711 he was made aulic councillor to the emperor, and Peter the Great of Russia ap-pointed him privy councillor of justice, with a pension. He was a profound mathematician and metaphysician, and a man of lively genius, but vain and avarieious. His works are, "Scriptores Rerum Brunsvicensium," "Codex "Somptores Rerum Brunsvicensum," "Goder Juris Gentlum Diplomatieus," "Miscellaneous Questions of Philosophy and Mathematis," the "Essai de Theodiceé," to shew that the world, as it is, is the best world possible, "Metaphysical Tracts," and "Poems, "Matin and Freuch. A complete edition of his works, if 8 wale was apphilished as former in 1727."

and revener a complete entrol of his works, in 6 vols., was published at Geneva in 1767. E. at Leipsie, 1646; D. at Hanover, 1716.

Letchster, Robert Dudley, Carl of, 1es-ter, was the son of Join Dudley, duke of Northumberland, who was executed in 1553 for asserting the above of the Acceleration. claims of his daughter-in-law, Lady Jane Grey, to the crown. Robert Dudley had been nominated master of the ordnance in the reign of Queen muster of the ordinated in the regil of Ugent Mary, but on the accession of Elizabeth he rose rapidly into favour, and had numerous honours and places heaped upon him, and her majesty proposed him to Mary Queen of Scots for a husband. Dudley appears to have indulged the ambitious idea of sharing his sovereign's throne; and, to effect it, he is suspected to have nur-dered his own wife, the beautiful Amy, daughter of Sir John Robsart, whom he married at an early age. In 1500 this lady was found dead at early age. In 1960 this and was found dean as Cummor, but no positive proof of her being mur-dered has ever been adduced. The great novelist, Sir Walter Scott, in his "Kenilworth," has somewhat distorted the historical facts of the case; but his work has taken such a hold

LELY, SIR PETER.

LIEBIG, BARON VON.

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM.

LIVINGSTONE, DAVID.

Tojcester

he had by her a son called Robert, whom he called in his will his "base son." He afterwards married the countess dowager of Essex, and finding Lady Shellield intractable to his proposals for a separation, is said to have taken her off by poison. In 1584 a book was printed, en-titled "Leicester's Commonwealth," which was a severe attack upon his public and private character. The year following he was appointed governor of the Protestant Low Countries, at the request of the inhabitants; but his proceedings there did not satisfy the queen, and he returned to England the same year. In 1588 he was made lieutenant-general of the army assem bled at Tilbury, and died the same year. B. abou 1532.

LEICESTER OF HOLKHAM, Thomas William Coke, Earl of, hol'-kam, an eminent agriculturist and improver of land, who found his estates in Norfolk nearly a barren waste, and converted them, by judicious management, the granting of favourable leases to his tenants, and the example he himself set, into fertile and productive land. So eminently successful was he in the development of the resources of the soil, that his rent-roll, from being £2000 a year when he succeeded to the estate, rose to ur wards of £20,000 before his death, and this while the condition of almost every person living on the property had improved in a nearly It is stated that, shortly before ratio. his death, he and his family stood upon the decks of a ship built of oak, the acorns from which the timber composing it grew having been planted by himself. He succeeded his father as M.P. for Norlolk in 1776, and acted with the Whigs during the long period in which he held a seat in the Lower Housenamely, till 1933, when he was raised to the peerage as earl Leicester of Holkham, although there was already a like title in the Ferrers family. He was twice married: first, in 1775, to Jane, daughter of James Lemox Dutton, Esq., who died in 1800, and by whom he had three daughters; and, second, to Anne Amelia Keppel, a daughter of the earl of Albemarle, the marriage taking place when the earl was seventy years of age, and the bride not quite nineteen. By her, however, he had five sons and a daughter. B. 1752; D. 1842.

Leign, lai, Charles, a physician and naturalist, who published the "Natural History of rainst, who published the "Natural Instory of Laneashire, Cheshire, and Derby," a "History of Virginia," and "Exercitationes de Aquis Mineralibus." D. near the opening of the 18th century.

LEIGH, Sir Edward, a learned biblical critic and historian, was educated at Oxford, studied in the Middle Temple, and afterwards devoted several years to professional and literary researches. He was M.P. for Stafford, and colonel in the Parliamentary army: was expelled from the House in 1648, along with other Presbyte-rian members; and occupied himself, after the Rat memoers' and occupied ministry, are the Restoration, in literary pursuits. His most important work is entitled "Critica Sacra." n. in Leicestershire, 1802; p. 1671.

Letgurox, Alexander, latton, a Scotch physician, who became noted for his sufferings on account of tracts which he published against Charles I. and the Church of England. For 641 privately married Lady Shelfield, although he the Parliament appointed him keeper of Lambeth Palace, then converted into a state prison. He died insane in 1614. B. at Edinburgh, 1587.

LEIGHTON, Robert, archbishop of Glasgow, son of the preceding, was an exemplary parish priest, and the magistrates of Edmburgh chose him president of their college. Soon after the Restoration, Charles II. nominated him bishop of Dunblane, which diocese he governed with great moderation. On account of the violent animosities between the Episcopalian and Presbyterian parties, he resigned his see, but the king constrained him to accept the archbishopric of Glasgow, in which station he ande another effort at moderation, but in vain; on which he resigned his dignity. He then led on which he resigned his dignity. He then led a retired life in Sussex. His principal work is a "Commentary on St. Peter's Epistles." B. at Edinburgh, 1613; p. in London, 1684. LEKEUX, John, le-kw', a celebrated architectural engraver, whose works on Gothic architecture were greatly instrumental in reviving the study of that style of art in England. His most important works were the engravings in Britton's "Architectural Antiquities of England," Pugin's "Architectural Antiquities of Normandy," Neale's "Westminster Abbey," Normandy," Neale's "Westminster Abbey," and the "Memorials of Oxford and Cambridge,"

n. in London, 1783; p. 1846.

Leland, John, le'-land, an eminent English antiquary, was educated at Christ's College, Cambridge, and All Souls College, Oxford, On entering into orders, he became chaplain to Henry VIII., who gave him the title of king's antiquary. By virtue of the royal commission, he searched various cathedrals and religious houses for curious records and other remains of antiquity; in which employment he spent six years, travelling over every part of the king-dom. In 1545 he presented his collections to the king, under the title of "A Newe Yeare's Gifte." This, however, was only the beginning of what he proposed to execute; but while he was intent on his studies, he became insane, in which state he continued till his death. His "Itinerary" and "Collectanea" were published by Hearne, in 1710. B. in London, at the beginning of the 16th century; n. 1552.

LELAND, John, a learned English divine, whose labours in defence of Christianity procured him the degree of D.D. from two university. sities in Scotland. His principal works were a "Defence of the Christian Rollgion" against Thindl, a "View of the Deistical Writers that have appeared in England," "The Advantage and Necessity of the Christian Revelation," and "Family Devotions," B. in England, 1691; D.

Dr. Thomas, a learned divine, who wrote a "History of Ireland," "The Life of "hillip of Macedon," and "The Principles of Iuman Eloquence," which last was attacked by Junian Eloquence, which has the assess of Demosthenes. B. at Dublin, 1722; D. 1785.

Lely, Sir Peter, le'-le, a famous painter, studied under Grebber at Haarlem, after which he went to England, where he at first painted landscapes and historical subjects; but, finding more encouragement given to portrait-painting, urned his attention to that branch of his art, and became univalled in the graceful ren-dering of heads; the hands of his portraits were remarkably fine and elegantly turned. He these his nose was slit, his ears cut off, and a was in great favour with Charles I. and Charles public whipping was milicted on him. In 1610 | II., by the latter of whom he was knighted, and for whom he painted the voluptuous beauties of his court. This collection is now at Hampton Court. B. at Socst, Westphalia, 1617; D. in England, 1680.

Lemaire

LEMAIRE, James, lai'-mair, a Dutch navigator of the 17th century, was the son of a merchant of Egmout, in North Holland. He embarked on an expedition with Cornelius Schouten, and in 1616 discovered the strait which now bears his name. He also visited some hitherto unex-plored islands in the South Seas, and died soon after his return, Dec. 31, 1016.

LEMBRY, Nicolas, lem'-e-re, a celebrated French chemist, who, in 1683, visited England, being of the reformed religion, then violently persecuted in his own country. He was well received by Charles II., and great offers were made to induce him to continue there; but in 1686 he returned to France and turned Roman Catholic. In 1699 he was made associate che-Catholic. In 1899 he was made associate che-mist to the Royal Academy, and the same year became a pensionary. He wrote a "Course of Chemistry," which went through many editions; a "Universal Pharmacepeda," a "Treatise on Simple Drugs;" and a "Treatise on Antimony." B. at Rouen, 165; p. 1715.—His son houts be-came physician to the king, and to the Hidel eame physician to the king, and to the Hoto-Dieu at Paris. He was also a member of the Academy of Sciences, and the author of a "Treatise on Aliments," another on "Worms in the Human Body," and several papers in the Memoirs of the Academy. n. 1743. LINGYE, François, Ic(p) Moore, a French historical painter, whose principal work is the ceiling in the Hall of Horeules, at Versaillee," the largest painting in Europe, containing 142 figures, and being 64 feet long and 54 broad, without being divided by any architectural interruptions. n. at Paris, 1689; committed suicide in a fit of insanity, 1737.

LEMON, George William, Lem'-on, an English divine and lexicographer, who published, in 1789, an "Etymological English Dictionary," in 1 vol., which displayed considerable industry and learning. B. 1726; D. 1797.

LE MONNIER, Peter Charles, lc(r)-mon'-nc-ai, a French astronomer, was member of the Academy of Sciences and of the National Institute, and accompanied Maupertuis in his journey towards the North Pole for measuring a degree of the meridian. His principal works were, "Astronomical Institutions," "Lunar Nautical Astronomy" and "Tables of the Sun, and Cor-rections for those of the Moon." B. at Paris,

1715; p. 1796.

LEMONTEY, Pierre Edouard, le(r)-mon'-tai, a French poet and jurist, who, during the delibera-tions on the fate of Louis XVI., and in the other extravagant measures of the revolutionists, advocated the cause of humanity and justice; but vocated the cause on numanny and possec; one was obliged to save himself from the fury of the terrorists by precipitately quitting France for Switzedand, where he resided till after the overthrow of Robespierre's party. Deeply affected with the calamity which had involved Lyons, his native city, in rain, he published the beautiful ode, "Les Ruines de Lyons." He afterwards travelled through Italy, and wrate various operas, romances, and poems; in 1894 was appointed one of the censors of the drama; and at the Restoration was invested with the order of the Logion of Honour, and appointed director-general of the book trade. Among his works, the most successful are the opera of "Palma, ou le Voyage en Grèce;" his "Essai sur l'Etablissement Monarchique de Louis XIV.;" and a romance, entitled "La Famille de Jura, ou Irons-nous à Paris?" B, 1762 : p. 1826.

LEMPRIBRE, John, D.D., lem'-prece, an eminent classical scholar, was a native of Jercey; received his education at Reading, Winchester, and Pembroke College, Oxford; graduated at that university; was head-master of Abingdon grammar-school, and afterwards of the school grammar-school, and are twards of the School at Exeter; and, on resigning the latter, was presented to the livings of Meeth and Newton Petrock, in Devonshire, which he held till his death. His principal works are the well-known "Classical Dictionary," and a "Universal Biography." D. 1824.

L'ENCLOS, Ninon de, lan'-klo, a celebrated French lady, whose mother wanted to place her in a convent, but was prevented by her father, who was a man of ealety. Ninon lost her parents at the age of 15, and possessing great charms and a lively temper, was followed by some of the greatest men, but would never unite herself in nearrage. She was the friend of Molière and Fontenelle, and had a fine understanding; but it has been truly said of her, that though she thought like Epicurus, she lived like Lais. She is, however, represented to have been perfectly unmercenary in her amours; and her wit and behaviour were such, and so low the moral tone of the time, that even virtuous ladies courted her acquaintance. She was held in great respect by men of genius, who consulted her upon their works. There are a few genuine letters by her in the works of St. Evremond, but those under her name, addressed to Villarceaux, De Seviene, &c., are fictitions. She is said to have succeeded by artificial means in preserving the yearhold bloom of her features, long after the period at which female beauty usually factor; and in consequence numerous cosmeties and toilet articles have been called by her name. B. at Paris, 1616; D. 1706. LENFANT, James, lange fa, a French Protestant divine, who was educated at Geneva, and became minister of the French church at Heidelbegg; but on the invasion of the Palatinate, in 1688, by the French, retired to Berlin. He pub-lished histories of the Councils of Constance, Bale, and Pisa; he likewise translated the New Pestament into French, with notes and a learned introduction, in conjunction with Beausobre. He was also author of a History of Pope Joan; Sermons; "A Preservative against Uniting with the Church of Rome," &c. n. at Bazoche, France, 16d1; p. at Beelin, 1728. LENGLET DU FRESNOY, Nicholas, lan'-ylui, a French writer, who became secretary to the French ambassador at Cologne, and librarian to French and assession at Conogno, and incrarian to Prince Eugene. His works are voluntinous, but incorrect; the best is his "Method for Studying History," which has been translated into English. In all Benuvais, 1674; In, 1755. LENNON, Charlotte, Jean-Jone, and Allebacher, and allebache ardson the novelist. She wrote a popular novel, entitled "The Female Quixote," which was fol-lowed by "Shakspeare Illustrated," in which she gave the novels and histories on which the plays of Shakspeare are founded. She likewise plays to disasse and the former. She have a plays in this play the play the Woodstock, and, in 1610, was chosen speaker; in which capacity he made a considerable fortune by joining the ruling party. He was also masby joining the ruling party. He was also master of the rolls, a commissioner of the great scal, and chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. He was removed from his office in 1653; but, the year following, became speaker of the Parliament called by Cromwell, and subsequently acted as speaker of the Rump Parliament. At the Restoration he was exempted ment. At the Restoration ne man from the act of indemnity, but obtained a parletters were published. B. at Henley-on-Thames, 1591; D. 1662.

EMPERORS OF THE EAST.

LEO I., or the Elder, lo-o, emperor of the East, ascended the throne in 457. He was a Thracian, of obscure birth, but attained the highest military rank, and was proclaimed emperor by the soldiers in succession to Marcia-He confirmed the decrees of the Council of Chalcedon against the Eutychians, and renewed the war against the Vandals; but was unfortunate, through the treachery of his general Aspar, whom he put to death with his family in 471. The Goths, to revenge the fate of Aspar, poured into the empire, which they ravaged to the walls of Constantinople. p. 474.

Leo II., or the Younger, was the son of Zeno and of Ariadne, daughter of Leo I. He succeeded his grandfather in 474, under the guar-diauship of his father, who caused himself to be proclaimed emperor a few months after-wards. Lee II, is said to have been put to death by his own father, after reigning for only ten months.

Leo III., was called the Isaurian, from the country of his birth, where his parents were poor mechanics. Lee entered the army, and became general-in-chief of the troops in Asia, under Justinian II. In 716 he marched against Theodosius III., who had been proclaimed emeror on the deposition of Justinian II.; and peror on the deposition of destinant 1., and Theodosius resigned his crown to him in the following year. The Saracens, having ravaged Thrace, laid siege to Constantinople, which was bravely defended by Leo, who compelled them to retire. His reign, however, was tyrannical and he drove the patriarch Germanus from his seat, in which he placed Anastasius. He was also guilty of burning the library at Constantinople, containing a quantity of medals and above 30,000 volumes. The pones Gregory 11. and Gregory III. having excommunicated him, he prepared an armament to invade Italy; but the ships were destroyed by a storm. D. 741.

LEO IV., the son of Constantine Copronymus, and grandson of Leo III., succeeded his father in 775. In his time the controversy raged between the Iconoclasts, or image-breakers, and their adversaries, both of whom he protected by turns. He repulsed the Saracens in Asia,

Dr. at Constantinople, 751; D. 780.

Leo V., or the Armeuian, from the country of which he was a native, rose to the rank of general by his valour; but being accused of treason, the emperor Nicephorus disgraced him, and imprisoned him in a convent. Michael Rhangabus, on ascending the throne in 811, restored him to his rank; but Leo, profiting by the misfortunes of his master, headed a military revolt, and was elected emperor by the troops in 813. He was one of the most violent of the Iconoclastic princes. Assassinated, 820.

LEO VI., styled the Philosopher, was the son and successor of Basilius the Maccdonian, and ascended the throne in 886. The Hungarians, Saracens, and Bulgarians having united against the empire, he called to his assistance the Turks. who entered Bulgaria, which they ravaged with fire and sword. Leo drove the patriarch Photius from his seat; and Nicholas, one of the successors of Photius, excommunicated the emperor; for which Loo deposed him. He wrote some books, the most interesting of which is a treatise on Tactics, printed at Leyden in 1612. D. 865; D. 911,

PODES

DOES.

LEO I., Pope, sumarued the Great, was an Italian by birth, and had been employed by Celestin I. and Sixus III. on several important mis ions. He succeeded the latter in 440, and distinguished hinself by his zeal ogainst the Manicheaus, Pelagians, and Entychians. In his time the Council of Chaleedon was called; and, while sitting in the East, Atfila and the Iluns ravaged the West, and advanced towards Rome. The emperor Valentinian applied to the work who went to meet Atfila and by the the pope, who went to meet Attila, and, by the power of his cloquence, prevailed with him to leave Italy. Genserie, however, sacked Rome in 455. He left behind many epistles and sermons, which have been printed. He was succeeded by Hilarius I. D. 461.

ceeded by Hilarius I. D. 461.

Leo II. was a native of Sicily, and succeeded Agathon in 642. He pretended to have an authority over the Eastern church, and was succeeded by Benediet III. D. 633.

Leo III. succeeded, in 795, Adrian I. In 809,

he was attacked while riding in a religious pro-cession, and almost killed; but he recovered, and retired to Germany. Charlemagne restored him to his seat, and he crowned that monarch emperor of the West. On the death of Charlemagne, a new plot was formed against the pope, who caused the conspirators to be put to death. p. 816.

LEO IV., a Roman, succeeded Sergius II. in S47. The Saracens having invaded the Eccle-siastical States, he marched against them and obtained a complete victory; after which he put the city of Rome into a state of defence, and bunded the town of Loopolis. D. 855.

Lao V., a Benedictine monk, in 903 succeeded Benedict IV., but was deposed by his chaplain Christopher. The annals of the papacy during the tenth century are very confused, and there is no mention of Leo's subsequent

LEO VI. became pope in 929, in succession to John X. He is said to have been put to death

by Marozia. (See Marozia.)

Januaria, Leo VII. was elected in succession to John XI., son of Marozia, 637. He negotiated a peace between Hugo, king of Italy, and Alberic, duke of Rome, the son of the celebrated Marozia. He is said to have been an irreproachable man and zealous ecclesiastic, and was succeeded by Stephen VIII, D. 909.

LEO VIII. was elected pope on the deposi-tion of John XII., in 963, under the paironage of the emperor Otho I. On Otho's withdrawal, John re-entered Rome, and drove away Leo; but John dying soon afterwards, Benedict V. was chosen pope. The emperor Otho subsequently took Rome, and, exiling Benedict, reinstated Leo VIII. D. about 965.

LEO IX., who bears the distinction of a saint in the Roman calendar, was born of an illustrious family, became bishop of Toul, and, in other famous musicians. His many operas are 1049, was chosen pope. He convened several councils to reform the manners of the ecclesiastics and to condemn the errors of Berenger. The Normans having marched into Italy, in 1053, he went against them at the head of a German army; but was defeated, taken prisoner, and conducted to Benevento. Some sermons and letters of his are extant. D. 1054.

Leopold

LEO X., Giovanni de' Medici, second son of Lorenzo the Magnificent (see Medici), at the age of 11, was made an architishop by Louis XI., king of France, and, at 13, Julius II. invested him with the dignity of legate, and he served as such in the army which was defeated by the French, near Ravenna, in 1512. He was taken prisoner after that battle; but the soldiers showed the most superstitious veneration for his person, as the representative of the pope. He was elected to the papacy in 1513, and his coronation was celebrated with unusual pomp. Lee was fond of magnificence; but he had a taste for letters, and liberally patronized men of learning and genius, particularly poets. He terminated the disputes which subsisted between his predecessor and Louis XII. of France, concluded the Council of Lateran, and formed a splendid library, which he enriched with ina spinion initially, which is consistent to mu-der him was discovered in 1316, and Cardinal Petrucci, the chief of it, was hanged. Leo formed two great projects; the one to effect a general association of the Christian powers against the Turks, and the other to complete against the rurs, and the other to compare the church of St. Peter. To aid these schemes, he issued plenary indulgences, by which the nurchasers procured the pardon of their sins. These indulgences being carried into Germany, occasioned the secession from the church of Rome, or Reformation, commenced by Luther. (See LUTHER.) Leo, however, throughout his life took little notice of the great religious life took little notice of the great religious movement. A war also broke out between the emperor Charles V. and Francis I. of France, who both courted the alliance of the pope. If not an exemplary pope, he was at least a splendid and magnificent prince, and a noble parken of art and learning. He is the subject of Roscoe's fine biography, entitled the "1.16 and Pontificate of Leo X." b. 1475; p. 1521.

LEO XI. was of the family of the Medici, and was declared a very a 1028. was elected pope in 1605, at a very advanced age, and died in less than a month afterwards. LEO XII, was of a noble family of the Ron agna, and became pope in 1823, in succession to Pius VII. He embellished Rome, encouraged letters, and enriched the library of the Vatican.

LEO, the name of six kings of Armenia, who reigned between the years 1123 and 1375. These princes were constantly at war either with the crusaders or with the Turks. The last of the name, Leo VI., was driven from his kingdom name, Leo VI., was driven from his kingdom by the sultan of Egypt, and took refuge in France, where he died, 1393.

Lzo, archbishop of Thessalonia, was one of the revivers of Greek literature and a good nathematician. Lived in the 5th century.

Lzo, John, sumamed Africanus, a Moor of Granada, who wrote, in Arabia a "Description of Africa," and the "Lives of the Arabian Philosopheri." D. about 1528.

Live Lowello e addated the living capacity of the Arabian Philosopheri."

614

now unknown, but his masses and other sacred works are still regarded as masterpieces of church music. B. at Naples, 1694; D. 1755.

LEO ALLATIUS. (See ALLATIUS.) LEO THE GRAMMARIAN, one of the authors of the "Byzantine History," lived in the 11th century.

LEONARDO BONACCI, lai-o-nar'-do, surnamed "of Pisa," a celebrated Italian mathematician, who first introduced in Europe the study of algebra. His work is preserved in manuscript at Rome. Lived at the beginning of the 13thcentury, Rome, Invector in segmining of the fatheentry.

Leonardo Da Vincet. (See Vincet)
Leoni, Jacomo, lat'-o-ne, a Venetian architect, who settled in England, and there pubhished, in 1742, an excellent edition of "Palladio's Architecture." D. 1746.

o's Arenitecture. D. 1740. Leonicenus, Nicholas, lui'-o-ni-se'-nus, professor of medicine at Perrara, was the first who translated Galen's works, to which he added commentaries and illustrative notes. He likewise reproduced, in Italian, the "Aphorisms of Hippocrates," and other works, p. 1428; p.

1521 LEONIDAS, le-ou'-i-das, king of Sparta, a cele-brated hero, who opposed Xerxes when he invaded Greece, and fought the whole Persian host at the Straits of Thermopyle with such bravery as to check the progress of the invader. At last a detachment of the Persians, led by Ephialtes the Trachinian, by a serret path up the mountains, came down on the rear of the Spartans, and obtained a complete victory. Out of the 300, only one man escaped, and he was treated with ignominy by his countrymen, for leaving so glorious a tield, where death was more honourable than life. A monument was afterwards erected upon the spot, with this inscription: "Stranger, tell the Lacedamonians that we lie here, obeying their laws." This battle happened 480 s.c.

LEOPOLD I., le'-a-pold, emperor of Germany, was the second son of Ferdinand III. and of Was the second son of Fernman 111. and or Mary Anue of Spain. He became king of Hun-gary in 1655, king of Rohemia in 1657, and emperor in 1658. He contended against France and the Turks, and suffered in his war with both: France took from him Alsace, and many frontier places of the empire; and the Turks would have captured Vieuna, had they not been compelled to raise the siege by John Sobieski, king of Polaud. In 1607, Prince Eugene of Savoy concluded the war by totally defeating the Turks at Zenta, in Hungary. B. 1640; D. 1705.

LEOFOLD II., the son of Maria Theresa of LEOPOLD 11., the son of Maria Theresa of Austria and her husband, Francis of Loraine, succeeded his father, in 1785, in the duchy of Tuscany, which he governed with great wis-dom, and finally abolished the Inquisition in that country. In 1780 he succeeded the empe-ror Joseph II., and removed to Vienna, where, by his judicious and liberal measures, he consoli-name, Leo VI., was curven from his kingdom by the suttant of Egypt, and took relage in France, where he died, 1393.

Lio, archibishop of Thessalonia, was one of the revivers of Greek literature and a good nathematician. Lived in the 9th century.

Lie, John, surnamed Africanus, a Moor of Granack, who wrote, in Arabig, a "Description of Africa," and the "Lives of the Arabian Theology, and after the peace of Ryswick, in 1697, was reinstated in his duchy, which had been taken from his futher bythe French. He restored his country to a flourishing condition, maintained the poor, and assisted the nobility who had been reduced. He founded a university at Cuneville, and was a liberal patron of the arts and sciences. B. 1679; D. 1729.

LEOPOLD, George Christian Frederick, king of the Belgians, was the third son of Francis Anthony Frederick, duke of Saxe-Sanlfeld-Coburg, brother of the late duchess of Kent, and consequently uncle to her majesty Queen Victoria, as well as to her late consort, Prince Albert. In 1816, while Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, he married the Princess Charlotte Augusta, only child of the Prince-regent, after-wards George IV. The highest hopes were formed of that union; and, as the husband of the heiress-apparent to the throne of Great Britain, Leopold obtained the highest esteem.

After the sudden death of the Princess Charlette, in 1817, he continued to live in retirement at Claremont, and was created by the king field-marshal and member of the privy council. In 1830, the Belgian provinces were lost to the erown of Holland, in consequence of the revolution of Brussels. A provisional government was formed, and the throne of Belgium was offered to the duke de Nemours, son of Louis Philippe. That prince declining it, Leopold was next solicited to accept the crown. After at first refusing, he was induced to ascend the throne of Belgium in 1831. Leopold promised, in his opening speech to the Belgian parliament, to encourage industry and to rule according to the principles of civil and religious liberty; a promise which he fully redeemed. In 1832 he contracted a matrimonial alliance with Louise-Marie-Thérèse, princess of Orleans, and eldest daughter of Louis Philippe; by whom he eldest daughter of Louis Philippe; by whom he had issue the present (1869) king of the Belgians, Leopold II., the count of Flanders, and Charlotte, the widow of Maximilian, Emperor

Charlotte, the widow of Maximilian, Emperor of Mexico. n. 1709; p. 1865.
LEOTAUN, Vincent, Idi-o-to, a distinguished French mathematician, who published a work entitled "Examen Circuil Quadrature," in which he proved the impossibility of demonstrating the quadrature of the circle. p. 1672.
LEFLURS, Marcus Emilius, lepi-idus, one of the circuits of the circuits.

the triumvirs with Octavius and Mark Antony. He obtained Africa as his share of the empire : but was deprived of it by Augustus, whereupon he retired into private life. n. in obscurity

13 B.C.

LEPSITS, Karl Richard, lept-se-us, a German archeologist, who published, in 1837, a short treatise on the hieroglyphics of Egypt, and other works. In 1812 he went to Egypt, as chief of a party of learned men, for the purpose of investigating the antiquities of that country. He discovered several monuments of the Pharaoh dynasty, and excavated the tombs of fifty of the Ethiopian kings of Egypt. He likemiy of the standard anges of Egypt. To have wise contrived to obtain a ground-plan of the celebrated temple of the Memonium. After his return, in 1846, he published many valuable works in connexion with his researches; among the rest, "Letters from Egypt," which have been translated into English; "The Chronology the rest, "Letters from Egypt," which have been translated into English, "The Chromology of Egypt," and the "Monuments of Egypt and Elifolpa," n. at Namuburg, 1813. Lusanours, N. J., Let'-c-bor, a distinguished optical-instrument maker, who constructed most of the apparatus for the Paris Observatory. B. to Worth, 1970. at the days in France, 1762; D. at Paris, 1840.

LERMONTOV, Michael Ivanovitch, ler-mon-

tof', a Russian poet and novelist, served as an officer in the imperial guards until the year 1837, when, in consequence of a poem which he wrote upon the death of the Russian poet Pushkin, the emperor Nicholas sent him to the Caucasus. This poem was first printed in 1854, in Herzen's "Polar Star," a Russian periodical published in London. While serving with the army of the Caucasus, he wrote his novel, "A Hero of Our own Times," which was afterwards translated into English. He likewise produced many beautiful poems, the action of which is chiefly laid in the mountains of the Caucasus, Just as his fame was beginning to spread over Sust as his fame was beginning to spread over Europe, the writer fell in a duel before he hal attained his 30th year. His complete works were published in St. Petersburg in 1852, and were subsequently translated into German. In Russian literature, he takes rank immediately after Pushkin. B. 1811; D. 1811. LESAGE, Alain Réné. le(r)-saj', a celebrated French novelist, who, after completing his edu-cation at the Jesuits' college at Vannes, was engaged in a financial post in Brittany: but, in 1692, went to Paris, and devoted himself to 1092, went to Paris, and devoted himself to different pursuits. He commenced by translating and initiating several Spanish works, and, in 1707, produced his first drumatic work,— "Crispin the Rival of his Master," In the same year he published "The Devil on TSitieks," the plot of which was borrowed from the Spanish author, Guovara, In 1704 he composed his comedy of "Turcaret," wherein he wittingto the formers reported whose conventions. ridiculed the farmers-general, whose opposition reducted the harmers-general, whose opposition nearly prevented the production of the piece upon the stage. In 1715 appeared the first part of his greatest work, "Gil Blas;" but the conclusion was not made public until 1735. conclusion was not made public until 1713, end the was likewise the author of a considerable number of comedies and other humorous dramatic pieces. His fann, however, chiefly rests upon his "Gil Blas," which has appeared in numerous translations, and has been reprinted in a hundred different editions. An activate was read to disturb the originality of the control attempt was made to dispute the originality of the plot of this celebrated fiction; but it was never shown that Le Sage was not the true inventor of it. One of his sons became a celebrated actor, under the name of Montmenil. B.

at Sarzeau, 1608; D. 1747.
LESLEY, John, les'-le, bishop of Ross, in Scotland, accompanied Queen Mary from France to Scotland, and soon after became to meet at York to consider the complaints made against Mary by her subjects, Lesley appeared on behalf of his mistress, whose cause he pleaded with great ability. He also tried many expedients to procure her liberty, for which he was committed to the Tower; but, in 1573, recovered his liberty, on condition of quitting the kingdom. When abroad, he endeavoured to interest many foreign princes in the cause of Mary, and wrote several pieces in her defence. Being appointed viear-general by the bishop of Bonen, he was, while visiting that diocess, seized by the Hugemots, who would have sent him to England; but he recovered his liberty by paying a raisom. He afterwards obtained the bishoptic of Constance. His principal work is a history of Scotland, cutitled, "De Origine, Moribus, et Rebus gestis Scotorum," 2, 1527;

LESLIE, John, les'-le, bishop of Clogher, LESLE, John, led-le, bishop of Clogher, whose first episcopal preferment was the bishopric of the Orkneys, whence he removed to Raphoe, in Ireland, where he built a stately palace, in which he endured a long siege by Cromwell, but was at last forced to surrender. In 1661 he was translated to Clogher. D. 1671, aged above 100 years.

Leslie, Charles, a theological controversialist, who, after receiving his education at Trinity College, Dublin, went, in 1671, to England, where he commenced the study of the law. A where he commenced the study of the law, few years afterwards, he entered upon holy orders, and became chancellor of Cloyne, in Ireland. Although a fervent Protestant, he throughout his life manifested the greatest devotion to the cause of the Stuarts, and accom-panied the Pretender both in Frunce and in Italy. In his old age, he so gibt permission to return to his native land. George I. acceded to his request, and he thereupon took up his residence at Glaslough, in Ircland. His theological dence at Ginstough, in Ireima. His theological writings excited much diention in his time; and one of them, entitled "A Short and Easy Method with beists," is still required as of emisterable value. In addition to pamphiets against Hoadley, Locks, and Burnet, he published controversin precess autaconistic to Quakers, Jews, Sociaiens, Deists, Presbylerians, and Roman Catholies. His own views were those of a zealous Protestant, combined with an advocacy of high monarchical principles. B. in narroway of mgn minarchical principles. B. III Ireland, about 168; p. there, 1722. Lussie, Sir John an eminent natural philo-sopher, who, after completing his education at the universities of at the universities of the states and the universities of introduction to individuals of literary and scientific celebrity, set out for London, where he for some time gained a subsistence by translating and compiling scientific works. In 1805 he became professor of mathematics in the university of Edinburgh, not without considerable opposition on the part of the clergy, who objected to the appointment on account of Leslie's referring to Hume in a landatory manner in one of his treatises. In 1809 he obtained the chair of natural philosophy, upon the death of Professor Playfair; and from that period until his death, produced a succession of valuable works on subjects connected with natural philosophy. In 1832 he was knighted. He contributed treatises on Achromatic Glasses, constituted treates on Achromatic Gisses, Acoustics, Climate, Cold, Dew, Meteorology, &c., to the "Encyclopedia Britanuica," and also fur-nished the "Edinburgh Review" and the "Edin-burgh Transactions" with many excellent burgh Transactions? with many excellent papers. Among his larger works may be cited "The Elements of Geometry," "Elements of Astruct Philosophy," and an "Account of Experiments and Instruments depending on the relation of Heat to Moisture." If it evas also the inventior of the differential thermometer. 3, at

Largo, Fifeshire, 1766; D. in Scotland, 1832.
LESLIE, Charles Robert, R.A., a distinguished at tist, has been claimed as an American citizen, but was in reality born in London, where Its parents were staying at the time. His father and mother were both born in America; but the and mother were noted born in America; out the encestors of his father settled originally in America about the year 1745. When six years of age he was taken to Philadelphia, and was able talents for design, he was sent to London in 1813, with letters of Introduction to Benjamin West, at that time president of the Academy.

As a student of the Royal Academy, he evinced great industry, and in the year 1820 exhibited der." He became an R.A. in 1826. In 1833, to the surprise of his friends, he accepted the post of drawing-master to the United States Military Academy; but he soon returned to England. As an illustrator of the productions of Shakspeare, Pope, Goldsmith, Addison, and Cervantes, he achieved great triumphs. His delineation of Sancho Panza has never been neation of Saucho Pauza has never been equalled. Of his best pictures, it will be sufficient to enumerate "Unde Toby and the Widow" and "Sancho Pauza and the Duchess," both of which are in the national collection at the South-Kensington Museum, Leslie's technical skill was exceedinely great, and his refined and graceful humour admirably distributed in the second second control of the property of and his relined and gracult manout aummany fitted him to give pictorial reproductions of situations in the comedies of Shak-peare and Molière. He was also a clear and pheasant writer, and wrate "Memoirs of the Lide of John Constable" and a "Handbook for Young Joint Constance and a "mandook for Young Painters," n. in Loudon, 1791; p. 1859. Lessins, Ferdhand de, belseep, an eminent French engineer and diplomatist, who repre-sented the interests of his native country, as sented the interests of ins marke country, as vice-consul and consul, in Spain, Portugal, Cairo, and other places. In 1854 he formed the project of cutting a canal, through the Isthmas of Suez; and although Robert Stephenson, and other eminent engineers, English and continental, pronounced the idea to be impracticable, M. de Lessess energetically defended his plan, and commenced the work under the auspices of the Egyptian government in 1859. In ten years the works were so far completed as to admit of the passage of steamers along almost the whole of the water-way. n.

at Versailles, 1805.
Lessing, Gotthold Ephraim, les'-sing, an eminent German poet and general writer, who, after studying at Leipsic, went to Berlin, where he made himself known by the publication of his celebrated fables. He subsequently pro-duced his "Letters on Literature," which greatly contributed to improve the taste of his countrymen. In 1760 he accepted the post of secretary to the governor of Breslau; in 1770 he was appointed keeper of the Wolfenbüttel library, and soon afterwards produced his famous tragedy, "Emilia Galotti." He enriched the literature of Germany with masterpieces of different kinds, especially in the departments of blography, archeology, and the drama. n. at Kamentz, in Upper Lusatia, 1729; n. 1741.—His brother, Karl Gotthelf, and his nephew Karl Friedrich, was both distinguished in the male of the first state. were both distinguished in the world of letters, L'ESTRANGE, Sir Roger, le-strain; an English writer, who received a liberal education, and, in 1639, attended Charles I, in his expedition to Scotland. He adhered to the royal cause, and, in 1614, was condemned as a spy; but, after remaining in confinement four years, made his escape, and endeavoured to stir up an insurrection in Kent, which failed; whereupon he went abroad. In 1653 he returned to England, under shelter of Cromwell's act of indemnity. After America about the year 1745. When six years the Restoration he was appointed emsor of the of age he was taken to Philadelphia, and was press; he also set up a newspaper, called the there sent to school, and subsequently appren. "Public Intelligencer," which was discontinued ticed to a bookseller. Having shown consider- on the publication of the "London Gazette," in

Le Sueur

Leverrior

1665. In 1679 he commenced another paper, called the "Observator," designed to vindicate the court measures; this procured him the honour of knighthood. He was an industrious honour of knighthood. He was an industrious writer, and besides his own pamphlels, which were numerous, he published translations of several books, particularly Josephus, from the French version of P'Andilly, Senecus "Morals," Ersmuss " Colloquies," and Quevelon Gressen, a celebrated French artist, surnamed the "Raphael of France," stalled under Vorte, and, early in life, attracted the notice of Poussin. Displayer great dispersion of Pancy and Poussin. Displayer great dispersion of gourt not remove he having reach dispersion of gourt not remove he playing great disregard of court patronage, he worked only for private individuals and for reliworked only for privace individuals and for reg-gious establishments, and, while still young, retired to a cloister. He was the first painter in France during the reign of Louis XIV, and surpassed Lebrun, his rival, in grace and vigour.

Among the most important of his works were the "Life of St. Bruno," in twenty-two subjects;
"St. Paul preaching at Ephesus," and "The Martyrdom of St. Lawrence." B. at Paris, 1616: D. 1655.

LE SUEUR, Jean François, an eminent French composer, who became chapel-master to several cathedrals in France, and subsequently professor at the Conservatoire de Musique. He comsor at the Conservations de musique. As com-posed live grand operas, the most successful of which were "The Cavern" and "Paul and Vir-ginia." He also wrote a treatise on Ancient Music, which is highly esteemed, as casting new light upon the obscure subject of the art of music among the Greeks. The emperor Napoleon I created him a knight of the Legion of Honour, and appointed him his director of music, a near Abbeville, 1766; p. 1837.

Lext, Gregory, lai'-to, an Italian historian, who, after studying at Home, went to Geneva, where he abjured the Catholic religion, and afterwards resided in England. While there he was known to be collecting materials for a hiswas shown to be concerned materials of a his-tory of the court of Charles II., and the king seeing him one day at his levee, told him to take eare that his history did not give offence. To which Leti replied, "I will do what I can; but if a man were as wise as Solomon, he would "Why then," retorted Charles, "be as wise as Solomon; write proverbs, and let history alone." Solomon; write proverse, and test is soly andie. Leti, however, did not take this advice. The history appeared, under the title of "Teatro Britannico;" and the author, as Charles had foreseen, did give offence, and was ordered to quit norescr., and give one nee, and was ordered to duit the kingdom, when he went to Amsterdam. Among his works are, Lives of "Sixtus V.," "Charles V.," "Queen Elizabeth," "Oliver Cromwell," the "History of Geneva," and a "History of the Cardinals." But the whole are so full of error and fiction, that they may be regarded rather as romances than authentic hisorles. B. at Milan, 1630; D. at Amsterdan, LETOURNEUR, Pierre, le-tour'-noor, a French author, who was the first to make the works of Shakspeare known to his countrymen, through the aid of a translation. He also translated the poems of Young and Ossian, and the novel of "Clarissa Harlowe." B, at Valognes, 1736; D. at Paris, 1789.

LETTICE, John, let'-lis, a clergyman, poet,

1768 he abandoned college life, and became secretary to the British embassy at Copenhagen. He subsequently engaged as private tutor in some families of distinction; was presented to the living of Peasemarsh, in Sussex, in 1785; and was also a prebendary in Chiehester Cathedral. His works consist of "Fables for the Fireside," His works consist of "Fables for the Fireside," "A Four through various Parts of Scotland," and "Miscellaneous Pieces on Sacred Subjects," besides sermons, tracts, and ponus; a translation of Holberg's "Parallel Lives of Famous Ladies," and, in conjunction with Professor Marry, "The Antiquities of Herculaneau." B. in Northamptiquities of Herculaucum. In In Avenancy-tonshire, 1737; D. 1832. LEUCHTETS, leu-sily-pas, a philosopher of Elea, was the pupil of Zeno, the master of Democritus, and the originator of the atomic system of physics. According to this theory, Leucipus and his disciples, by ascribing a sensible power to the particles of matter, and set-ting them in motion, accounted for the origin of the universe without the interposition of divine agency. Desartes borrowed from him his hypothesis of "Vortices," and Kepler also availed himself of the speculations of Leucippus. Lived in the 5th century B.c.

LEUWENHOEK, Authory van, loi'-ven-he(r)k, a celebrated microscopical observer, who ac-quired a great reputation by his experiments and discoveries. To the Royal Society of London, of which he was a member, he forwarded about one hundred papers on the blood, bloodvessels, muscles, the eye, the brain, &c. His other writings were collected and published in other writings were collected and published in 1699; of these as Raplish revision was produced in 1890. n. at Delft, Holland, 1632; p. 1793. Lavure, Charles James, kei-zer, a modern novelist, distinguished for his fletions illustra-tive of Irish life and character, and for the vigour and variety of his incidents. He stadied at Trinity College, Dublin, and afterwards took the ALD. degree at Göttingen. After being at-tached to the British legation at Brussels, and spending some time in the practice of his pro-lession, he abandoned it for literature. At the outset, of his correct in this latter comployment. outset of his career in this latter employment, dust of his career in this inter employment, the was, perhaps, the most popular author of the day; his "Harry Lorrequer," "Charles O'Malloy," "Tom Burke," &c., were in every one's ynne" is an example of this. His latest novels are "Sir Brooke Foshrooke," "The Brambieghe of Bishoy's Folly" etc. Under the pseudonym of "Comelius O'Dowd," he has for some time entirituted a series of brilliant essays on the topics of the day to "Blackwood's Blagazine." n. at Dublin, 1800.

Laymantza, Urbain Jean Joseph, Leopeter etc., 18 ymantza, Urbain Jean Joseph, Leopeter etc.,

a modern French astronomer, celebrated for his discovery of the planet Neptune. His first scientific labours were in chemistry; for, in 1837, he published two treatises on the combination of phosphorus, as well as taking some part in the chemical department of the "Dic-tionary of Conversation," but in the year 1816, be had acquired sufficient celebrity as an astronomer to obtain admission to the Paris Academy of Sciences, and, a few months later, made known his great discovery. The same re-sults had been attained by the English astronoand miscellaneaus writer, was cutuated at mer Adams. (See Adams.) Each however, Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, of which he had laboured in ignorance of the other's purticular a fellow and public tator. In suits, but the French astronomer was the liest Lewis to publish the discovery. Leverrier soon rose to mention only his most popular works in to the highest honours which his country be-each of these departments. "The Life and stows upon scientific men; he was made officer of the Legion of Honour, director of the Board of Longitude, and professor of the Faculty of Sciences. The Royal Society of England like-wise awarded to him, as well as to Adams, its Copley medal, the highest honour in its power to bestow, electing him a member at the same to bestow, electing nim a memober at the same time. B. at St. Lo, France, 1811.

LEVI, David, le'-ve, a London Jew, of con-siderable acquirements, though of humble birth and occupations. He was first a shoemaker, and afterwards a hatter, but his works evince and afterwards a hatter, but his works evince great research and ability. In 1787 he nettered into a polemical controversy with Dr. Priestley, whose "Letters to the Jews" he answerd in two sories of epistolary essays. He was also the author of a volume on the rites and ecomonies of the Jews; "Lingua Sacra, or a Herward English Dictionary," "The Pontatench in Hebrew and English," a translation of the Hebrew Litting," "Dissertations on the Prophecies," and some other works. z. 1749; p. 1780.
Lavis, Pierre Marc Gaston, Duko de, lai-re', an able French nobleman, who at the betiming an able French nobleman, who at the beginning of the revolution was chosen a deputy to the States-general by the nobility of Dijon : but, though friendly to a reform of abuses in governamount, he opposed the destruction of the mo-narchy, and in 1792 became an emigrant, and joined the royalist army. Being wounded in the engagement at Quiberon Bay, he went to England, where he resided till the establishment of the consular government, when he returned of the consular government, when he returned to France, but passed his time in retirement and literary pursuits. On the restoration of Louis XVIII. he was raised to the peerage, and admitted a member of the Academy. His works consist of "Maxims and Reflexions," "The Travels of Kauphi, or New Chinese Letters," "Recollections and Portraits," and "England at the England of the Nincteenth Century." D. 1830.

LEVINGSTON, James, Earl of Callendar, lev'ing-ston, a famous soldier of Scotland, was gentleman of the bedchamber of Charles I, who created him Lord Levingston of Almont in 1633, and afterwards carl of Callendar. In the civil war, he at first joined the Parliament; but afterwards distinguished himself by his activity in the king's service. He took Carlisle, where he found a considerable supply of ammunition, and endeavoured to rescue Charles from his confinement in the Isle of Wight, p. 1672.

LEVIZAC, Jean Pons Victor Lecoutz de. lev'e-zak, a French grammarian, who, for many years, taught his native language in England. years, august his nearest large and be named his "French Grammar," first published in 1797; "French and English Dictionary," and "Dictionary of Synonymes." D. in London,

Lewes, George Henry, loo'-es, a modern English littérateur, and an industrious and Lewes, English Autorateur, and an industrious and excellent contributor to the "Edinburgh," "Westminster," Blackwood's and Fraser's Magazines, and to the "Morning Chronicle" and other newspapers, on the establishment of the "Leader" newspaper, in 1849, ho became each of these departments. "The Life and Works of Göthe," and "The Life of Maximilien Robespierre," are at the head of the first; the "Blographical History of Philosophy," the "Exposition of Courte's Positive Philosophy," and a popular treatise on Physiology, being his most important productions in the two latter most important productions in the two latter walks. His play called "The Game of Specula-tion," was produced under the pseudonym of Slingsby Lawrence. D. in Loudon, 1817. Lewis, John, low-ex. a learned divine and "Wickliffe," Trunslation of the New Testawitekings Translation of the Ace Testament," "The History and Antiquities of the Isle of Thanet," "The History of the Abbey and Church of Feversham," the "Life of William Caxton," &c. n. 1675; p. 1748.

LEWIS, Meriwether, an American officer employed by the government of the United States. with Clarke, to make discoveries in the northern parts of the American continent, with a view to the extension of commerce to the Pacific Ocean. In 1805 they undertook a journey for the pur-pose of discovering the sources of the Missouri and passed the winter in an icy region, 500 leagues beyond its confluence. Lewis was afterward elected governor of Louisiana, while his comrade Clarke became a general of its militia, and agent of the United States for Indian affairs. Lewis was born 1774; and died in 1809,

Lewis, kings of France. (See Louis.)
Lewis, Matthew Greeore, an English novelist, was the son of a wealthy man, who was under-secretary for war. After studying at Christchurch, he went to Germany, where he became acquainted with Göthe, and imbibed a taste for the mysterious and the tragic. The best known of his romances is the "Monk first published in 1794; a work charged with horrors and libertinism of spirit. He was nevertheless a kind and charitable man, as was evitheless a kind and charitable man, as was evi-denced by his treatment of the slaves upon the Jamaica estates be inherited from his father, He was a fluent versifier, and his "Alonzo the Braye" and "Dill Jones" are still found to contain interest. In 1812 he produced a drama outified "Timour the Turtar," and subsequently a work called "Residence in the West Indies a work care in the west limits since reprinted in Murray's Home and Colonial Library. B. in London, 1775; p. at sea, 1818.

LEWIS, Sir George Cornewall, Bart., M.P., a modern English statesman and historian, studied at Eton and Christchurch, Oxford, and was called to the bar in 1831, although he never practised. After filling various subordinate posts under the government, he was appointed poor-law commissioner in 1830, secretary of the Board of Control in 1847, under-secretary of the Home department in 1848, and secretary of the Treasury in 1850. Three years previously, he had been elected M.P. for Herefordshire, but lost his seat in 1852. He was signin returned to Parliament for Radnor in 1855, and was soon afterwards made chancellor of the Exchequer under Lord Palmerston, an office he vacated in 1858. He resumed office in 1850 as Home sceretary, and in 1861 was transferred to the War department on the retirement of Lord Herbert anguaines, and to the "Morning Chronicle" department on the retirement of Lord Herbert and other newspapers. On the establishment of Lea. Ills first important literary production of the "Leader" newspaper, in 1849, he became was a translation of Müller's "listory and Antis literary callor; but ceased to have any con-tiquities of the Doric Race," which, together nerion with the print in the year 1854. He with the "Inquiry into the Credibility of Early distinguished himself in listorical, pollose. Roman History:" may be considered the most phical, and scientific literature. We have space profound of his historical efforts. Among his political works, the following are the best: "On the Use and Abuse of Political Terms," "Treatise on the Method of Reasoning in Polities," and the "Government of Dependencies," In 1854 he became editor of the "Edinburgh Review," a post he resigned upon taking office as chancellor of the Exchequer. In politics, as well as in literature, he exhibited a liberal and painstaking, rather than a brilliant and original panistaning, rather than a oritinant and original turn of mind. B. 1809; D. 1865. Læwis, John Frederick, R.A., adistinguished modern artist, and president of the Society of Painters in Water-colours, who in early life painted both in oil and water, and engraved his works himself. He achieved the greatest success in both Spanish and Eastern subjects. His Spanish pictures were exhibited during the rears 1835-10; the best of them being—"A Flesta in the South of Spain," "The Death of the Bull," and "The Suburbs of a Spanish City." After the year 1840, he almost exclusively painted scenes of Arnb and Turkish life, a task painted seems of Arab and Turkish into a task for which he qualified himself by a long sejourn in the Last. The "Halt in the Devert," the "Arab Scribe," and "Aramian Lady," afford examples of his great power of drawing and billiant colouring. In 1835 he was elected president of the Society of Painters in Vater-colours. In 1860 he was chosen A.lkA., and colours. In 1850 he w R.A. in 1865. B. 1805.

Lewis

LEYDFN, JOHN OF. (See Boccold.) LEYDRN, Lucas van, li'-den, a Dutch painter

in oil, distemper, and on glass; also an eminent engraver. His picture of the "History of St. Hubert" procured him a great reputation. Many of his works are contained in the galleries of English connoisseurs. B. at Leyden, 1494; p. 1533.

LEYDEN, John, ley'-den, a physician, but more distinguished as a poet and oriental scholar, was a native of Roxburghshire, Scotland, and was the son of a small farmer. Displaying in early youth an eager desire for acquiring knowledge, his parents contrived to send him to a college at Edinburgh, where he first studied theology, but relinquished it for medicine, and, in addition to the learned lanacquired French, Spanish, Italian, guages, acquired French, Spanish, Italian, German, Arabic, and Persion. In 1801 he assisted Sir Walter Scott in procuring materials and illustrations for his "Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border," and republished "The Com-playnt of Scotland," with a learned preliminary dissertation, notes, and a glossary. His passion discretation, notes and a glossaly. Its passive for reading was enormous, his memory most retentive, and when he met with a work that interested him he forgot everything else, and would continue its perusal until it was either finished or he was interrupted. This trait in his character is said to have suggested the idea of Dominie Samson to Sir Walter Scott. Having obtained a doctor's degree, Leydon was appointed assistant surgeon on the Madras establishment; after which he was made professor of the native dialects in the Bengal College; from which situation, however, he was removed, to be judge of the 24 Pergunnals of Calentta. His power of acquiring languages was truly won-derful, and during his residence in India he devoted himself to the study of oriental literature; but he did not long survive the influence of the climate. His "Postical Remains" were other chinate. In Trotten Remains" were others, likely there originated or tested almost published in 1810. n. 1775; n. 1811. Luwnp, Edward, Albeida, a Weish antiquery, To bin the department of organic chemistry who employed a considerable part of his life in is greatly indebted for numerous discoveries of 6446 searching into the Welsh antiquities, in the execution of which task he perused or collected a great deal of ancient and valuable matter from their MSS.; transcribed all the old charters of the monasteries that he could meet with; travelled several times over Wales, Cornwall, Sectland, Ireland, Armoric Bretagne, countries inhabited by the same people; compared their antiquities, and made observations upon the whole. Many of his observations were inserted in Gibson's edition of Canden's "Britannia."

He also published, in 1707, the "Archæologia Britannia. or en Assamt of the Laurenteelle Britannica; or, an Account of the Languages, Histories, and Customs of the Original Inhabitants of Great Britain, &c.," folio. He left in manuscript an Trish-English dictionary, and other proofs of his learning and industry. B. about 1670; D. 1709. LIBANIUS, li-bai'-nc-us, an ancient sophist,

.. ho became so eminent a teacher at Constantinople, that some other professors procured his banishment, on the charge of practising magic. He then went to Nicomedia, where he obtained a great number of disciples; amongst whom was Julian, afterwards called the Apostate. His "Remains" were published at Paris in 1606, and in 1627. B. at Antioch, Syria, 314; D. about 395.

Licinize Caise, it-six'-c-us, a Homan tribune, of a plebeian family, who rose to the rank of tribune, when he obtained the sumanne of Slolo, or Useless Spront, on account of the law which he enacted forbidding any one to possess more than 500 acres of land : alleging as his reason, that when they cultivated more, they could not pull up the useless shoots (stolones) which grew from the roots of trees. He also made another law, which allowed the plebeiaus to share the consular dignity with the patriciaus; and he himself became one of the first plebeian consuls, B.c. 362.

LICINIUS, Flavius Valerianus, emperor of the East, was the son of a Dacian peasant. became a soldier in the Roman army, and Maximianus subsequently made him his condjutor in the empire, and gave him the government of Pannonia and Rhætia. Constantine had a great esteem for him, and bestowed his sister on him in marriage; but afterwards a serious difference broke out between the two emperors, which ended in the death of Licinius.

after several battles, a.p. 321.
Lithera, Justus, Baron von, le'-big, a distinguished German chemist, who in early life served in an apothecary's establishment, but was afterwards sent to the university of Bonn, and still later, to Erlangen, where he took the degree of M.D. In 1822 he went to Paris, where he devoted himself to the study of chemistry. devoted himself to the study of elementry. The first result of this labour was the composition of a paper on "Fulminates," which on bring read, in 1821, at the Institute of France, brought the young chemist under the notice of Baron Humboldt, who was then residing at Paris. Through Humboldt's influence, Lichig was soon after appointed extraordinary professor of chemistry at Glessen, where, in 1826, he founded a laboratory for teaching practical chemistry. This was the fumous Glesson establishment, in which the best chemists of Germany and England have been educated. With the assistance of Hoffmann, Will, Fresenius, and others, Liebig there originated or tested almost the highest importance. As he is a clear and Francis II. in 1808. De Ligne's reputation as a clegant writer, the result of his profound wit was of the highest order in continental labours has been made papable to the mind of society. He was an industriant writer, and left health is society.

and published by Madame de Stad ("Chemistry in its application to Agriculture in 1809, n. at Brussels, 1735; p. 1814, and Physiology;" "Principles of Agricultural Julin, Earl, H'phonece, field-mar-Chemistry;" Animal Chemistry; or, Chemistry shall of the English army, who served in all the

has done more to popularize the study of b. 1678; p. 17 chemistry than any other single book ever written. Liebig's great taleuts and distin. who, in 1636; b written. Liebig's great talents and distin-guished services have been appreciated very extensively. In 1815 he was made a baron by became fellow of the Royal Society of England, and was also requested to fill several professorships; which offers he refused. He was a fellow of almost every learned body on the continent of Europe and in America; and, in 1854, a sub-scription, amounting to $1000, was raised in Europe for the purpose of presenting him with five pieces of plate. Although we have only quoted those works of Liebig which have been reproduced in England, he has been the author of a large number of others. B. at Darmstadt. 1803

arus, Quintus, li-gair'-e-us, proconsul in Africa, who conducted himself so well in that station, that, at the desire of the people, he was for £10,000, which offer was treated with con-appointed perpetual governor. He opposed tempt, n. at Darham, 1618; p. 1657. appointed perpetual governor. He opposed Casar, who pardoned him after the defeat of Scipio. Not thinking his life safe, he absented himself from Rome, on which account Tubero accused him; but Ligarius was defended by Cicero and acquitted. He was one of the con-spirators with Brutus and Cassius against Cassar.

ут, John, lite'-foot, a learned English divine, was born at Stoke-upon-Trent, in Stafdivine, was norn as store-upon-treat, in Saa-fordshire, and educated at Christ's College, Cambridge. He made great progress in the Greek and Latin languages, and applied himself to Hebrew with assiduity and success. In 1629 he printed his first work, entitled "Erubhim; or, Miseellanies, Christian and Judaical." He distinguished himself as a zealous promoter of the Polyglot Bible, and, at the Restoration, was one of the assistants at the Savoy con-ference, and became vice-chancellor of Cam-bridge. The works of Lightfoot, who, for rerence, and became vice-chancellor of Cambridge. The works of Lightfout, who, for biblical learning, has had few equals, were published by Strype, in 1700. n. 1042, n. 1675.

Latenz, Charles Joseph, Prince de, Iern, a Leibrated general in the service of Austria, famous for his wit, the graces of his person, and for his military talents. It distinguished himself under the Austrian standard during the Saven Verse, War and in the subsequent, com-Seven Years' War and in the subsequent campaigns, becoming in 1771, licutenant-general. He was a favourite with Maria Theresa, and particularly with Joseph II., who, in 1782, sent him to Russia on a mission to Catharine II. He became the intimate friend of Catharine, and was charged to participate with the Russian general Potemkin in acting against the Turks, In 1789 he greatly contributed to the taking of Belgrade. He subsequently fell under the displeasure of the successors of Joseph II., but was nevertheless created field-marshal by

LILBURNE, John, lil'-barn, an enthusiast, who, in 1636, became assistant to Dr. Bastwick, and was employed by him in circulating his seditions pamphlets, for which Lilburne was whipped, pilloried, and imprisoned. In his confinement he wrote several virulent tracts against the church; but in 1640 he regained his liberty, and was rewarded by Parliament with a grant of £2000, out of the estates of the royalists. He then entered the army, and became a colonel, in which capacity he behaved gallantly at the battle of Marsten Moor; but, publishing a libel against the earl of Manchester, was confined in the Tower. In 1613 he was released and remunerated; but he still continued writing libels, particularly against Parlicment, for which he was heavily fined and banished. Lilburne withdrew privately to Holland, where he joined the royali ts, and proposed to restore the king

Lillo, George, lil'-lo, an English tragic write; who carried on the business of a jeweller during many years with great success. His plays, many years wire great success. Ans pages, founded on common incidents, are constructed with the purpose of sho, incr how easy is the advance from small to greater crimes. His best play is "Fatal Curiestly," His "George Barniwell" was usually acted on boxing-night, it having been held to convey a useful lesson to young men; but the custom may be said to have died out. n. 1600; n. 1739.

LILLY, John, lill-le, an early English dramatic and general author, who published "Euphnes," a description of different characters, and also wrote some plays which were acted before queen Elizabeth. He likewise produced "The Maid" Mctamorphosis; "The Woman in the Moon," &c. n. in Kent about 1553; n. about 1680.

LILLY, William, an English astrologer, after receiving some education, went to London, and became book-keeper to the master of the and became book-keeper to the master of the Salters' Company, on whose death he married, his widow. In 1622 he became the pupil of Evans the astrology, and soon excelled his master. He was employed by both parties during the civil wars, and even Charles I, is said to have made use of him. Lilly was cer-tainly consulted respecting the king's projected escape from Carisbrook Cavile. He, however, gained more from the Parliament party; and the predictions contained in bit almancks had the predictions contained in his almanacks had a wonderful effect upon the soldiers and common people. After the Restoration, he was mon people. After the Restoration, ne was examined respecting the king's excentioner, who, he affirmed, was Cornet Joyce. His principal works are, "Christian Astrology;" "A Collection of Nativities;" "Observations on the Life and Death of Charles, late King of Englad;" "Annus Tenchrosus, or the Black Year." B. at Diseworth, Leicestershire, 1603; p. 1631.

Lilv

LILY, William, an eminent English grammarian, who, after completing his education at Oxford, went to visit the Holy Land. In this journey he learned the Greek language at He returned to England in 1509, and Rhodes. in 1512 he was appointed master of St. Paul's school; which trust he discharged with great reputation, and educated many eminentscholars. Some parts of his "Latin Grammar," which was ordered by royal authority to be used in all schools, were written by Erasmus and Colet. B. at Odiham, Hants, about 1103; D. in London, of the plague, 1523. LINACRE, or LYNACER, Thomas, lin'-a-ker, an eminent English physician, who, after completing his academical studies, went to Italy, where he studied under the same preceptor with the sons of Lorenzo de Medici, and, acquiring the Greek language, was enabled to peruse the the Greek Impringe, was enabled to periest the works of Aristotic and Galen in the original, being, it is said, the first English physician who had done so. On his return, he took his doctor's degree, and was made professor of physic at Oxton. Henry VII. appointed him preceptor to Prince Arthur; he also became physician to the king, and to Henry VIII. If founded two medical lectures at Oxford, and one at Cambridge, and may be considered the first founder of the College of Physicians in London. Anxions to improve the practice of physic in England, he applied to Cardinal Wolsey, and obtained a patent, by which the physicians of obtained a patent, by which the physicians of London were incorporated, that "illiterate and bondon were neorported, that micrate and ignorant needless ters might no longer be allowed to practise the art of healing." Linaere was the first president, and held the office as long as he lived. In 1500 he entered into orders, and ob-tained the precentorship of York, which he resigned on being made prebendary of West-minster. He was a man of great natural sagacity, a skilful physician, and one of the best

Greek and Latin scholars of his time. n. at Canterbury, about 1400; n. 1524.

LINCOLN, Abraham, link-un, the son of a Kentucky farmer, who in early life was a boatman on the Mississippi and avoodcutter. Having educated himself, he became, in 1834, a member of the Illinois legislature, and soon after began to practice at the bar. Owing to his uncompromising opposition to slavery, he was cleeked president of the United States by the Republi-can and Abolitionist party in 1860. His election led to the immediate secossion of the Southern States, and the civil war which followed. The result was the abolition of slavery. He was re-elected president in 1861, but, on April 14, was shot in a theatre at Washington by a fanatic named Wilkes Booth. B. 1800.

LIND, JENNY, (See GOLDBOHMIDT, Madame.) LINDLEY, John, Li.D., lind'te, a distinguished English botunist, was the son of a nursery-garden proprietor at Norwich, and from his earliest years evinced a great inclination for the study of botany. After translating Richard's "Analyse du Fruit" from the French, and contributing some valuable papers on botany to the "Transactions" of the Linnaum Society, to the "Prinsactions" of the Linuxan Society, the went to London, where he was engaged by Sunss of Shalispeare, an computer the Dramate Energeloguella of Plants." His first work of characterized by grace and feeling. In about importance was published in 1832. This was the "Introduction to Systematic and Plants" of characterized by grace and feeling. In about 1975; D. 1835.

1677; D. 1835.

contributed to the literature of the science of which he was an untiring exponent a great number of exceedingly important works. Ladies' Botany," written upon the model of Rousseau's "Botanical Letters," proved one of the most popular books on science ever brought out most popular books on science over brought out in England. Of a similar character are his "School Botany" and the "Botany" which he wrote for the "Library of Useful Knowledge." n. at Catton, Norfolk, 1789; p. 1895.

Linden, Sir David, lind'soi, a Scotch poet, who in 1512 became gentleman-usher to the young prince, afterwards James V, who sub-sequently appointed him master of the heralds' office. He wrote several poems, some of which have been printed, particularly his satires on the clergy. D. about the end of the 15th cen-tury; D. about 1568.

LINDSEX, Rev. Theophilus, an English divine, who, in 1772, abandoned all his benefices in the Established Church to found a congregation of Unitarians at London. He was the paster of this congregation during twenty years, and wrote several excellent works, the chief of which were, "An Historical View of the State of the Unitarian Doctrine and Worship, from the Re-formation to our own time," and a Vindication of his friend Dr. Priestley. p. 1723; p. in London, 1808.

LINGARD, Rev. John, D.D. LL.D., lin'-gard, an entinent English historian, was a priest of the Roman Catholic Church, and was edu-cated in France. He held appointments in the Roman Catholic College at Ushaw, near Dur-ham, and commenced authorship in 1805, by contributing to the Newcastle Courant a series of letters, which were afterwards republished under the title of "Catholic Loyalty Vindicated." Besides several controversial works, he wrote a "History of the Antiquities of the Anglo-Saxon Church," and made a translation of the New Testament into English. His great work was the "History of England from the first Invasion bits in listory of the Accession of William and Mary, in 1688." This has passed through many cultions, and is generally allowed to be a work of great learning and research. The theological views of the writer colour many of his statements, as was to be expected; nevertheless his religious opinions are never put forth in an usive manner. For his services to literature he was granted a pension of £300 per amum by the queen. The last years of his life were spent the queen. The last years of his his were spent in retirement at Hornby, near Laneaster. B. at Winchester, 1771; D. 1851.

Linley, Thomas, lin'-le, an English musical composer, who set the music to Sheridan's opera, the "Ducama," and wrote the accompaniments to the airs in the "Beggar's Opera," which are still in use. His "Twelve Ballads," though now neglected, are exquisite melodies. Together with his son-in-law, Sheridan, and Dr. Ford, he was during many years engaged in the management of Drury-lane Theatre. B. at Wells, management to Pruy-man America. A word-about 1725; p. 1795.

Livinz, William, son of the preceding, wrote two comic operas, and countied "The Dramatic Songs of Shakspeare;" an excellent work. He likewise composed a large number of glees, characterized by grace and feeling. n. about 1767. n. 1835.

having given offence to the raling powers, was sent to the Bastille. On obtaining his liberty, he published an account of his imprisonment, a work which produced a strong sensation, and is said to have prepared the way for subsequent is said to have prepared the way for subsequents. He retired to Brussels in 1787, and there published his "Annales Politiques," for which he was rewarded by the emperor Joseph II. with a present of 1000 ducats. He then re-turned to France, took an active part in the revolution, and closed his career on the guillotine, at Paris, in 1791. B. 1736.

Linnell, John, lin'-nel, an eminent English landscape and portrait painter, commenced life as a pupil of John Varley, the father of the existing school of Water-colour Painting, and first exhibited at the Academy in 1807,—two small landscapes; at the British Institution, in small landscapes; at the British Institution, in 1808.—"Fishermen, a Seuce from Nature;" at the Academy again in 1821.—Landscape and Portraits. During the interval, many a view 'in Wales' and elsewhere, "Morning" or "Evening" effect, or "Moonlight," or rustic seence of "Milking," &c., were painted. From 1818 to 1820 he exhibited with the Sectety in Spring Gardens. Throughout the earlier and greater part of Linnell's career, portraits far outnumbered landscapes. By portraits, minia-tures, engraving—by indefatigable industry, in short, in doing whatever he could get to do short, in doing whatever he could get to dothe energetic artist subsisted, until, comparatively late in his career, a fair demand caue, with high prices, and conferred upon him fame and wealth. At the Academy, his landscapes were for twenty-five years the rare exceptions; at the British Institution they were more numerous. Occasionally an incident from Scripture history was introduced as a loftier key-nete. to which the prevailing sentiment of studies from Nature was attuned. His portraits were works of art, and in a unique style: small in size, but deeply studied in character: simple and real. Among Linnell's numerous portraits, may be mentioned as specimens of his best style:—a "Family Group—the Artist's Children," a miniature on ivory; portraits of fellow-artists,—Calcott, Mul-ready, Phillips, Collins; of such men as Malthus, Empson, Warren, Wantely, the elder Sterling, and Thomas Carlyle; of political notables,—Sir Robert Peel, Lord Lansdowne, &c. Among his Robert Feel, Lord Lausdowie, &c. Among his best specimens of laudscape, we may cumerate, "The Windmill," "A Wood Scene," "Ere of the Doluge," "The Windmill," "A Wood Scene," "Christ and the Woman of Samaria at the Well," "The Disbeddient Prophet," "The Last Gleam before the Storm," "Grossing the Brook," "The Timber Waggon," "Barley Harvest," "Under the Hawthorn," &c. p. 1792.

Linnaus, or Von Linne, Carl, Ita'-ne-us, a celebrated Swedish naturalist, was the son of a clergyman. After struggling with poverty during several years, he succeeded in gaining the notice of Professor Rudbeck, of the univer-sity of Upsal. That bolanist took him Into his house, and made him his assistant lecturer, giving him the use of a fine library and garden. In 1732 he went on his celebrated journey to he afterwards studied law, and became a bar-rister; but was expelled from the bar, in con-sequence of some dispute with his professional a knight of the Polar star, and conferred on brethren, then turned political writer, and a kinght of the Folar Star, and conferred on him a pension, with a patent of nobility. He was the founder and first president of the Aca-demy at Stockholm, and a member of several deny at Stockholm, and a member of several foreign Societies. Januarus travelled, into Xor-way. Dalecarlia, Finland, Lapland, Germany, Holland, France, and England, in other pursuit of his favourite science. He invested a new method of dividing plants into classes, and ex-tended the same to gnimals. The ardour of method of dryamy planes into classes, and ex-tended the same to animals. The ardour of Linnaus's passion for the study of nature, and the uncommon application which he beand the incomind application which he be-stowed upon it, gave him a most comprehensive view both of its pleasures and usefulness. Availing himself of the advantages which he derived from a large share of eloquence and an animated style, he never failed to display, in a lively and convincing manner, the relation subsisting between the study of nature and the public good, and to incite the great to countenance and protect it. Under his culture, botany raised itself in Sweden to a state of perfection unknown elsewhere, and was thence disseminated known elsewhere, and was thence disseminated throughout Burope. Linuaris system of classification first gave to botany a cleur and precise language; and, although his system was an artificial one, it yet paved the way for other discoverers, and undoubtedly led to the nature system of Jussien. His chief works were:—

"Systema Natura," "Bibliotheea Botanica," "Flora Lapponica," "Critica Botanica," "Flora Lapponica," "Genera Plantarun," "Amenitates Academieve," and "Materia Medica," B. in the province of Smaland, Sweien, 1707, pp. 175.—His son (Charles was professor 1707; D. 1778,—His son Charles was professor 1707; B. 1778.—1118 son Charles was professor of botany at Upsal. B. 1738; b. 1783.

Lippi, Fra Filippo, lip-pe, a celebrated Italian painter, whose life was a most romantic one. He was captured by a pirate, and carried to Africa, but was released by his master for having executed his portrait in chalk on a wall, He worked for Alfonso I. at Naples, and was employed by Cosmo de Medici at Florence. His greatest picture was the "Adoration of the Virgin." B. at Florence, 1412; p. 1469.

Lipsus, Justus, 10° s-us, a learned critic, who studied civil law at Louvain, and, in 1567, became secretary to Cardinal Granvelle, at Rome. In 1579 he became a professor of history at Leyden. B. 1547; b. 1696. His changes in religion were remarkable; being a Roman Catholie, then a Lutheran, afterwards a Cal-Catholie, then a Lutheran, afterwards a Cal-vinist, and lastly a Cutholie negain. His learn-ing was great, but his superstition intense, attributing some of his pieces to the insepra-tion of the Virgin Mary. His works were pub-lished at Antwerp, in 6 volumes folio, 1637. The primplad were, a "Commentary on Taci-tas," "Saturmalia," "De Militia Romand, a "Electorum," "Satira Menippea," "De Am-phitheatris," "De Rectà Promuciatione Lingua Latine". Lating."

LISLE, Sir George, lile, a gallant English officer, was the son of a bookseller in London; but on the breaking out of the civil wars, he entered into the royal army, where he behaved so well as to rise to a command. At the battle of Newbury, when it grow so dark that his men could not distinguish him, he put his shirt over his clothes, that they might be encouraged by his presence and example. He bravely held the town of Colchester a long time against the Parliamentary forces, and surrendered as victors, in 1943.

LISLE, Joseph Nicholas dc. (See DRLISLE.)
LISL, Joseph Nicholas dc. (See CRILIALE.)
LISLE, Frederick, Itst, a German political economist, who was long a member of the Parliament of Wirtemburg, but was expelled in consequence of the boldness of his ophulons.
In 1819 he originated the Zollycrein, or German customs union, which was afterwards adopted by nearly all the German States. He established a newspaper, in which he promulgated his opinions, and also published a number of useful works on economic science. Numerous disappointments, however, preying upon his mind, it became unhinged, and he put a period to his life in a fit of insanity in 1846, when not quite fifty-seven years of age.

quite intr-seven years or age.

Lisron, Robert, lis-ton, a surgeon of great celebrity, was born at the manse of Ecclesmachan near Linliftagow, of which parish his father was the minister. After completing his studies at college, he took up his re-idence in Edinburgh, where he speedily rose to the highest eminence both as a lecturer and operator. In 1834 he was appointed surgeon to the North London Hospital; and subsequently became professor of clinical surgery in University College, and continued until his death one of the brightest ornaments of that institution In 1846 he was appointed one of the examiners of the Royal College of Surgeons. His practice had become very extensive, and was steadily increasing; his name was familiar in every medical school throughout the world; a rich harvest of honour and wealth lay before him; but in the zenith of his manhood and his reputation, he was struck down by sudden death. His chief work was his "Principles of Surgery," the first edition of which appeared in 1833; but his fame rests mainly on his accurate anatomical knowledge, and the extraordinary faci-tomera knowledge and the extraordmay activity with which he performed the most difficult operations. n. 1704; n. 1818.

Liston, John, a very popular actor of low comedy, whose natural humour and peculiar drolleries afforded many a rich treat to the playgoers of London, was born in St. Anne's parish, Soho, and in the early period of his life parisi, sond, and in the days, genote to a face was a teacher in a day-school. Forsaking the drudgery of a school-room, and faneying he passessed the necessary ability for the stage, he formed an acquaintance with Charles Mathews the elder, along with whom Liston often appeared as an amateur performer, preferring, like Mathews, the heroes of tragedy to the less exalted but more congenial characters of comedy. Having made sundry provincial trips, he was at length seen at Newcastle by Mr. C. Kemble, who recommended him to Mr. Colman, and in 1905 he appeared before a London audience at the Haymarket. He also obtained an engage-ment at Covent Garden, where he remained, ment at Covent Garden, where it remained, increasing in public favour, till 1823, when Elliston having offered him £10 a week, he transferred his services to Drury Lane, and continued there till 1831; but the enormous salary of £100 a week tempted him to enlist under the banners of Madame Vestris at the Olympic Theatre, where he performed six seasons, and may be said to have closed his theatrical career, having accumulated a considerable prisoner of war, but was put to death by the his travels experienced many singular adventictors, in 1648.

LINDE, JOSEPH Nicholas da. (See DELISLE.) sition, and put to the torture; but espended with is life, and on his arrival in England was presented to James I, on a feather-bed, being on mangled as to be incapable of standing. On his receiver, he applied to Count Gondomar, his Seaves, in adjusted to count continuous, the Spanish ambassador, who promised him a reparation, but deceived him, which so provoked Lithgow, that he assaulted him at court, or which he was sent to the Marshalsea, where he remained a prisoner nine months. He published a curious account of his travels. D. 1040.

LITTLE, William, lit'-tel, an ancient English historian, known also by the name of Gulielmus Neubrigonsis. He was a monk of the Abbey of Neubrough, in Yorkshire, where, in his ad-vanced years, he composed a "History of Eng-land, from the Norman Conquest to 1197," in five books. n. shout 1136; n. after 1220.

LITTLETON, or LYTTLETON, Thomas, lit-tel-ton, a celebrated English judge. His family name, Westcote, was changed by him, in compliance with the wishes of his maternal grandfather. After receiving a liberal education, he entered at the Inner Temple. His abilities proentered at the Inner Temple. His admines pro-ured him the place of steward of the court to fenry VI., and, in 1455, he went the northern creuit as a judge. Edward IV. appointed him one of the judges of the Court of Common Plea, and, in 1475, he was created knight of the Bath. He compiled his famous book on "Tenures," Ile compiled his timous book on "Tenures" according to Sir Edward Code, while he was judge; but it was not printed entil after his under the standard of the standard standard the standard standard the standard standard the standard stand rally printed with Sir Edward Coke's Commentary. B. about 1421; D. 1481. Littleton, Edward, was also an English judge of ability. He was made chief justice of the Common Pleas in 1639, and next year became keeper of the privy seal, and was made a peer, by the title of Lord Littleton. B. 1589: D. 1645.

LIVERPOOL, Charles Jenkinson, earl of, liv'-er-nool, the eldest son of Colonel Jenkinson, was educated at the Charterhouse, London, and at University College, Oxford. In 1761, he entered Parliament, and shortly after became under-secretary of state; he was made a lord of the Admiralty in 1766, vice-treasurer of Ireland in 1772, secretary-at-war in 1778, and president of the Board of Trade in 1784. He was a great favourite with George III., and was accused, and apparently with truth, of being one of the secret and unconstitutional advisers of that monarch. He was created Baron Hawkesbury in 1786, and Earl of Liverpool in 1796. B. 1727; D. 1808.

LIVERPOOL, Robert Banks Jenkinson, earl of, son of the preceding, received his education at the same seminaries of learning as his father. On quitting college, he spent some time in foleign travel; was in Paris during the destruc-tion of the Bastille, and rendered himself useful at that period to the English government by the information he furnished to Mr. Pitt. He of time. P. 1777; p. March 22, 1816, Lithow, William, Lük-90, an extraordinary
Scotch traveller, who went through vasic use the information he furnished to Mr. Pitt. Ho scotch traveller, who went through vasic use the information he furnished to Mr. Pitt. Ho scotch traveller, who went through vasic use the insect for a year, being at the time of his parts of Europe and the East on foot, and in Livia Lloyd earl of Liverpool, he became Lord Hawkesbury, and was made a commissioner of Indian affairs. In 1801 he was appointed secretary of state for foreign affairs; which office, four years after, he exchanged for that of the home department. This he resigned on the dissolution of the Addington administration; and, at the death of Mr. Pitt, succeeded him as lord warden of the Cinque Ports. In 1807 he was again minister for the home department; and on the death of his father, in the year following, succeeded to the title of earl of Liverpool. After the assassination of Mr. Perceval, in 1812, Lord Liverpool. pool was raised to the premiership, and held that elevated station till 1827, when an apoplectic and paralytic attack rendered him incapable of and paring a extacts remered that incapable of public business. His opposition to reform, and the prosecution of the friends of change be-tween 1817 and 1820, rendered him exceedingly unpopular, especially in Scotland, where his name, along with those of Lords Sidmouth and Castlereagh, was hated with a perfect hatred. B. 1770; D. 1828.

Livia, livi-i.a, a celebrated Roman lady, wife of Tiberius Chaudius Nero, by whom she had the emperor Tiberius and Drusus Germanicus. the emperor interns and Draws ormanicas.

Augustus fell in love with her, and married her while she was pregnant. She prevailed on Augustus to adopt her children by Drusus; but she was suspected of poisoning the emperor to procure the throne for her son Tiberius, who treated her with ingratitude, and when she died,

A.D. 29, refused her funeral honours.

LIVINGSTON, William, liv-ing-ston, an American stalesman, who was also an author, filled several important situations at New York, and, after the establishment of the native government, was chosen governor of New Jersey. He was a zealous advocate of American indepen-dence: wrote "A Review of the Military dence: wrote "A Review of the Johlary Operations in North America, from 1753 to 1758," "Philosophical Solitude," a poem; and several other works. D. 1723; D. 1790. Livingston, Robert, an eminent American politician, was a native of New York, in which city he practised the law with great success. He was one of the committee named to prepare the declaration of independence; was appointed secretary of foreign affairs in 1780; and, throughout the war of the revolution, signalized him-self by his zeal and efficiency in the cause. He was afterwards chancellor of the state of New York; and, in 1801, was appointed by President Jefferson, minister plenipotentiary to France, where, during a re-idence of several years, he was treated with marked attention by Bonawas treated with marked attention by home-parte, who, on his quitting Paris, presented to him a splendid snuf-box, with a ministure like-ness of himself, painted by Isabey. D. 1746; D.

LIVINGSTONE, David, liv'-ing-stone, a distinguished African traveller, who, under considerable difficulties, continued to pursue the studies of medicine and theology while engaged in a cotton factory at Glasgow. He subsequently requested to be sent as a missionary to China; but England being at the time at war with that but Engana being at the time as war with that country, he embarked, in 1810, for Artica, After residing some time at the Cape of Good Hope, in order to acquire the dialects spoken in the interior, he entered upon his religious labours, and lived chiefly with the Bechannas, the interior, he entered upon his religious Loyatty, a "History of Plots and Conspira-labours, and lived chiefly with the Rechaums, cies," &c. n. 1025; p. 1691.

To whose customs he accommodated himself, Loyn, Robert, an English poet, who was and to whom he preached the doctrines of some time an usher in Westminster school, and of the House. In 1796, his father being created Christianity. In 1849 he set out, and succeeded in verifying the existence of Lake Ngami. He undertook a second expedition in the following year, but was arrested by illness. In 1851 he penetrated beyond the chief city of the Makololo tribe, and found a vast country, fertile, with navigable rivers, and rich in mineral wealth, and, at the same time, inhabited by a friendly and industrious people. After undergoing the severest hardships, he reached the Portuguese station of St. Paul, on the west coast of Africa. He afterwards set out to traverse the continent towards the south, and reached Onillimane in 1856. Returning to England, he was rewarded with the gold medals of the Geogra-phical Societies of London and Paris. He published, in 1857, a narrative of his labours and hished, in 1857, a narrative of his abouns and adventures, under the title, "Missionary Travels and Researches in South Africa," a work which excited considerable interest. In 1859 he left England, provided with a steam-yacht of light draught, to ascend the African rivers, and with scientific apparatus to enable him to accurately determine his observations. From this time to 1863, he explored a great part of the country through which the Zandesi runs, and visited Lake Nyassa. In 1861 he once more returned to England, but started to make fresh explorations in Africa in 1865. In this expedition ho went northward to lake Tanganyika, to determine, if possible, whether this or lake Albert Nyanza was the post southern reservoir of the Nile. No news of the traveller reached England for several months, when in March, 1867, it was reported that he had been killed in a skirmish with the natives. An expedition sent out the same year to inquire into the truth of this rumour, proved it to be without foundation; and, in 1864, news was received from the traveller himself of his safety, and that he was exploring the eastern parts of equatorial Africa, between the equator and the northern limits of lake Tanganyika. B. 1817.

Livies, Titus, lie'-i-us (Livy, lie'-e), an illus-trious Roman historian, of whose life very little is known. He appears to have resided at Rome, and to have been on intimate terms with Augustus, who made him tutor to his grandson Claudius. His history was originally produced in 142 books; but out of that number only 35 are now extant; the rest are trrecoverably lost. It began with the foundation of Rome, and ended with the death of Drusus, in Germany, n.c. 9. The work is popular on account of its beautiful style; but its author was delicient in "that love of truth, diligence, and care in consulting authorities," which are the first requisites of a truly great historian. The best German translation is that by Wagner; The best German translation is that by Wagner; laker's is, perhaps, the best English reproduc-tion. A literal translation has been published in Bohn's Classical Library. n. at. Patavium (Padua), n.c. 50; p. a. p. 17. Laoxo, David, a biographical writer, was a native of Alerionethshire, and was ordained at Oxford. He became reader at the Charterhouse. London, and then prebendary of St. Asaph. His most important works are—"Memoirs of the Statesmen and Favourites of England," "Memoirs of Persons who suffered for their white it hat standard pulsated a poet and the "Actor." On account of his irregularities, he was obliged to resign his place in the school, after which he subsisted almost entirely on charity, particularly that afforded by his friend-Churchill. He was the author of the "Capricours Lover," a comic opera, and other dramatic works. D. 176 k.

Llovd

Locke

LLOND, William, a learned English prelate, was educated a Oxford; obtained a prebend in the collegiate church of Ripon soon after the Restoration; was appointed chaplain to the king in 1666; made a prebendary of Salisbury the year following; and, in 1680, was raised to the bishopric of St. Asaph, when he joined Archbishop Sancroft and other prelates in presenting a petition to James II. deprecating his assumed power of suspending the laws against popery. After the Revolution he was made almoner After the Revolution he was made almoner to king William; was promoted to the see of Lichited in 1692, and subsequently to that of Worcester. His writings relate to divinity and history, and among them are, "A Dissertation upon Daniel's Prophecy of the Seventy Weeks," "An Account of the Lile of Pythagoras," "The History of the Government of the Church," &c. z. 1627; p. 1717.

LLOYD, Humphry, an eminent military officer and writer on tactics, served with great reputation in the Austrian, Prussian, and Russian cion in the Austrian, Prussian, and Aussian armites, and rose to the rank of general. On his return to England he surveyed the coasts, wrote a memoir on the "Invasion and Defence of Great Britain," "The History of the Seven Years' War," and other military treatises. p. in Wales, 1729; p. 1783.

Liewelyn ap Grieru, loo-cl-in, the last prince of North Wales, who reigned from 1246 to 1283. He was a brave prince, and resisted the ambition of Edward L, king of England, a long time; but at last fell, and with him the independence of the Welsh as a distinct nation, LLEWELYN AP SITSYLLT, a Welsh prince, who LIEMERYM AF SITYLICA, WISIN Prince, who succeeded to the principalities of South Wates and Powys, in 1993. In 1921, Anlaff, at the head of a Seotch nrum, invaded his territories, and was joined by Hywel and Meredyld, sons of Edwin ap Einson. Llewelyn marched against them, and defeated them, but fell in the hattle.

Lonav, Count, lo'-bou, a distinguished French soldier, whose name was Mouton, was, at the breaking out of the revolution, employed as a journeyman baker in Phalsburg, Meurihe. On entering the army he signalized himself by acts of bravery, which obtained for him various steps of promotion, until, in 1804, at the camp of Boulogne, Napoleon, amid the applause of the whole army, made him his aide-de-camp, and gave him the command of the third regiment of the line. In the campaign of 1805 his gallantry obtained him the rank of general of brigade, and in 1807 that of general of division. In the campaign of 1809 he defended the little island of Lobau (from which he sub equently took his of Loban (from which he sub-equently took ms title) negainst the Austrians, completely beat them off, and conducted his troops, compara-tively uniqueed, across the Danube. In 1812 he was made a de-major of the imperial guard; in 1813, commander of the first corps of the grand army; and, in 1814, a chevalier of 8t Louis. During the "hundred days" he joined Napo-man army and a grant production of the first was made recentagor or the imperial general in "pessay on the Human Understanding," which Bills, commander of the first cerps of the grand however, was not published till after the terocarmy; and, in 1814, a chevalier of 8t. Louis.
During the "hundred days" he joined Napole Hosper, which is the first recent of 1638, when he returned to England, leon, and was made commandant of the first bessex, the sent of 8 fir Francis Masham, who military division, and a member of the Chamber invited him to reside in his family. His "Left of Peers. In the brief campaign of 1816, he ters of robertified were published to promote a scheme which King William had much at while in that situation published a poem called north, and defeated the Prussians on the 8th of June, but was wounded and taken prisoner at Waterloo. He remained in England till 1818; he was then permitted to return to France, and in 1828 was chosen deputy for the Meurthe, and took his seat on the opposition benches. He took an active part in the revolution of 1830; and when Lafayette resigned the command of the national guard, Count Loban was appointed his successor. Shortly afterwards he received the bâton of a marshal from Louis Philippe, by whom he was greatly respected. B. 1770: D.

LOBRIEA, Vasco, lo-beer'-a, author of the celebrated romance of "Amadis de Gaul," was a native of Porta, in Portugal. In 1336 he was knighted by John I. on the field of battle at Aljubarotta. Southey translated Lobeira's work, and proved it to be an original, and not a translation from the French, as many had previously imagined. D. 1403.

Lobo, Jerome. 10'-bo, a Portuguese Jesuit. who travelled through Abyssinia as a missionary. and published a curious account of that country, and published a curious account of that country, which was rendered into French by Legrand, whence it was translated into English by Dr. Samuel Johnson. no at Lisbon, 1878.

Locx, Matthew, lot, an eminent English composer, who set the music to "Macboth," the instrumental music to the "Tempest," and wrote many other excellent pieces. He is also stated to have composed the music for the public entry of Charles II, into London. B. at Exeter, about 1635; D. 1677.

Locks, John, a celebrated English philosopher, who was educated at Christ Church, Oxford. After taking his degree in arts, he entered on the study of physic; but, making the acquaintance of Lord Ashley, afterwards carl of Shaftesbury, who became his patron, and urgod him to apply to the study of politics, Locke followed his patron, and was a shaftesbury by the study of politics. followed his advice, and rendered himself serviceable to his lordship and his party, who, having obtained the grant of Carolina, employed him in drawing up the constitution for the government of that province. Lord Shaftesbury being appointed chancellor in 1672, made Locke secretary of presentations, which place he lost the year following, when his patron was deprived of the great seal. He continued, however, his secretaryship of the Board of Trade, of which Lord Shaftesbury was president. In 1074 that commission was dissolved, and Locke, being apprehensive of consumption, went to Mont-pellier, and continued abroad till 1679, when he was sent for by Lord Shaft-sbury, who was ap-pointed president of the council; but, in 1682, that nobleman, to avoid a prosecution for high treason, withdrew to Holland, and was accomreason, with the world in 1681, Mr. Locke was removed from his student's place at Christ Church, by the king's command; and, the year following, the English envoy demanded him of the States of Holland, on suspicion of his being concerned in Monmouth's rebellion, which occasioned him to keep private several months, during which he was employed in finishing his "Essay on the Human Understanding," which, heart -that of reconciling all sects of Christians. In his retirement he also wrote several of his works. His principal works are an "Essay on the Human Understanding," "Letters on Toon the radian understanding, "Letters on Toleration," "Treatise on Civil Government," "Thoughts concerning Education," and letters and miscellaneous pieces, B, at Wrington, near Bristol, 1632; D. 1704.

655

Tiocke Lokman

LOCKE, Joseph, an English civil engineer,

studied under George Stephenson, the emi

nent railway engineer, and acted as one of his assistants during the construction of the Manchester and Liverpool Railway. He was sub-sequently extensively employed as engineer of various railways, both in England and on the continent of Europe. The Paris and Rouen, Rouen and Havre, Paris and Lyons, Caen and Cherbourg, Barcelona and Mattaro, the Dutch, Rhenish, and several other lines, were con-structed under his auspices. In 1847 he was returned to Parliament as member for Houiton ; recurrice to rurament as member for Houtton; wherecopen he took his place among the liberals. He was a fellow of the Royal Society, and vieg-president of the Institution of Civil Engineers. B. at Attercible, near Shelfield, 1805; D. 1860.
LOCKHART, John Gibson, lob'-hort, a modern English writer, author of the "Life of St: Walter Scott," and other valuable contributions to literature was the sea of a wineter of the literature, was the son of a minister of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and was educated at Glasgow University, and afterwards at Balliol College, Oxford. After a short sojourn in Germany, he went to Edinburgh in 1816, intending to practise the law at the Scottish bar. He soon, however, became a prominent member of a small band of Scotch writers, whose chief was Wilson. In 1917, on the estab-lishment of "Blackwood's Magazine," Lockflant was one of its principal writers. The Toryism of the new periodical, and of its writers, caused both to become especial favourites with Sir Walter Scott, whose political views were of the same nature. Lockhart, in a short time, became an intimate friend of the great novelist. who advanced his interests on every occasion. In 1820 he married Sophia, eldest daughter of Scott, and went to live near Abbotsford, During the succeeding five years he worked with great the succeeding nve years ne worked while great industry and success in literature. He produced, among others, "Valerius, a Roman story," "Adiam Blair, a story of Scottish Life, the "Life of Napoleon;" and published his translations of the Spanish piece, entitled "Theodore Hook." It's health becoming diclate, he resigned the editorship of the "Quarterly Review," and wont to Rome in 1863; but, after a short stay, he took up his residence in Scotland. h. at Cambusnetham, Scotland, 1794; h. at Abbotsford, 1854. Lockkay, John, kid-may, an English author, who wrote "Rosalinda," a musical drama; "David's Lameratations," an oratiric; and was one of the compilers of the great "Historical Dictionary." h. 1771.

Ballads. In 1836 he became editor of the "Quarterly Review," and retained the appoint-ment until 1853. In biography and biographical sketches he was particularly excellent, as is attested by his "Life of Scott," and the smaller piece, entitled "Theodore Hook," His health

one of the completes of the great Insorgan Dictionary." D. 1771.

Lodge, Thomas, lodi, an English author of the 16th century. The record of his life are very obscure, but he is believed to have been, in very obscure, but he is believed to have been, in his life, he ate a bitter melon from his hand, turn, lawyer, soldier, physician, and author. This generous answer immediately procured the works of Josephus and Sencea. Two of his stances related of him that agree with what is plays have been preserved in Dodsley's Collec-tion. In 1840 Mr. Collier, in his book entitled "Shakspeare's Library" reprinted his novel "Rosalynde," whence it was seen that many of its leading incidents were identical with those in Shakspeare's "As you Like it," the great poet, and not the obscure novelist, being, however, the borrower. B. about 1556; D., it is supposed of the plague, 1625.

Lones, Edmund, Clarencietax king-at-arms, K.H. and F.S.A., wrote "Lives of Illustrations Per-sonages of Great Britain," "Hustrations of British History," "Life of Julius Casar," British History," The of Julius Casar," and originated "Lodge's Peerage," He had in early life been a cornet of dragoons. p. 1756; p. 1839.

LOFFT, Capel, loft, a barrister, and the arther of several works in polite literature, was educated at Eton and Cambridge; called to the bar in 1775; and, on succeeding to the Canel estates, in 1781, removed to Troston, in Suffolk, and became an active magistrate of the county till 1800; when, for having too zealously exerted himself as under-sheriff to delay the execution of a young woman who had received sentence of death, he was removed from the commission. Mr. Loilt was a very considerable contributor to most of the magazines of the day; and it was to his active patronage of Robert Bloomfield that the public was indebted for the "Farmer's Boy," and other poems by that author. B. 1751; D. 1824.

Lorrus, Dudley, lof'-tus, an oriental scholar, who studied at Trinity College, Dublin, and at Oxford; and became vicar-general and judge of the Prerogative Court in Ireland. Among his the Prerogative Conte in Frealad. Among his writings are, a "History of the Eastern and Western Churches," "The History of our Saviour, taken from the Greek, Syriac, and other Oriental Authors," "A Translation of the Ethiople New Testament into Latin," &c. B. near Dublin, 1618; D. 1096.

Dunin, 1618; I. 1690.

Logan, John, log-an, a Scotch divine and poet, who, in 1781, published the "Philosophy of History, which he had delivered as lectures at Edinburgh. The same year he printed his peems in one volume. His last publication was a pamphlet, entitled "A Review of the Principal Charges against Mr. Hastings," for which the publisher was tried and acquitted. B. in Scotland, 1748; p. in Loudon, 1788.

Loggar, David, log-gan, an eminent line-engraver, who went to London during the Commonwealth, and settling there, was extensively employed. His plates of the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge were excellent specimens of art. During the reign of Charles II. he engraved nearly all the illustrious personages of the time.

Bearty an the Indistrious personages of the time.

В. at Dantzie, 1635; р. in London, 1693.

Lokkar, lok'-mun, an Abyssinian philosopher, of whom hardly any authentic particulars are known. He appears to have been of humble origin, and some say he was a slave. It is related that he obtained his liberty on the following occasion. Ills master having given him a bitter melon to eat, he ate it all. Surprised at his exact obedience, his master asked how it was possible for him to cat such a nauseous fruit? The slave replied, that he had received so many favours from the kindness of his master, that it could be no wonder if, once in said of Æsop, and their fables are so much alike, that both are conjectured to have been one and the same person. Lokman's Fables were printed in a collection by Galland, at Paris, in 1724.

656

LOLLARD, Walter, lov-lard, the founder of a roligious seet in Germany, about 1315. His followers were the pioneers of the Reformation. The term "lollard" was applied in England to Wickliffe and his adherents. They were said by the monks to have been grossly licentious and heretical; but as to this we have only the testimony of their enemies. Lollard himself was burnt at Cologne in 1322.

LOMBARD, John Louis, lom'-bar, an eminent French writer on military tactics, was edurener white of infinity decres, was con-cated for the legal profession, but quitted it to become professor of artillery, first at Metz, and afterwards at the military school of Auxonne. He translated into French "Robin's Principles of Church Medical Marchine Medical Marchine at the Medical Marchine Medical M of Gunnery," and wrote, "Aide Mémoire," for the use of French artillery officers; "Treatise on the Flight of Projectiles," &c. B. at Stras-on the ringht of Projectiles," so. B. at Strasburg, 1723; p. 1794.

LOMOYOSOV, Michael Vasilievitch, Io'-mo-no-sof', the father of modern Russian literature, was son of a fisherman, and, having fled from his father, took refuge in a monastery, where he received his education, which he afterwards me received his education, which he afterwards improved at a German university. In 1741 he returned to his native country, and became member of the Academy of Petersburg, and professor of chemistry. In 1760 he was made rector of the university and gymnasium. The odes of Lomonosov are greatly admired for originality of invention, sublimity of sentiment, and energy of language; and compensate for the turgid style which, in some instances, has been imputed to them, by that spirit and fire which are the principal characteristics in this species of composition. Pindar was his great model. He enriched his native language with various kinds of metre. His works, in 3 vols. 8vo, consist of pieces in verse and prose, the last being chiefly philosophical dissortations. D. near Kholmogor, Russia, 1711; D. 1765.

Londongers, Robert Stewart, second Marquis of, lun'-dun-der'-re, a celebrated English diplomatist and minister, more generally known as Lord Castlerengh, first entered the British. Parliament in 1794, but did not make his maiden speech until the following year. In 1794 the became Viseanut Castlerengh, and, in the first Parliament after the Union, sat for the county of Down. During the Pitt and Addington administrations, he was in office as either privy councillor, president of the board of conparty community presents of the board of con-trol, or secretary of state for war and the colonies. In 1807 he joined the Portland ministry, and being generally believed to be answerable for the conduct of the war, be-came, after the disastrous Walcheren expedition, perhaps the most unpopular of public men. His policy led to a duel between himself men. His policy led to a duer octween minsen and Mr. Cauning, at that time secretary for foreign affairs, in which the latter was severely wounded. He resigned shortly afterwards, and remained out of office until 1812, when he reremained out of office until 1812, which he re-ceived the appointment of secretary of state for the foreign department, and on the death of Mr. Perceval became ministerial leader of the House of Commons. At the peace of Paris, May, 1814, he represented the king of Parjand, as he also did at the congress of Vienna some of Waterloo. For these duties his dignified person and manners peculiarly fitted him. In 1818 he was created knight of the Garter, and on the death of his father, three years after-wards, became marguis of Londonderry. As wards, occame marques of Londonderry. As a statesman, his views were narrow and unphilosophical; his oratory was unequal, sometimes approaching brilliancy, but often inelegant and involved; but his great talents for business, combined with his firmness and charm of manner, caused him to achieve higher things than more richly-gifted men. B. in Ireland.

1769; D. by his own hand, 1822. LONDONDERRY, Charles William Vane, Marquis of, son of Robert, first marquis of Londonderry, and half-brother of the famous Viscount Castlereagh, when little more than fourteen years of age entered the army as an ensign in the 103th Foot, accompanied the earl of Moira in his expedition to Holland in 1794, was attached to Colonel Crawfurd's mission to the Austrian armies from 1795 to 1797, and was severely wounded at the battle of Dor griwerth. On his return home he was appointed aide-de-camp to his uncle, earl Camden, then lord-icutenant of Ireland; and after rising through he various grades of his profession, he joined Sir John Moore in the Peninsula, as brigadiergeneral, and distinguished himself in the field. He subsequently held the post of adjutantgeneral to the army under Sir Arthur Wellesley from 1800 to 1813. During the pursuit of Marshal Soult's army across the Douro, he led two squadrons of the 16th and 20th Dragoons, which charged the enemy most gallantly, and took numerous prisoners; and on other occasions his name was honourably mentioned, particularly in the affair at El Bodon. For these services he received the thanks of the House of Commons, and was created a knight of the Bath and of various foreign orders. In 1813 he went to Berlin as ambassador; and during the summer, acted as military commissioner to the armies of the allied sovereigns, and was especially charged with the supervision of Bernadotte, the Swedish king, who had armed his troops by the help of subsidies from England, and was at that time wavering in his policy. Mext year he was raised to the peerage by the title of Baron Stewart, was appointed ambassa-dor to Austria, and one of the plenipotentiaries at the congress of Vienna in 1814 and 1815. In 1822 he succeeded his brother in the Irish marquisate; and the year following was made earl Vane and viscount Scaham in the peerage of the United Kingdom, with special remainder to his children by his second wife, in right of whom he had previously assumed the name of Vane, Besides attending regularly to his Parliamentary duties, Lord Londonderry displayed great energy in developing the resources of the vast possessions which he had acquired through his wife; and among other works with which his name will be connected, was the construction of Seaham Harbour,-a private enterprise almost unprecedented in its magnitude and importance. In polities he was attached to the Tory party, and consequently unpopular; but he was a man If generous impulses, and his exertions to mitigate the rigour of Louis Napoleon's imprisoment in the fortress of Ham, and subsequently, when the change in fortune's wheel had made him prince-president of France, to obtain from him the liberation of Abd-el-Kader, gained months later, and again, in 1915, after the battle for Lord Londonderry the favourable regard even

THE DICTIONARY

Lothaire

of his political opponents. In 1848 he obtained the command of the 2nd Life Guards; and in 1853 succeeded the duke of Wellington in the insignia of the Garter. Lord Londonderry was also known as an author, and among his works may be mentioned, "A Steam Voyage to Constantinot renitioned, A Steam to age to Constanti-nople;" "Story of the Peninsular War" (which has gone through many editions); "A Tour in the North of Europe;" and his latest service to literature was his publication of the correspondence of his brother, the second marquis of Londonderry. B. 1778; D. 1854.

Long, Thomas, long, a nonjuring divine, re-ceived his education at Exeter College, Oxford, and was made prebend of Exeter after the and was made prepend of Exerce after the Restoration, but was deposed at the Revolution for refusing the eaths. He wrote "Calvinus Redivirus," "History of the Donatiets," "His-cory of Popish and Fanatieal Plots," "Undi-eation of King Charles's claim to the authorship of 'Elkom Besilike," "Vindication of the Primitive Christians in Point of Obedience," &c.

в. 1621; р. 1700.

Long, Roger, an English divine, eminent as an astronomer and a mathematician, received his education at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, of which college he became master in 1733. He was Lowndes' professor of astronomy; held livings in Huntingdonshire and Essex; and was the author of a "Treatise on Astronomy," and con-structed, at Pembroke Hall, a hollow sphere, 18 feet in diameter, on the interior surface of which were represented the stars, constellations, &c., the whole being moved by means of machinery, в. 1679; р. 1770

LONGBEARD, William, long'-beerd, a priest in the reign of Richard I., who excited an insurrection about 1196; and, by his eloquence, irritated the people against the government, for which he was torn in pieces by horses, with some of his companions.

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth, long'-fel-lo, LONGFELLOW, Henry Walsworth, Jong Jel-lo, an eniment American poet, who, while at leaved do lollege, wrote verse for the United States "Literary (Jazette;" and, although intended for the law, his tastes were from the earliest period decidedly literary. Accordingly, he engerly embered the proposal of making him professor of modern languages in his college, and set out. for Europe in order to qualify himself for the post. He travelled in France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Holland, and England, and studied the language and literature of each country. He returned to his native country in 1829, and entered upon his duties; commencing his liteemerca upon ins onness; commencing its invergence about the same period, by contributing biography and criticism to the "North American Review" Ils first important prose work was produced in 1835, with the trite, On the resignation of Mr. Ticknor, the professorial chair of modern languages and literature sorial chair of modern angunges and interacure in Harvard University was offered to him; upen which he again visited Germany, and, on this occasion, extended his travels to Denmark, Sweden, and Switzerland. In 1836 he ontered upon his duties at Harvard University, and soon afterwards gave to the world those works upon which his reputation chiefly rests. His prose romance "Hyperion" was published in 1840; "Kavanagh," a poetice-philosophical tale, in 1840. His poems were published in the

1851; "The Song of Hiawatha," 1855; "Miles Standish," 1851; "Tales of a Wayside Inn," 1853; and Flower de Luce." His most inpostant work is a translation of the "Divina Comodia" of the Haliam poet Dante, published 1867. Göthe, Jean-Paul, and other German actions havehad an especially marked influence on his writings. n. at Portland, Maine, U. S., 1807. Log Gives, Dlonysius, bonji-sus, a colorated Athenian philos-piher and rhetorician, was related to Plutarch, and spent the early part of his life in travelling, after which he settled at Athens, where he taught the Platonic philos

Athens, where he taught the Platonic philo-sophy and rhetoric with great reputation; but was called thence by Zenobia, queen of Palmyra, to be tutor to her children. The queen was to be tutor to her children. The queen was then at war with the emperor Aurelian, and, being defeated by him near Antioch, was compelled to shut herself up in Palmyra. The emperor summoned her to surrender and she returned an answer, drawn up by Longinus, which filled him with augur; he laid sigge to the city, which was surrendered to him A.D. 273. The queen and Longinus endeavoured to fly to Persia, but were overtaken and made prisoners. The queen, intimidated, laid the blame of vindicating the liberty of her country on its true author, and the brave Longinus was carried away to immediate execution. He composed critical remarks on the ancient Greek authors, but only a part of his inestimable "Treatise on the Sublime" exists.

LONGLIND. (See LINGILIAN), Robert.)
LOPEZ DE VEGA. (See VEGA.)
LOPEZ DE VEGA. (See VEGA.) Joan, Asserting the great struggle between Portugal and Castile, towards the close of the Lith century, which, as a picture of manners, has been compared to that of Froissari for accurate and dramatic reality. Lopes is the oldest of the Portuguese chroniclers

Lorez, Don Francisco Solano, lot-pes, succceded his father, Don Carlos Lopez, as presi-dent of Paraguay in 1862. He declared war against Brazil in 1865, and maintained his ground against the allied troops of Brazil, Uruguay, and the Argentine Republic until 1869, when he was compelled to quit the country, and seek safety in flight. Not content with causing the death of thousands of his countrymen by hunger, privation, the bullet, and the sword during the war, he maltreated and exe-cuted every one whom he suspected of opposition to his views, causing even his own brother to be almost cut to pieces by the lash of the to be almost each to precess 15 the hash of the executioner, and then shot. In 1827.—After his flight from Paraguay he was closely pursued by Colonel Martinez, the husband of one of his victims, who had sworn to kill him wherever he might find him.

LORIOT, Anthony Joseph, lo'-re-o, an execlient French mechanician, who, in 1753, presented to the Academy of Sciences a machine, by means of which a child might raisea weight of several thousand pounds. He afterwards constructed machines for the naval service, and for working machines for the naval service, and for working the mines of Pompeau; elaimed the merit of inventing a kind of cement used in buildings, called "mortier Lorlot," and a hydraulic ma-chine for raising water. B. 1716; D. 1782. LORENZO DE AIRDICT. (See CLAURE.) LORENZO DE AIRDICT. (See CLAURE.) LORENZO, Clandie. (See CLAURE.) LORENZE, Cardinal de. (See Cuere, Charles do.) LORENZE, T., to-tair', emperor of Germany, was eldest son of Louis-le-Débonnaire, and was associated with him in the empire in 817, and named king of the Lombards in 820. He afterwards dethroned his father, and imprisoned him in a monastery; upon which his brothers Louis and Charles joined their forces against him, and defeated him at Fontenay, in 841. Two years afterwards, a treaty was concluded between the three brothers, by which Lothaire retained the title of emperor, with Italy and some French provinces beyond the Ithine and the Rhone. Louis had a tract of country bordering on the Rhine, and Charles became king of France, p. 855.

Lothnire Louis

of Saxony, between 1125 and 1137, died in litaly, on his return from an expedition against Roger, kine of St. in LOTHAIRE 11., emperor of Germany and duke Roger, king of Sicily.

LOTHAIRE, king of France, was the son of Louis IV., whom he succeeded in 954. He made war against the emperor Otho II. D. 980.

LOTE VIRE, king of Loraine, was son of the emperor Lothque I. D. 809.

Loupon, John Claudius, lou'-don, a writer of considerable celebrity on agricultural and boconsiderable ecceptary of agreement that of tanical subjects. Between the years 1820-13 he produced a number of works of the highest importance to the scientific farmer, the gardener, and the botanist. The Encyclopedias of Gardening, Agriculture, Plants, Cottage and Villa Architecture, may be quoted as examples of his great industry and usefulness. B. at Cam-of his great industry and usefulness. n. at Cambustang, Lanarkshire, 1783; n. 1813.

Loudon, Mirs, wife of the preceding, wrote several valuable works, chiefly connected with hotany; such as "The Laddes' Flower Garden," "Butany for Ladles," "The Laddes' Country Companion," &c. n. 1880; n. 1853.
Lours L, surnamed to Didountaire, loot-e, experient of the West, and king of France, succeeded his father Charlemegne in 814. In 817 to recorded this father Charlemegne in 814. In 817 to recorded this chiefs so n. Lofsbaire wife.

he associated his eldest son, Lothaire, with ne associated ins eldest san, Lofthaire, with himself in the empire, and gave to his other two sons, Pepin and Louis, the kingdons of Aquitaine and Bavaria. This division gave such offence to Ternard, king of Italy, the ille-gitimate son of Pepin, eldest son of Charle-magne, that he raised an army against the emperor, who put himself at the head of his traces and manded into Alice. Reward detroops, and marched into Italy. Bernard, described by his troops, was taken prisoner and deprived of sight. The reign of Louis was troubled by continual rebellions of his sons. In 839, Louis of Bavaria, who thought he had not got a large enough share of his father's possessions, invaded Suabia. The emperor marched against him, but died on his way, on an island of the Rhine, near Mayence, 810.

Louis II., surnamed the Young, was only son of Lothaire I., and was created king of Italy in 811, and ascended the imperial throne in 855.

B. about 522; D. 875.
Louis III., called the Blind, was the son of Boson, king of Provence, and Ermengarde, daughter of the emperor Louis the Young. He succeeded his father at the age of 10, and in 900 contested the imperial throne with Beren-ger, who, having surprised him at Verona, deprived him of his eyes. D. about 923.

e peror Arnul-The empire was Louis IV., was the son of the phus, whom he succ a scone of desolation during his reign, being constantly ravaged by the Hungarians. D. 911.— He was the last prince in Germany of the Carlovingian race.

059

Louis V., commonly called Louis of Bavaria, was the son of Louis the Severe, duke of Bavaria. He was elected emperor in 1314, and at the same time Frederick le Del was chosen at Colorne by another party of electors, which occasioned a war between them. Frederick was taken prisoner, but gained his liberty by renouncing his claim in favour of his rival. Pope John XXII. being opposed to that arrangement, in 1322 issued his bull of deposition against Louis, who, in return, appealed to a general council, and marched into Italy, where he procured the election of Peter de Corbiere (Nicholas V.), and by whom he was crowned at Rome. Five electors, on the other hand, chose Charles of L burg to be emperor; on which the civil wer was about to be renewed, when Louis was killed by a fall from his horse, in 1347. Loris I., king of France. (See Louis I., emperor of the West.)

Louis II., the Stammerer, so called from a defect in his speech, the son of Charles the Bald, vas crowned king of Aquitaine in 867, and su couded his father as king of France in 877. He was obliged to deliver up Provence to Boson, by whom it was erected into a kingdom. His whom it was erected into a kingdom. His the kingdom between them, and a posthumous son, who was afterwards Charles the Simple. B. 846; D. at Complègne, 879.

B. Say, B. at Compagns, 504 Lours III, the son of the preceding, and brother of Carloman, enjoyed the kingdom with his brother. He defeated Hugh the Bastard, son of Lothaire, marched against Boson, king of Provence, and opposed the progress of the of Provence, and opposed the progress of the Normans. He died without issue, 883.

Louis IV, was the son of Charles the Simple, and ascended the throne in 336. He invaded Normanuly, but was defeated and taken prisoner in 914. He regained his liberty the following year, after being obliged to ecle Normanily to Richard, son of Duke William, and Laon to Rugh, father of Hugh Captes. He afterwards recovered the latter territory, and died of a fall found his base, 514. from his horse, 954.

Louis V., surnamed Faincant, or Do-Nothing, succeeded his father Lotharius in 986, and soon after took the city of Rheims. He was preparing to march to the assistance of the count of Barcelona, who was pressed by the Saracens, when he is said to have been poisoned by his queen, 937. After his death, the crown devolved by right to his uncle, Charles, duke of Lower Loraine, but that prince being disliked by the French, it was conferred on Hugh Capet. Louis VI., called the Fat, the son of Philip I., succeeded to the throne in 1108. His reign was disturbed by wars with the Normans, and also by fends among his vassals. He also quarrelled with Henry I. of England, and thus was commenecd the war between the English and Freuch which lasted during three centuries. He was a good and wise monarch, and was ably supported by his minister, the Abbé Suger. D. 1107.

Louis VII, was the son and snecessor of the preceding. He had a dispute with Pope Impo-ent II. on the right of presenting to benefices, and was excommunicated by that pontiff, who also laid his kingdom under interdiet. Thibault,

Louis declared war against him, and ravaged his country. A reconciliation afterwards took place between them, and Louis, by the persuasions of St. Bernard, engaged in a crusade, but was deceated by Samann, and, on an Fetturn Brunop, was taken at sea by the Greeks, but delivered by the general of Roger, king of Sicily. Having divorced his queen, Eleanor, she maried Henry of Normandy, afterwards Henry 11. of England, to whom she brought, as her dower, the provinces of Poitou and Guienne. This produced a new war between England and France, which lasted, with little intermission, twenty-one years. B. 1120; D. 1180. Louis VIII., surnamed Cour-de-Lion, was the son of Philip Augustus. He signalized himself in several expeditions during the lifetime of his father, and ascended the throne in 1223. He tacher, and ascended the antone Machael and several other places from the English; but died of a pestilential disease in his camp at Montpensier, in Auvergne, in 1228. p. 1187.

THE DICTIONARY

Louis

Louis IX., called Saint Louis, the son of the preceding, by Blanche of Castile, ascended the throne in 1226. He maintained a successful throne in 1200. He mantaned a succession was against Henry III., king of England, which ended in a peace favourable to Louis, who, having been seized with a dangerous illness, made a vow that, if he recovered, he would take the cross for the purpose of regaining the Holy Land from the infidels. Being restored to health, he spent four years in preparing for this expedition, and, in 1248, embarked for the East with a great force, leaving his kingdom to the care of his mother. After taking Damietta, he passed the Nile, and obtained two great victories over the Saracens. At length famine and disease attacked his army, and the king, with his nobles, fell into the hands of the infidels. Louis, to recover his liberty, consented to pay a large ransom, to deliver up Damietta, and to conclude a truce for ten years. After spending four years in Palestine, he returned to France. In 1270 he undertook another expedition against the infidels, but died in his camp before Tunis, in Africa, the same year. He was canonized in the inidels, but died in his camp before Tunis, in Africa, the same year. He was canonized in 1997. B. at Poissy, 1215.

Lours X., surnamed Hutin, an old French torm for "quarrelsome," succeeded Philip the Fair, his father, in 1814, havine before been king of Navarre, in right of his mother. He recalled the Jews to his kingdom, and made a successful war against the count of Flanders. B. at Paris, 1289; b. at Vincennes, 1316.

LOUIS XI., son of Charles VII., distinguished himself by his valour in his youth, particularly against the English, whom he compelled to raise the siege of Dieppe, in 1443; but the glory he hereby acquired was tarnished by his rebelling against his father, who died of a broken heart in 1461. Louis, on ascending the throne, treated France as a conquered country. for which several of the nobility formed a league against him, and some of his own family joined the malcontents. After a severe but indecisive battle at Montheri, in 1465, a peace was con-cluded, by which Louis gave to the leaguers all their demands; but not fulfilling his engage-ments, the war was rekindled, and he was made prisoner by the duke of Eurgundy, who com-pelled him to make a peace still more disadvanpelled him to make a peace still more disadvan-tageous than the former. In 1474, the dukes of Burgundy and Brittany formed a league with Edward IV., king of England, against Louis, who, however, contrived to disenging the Eng-lish monarch from the alliance, by a treaty con-cluded at Amiens in 1475. The duke of Burgundy was in consequence obliged to conclude a peace was defeated by Saladin, and, on his return to of firmness and superstition. His most promi-Europe, was taken at sea by the Greeks, but nent trait was, however, duplicity of disposition; his constant maxim being, "He who cannot dis-semble knows not how to reign." But, by protecting the middle classes and favouring industry, he was a benefactor of his country.

B. 1423; p. 1433.

Louis XII., surnamed the Father of his

People, was the son of Charles, duke of Orleans. He succeeded Charles VIII. in 1498, and took Milan, Genoa, and Naples; but, after ravaging

Italy, the French were expelled in 1513. Henry VIII. of England, the Venetians, and the Swiss attacked Louis in his own dominions, and he was obliged to sue for peace. p. 1515.

Louis XIII. was the son of Henry IV. only nine years old at the death of his father, only fine years out at the death of his latter, the kingdom was placed under the regency of his mother, Mary de Mediei. The Marshal d'Anere had an uncontrolled sway at court till 1617, when he was assassinated, with the king's consent, and his wife condemned to death as a consent, and his whe contented to death as a sorecress. Viri, the perpetrator of this act, was made a marshal of France; the hishop of Lucon, afterwards Cardinal Richelieu, became prime minister. Rochelle, the stronghold of the French Protestants, was taken by the Cardinal, after a long siege, in 1028. After this event, so fatal to the Protestant interest in France, Louis assisted the duke of Mantua against the duke of Savoy, and entered on the campaign in person, in which he showed skill and bravery. In 1631 a treaty was concluded, by which the duke was confirmed in his estates. The year following, Gaston of Orleans, only brother of the king, revolted, out of dislike to Richelieu, and was assisted by the duke de Montmorency, who, being wounded and taken prisoner in 1632, was beheaded at Toulouse, Gaston took refuge with the duke of Loraine, who, for protecting him, lost his whole dominions. This was followed by a war with Spain, which lasted twenty-five ears, and was attended with various success; years, and was adended with various success; but it greatly impoverished the nation, and dis-contented the people. Louis and his minister the cardinal were attacked with a mortal discase nearly together; the latter died in 1612, and the king in the following year.

Lous XIV., son of the preceding, being only BOUIS ALV, son or the precenting owing your five years old on the death of his father, the regency was intrusted to the hands of the queen-mother, Anne of Austria, under whom Mazarin acted as prime minister. The nation was then involved in a war with Spain and the emperor of Germany, which was maintained with glory to the French arms by the prince of Condé and the famous Turenne, France pushed her conquests into Flauders, Artois, Loraine, and Catalonia. The Swedes, who were in alliand Catalonia. The Swedes, who were in all anee with Louis, gained a great victory offer the imperialists in Bohemia; Turenne took Treves and re-established the elector; Condé gained the battle of Nordhignen, took Furnes and Dunkirk, and defeated the archduke on the relief of Son to 1819 sons reductive. plains of Sons, in 1618, after reducing Ypres. The Spanish fleet was defeated on the coast of Italy by the French. This year a separate peace was made between Louis, Ferdinand III., Christina, queen of Sweden, and the states of the constant Parkit Meta. burginny and Britany formed a league with constant, queen of Sweden, and the states of ward IV, king of England, against Louis, the empire. By this tratty, Metz, Toul, Verse, however, contrived to disengage the Eng. dun, and Alsaco were attached to France; but monarch from the alliance, by a treaty one while Louis was successful abroad, his kingdom ded at Amiens in 1478. The duke of Burgundy was distracted by internal divisions: the sin consequence obliged to conclude a pace Parisian, irritated against Mazarin and the since years. Louis was a singular compound queen-mother, and headed by the duke do

Beaufort and the prince of Condé, took up arms. During this revolt known as the civil war of La Fronde, the king, his mother, and the cardinal were obliged to fly. The Spaniards, the cardinal were conged to he. The spanish soppositing by these troubles, made several conquests in Champagne, Loraine, and Italy. In 1651, the king assumed the government; but Mazarin returning to power the year following. the civil war was renewed. Condé headed the malcontents, and defeated the Marshal d'Hoequincourt at Bleneau, but soon afterwards he was attacked by the royal army and made prisoner. In the meanwhile, the archduke Leopold took from the French Gravelines and Dunkirk, and Don John of Austria made himself master of Barcelona; but domestic tranquility being restored, these losses were re-paired. Turenne gained several battles, and took a number of places, which produced a peace between France and Spain in 1659. The principal article in this treaty was the marriage of the king with the infanta Maria Theresa, The minister of Finance, Fouquet, being condemned to banishment for peculation, was succeeded by Colbert, one of the ablest ministers and financiers that ever lived: arts and commerce were cherished and flourished; foreign colonies were established; and at home was founded the Academy of Sciences and another of painting Academy of Sciences and another of painting and sculpture. On the war breaking out be-tween England and Holland, Louis joined with the latter; but after a few naval actions, peace was concluded in 1667. On the death of Philip IV., father of the queen, Louis laid claim to the vacant throne, and marched into the Low Countries, where he took a number of towns, particularly Lisle. His progress caused such alarm, that a treaty was entered into between England, Holland, and Sweden, to check his ambition; but, just as the treaty was completed, peace was restored between Louis and Spain. In 1672 the French king made an attack on Holland, and reduced some of the provinces in a few weeks. This invasion produced a new confederacy against Louis, between the emperor of Germany, Spain, and the elector of Branden-burg, in which all the allies were unsuccessful. burg, in which at the interes were imaccession, and which terminated, in 1078, by the treaty of Nimoguen. Amidst all his glory, Louis com-mitted an act of impolitie cruelty by the revo-cation of the Edict of Nautes, granted by Henry IV. in favour of the Protestants. This measure drove from France a vast number of ingenious mechanics and others, who settled in England and Holland. About this time another league was formed against France by the prince of Crange, the duke of Savoy, and the electors of Bavaria and Francenburg. To this league payara and brandenoug. To this league were afterwards added the emperor of Germany and the king of Spain. The dauphin had the command of the French army, and opened the campaign by taking Philipsburg, in October, 1688; but he was soon forced to retreat before a superior force. In 1690 the French were more successful; but were defeated in the naval action of La Hogue, by Admiral Russell, in 1692. Louis, in person, took Namur, and Marshal Luxemburg gained the battles of Steenkirk and Neerwinden. In 1696, Savoy made a separate peace with France, which was followed by a

αü

In opposition to him, the archduke Charles laid claim to the throne, and was supported by the emperor of Germany, by Holland, and Eng-land. Prince Eugene had the command of the imperial forces, with which he took Cremona. In 1704, Eugene and Mariborough gained the In 1703, Engene and Mariborough games are battle of Blenheim: the year following, Nice and Villa-Franca were taken by the French, who also gained a dearly-bought victory at Cassano over Eugene; on the other hand, Barcelona surrendered to the archduke, and Gironne declared in his favour: the battle of Gerard in his rayour; the battle of Marl-borouch, and Prince Eugene saved Turin by defeating the duke of Orleans. In 1708, Lisle was retaken by the allies, who also gained the battle of Oudnarde, and the imperialists made themselves masters of Naples. The year following, the French lest Tournay, and suffered a defeat at Malpiaquet. In 1713, a treaty of peace was sired of the Wash of the Section 18 of the was signed at Utrecht by France, Spain, England, Savoy, Portugal, Prussia, and Holland; and the next year peace was concluded with the emperor at Radstadt. Louis, by his first wife, had issue one son, Louis, Dauphin of France, who died in 711, leaving three sons, Louis, Philip, and Jaston. Louis XIV. had several illegitimate children by his mistresses. Without forgetting the intolerance and cruelty of Louis towards hose of a different religion from himself, it must be allowed that he was a remarkable and able man. One great fact stands forth promi-nently during his reign,—he was well served. But when we perceive how uniformly gracious he was towards those under his command; how quick at discovering merit; how unwilling to change the agents of his will; we may cease to wonder that a stern man and absolute monarch should find even great intellects to obey his beshould mid even great michies to doey in see hests with zeal and devotion. His reign of 72 years was a brilliant epoch. It gave birth to Condé, Turenne, and Vauban; to Colbert and Louvois; to Corneille, Racine, Molière, La Fontaine, Boileau, Bossuet, Féndon, Lebrun, and Perrault. The most celebrated of Louis's many mistresses were Mesdames de la Vallière, de Montespan, Fontauges, and de Main-tenon; with the latter of whom, he, at the close of his life, when he had become serious and devout, engaged in a secret marriage. The best works to consult relative to this remarkable works to consult relative to this remarkable reign, are Voltaire's "Lossicele de Louis XIV.," some pieces of the king, updished in 1806, under the title of "Works of Louis XIV.," the "Memoirs of De Retz," and those of Saint-Simon. An abridged translation of the latter was produced by Mr. Bayle St. John in 1857.

Louis XIV. was n. 1638; p. 1715.
Louis XIV. was the great-grandson of the preceding, and succeeded him in 1715, at the are of five years, under the regency of Philip. duke of Orleans. In 1723 he was declared of The beginning of his reign was troubled by the Mississippi scheme of the famous Law, which ruined thousands of people. (See Law.)
On the death of the duke of Orleans, in 1723, he was succeeded, as prime minister, by the duke of Bourbon, who was displaced in 1726, when Cardinal Fleury entered upon that station. receivment. In 1880, 5300 mate a separate when Gardinal Fleary entered upon that station, peace with France, which was followed by a The same year the king married the daughter general one at Ryswick, in 1697. The trangulity of Runcy, however, was again bricken inst-mentioned monarch, in 1783, Louis suply the death of Charles II, king of Spain, in ported the election of his queen's relation Station, 2700. His left his crown to Philip of France, nislans against the election of the death of the dath of the dath of the state of Anjou, who assumed the title of Philip occasioned a war, known as the War of the

THE DICTIONARY

Louis

Polish Saccession, between France, Austria, and round succession, occurrent remover, trustrate, min-lussin. Stanislaus, however, was forced to abandon the throne; but the French were suc-cessful in Italy, on which a peace was concluded in 1733. On the death of the emperor Charles VI., in 1740, the succession of the house of Archite was disputed by force paragraph and Legis Austria was disputed by four persons, and Louis declared himself against Maria Theresa, daughter of the late emperor, contrary to his own engagements. He supported the prefensions of the elector of Bavaria, who called himself Charles VII. That prince took Prague, where he was crowned king of Bohemia; but, in 1712, the city was retaken, and the allies, with the king of Great Britain at their head, gained the hing of treat bream at their head, gained the battle of Dettingen. In 1741, Louis took the field in person, and captured Courtray, Menin, and Ypres; he was also present at the battles Fontency and Lawfeld. These advantages were rontony and Lawfeld. These advantages were accompanied by the taking of Ghent, Ostend, Brussels, Bergen-op-Zoom, and other places. On the other hand, the troops of the duke of Sanony and of the queen of 'Immary awayed Provence, and the English completely ruined the French assuments of the search of the control of the province of the the French commerce at sea; which induced the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle in 17-18. In 17-5 a new war broke out between France and England, in which the latter power had Prussia for an ally, while Austria leagued with France. At first the French were very successful, by taking Port Mahon, defeating the duke of Cumberland at Hastenbeck, and forcing the English general and his army to capitulate at Closterseven. The electorate of Hanover was conquered; but, in 1757, the French and Austrians were defeated at Rosbach: this was followed by other losses, both by land and sea, particularly of Canada. Nor was the face of affairs altered for the better by the famous family compact in 1761, by which all the families of the house of Bourbon allied as in a common cause. A treaty of peace was signed at Paris in 1763. The year following, the order of the Jesuits was abolished in France. Louis was a debauched and feebleminded monarch, and to his acts was chiefly due the storm that broke over the head of his unfortunate successor. B. at Fontainebleau,

1770; p. 1774.
Louis XVI., was the son of Louis the Dauphin and of Maria Josephine, daughter of Frederick Augustus, king of Poland. On the death of his father, in 1765, he became heir to the throne, and, in 1770, married Marie Autoinette, archduchess of Austria. In 1774 he succeeded to the crown of France. At that period the finances were in an exhausted state, commerce was nearly ruined, the marine dismantled, and the national debt enormous. To repair the condition of public affairs, Vergennes was made secretary of state, and Turpot had the direction of the imances; Malesherbes was appointed a resulter of the conveil Continue of the member of the council, Sartine had the management of the marine department, and Maurepas was placed at the head of the administration, was placed as the head of the auministration. The first act of Louis was very popular, he dispensed with the enstomary tax paid by the people at the beginning of every new reign. In 1774 the parliament was assembled, and affairs began to assume a favourable aspect, when unfortunately, the French government, always jedoulous of England, took part with the revolted Americans, and a ruinous war ensued between the two countries, which, though it terminated in the loss of the colonies to the English, brought about a bloody revolution in France. The finances of the latter country were completely exhausted, and the Cardinal de Brienne, who had succeeded Calonne as minister, framed imposts which laid such intolerable burdens upon the people, that the parliament refused to register them. For this the members were exiled to Troyes, but were afterwards recalled by Louis, who, at their request, convened the States-General of three orders,—clergy, nobility, and commons. This assembly met in May, 1789. The public mind became violently agitated: the people of Paris rose, and, on the 14th of July of that year, stormed the Hastille. In October, the armed mob, with a prodigious number of women, marched to Versailles, which palace they forced, murdered the guards, and searched in vain for the queen, who would have shared the same fate had she not escaped from her bed. The result of this insurrection was the leading of the king and his family in triumph to Paris, amidst all the insults of a lawless rabble. In February, 1790, Louis was forced to accept the new constitution; but, notwithstanding all his concessions, finding himself a mere prisoner at Paris, and exposed daily to new injuries, he resolved to escape. Accordingly, in the night of June 21, 1791, he and his fandy quitted the Tuileries; but, at Varennes, his person was recornised, and he was conducted back to Paris, where he became a prisoner in his own palace, and suffered the vilest indignities. War was declared against Prance by the emperor and the king of Prussia, and the duke of Brunswick marched into the country, but was forced to refreat. In the mean time, the people were wrought up to a pitch of savate ferocity by factious leaders, and assaulted the Tuileries. The king and family sought retage in the Na-The king and anny so gine recise in the Kational Assembly, who ordered them to be sent to the Temple. The Legislative Assembly gave way to the National Conven ion, which brought Louis to a muck trial. His defence was conducted by Malesherbes, Trombet, and Desize; and his own deportment was, as it had unformly been during his confinement, firm and modest, dignified and resigned. In January, 1703, he was adjudged to death for conspiring against the public good, and, on the 21st of the same month, ascended the scallold on the Place Louis XV., and would have addressed the people, but was prevented by the heating of drums purposely placed there. Louis XVI, had all the virtues that adorn private life; but he was deficient in firmness, and, perhaps, even singleness of purpose. He was an accomplished prince, and was fond of mechanics; as a lock muth, he was particularly skilful. n. 1751; gui.lotined 1793.

Louis XVII., second son of the preceding, was at first styled due de Normandie, and after the death of his elder brother, Louis-Joseph, in 1759, became dauphin of France. Imprisoned in the Temple with his relatives, he was, after his father's death, styled monarch by the roy-dms miners death, styled monarch by the royalists and foreign powers. A cubiller, named Simon, was appointed his gaoler, with the derisive title of tuter. If eded in 1705, it is suspected of poison, but it is more probable that his life was brought to a premature close by the harsh treatment to which he had been subjected. in prison. Many impostors sought to pass for the veritable Louis XVII., but succeeded in obtaining but a small number of dupes. This prince was born in 17.5.

Louis XVIII., brother of Louis XVI. As count of Provence, he had, during the first period of the Revolution, shown a liberal disposition, and voted both in the Assembly of Notables and in the States-General against the government of his brother. Observing, however, the violent tendencies of the Jacobins, he resolved to quit Prance, and took his departments shortly after Louis XVI., in June, 1701. More fortunate than his brother, in June, 1701. More fortunate than his brother, he succeeded in electing his seespe out of France, and rended Brussels. In 1702, he placed timself as the head twas marching on France, but for defeat of 8000 men, and joined the Prance, and rended to Young 48. Vil., in 1703, he placed timself as the head van marching on France; but the defeat of Young 48. Vil., in 1703, he bount of Promos assembly the training however the continent of Surung, he went to England, and Bread the Intervell, in Buckinghamshire, until the events of Thurney, he went to England, and Bread the Intervell, in Buckinghamshire, until the events of 1814. On the full of Napoleon I, in Bay of that year, Louis was placed on the throne of France by the allies. His first act was to declare himself a constitutional and not an absolute monarch. In June, 1814, he laid before the legislature a charter, which afterwards became the base of the law of the kingdom. The sudden return of Napoleon from Elba, in Marchensed Louis to be abundoned by the army and a considerable portion of the unition. At this injuncture he field, and look refuge at Gluet; but after the battle of Waterloo, in June, 1814, was some more placed upon the throne, which he retained till his death. Louis XVIII, was some more placed upon the throne, which he retained till his death. Louis XVIII, was some more placed upon the throne, which he retained till his death. Louis XVIII, was some more placed upon the throne, which he retained till his death. Louis XVIII, was some more placed upon the throne, which he retained till his death. Louis XVIII, was some more placed upon the throne, which he retained till his death. Louis XVIII, was sone more pl

LOUIS-PRILIPPE, king of the French, was eldest son of Louis-Philippe-Joseph, due d'Orléans, styled Philippe-Egalité. Louis-Philippe bore the title of due de Chartres until the death of his father, in 1793, after which he was usually styled due d'Orléans. Between the years 17:9 and 1792, he served in the French revolutionary ama 17%, no serveu in the French revolutionary army, and signalized himself at Valmy and Jemappes. Being cited, together with his fulther ful friend General Dumouriez, to appear before the Committee of Public Safety, and well knowing the sangunary nature of that tribunal, which had, seven months before, such his father to the million to the decrease the Delegion. which may seem months before, soft his lattice to the guillotine, he field across the Belgian frontier, and took refugo in the Netherlands, then under the sway of Austria. He was cordially received by the latter power, and a commission was offered to him, but he refused to fight against his native country. After travelling through Germany in disguise, he went to Switzerland, and at Zurich met his sister Adelaide, known as Mademoiselle d'Orléans, whom he shortly afterwards placed with Madame de Genlis, in a convent near Baumgarten. His funds being now exhausted, he sought and obtained the post of professor in the college of Reichenau, where, under the assumed name of Chabaud, he taught mathematics and geography during eight months. Thence he went to Baumgarten; but, being discovered by the French authorities, he set out for Hamburg, in the hope of obtaining a passage to America. Disapp sent to emigrato io America, he went on board a vessel, and sailod for the United States in 1796. After an adventurous life in the New World, the three Orleans princes returned to Europe in 1800, and took up their residence in England. The due de Montpensier died at Twickenham in 1807, and his brother, the count de Beaujolais, in the following year at Malta, whitten he had been accompanied by the de d'Orleans. In the same year Louis went to reside with his mother and sister at Palermo, at which place the king of Naples and Sicily was dwelling, under British protection, Murat of the king's daughter, the Princess Amélie. With the exception of a visit to Spain, in 1810, he continued to live at Palermo till 1811, when, on hearing the news of Napoleon's full, he immediately set out for Paris. On Napoleon's return from Elba, Louis Philippe seut his family to England, and himself for a time joined the Army of the North, in obedience to the cornal of Couls XVIII. He west went again to Twickenh.m, and remained there during the Hundred Days, but was recalled to Paris to take his seat in the Chamber of Peers. Being regarded with peculiar jealousy by Louis XVIII., he quitted Paris, and did not return to France until 1827, when he went to reside at Neuilly, where he lived in seclusion till he was summoned to the throne as king of the French. in 1830. During seventuen years he enjoyed his elective throne, France, in the mean while, growing wealthy and tranquil. He maintained growing weartny and tranquing the maintained peace with Europe, and added the colony of Algeria to France. But although he had obtained and carned the title of the "Napoleon of Peace," his rule was characterized by an insincere policy towards his allies,-the marriage of his son the due de Montpensier to a Spanish princess being a notable instance; while at home, his restless subjects, tired of what Lamartine termed his government of "vulgar "tility," and harassed by illiberal restrictions, burst out into a revolution in 1849. Had Louis-Philippe been inclined to turn the bayonets of his soldiery upon the people, it may be doubted whether he would have lost his throne. He fled from Paris in disguise, however, and reached Newhaven in March, 1818. The queen of England assigned Claremont as his residence, and there he continued to dwell till his death in 1850. B. at Paris, 1773.

1890. B. at Paris, 1773.
Lours, daughth of France, was the son of Louis XV. and Maria Leczinski. He was father of Louis XVI. Louis XVIII., and Charles X. b. 1729; b. 1765.
LOTTIERNOUS. Philip James de, loc'tair-boory, an eminent landscape-painter, who, after LOUTHERDOURG, Phillip James de, loo'-twirbowy, an eminent landscape-painter, who, after obtaining considerable success in his profession at Paris, went to London, in 1771, and was for some tince emaged as seen-painter at the opera-house; a branch of art in which he is said to have been without a rival. B. at Strasburg, 1740; p. in London, 1812.

Chabaud, he taught mathematics and geography during eight mottles. There he was most to laumage garten; but, being discovered by the France authorities, he set out for Hamburg, in the hope of obtaining a passage to America. Disapprisation this expectation, he travelled on foot through Norway, Sweden, and Flainand, as far as the North Cape. The Directory having offered to release his two brothers, the due de Montpensier.

the courage to oppose Robespierre when at the height of his power, and yet escaped the ven-geance of the tyrant. He wrote a rom-nee, en-titled the "Amours of the Chevalier Faublas," a political journal called the "Sentinel," a "Jus-tification of Paris," and an account of himself, and the dangers which he passed through. B. at Paris, 1764; p. 1797.

Louvous, François Michel Letellier, Marquis de, lo-vwaw, prime minister to Louis XIV. To him are principally attributable the devastation of the Palatinate and the revocation of the of the Palatinate and the revocation of the Edite of Nautes. After having served the "Grand Monarque" during 26 years, he fell under his displeasure, and was only saved from disgrace by sudden death. He was one of those men whose talents we may admire, while we abhor his acts. The Hotel des Invalides was founded by him. n. at Paris, 1641 : D. 1691.

Lovar, Simon Fraser, Lord, luv-at, a Seot-tish chieftain, who, in 1715, took Inverness from the rebels; but, on the breaking out of the second robellion in 1745, declared for the Pretender, for which he was taken prisoner and sent to London, where, in 1747, he was tried, found guilty, and beheaded. B. near Inverness, 1668.

Lover, Samuel, luv-er, poet, novelist, and painter, the son of a member of the Dublin stock exchange, first made himself known to fame as an artist, especially in the department of minia-ture portraits, in which he became famous, and was elected a member of the Hoyal Hibernian Society of Arts. While practising art, he found time to contribute to a periodical a series of "Legends and Tales Illustrative of Irish Character," which produced for him the entrée to the best society in the Irish capital. He re-moved to London about 1827, where he foun-profitable employment for his peneil, if not for his pen. His engagements as an artist, however, did not prevent him from continuing his Irish sketches in a second volume. He now became an extensive contributor to magazine became an extensive contributor to magazine literature, and produced a series of very charming songs illustrative of the popular superstituse of his native country. "Angels Whispers," "True Love can neter Forgel," "Molly Dawn," "The May Daw," "The Four-leaved Shannock," "Molly Carew," "Rory O'More, "&c., and soon afterwards he published his ac, and soon atterwards he published his songs in a collected form, as well as the novels of "Rory O'More," "Ilandy Andy," and the "Treasure Trove," He was also the author of several operas founded upon his own works, among which are "Rory O'More," "The White Horse of the Peppers," "The Happy Man," &c. Finding that his sight was becoming impaired by his womentifying denotion to a main of the control of the c paired by his unremitting devotion to pencil and pen, Mr. Lover decided on making his public appearance in London in a monologue interspersed with his own songs and recitations. This experiment he commenced in 1844, with perfect success, and continued the entertainment, varied and changed from time to time, at various periods, both in Great Britain and in America. After his return from the New World in 1843, he illustrated his transatlantic experiences in a second entertainment, which 664

where he died in prison, 1803. m. at St. was equally successful with the former. In Domingo, 1743.

LOUVED DE COUVEAY, Jean Baptiste, low-vei poems, which contained some fine peasages, but de(v) koov-vei, a French writer, and one of the did not attract very much attention. He for members of the National Convention. He had several years chieved a pension for his literary Severices from the crown. B. 1797; D. 1868.

Lows, Rt. Hon. Robert, to, was educated at Winchester and University College, Oxford, and was called to the bar in 1842. He was a mem-ber of the council of New South Wales from 1843 to 1850. In 1851 he returned to England, and after holding various minor appointments, from 1859 to 1864. Although holding advanced opinions, he opposed the reform bills of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Disraeli of 1866 and 1867 but, not withstanding this, he took office under the former in 1868 as Chancellor of the Exchequer. B. 1811.

LOWENDAL, Ulrich Frederic Waldemar, Marshal, lo' u-dal, a famous military officer and engineer, began his military career in Poland in 1713; but entered the Danish service during the war with Sweden. He afterwards served in Hungary, and next took part in the wars of Naples and Sicily. He returned to Poland in 1721, and was made colonel of infantry and commander of the royal horse guards. During the peace he studied gunnery and engineering, and was made field-marshal and inspector-general of the Saxon infantry in the service of Augustus, king of Poland. In 1734 and 1735 he was in the Austrian service; and sub-equently entered that of Russia. He accepted the com-mission of lieutenant-general in the French army in 1743, and distinguished himself at the army in 1745, and distinguished infiner at the sieges of Menin, Ypres, Friburg, &c., and also at the battle of Fontenoy, In 1747 he took Bergen-op-Zoom by storm, which, till then, had been deemed impregnable; for which and his other services he was created marshal of France. His knowledge of engineering and military tacties in general was of first-rate order; he spoke all the European languages with fluency; and with these accomplishments combined modesty and amiable manners. B. at Hamburg, 1700; p. 1755.

1700; D. 1700.

LOWRY, Wilson, F.R.S., lo'-re, an English engraver, was the son of Mr. Strickland Lowry, a portrait painter, at Whitehaven. Wilson Lowry was the inventor of a ruling-machine, capable of ruling successive lines, either equivalent to the product of the control o distant or in just gradations, from the greatest required width to the nearest possible approximation; also of one capable of drawing lines to a point, and of forming concentric circles; he likewise introduced the use of diamond points for etching, and many other useful improve-ments in the art; and was the first who suc-ceeded in what is technically termed "biting in" well upon steel. For thirty years before his death he was engaged by eminent publishers on illustrated works; and attained to the highest rank in his peculiar branch of art. B. 1702;

D. 1820.

Lowrs, William, louth, a learned English divine, who wrote "Commentaries on the Four Greater Prophets," "Directions for the Profitable Reading of the Holy Scriptures," "A Vindication of the Divine Authority and Inspiration of the Old and New Testaments," in answer to Leclerc, and other important works. n. in London, 1661; p. 1732. Lowers, Robert, a learned English prelate, son of the above, who, in 1741, was elected

Lovola

Lucullus

professor of poetry at Oxford, and in that capa-city delivered his admirable lectures, which were printed at Oxford in 1753, under the title of "Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews." After passing through various minor grades of the church, he became bishop of London in 1777. Besides the above work, Bishop Lowth published a trans-lation of Isaiah from the Hebrew, an English Grammar, the "Life of William of Wykcham," the Life of his father, in the "Biographia Britannica," a Poem on the Genealogy of Christ, some controversial letters with Bishop Warburton, and sermons on public occasions, B. 1710; D. 1787.

LOVOLA, Ignatius, loi'-o-la, founder of the order of Jesuits, the youngest son of a Spanish nobleman of high birth, was brought up to the military profession, and obtained a com-mission in the Spanish army; but, breaking his leg at the siege of Pampeluna, he made a yow to the Virgin, that if he recovered he would go on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and devote go on a pligrimage to berusaem, and devoce himself to a religious course of life, which reso-lution he fulfilled. After studying Latin a short time at Barcelona, he commenced preaching, and began to gather disciples, for which he was imprisoned; but still persevered in adding to the number of the brethren of the Order of Jesus, as they were called, and for which, at length, he obtained a confirmation by Pope Paul III. This order increased prodigiously during the lifetime of Loyola, who, however, was not the author of the pernicious maxims which afterwards disgraced to be 1491; b. 1556.

Lucanus, Marcus Anneus, Lucan, lu-kai-nus, a Latin poet. Going at an early age to Rome, his verses caused him to become the favourite of the emperor Nero; but being foolish enough to enter into competition with his imperial patron, who was desirous of being considered the first poet of his time, he was forbidden to publish any more poetry. He was subsequently condemued to death for conspiring against the endemned to death for conspiring against the life of Nero. The only poem of his at present extant is the "Pharsalia," which describes the war from the commencement to Cæsar's meeting with Cleopatra in Egypt. B. in Spain, 38; D. 65.

LUCIAN, lu'-she-an, a celebrated Greek writer.

His father, who was poor, placed him with a sculptor; but, disliking that business, he studied law, which profession he also abandoned, and devoted himself to philosophy and elo-quence. Marcus Aurelius had a great esteem for his talents, and appointed him registrar of Egypt. His works, which are written in the Attie dialect, consist mostly of satirical dialogues, abounding with wifticisms, but profane and obseene. The best editions of Lucian are those of Lehmann and Dindorf. Tooke, Bloont, and Francklin have given English translations of his writings. D. at an advanced age, about 200.

LUCILIUS, Caius, lu-sil'-e-us, a Roman satirist, who served under Scipio in his expedition against the Numantians. He is considered by some as the author of a poetical satire; but only a few of his verses remain, which are in the "Corpus Poetarum" of Mattaire. B. 148 B.C.;

Lucros 1., Pope, lu'-she-us, succeeded Cornelius in 252, and was martyred the year following.

Lucrus II., a native of Bologna, succeeded Celestin II. in 1144, and died in 1145, of a blow which he received in a popular commotion, Lucius III, succeeded Alexander III, in 1181. The Roman people having risen against him, he retired to Verona, but afterwards returned to Rome, and, by the help of the Italian princes, subdued his enemies. A new commotion com-pelled him, however, to retire again. He made a constitution for the extirpation of heresies, which laid the foundation of the Inquisition.

p. at Verona, 1185.

LUCRETIA, lu-kre'-she-a, a celebrated Roman lady, was the daughter of Lucretius, governor of home, and the wife of Collatinus, a relation of Tarquin. Her husband being at the siege of Ardea, a conversation took place one evening at supper, between him and the three sons of Tarquin, respecting the prudence of their wives. At length it was agreed upon to ride to Rome and see how the ladies were employed. The daughters-in-law of Tarquin were regaling with some companions of their own age, while Lu-rectia was engaged with he raidens in working upon wool. The dispute having terminated in her favour, the young men returned to the camp; but Sextus, the eldest of the king's sons, conceived a violent passion for Lucevita, withe he was determined to gratify, without any re-gard to the principles of honour. Accordingly, some days after, he secretly left the camp and visited Lucretia, who treated him with the civility due to his rank. After supper he was con-ducted to his chamber; and, when he thought that the family were asleep, he stole softly, with a sword in his hand, to Lucretia's room, and made use of every effort to provail over her some companions of their own age, while Luand made use of every effort to prevail over her virtue. Finding his artifices fruitless, he threatwirthe. Finding has a rances it course, he would kill a slave, and lay the body by hers; then report that, having caught them together, he had slain them both. This menace succeeded; for the them both. This menace succeeded; for the dread of dishonourable reproach prevailed over Lucretia, and the base seducer returned in the morning to the camp. Lucretia, the next day, sent for her father and her husband, to whom she related the shocking circumstance. They endeavoured to console her, but in vain, for, drawing forth a dagger, she plunged it into her breast. Lucretia's death occasioned the Hosto, of the Romans, who, excited by Brutus, expelled the Tarquins from their city. Sextus field to a constant of the Cabili where he soon after perished. Lucretia died 509 n.c.

LUCRETUS, Titus Carus, lu-kre'-she-us, a Roman poet and philosopher, was born of a good family, and educated under Zeno of Sidon, and Pinedrus, both of the Epicurean sect. Cicero commends him for his learning and cloceero commends and for his learning and elo-quence. His poem "On the Nature of Things" is clegant, but is founded on the doctrines of Epicurus. The writings of Lucredius have been translated into English, with notes, by Creech, and published in Bohn's "Classical Library."

в. 95 в.с.; р. 52 в.с.

LUCULLUS, Lucius Licinius, lu-kull-lus, a celebrated Roman general and consul, who gained a great victory over Mithridates, on the borders of the Granieus, D.c. 74, and conquered Bithynia. He also defeated Tigranes, king of Armenia, father-in-law of Milhridates, and took his capital: but the severity of Lucullus to his soldiers gave such offence, that he was recalled, and the gave such offence, that he was recance, and the command given to Pompey. On his return to Rome, he obtained a triumph, and then retired to private life, possessed of immense riches, He collected a prodigious library, and patronized learned men. B. about 115 B.C.; D. 49 B.C.

Luncow, Edmund, Ind'-io, an English Parliamentary general, who studied first at Oxidan and afterwards in the Tomple; but the civil wars brecking out, he quitted the law fir when she was a firm sepathiam, and was one of the members of the high court of justice which some tenered Charles i, to the scall old. On the death of Ireton, he had the command of the army in Ireland; but was teprived of it, for opposite to surpration of Cromwell. In the parliament ander Richard Cromwell, he obtained a seat, and was restored to his command in Ireland, but was again recalled. Just before the restriction of the king, he work to Verw, he Switzerland, where he resided till 16%, when he ventured to return to England; but the House of Commons applying to King William to cause of Commons applying to King William to cause of Commons applying to King William to cause the late of the Switzerland, where he died in 1693. n. about 162-18 is memoirs, which are curious and accurate, were printed after his death.

Luvermann, herd-prom, a Lombard historian, was secretary to Herengarius, regent of the kingdom of italy, who also employed him as historian was secretary to Herengarius, regent of the kingdom of the high second historian hist ing to the custom of his age, the Eullehlened Doctor. In early lie he was a soldier, but, quiting the army, herefired to a lonely spal, where he remained in sollitude, pretending to have visions, in which he was directed to convert the Moors to Christianity. After long years of preparation by study, he went on a mission into Mauritania, where he was nearly stoned to death by the nutives. His works on theology, physic, philosophy, chemistry, and law, have here frequently printed, but are very obscure, n. at Palma, Majoren, 1243, p. 1215.

Luux, Jéan-Baptiste, a éclebrated mustian, who became page to Mademoiselle de Montpensier, niceo of Louis XIV, who caused Lin to be taught music, in which he attained such excellence as to be made superintendent of unsie to that king. Lully composed a number of operas and the music of several of Mulière's plays. n. at Plorence, 1083; p. at Plaris, 1647.

opens and the muste of several of Andree's plays. n. at Plays, n. at Paris, 16-5.

Lumbers, Matthew, 11.1), in set-lies, 16-5.

Lumbers, Matthew, 11.1), in set-lies, present of Fort William, Calentin, was author of two grammers of those languages. In 18-25 he rillinguished the service of the East India (company, and returned to England. n. 1777, p. 1803, and returned to England. 2. 1777; p. 1855.

Large and returned to England. 2. 1777; p. 1855.

Large and returned to England. 2. 1777; p. 1855.

Large and returned to the crusades, and espoused Sibyla, daughter of Amaur, king of Jernsalem. He succeeded Baldwin V. in 1186, blut no afterwards resigned his kingdom to Richard. L, king of England, and received the isle of Cyprus in return. 2. 1944.

Lussan, Margaret de, loos'-så, a French authoress of considerable talents, was the daughter of one of Cardinal Fleury's coachmen. 663

Among her most esteemed productions are, "La Comtesse de Goudez," "Ancedotes de Philippe Auguste," "Ancedotes of Francis I," "La Vie de M. Crillen," and "Histoire do Charles VI." n. 1682; time of death uncertain, Charles VI. B. 1082; time of death uncertain.

LUTTING, Martin, loo'-ther, the great religious reformer, was the son of Hans Luther, a minor and metal-worker. In 1501 he was sent to the university of Erfurt, where he studied philosophy and the civil law; but walking one day in the fields with a fellow-student, his companion was nems with a renow-student, his companion was struck dead by lightning, which so affected Luther, that he determined to retire from the world. He accordingly entered a monastery of the order of St. Augustine, where he led a pious and studious life; and there happening to meet with a Latin Dible, he read it with the utmost care and avidity, and was struck with the gospel and the practices of the Roman church. This impression became deeper in 1510, when he went to Rome on some business connected with his monastery. On his return he was created D.D., and became professor of divinity erected 19.15, and became professor of divinity at the university of Wittenberg, that founded by Frederick, electer of Saxony. In 1517, Leo X. published the famous bull offering plenary indult-vaces, the purchasers of which obtained for-divenses of all sins committed by them. These partons were gold in Germany by the Dominions, in the most shame and the professor of the profess less manner, and cave offence to all religious persons, and to Lather in particular, who published a "Thesis on Indulgences," at Wittenberg, in which he exposed, in the strongest manner, the iniquity of the traffic. The propositions of Leither's thesis were opposed by retzel, the papal agent; but the people at large were convinced that the truth lay on the side of Lather. The dispute growing serious throughout Germany, the emperor earnestly pres ed the pope to exert his influence to put a stop to it: and, accordingly, Luther was cited to appear at Rome, which he prudently declined. Leo also commanded the elector Frederick to deliver Leither up to the papal legate, which he retased, at the same time requesting that the cause might be heard in Germany. To this the cardinal Caictano, at Augsburg, to whom he gave a full account of his faith; but being required to make an implicit submission to the decrees of the pope, he positively refused. On this, Leo issued a bull, threatening to excommunicate all who should presume to deny his power to grant plenary includences. Luther, on the other hand, appealed, in a public declaration, from the pope to a general council. The fol-lowers of Luther increased rapidly; Erasmus approved of his conduct in a great measure, and corresponded with him, but had not the courage to declare himself fully. The learned and ami-able Melanethon attached himself firmly to lattle, and, by his prudence and moderation, rendered him essential service. In 1518, Luther had a dispute at Leipsic, with Eckius, professor of divinity at Inguistant. In 1520 the pope issued a formal condemnation of Luther, which issued a formal condemnation of Littler, which was immediately termed, by the reformer, "the exocrable bull of Antichrist;" and, calling the students of Wittenberg together, he fung the pope's bull and decretals into the inc. The year following, he attended the diet of Worms, by virtue of a safe-conduct from the emperation of Charles V.; and when his friends endeavoured to dissuade him from going, by urging the fate of Huss, he said, that "if there were as many devils at Worms as tiles upon the houses, he would go." He was here required to retract his opinions, and to promise submission to the pope, both which he resolutely refused. On his return through a wood, he was seized by a party of horse, who conveyed him to a castle belonging to the elector of Saxony, where he was so secretly kept, that no one knew what was become of him, except the persons concerned in the affair. In the mean time, the emperor published an edict against him, and put under the ban of the empire those who should defend him. Luther, however, was secure in his retreat, which he called his Hermitage and his Patmos; and employed his time in conferences with his chosen friends, and in writing books. After an absence of ten months, he again made his appearance at Wittenberg, where he wrote a severe reply to Henry VIII, of England, who had published a book against him on the doctrine of the Eucharist. About this time he published a translation of the New Testament into German, which was universally read, though proscribed by imperial authority. In 1523, Erasmus was provailed on to write against Luther, and chose for his subject the freedom of the human will, which he defended against the reformer, who replied in a treatise entitled "De servo Arbitrio," which was answered by Erasiaus in another, called "Hyperaspistes." In 1525, Luther married Catharine von Bora, a nun, who had escaped from a convent; on which his enemies accused him of immorality and impiety; but Luther defended his act on spiritual grounds. In 1529 the comparer convened a diet at Spires, to procure aid from the German princes against the Turks, and to devise means for allaying religious disputes. In this assembly it was ordered that the mass should be universally observed throughout the empire. Against this decree the electors of Saxony and Brandenburg, and other princes, entered their protest; on which account the reformed party acquired the name of Protestants. These princes then entered into a league for their mutual defence against the emperor. In 1530 was drawn up by Melanethon the Confession of Augsburg, which was received as the standard of the Protestant faith in Germany. In 1534, Luther's translation of the Bible into German was published. In 1537, Luther was attacked with a dangerous illness, but recovered, and went on writing books, and labouring to promote the great work of reformation. The mind of Luther was ardent and impetuous, but honest, and carnestly bent on the discovery and proagation of religious truth. His manners were becoming his profession, and his whole life evinced a zeal for the glory of Go I and the welfare of man. He was a multifarious and voluminous writer : a coma muniarious and voluments which is the object edition of his works, in 26 vols., was published at Erfangen in 1833. A translation of Luther's "Table Talk" was published in London, in 1849. In 1868 a monument was greefed to the great reformer at Worms by the Protestant princes and people of Germany. n. at Eisleben, Baxony. 118

under the great Condé. He served as lieutenant-general at the taking of Franche-Conté, in 1063, and in the Dutch campaign of 1672, about which time he effected a finnous retreat with an army of 9,000 unen against 70,000. In 1674 he was made marshal of France. In 1660 he gained the battle of Fleurus, which was followed by the victories of Leusen, 8teenkirk, and Noerwinden. B. 1628; p. 1005.

Teroprinors, like-of-ron, a poet and grammarian, who lived at the court of Ptolemy Philadelphas, and formed one of the seven poets known as the Pteias. He was a voluminous writer, but only one of his poems has come down to our times,—that entitled "Cassandra," which is a long and enigmatical work that has been much commented on by the Greek grammarians. Ovid states that he was killed by an arrow. Lived in the third century B.C.

LYOUNGUS, U-kur'-qua, the famous Spartan awgiver. The records of his birth and of the period of his existence are very obscure; but his is stated to have been the son of Kunomus, king of Sparta, and brother of Polydectes, who succeeded his father. After the death of Polydectes, his work of the control to Venergus, though she was then with child; but he reduced, and faithfully discharged the duty of regent and guardian during the minority of his rephese Charlians. When the young prince came of are, Lyeurgus left Sparta, and travelled into several countries to observe their lans and manners. On his return home he found the litigation in a state of controlsion; the high endeavoured to reign despotically, and the people would not obey. Lyeurgus undertook to reform the government, and introduced the most rigorous laws, yet such as wore admirably adapted to civilize a disordered people. After this he quitted Sparta, and is supposed to have died in Crete, at an advanced age, about 570 x.c.

Leoradus, an Athenian orator, who is said to have studied philosophy under Plato, and rhetoric under Isocartes. He was the friend of Demosthenes, and a zealous advocate of liberty. One of his orations is included in Reiske's collection of Greek orators. D. about 323 n.o.

Exports, John, Idd-yalt, an Augustine monk of Bury St. Edimunds, in the reign of lienry VI., was a poet and the successor of Chaueur, and a most versatile and prollife writer. Hitson, in his "Bibliographica Poctea," has enumerated no fewer than 231 short works by him. The "History of Troy," Story of Thebes," and "Fall of Princes," are his best poems. He is also said to have been a good maltematician and an accomplished scholar. B. about 1875; a about 1875.

Exdust, Thomas, a learned English divine, chronologer, and mathematician, who was rector of Okerton, and wrote in tweive years more than ris hundred sermons on the harmony of the Gospels. Having become sureign a friend's felst, he was east into prison, and remained there till the debt was discharged by Hishop Laud and some others. In the civil war he adhered to the king, suffered severely in consequence, and died in Indigence in 1610, p. 1572. His works, which were mostly composed in Takin, were very numerous. His hard lot is referred to by Dr. Johnson in the following lines:

"If dreams yet flatter, once again attend; Hear Lydiat's fate, and Galileo's end." Lxpus, Jonnnes Laurentius, li'-dus, a celebrated Greek writer, who, during forty years,
bers of his own profession, still he was almost filled several important posts at the court of the emperor Justinian. Three of his works have survived; these being treatises on the defiding Watson and Thistitwood on their "Magistrates of the Roman Republic" on
"The Months," and on "Omens and Prodigies," all of which were included in Bekker's to the governing party of the time; and,
"Corpus Seriptorum Historine Dyzantium," published at Bonn, 1837. 2. about 480; 2.

in politics, he embraced the offers made to him bett 560.

Lve, Edward, If, an English elergyman, who devoted himself, with the greatest success, to the study of the Saxon and Gothic languages and literature. Besides other important works, he gave to the world a "Dictionary of the Anglo-Saxon and Gothie Languages," which was published in 1772, a few years after the compiler's death. n. at Totnes, 1704; n. 1747. Lyral, S. Charles, If-O., a distinguished modern geologist, was educated at Exeter College, Oxford, and ultimately commenced practice at the bar : but his private means making him independent of his profession, he gave himself exclusively to the study of geology. In 1832 he was named professor of geology at King's College, London : but this appointment he soon afterwards resigned. From the comne soon arterwards resigned. From the Con-mencement of the publication of the Geological Society's "Transactions," he was a regular and valuable contributor. In 1830 appeared the first volume of his great work, "The Principles This was completed in 1834, of Geology." of deology. This was completed in 1884, passed through many editions, and attracted the attention of the whole geological world. Another extraordinary book by him was produced in 1838, entitled "Elements of Geology." These two works have exercised the most marked influence upon geological inquiry since the date of their first publication. Sir Charles Lyell made two visits to the United States of America, and published many memoirs relative to the geology of the New World. The Europe was also travelled over, continent of Europe was also travelled over, and its geological fasts described by him. A general account of his journeys in America was published by Sir Charles under the title of "Travels in North America," and "A Second Visit to the United States."

Itis satentitic observations, both in the New World and on the continent of Europe, were produced in the "Transactions" of the Geological Society, reports of the British Associa-tion, and in English and American scientific journals. His great services to the cause of geological science obtained for him, in 1818, elected president of the Geological Society, and in 1855 his university conferred upon him the title of D.C.L. B. at Kinnordy, Forfarshire, Lyndunger, John Singleton Copley, Lord, Judy-Auver, a celebrated modern English judge and statesman, whose father, an eminent painter, and emigrated to America, and there the future English peer first saw the light. When about two years of age, his father took him to England, where he was ultimately educated, first by a private tutor, and alterwards at Trinfty College, Cambridge. He was elected fellow of this college, and received the eppointment of "travelling bachelor;" upon which he visited the United States. On his return to England, he commenced the study of the law, and in 1797 was called to the bar. Although his great abili-

unknown to the general public till the year 1817, when he assisted Sir Charles Wetherell in defending Watson and Thistlewood on their trial for high treason. His singular talents, as train for high creason. In singular thionis, as displayed on this occasion, recommended him to the governing party of the time; and, although he had hitherto evinced liberal views in polities, he embraced the offers made to him by the Tory party. In 1818 he became chief. justice of the county palarine of Chester; and soon afterwards entered Parliament for the borough of Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight, In 1819 he rose to the grade of king's serjeant, and was in the same year knighted and anpointed solicitor-general. In the following year he conducted the prosecution in two great trials—those of the Cato-street conspirators, and of Queen Caroline in the House of Lords. He became attorney-general in 1824, and in 1826 was made master of the Rolls. When the question of Roman Catholic emancipation came before the House of Commons, in 1827, he energetically opposed the measure; but two years generally opposed the measurer but two years afterwards streamously supported it, declaring that he "felt no apprehension for the safety of the church." He had previously accepted the chancellorship, and had been created Lord Lyndhurst. In 1830 he was appointed chief baron of the Exchequer, and in that capacity carned the highest distinction as an acute and impartial judge. During the proceedings con-sequent upon the introduction of the Reform Bill into the House of Lords, so strenuous was his opposition, that he was regarded as the head of the Conservative party in the Upper House. At one period it was actually proposed to him to form a new ministry, in conjunction with the duke of Wellington; a project which fell to the ground on account of the refusal of Sir Robert Peel and other moderate Conservatives to join his cabinet. In 1834, the great seal was confided to him under the Prel administration: but he retired with his party a short time after-wards. In 1841, however, Sir Robert Peel returned to power: whereupon Lord Lyndhurst. for the third time, accepted the chancellorship, and retained it until the retirement of his chief, and retained it unto the retreatment of the in 1846. From that period, his speeches in the House of Lords became fewer in number, but correlat no less woight with his heavers. When carried no less weight with his hearers. past the great age of 80 years, he delivered remarkable speeches relative to the war with Russia, on Cambridge University reform, life prerages, and the defences of the country. B. at Boston, United States, 1772; D. 1863.

Lyneboch, Thomas Graham, Lord, lin'-dok,

A riseon, time states, 1712, 18, 1805.

LYNEDOCH, Thomas Graham, Lord, fin'-dok, a celebrated British general, did not enter the army until he was in his 3-fit year, and did so then in consequence of the loss of a beloved wife. To alleviate his grief and restore his impaired health, he was recommended to travel; and it was during his sejaren at Gibraltar that he fell into the society of the officers of the garrison, and thenecforth determined en devoting himself to the profession of arms. He first served as a volunteer at the siege of Toulon, under Lord Mulgrave, and e. his return raised from among his countrymen a battalion of the 30th regiment, of which he was appointed colonel-commandant. He then accompanied his regiment to Gibraltar; but soon growing tired of the filleness inseparable from garrison duty there, he obtained permission to Join the Austrian army, where he found ample opportunities of studying the art of war, while he was enabled to take advantage of his position in sending to the British government intelligence of the military operations and diplomatic measures adopted by the commanders and sovesures anopeed by the commanders and sove-reigns of the Continent. In 1797 he returned to England, and having joined his regiment, was appointed to act with Sir Charles Stewart in the reduction of the island of Minorea, after which he was employed two years in the blockade of Malta. In 1808 he proceeded with Sir John Moore to Sweden, and afterwards served in Spain with that gallant officer during the campaign which ended in the battle and death of Moore at Corunna. Next year, Gedeath of Moore at Corunna. Next year, Ge-neral Graham led a division at the siege of Flushing; in 1810 he commanded the Bittish troops at Cadiz; and in 1811 fought and won the memorable battle of Barossa. After this he joined Lord Wellington, and was present at the siege of Cludad Rodrigo; but ill-health rendered it necessary for him to revisit Eng-land for a short period. Early in 1813, hower, he returned to the Peninsula, led the left wing at the lattle of Vittoria, reduced the town and citadel of St. Sebastian, crossed the Bidasson, and, after a severe contest, established the and, after a severe contest, established the British army on the territory of France. On the 3rd of May, 1814, Sir Thomas Graham was created a peer by the title of Baron Lynedoch of Balgowan, on which occasion he refused a grant of £2000 per annum, to himself and heirs, which was intended to accompany his elevation. In 1826 he was appointed to the governorship of Dumbarton Castle. "Never," said Sheridan, "was there seated a loftier spirit in a braver heart," B. 1750; D. 1813.

LYON, George Francis, lv'-on, a captain in the British navy, but more eminent as a traveller and explorer, entered the service in 1809, and was for several years engaged in the active duties of his profession, and was present at the battle of his profession, and was present at the ductor of Algiers. Its career as a traveller began in 1818, when he accompanied Mr. Ritchie in an expedition into the interior of Africa, which proved most disastrous. The adventurers suffered terribly from privation and disease, to which the leader of the enterprise, Mr. Ritchie, fell a wittim at Mourzout, kine capital of Pezzan. Mr. Lyon, however, returned to England, and published an account of the expedition, under the title of a "Narrative of Travels in Northern Africa, accompanied by Geographical Notes of Soudan, and of the course of the Niger." He now embarked in explorations in a widely difform scene, having, in 1822, in command of the Herta, accompanied Captain Parry's expedition to the Polar Sons. Of this expedition he published an account in a "Private Journal." He was made post-captain in 1823, and in the Calcan could be supposed to the published and control of the published and post-captain in 1823, and in the was made post-captain in 1823, and in the was made posterioral in 1820, and in Griper gun-brig, made another voyage of discovery in the Polar regions, during which he and his crow encountered great perils, and were compelled to come home without effecting the compensat to come nome without releasing some object of the expedition. Captain Lyon subsequently visited Mexico as one of the commissioners of the Real del Monte Mining Company. He suffered shipwreck, on his return in 1827, near Holyhead, losing everything belonging to him-and after a second time visiting South America died on the homeward passage, in 1832. B. a. Chichoster, 1795. The life of Captain Lyon wa-a continued series of adversities and misfortunes to which few parallels can be found.

Lyons, Israel, li'-ons, an astronomer, botanist, id mathematician, the son of a Polish Jew, who was a Hebrew teacher at Cambridge, was Sir Joseph Banks's instructor in botany, and accompanied Captain Phipps, afterwards Lord Mulgrave, as astronomer, in his voyage towards the North Pole. He was one of the calculators of the "Nautical Almanack," and wrote a of the "Nautical Almanack," and wrote a "Treatise on Fluxions," &c. B. 1739; D. 1775. LYONS, Edmund, Lord, a distinguished British admiral, was sent, at a very early ge, to Hyde Abbey Scholl, near Winchester; out little time was spent in a merely school ducation, as he entered the navy as a volun-teer of the first class in 1800, when but ten ears and a half old. He was first sent on sound the Royal Charlotte yacht, and, after seeing some service in the Mediterranean, acompanying Sir John Duckworth's expedition o the Dardanelles, and assisting at the demoition of the redoubt on Point Pesonies, on the Adviatic shore, he returned to England in 1807.

In the mean time the battle of Trafalgar had been fought. The same year he went to the East Indies, where he remained for the next live years, and where he attained the rank of ieutenant. In the Indian seas he gained coniderable distinction, obtaining honourable men-tion as among the first to scale the castle of Belgica, in the island of Banda Neira, in 1810. For this he was appointed flag-lieutenant to Rear-Admiral Drury. But his most important service was the storming of Fort Marrack, which he took with scarcely any loss. Returnmg home in ill health, he was promoted to the command of the Rinaldo, 10, which vessel formed one of the squadron which, in 1813, escorted Louis XVIII. to France, and the allied sovereigns to England. In 1828 he assisted at the blockade of Navarino, and superintended the naval expedition sent to co-operate with the French in the reduction of the castle of Morea, the last remnant of the Ottoman power in the Peloponnesus. He was afterwards employed in cruising about the Mediterranean, and on one celebrated occasion entering the Black Sea in the first British man-of-war that had ever passed the Bosphorus, and actually visited the scene of his future labours—Schastopol. In 1835, Japtain Lyons, who had in the mean time received the honour of knighthood and the inignia of several orders, exchanged the naval which post be filled from 1835 until 1819. In 1819 he was appointed British minister to the Swiss confeloration, and, in 1851, was sent to Stockholm in a similar capacity. There he remained until, in November, 1833, war being than imminent, he was appointed second in command of the Modiferrancen fleet. If at the outset only second in command, Sir Edmund Lyons was from the first her ruling spirit of the British fleet, and to him was due, in ameninent degree, the success which attended the English arms on the shores of the Extinct Plate of the Arms of Tanding, and superintended all so closely, that, "in his cageness, he left but six inches between the keel of his noble ship and the ground below it." Not only in this matter of the transport of the trope. Jut also in every subsequent stage of the expedition, Six Edmund Lyons give the most valuable assistance to Lord

Ragian and his successors. At the battle of Eupator, the Alma, he supported the French army by learning to bringing the guns of his ship to bear on the left flank of the Russians. On the first bombardment of Sebastopol, his ship, the Agamemaon, was nearest to the Russian batteries. He was mean as to the dissian bacteries. He was present at Balukhava and at likermann. It was he who, having conveyed the English soldiers to the Crimea, saved them from being compelled to leave it—ballled, if not vanquished. A day or two after the battle of Balakiava, he learnt, to his astonishment, that orders had been issued to the naval brigade to embark as many guns as possible during the day, for Balaklava was to be evacuated at night, -of course surrendering to the enumy the greater portion of remacing to the enemy the greater portion of the guns. On his own responsibility the ad-miral at once put a stop to the execution of this order, and went in search of Lord Ragdan, who, it appears, had come to the resolution of abandoning Balaklava, in consequence of the opinion expressed by the engineers, that, after the loss of the redoubts in the rear, previously held by the Turks, the English strength ought to be concentrated on the plateau. Sir Edmund Lyons strongly opposed these views, and having shown to Lord Raglan that the engineers had been mistaken once, he argued they might be insufficiency of Kamie allied navies, and that the abandonment of Balaklava meant the evacuation of the Crimea Balaklava menut the evacuation of the crimea in a week. After some conversation, Lord Raglan said, "Well, you were right before, and this time I will act upon your advice." Sir Edmund elatined leave to countermand the orders which had been issued; Balaklava was maintained as the basis of operations, and the army was saved from what might have proved an inglorious defeat, if not a terrible disaster. This was, perhaps, the most important of all the services rendered by the admiral, and he well deserved the peerage which it earned for him. After a short command in the Mediterranean, he was summoned to escort her majesty to Cherbourg,—the last public duty he ful-filled. B. near Christehurch, Hants, 1790; D. 1858.

LYSANDER, li-săn-der, a famous Spartan commander in the Peloponnesian war. He prevailed on Ephesus to withdraw from its alliance with Athens, and entered into a league with Cyrus the Younger. He also defeated the Athenian feet, after which the city itself fell into his hands; and thus terminated the Peloponnesian mands; and this terminated the responsesan war, which had lasted 27 years. Lysander overturned the democracy, and restored the government of the Archons. After this he endeavoured to soal himself on the throne of endeavotred to sad inneed on the throne of Sparta, but was unsuccessful. He was slain, fighting against the Thebans, 305 B.O. LYSIAS, W.-Se-Sa, a justly celchrated Athenian orator. He assisted Thrasybulus against the orator. He assisted Thrasybulus against the Thirty Tyrants. Plutarch mentions 425 of his rotations; but of these only 35 remain, with fragments of some others. Editions of his orations have been published in English, by Taylor and others. E. at Athens, 458 B.O.; D.

about 378 B.C.

Lysias, general of Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria, who sent him against Judas Macca-beus, by who sent him against Judas Macca-beus, by whom he was surprised and defeated, with the loss of 5000 men. Lysias saved him-self by flight, and, after the death of Epiphanes, returned to power, as regent, under Antiochus

He laid siege to Jerusalem: but learning that Philip, who disputed the regency with him, had taken possession of the capital of Syria, he raised the siege, marched against Philip, and defeated him. Both Eupator and himself were subsequently abandoned by their partisans, and slain by their guards, B.c. 162.
LYSCHACHUS, li-sim'-n-kns, one of the generals

INSULABILIS/DISTANCE FOR COLD THE GENERAL OF A RESEARCH THE WHOLE HEATH IN THE MADE IN THE WASHE HEATH IN THE WHOLE HEATH IN THE WASHE A TOWN A SHEET WASHE WASHE AND THE WASHE WASH

282 B.C.

Lystrees, li-sip'-pus, a celebrated Greeian sculptor, who is said to have been a self-taught artist. His greatest works were the statue of a man wiping and anointing hims, lfafter bathing, which was placed before Agrippa's baths at Rome, and a statue of the sun, represented in a car drawn by four hor es, at khodes. Flourished in the 4th century n.c. Lytrerron, Edward, Lord, lift-tel-ton, keeper of the great seal in the reign of Charles I. 1611 he was made colonel of a regiment in the king's army at York. p. 1615.

LYTIELTON, George, Lord, an English writer, who was educated at Eton and Christ Church. Oxford. On his return from travel on the con-tinent, he obtained a seat in Parliament, where he distinguished himself as a frequent speaker on the side of the opposition; on which account he became secretary to Frederick, Prince of Wales, who adhered to that party. In 1745, on the resignation of Sir Robert Walpole, he was made one of the lords of the Treasury. In 1756 he became chancellor of the exchemer; his qualifications for which office seem to have has quantizations for which check somewhat in arc, as he is said to have been unable to master the simplest rules of arithmetic. He was raised to the prerage in 1759, and soon afterwards devoted himself exclusively to literature. His principal works are "Observations on the Conversion of St. Paul," "Dialognes of the Dend," "History of Henry II.," and "Poetical Works," Dr. Johnson has II.," and "Poetical Works." Dr. Johnson has included his life amongst those of the English poets written by him. He was a great patron of the modern system of landscape gardening, B. 1709: p. 1773.

LYTERITON, Thomas, Lord, son of the pre-ceding, was a young nobleman of promising talents, but of dissipated manners. His death is said to have been preceded by a very extraor-dinary circumstance. He saw in a dream, or otherwise, a young woman dressed in white, who warned him of his dissolution in three days from that time. On the third day, his lordship had a party to spend the evening with him, and about the time predicted said, he "believed he should jockey the ghost;" but a few minutes afterwards, he became faint, and was carried to bed, whence he rose no more. D. 1779. The "Quarterly Review," in 1852, endeayoured to set up a claim for this young nobleman to be considered the author of the "Letters of Junius" (see Junius); but the hypothesis was soon abandoned.

Scott aumanned.

Littor, Edward George Earle Lytton
Bulwer, Baron, Mc-ton, a celebrated novelist and dramatic writer, who, after leaving the university of Cambridge, in 1886, commenced his literary carees by the publication of a volume of poems, entitled "Weeds and Wild Flowers."
His first now, "Falkland," was anonymously in the following year, and was followed, in 1828, by "Pelhain," a wiity and brilliant work of fiction, the success of which decided its author to continue his labours in the same path, and he accordingly produced a series of the finest novels in the language. As a poet, Sir Edward displayed grace, feeling, and musical versification; while, as a playwright, he was the author, among other similar wright, he was the author, among other simular productions, of the most popular play of modern days,—"The Lady of Lyons." In 1831 he entered Parliament as member for St. Ives, and attached himself to the Whig party. After a long absence from the House of Commons. he was returned as representative for Herts in 1852, whereupon he became an adherent of the political views of Lord Derby, and, of the political views of Lord Derly, and, on the accession of the Conservatives to power, formed a number of the nuisitry, as colonial secretary. A man of predictions industry, he showed hinself equal to the highest efforts in literature; fiction, poetry, the drama, all were cariched by his labours. As a politician, he could scarcely be included in the first rank, and his oratory, thaugh sufficiently fluent and impressive, could not be deemed of the highest order. In 1814 he succeeded, on the cash of his worker to the Knehworth estates, highest order. In 1844 he succeeded, on the death of his mother, to the Knehworth estates, worth £12,000 a year, and, on that occasion, obtained the royal license to take his mother's obtained the royal needs to take its inciders maided name, Lytton, for his surname, and became henceforth known as Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton. During the Melbourne administration of 1835, he was created a baronet, and, in 1856, was chosen lord rector of the Glasgow University. Both the wife and son of Sir Edward have distinguished themselves in literature; the first as the authoress of several tashionable novels, written in a smeastic style, and the latter as the writer of several volumes of psems, pro-duced under the pseudonym of "Owen Mere-dith." In 1860 Sir Edward was reject to the peerage as Baren Lytton. n. 1895.

MAAS, Nicholas, mas, a celebrated Dutch painter, who excelled in portraits and genre subjects. Three of his elaborately-finished pictures are in the National Gallery. B. at Port, 1632; p. at Amsterdam, 1693.

Port, 1632; p. at Amsterdam, 1993. learned French writer, why assisted Father D'Achiev; in compiling his "Spiclogram," The congregation of St. Maar appointed him to superin-ted their edition of the works of St. Bernard, the afterwards published the "Arts of the Saints of the Order of the Renedictines." Colbert sent him to Germany, in 1883, to search for manuscripts and other works tending to illustrate the history of France. Mabillon returned with several valuable literary treasures, of which he published an account in a relation of his journey; he afterwards went to Italy for the same purpose. Though his learning and acquirements were immense, he was extremely modest and diffident. B. 1632; D. at Paris,

MARLY, Gabriel Bonnet, Abbé de, ma'-ble, an eminent French writer on historical subicets, and also the author of a celebrated work,

"The Public Law of Europe, as founded on Treatics." B. at Grenoble, 1709; D. at Paris,

Manuse, or Maunuary, John de, me a celebrated artist, whose real name was John Gossaert, was employed by Henry VIII., whose children he painted. n. at Maubeuge, Hainault, 1109; n. it is supposed, 1502.

MACABER, paulseit-ber, an early German

MACABER, muk-ui-ber, an early German Death," consisting of a series of dialogues between Death and a number of personages belonging to various ranks of society. Latin. English, and French versions of it have been printed; and Holbein's celebrated paintings have contributed much to spread the author's MACADAM, John Loudon, mak-ad'-am, a Scotch surveyor, who invented the system of road-making called after his name. His system Ford-maning called mor his hame. An system was made known in two works, entitled respectively "A Practical Essay on the Scientific Repair and Preservation of Public Roads," and Remarks on the Present State of Roadaking." According to this system, excel-lent roads are formed by laying down layers of broken granite or other hard stone, which become hardened into a solid mass by the truffic passing over them. For this invention, Macadam was in 1827 granted a sum of £10,000 by the government, and offered a baronetey, which honour he declined. In the same year he was appointed general surveyor to the commissioners intrusted with the management of the metropolitan roads. B. in Scotland, 1756;

1836. MacCarter, Sir Charles, mult-kar'-the, a brave but unfortunate officer, who, after at-taining the rank of lieut, colonel, was appointed to the royal African corps in 1821, and while making preparations to attack the Ashantees, received a message from their king to the effect that he (the king) would soon have the head of Sir Charles as an ornament for his drum. Sir Charms as an ernament for his grave the Hostilities began in 1823, a battle was fought in 1824, when Sir Charles, being deserted by his multive allies, was defented, expitted, and the savage threat of the Ashantee king literally carried out, on the 21st of January, 1824. The glassily trophy was afterwards recovered by the Dirichly and delivered to Sir Chestroft. the British, and delivered to Sir Charles's relatives.

relatives, Macarney, George Macartney, Earl, mākarf-ne, a distinguished British nobleman, who, after receiving a liberal cluention, and traveiling on the continent, was, in 1761, appointed envoy extraordinary to the empress of Russia. In 1767 he was constituted ambassador extraordinary to the same court, but soon after-wards returned, and was employed as secretary to Lord Townshend, vicercy of Ireland. In 1768 he represented Cockermouth in Parliament; and in 1772 was nominated a knight of the Bath. In 1775 he went out as governor to the island of Grenada; and, in 1776, was created an Irish peer, by the title of Lord Ma-eartney. He continued in Grenada till 1779, when, on the capture of those islands by the French, he was made prisoner and sent to France. In 1780 he was appointed governor of Madras, where his conduct obtained such universal approbation that, in 1785, he was nominited governor-general of Bongal; but this office he declined accepting, and returned to England. In 1786 he received a flattering testimony of respect from the Court of Directors, who granted him an annuity of £1500 for life. The same year he funght a duel with Majorgeneral Stuart, whom he had superseded in India: in this affair his lordship was slightly wounded. In 1792 he was selected to proceed on his most remarkable employment, namely, on its most remarkable employment, hamely, the embassy to the emperor of China, which mission occupied nearly three years. After his return, he was created an earl of Great Britain. He wrote a "Sketch of the Political History of Ireland," and a "Journal of the Embassy to China." B. near Belfast, 1737; D. at Chiswick, 1806.

MAGAULAY, Catherine, ma-kaw'-lai, an English historian, whose principal works were, "The History of England from James I. to the Ac-cession of the House of Hanover," once very cession of the House of Handver;" once very popular, but now considered worthless; "The History of England from the Revolution;" "Letters on Education;" and "Observations "Letters on Education;" and "Observations on the Reflections of Mr. Burke on the French Revolution." z in Kent, 1733; p. 1791.

MAGAULAT, Zachary, F.R.S., a zealous cooperator with Mr. Wilberforce and other philan-

thropists in the abolition of slavery in the British colonies; to which end he devoted his eminent talents and best energies for upwards of forty years. He was the father of Lord Macaulay.

в. 1768; р. 1838.

Macaulay, Thomas Babington, Lord, a cele-brated English historian, orator, essayist, and poet, was the son of Zachary Macaulay, mentioned above. His mother, whose maiden name was Mills, was the daughter of a Quaker, had been a schoolmistress at Bristol, and been trained under the care of the celebrated Hannali More His futher's sister, having been the wife of Thomas Babington, a merchant, the future his-torian received those names at the baptismal font. From his birth he exhibited signs of superiority and genius, and, more especially, of that power of memory which startled every one by its quickness, flexibility, and range. While he was yet a boy, he was in incessant request to "tell books" to his youthful companions; and at that early date he was in the habit of repeat-ing and declaiming the longest "Arabian Night" ing and declaiming the longest "Arabian Night." as finently as Schehezerade herself. A little later, he would reette one of Scott's norels, story, chracters, and scenery, almost as well as though the book were in his hands. His household books were, however, the Bible and the "Pilgrim's Progress," and many a strong passage in his works of description or vituperation, sprinkledwith biblical words, shows how familiar be head been with secriptural bytaspediestic and he had been with scriptural phrascology in early youth. From school he went to the university youth. From school fie went to the university of Cambridge, where he samed reputation by his verses and his oratory, and by his you full contributions to Charles Knights "Quarterly Magazine." He graduated B.A. in 1822, and M.A. in 1820. He had already entered himself at Inncoln's Inn, and been called to the bar. His real entry into literature was through the gates of the "Edinburgh Review," his first effort being a brilliant essay on Milton. During twenty years this first contribution was followed by years this first contribution was followed by many others, some upon books, some upon lives of eminent men, of which the best were those on Hastings and Clive, original efforts of his genius working on new material, the gather-ing of his own eye and ear in the country which they so splendidly describe. His political career was commenced in 1830, under the auspices of Lord Lansdowne, who, seeing an article on the ballot by the young barrister, at once sought him out, and introduced him to Parliament as member for Calne. The government made him secretary of the Board of Control for India, and thus secured his talents for the service of the Whigs. In 1831 he went to India as a member of the Supreme Council; and having, in two years and a half made a considerable addition to his fortune, he came back to England to acquire fame. For a few years he pursued both politics and let-ters, representing Edinburgh in the House of Commons, and writing articles for the "Edinburgh Review." A quarrel with his constituents broke his connexion with the House of Commons, and restored him to literature. It is true, the citizens of Edinburgh again chose him as their representative in 1852; but he was little more than a nominal member, for he only spoke once or twice, and then on questions of no public moment. During the last twelve years of his life, his time had been almost solely occupied with the "History of England," four volumes of which were completed and published, and a afith left partly ready for the press, and which afterwards appeared. Although he was generally believed to be closely engaged with the continuation of his History, he frequently turned aside for other literary tasks: such as the memoirs of Oliver Goldsmith, William Pitt, and others, given—literally given, to Mr. Black for his edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." Besides the "History" and the "Essays," he wrote a collection of beautiful ballads, including the wellknown "Lays of Ancient Rome." His parliamentary and mis-ellaneous speeches have also memay and insernanced species have also been given to the world in a more accessible form than in the pages of Hansard. In 1849 he was elected lord rector of the University of Glasgow; and about the same time became a bencher of Lincoln's Inn. In 1850 he was appointed honorary professor of ancient history in the Royal Academy; three years later, he was rewarded with the Prussian order of Merit, and, in 1837, his honours culminated in his elevation to the pergage as Baron Macaulay, B. at Rothley Temple, Leicestershire, 1800; D. 1859, when his remains were consigned to the companionship of the glorious dead in Westminster Abbey.

MACAULEY, Elizabeth Wright, a lady who, in the several walks of actress, lecturer, and preacher of the gospel, was long well known both in London and the provinces. She quitted the stage on the plea of ill-health, and became the preacher at a chapel in the metropolis; she also occasionally entertained audiences with dramatic recitations; and delivered lectures on "Domestic Philosophy" in various parts of "Domestic Philosophy" in various parts of England. B. 1785; D. 1837. MACBETH, mak-beth', a usurper and tyrant of otland, in the 11th century, who murdered his kinsman Duncan at Inverness, and then seized upon the throne. He also put to death MacGill and Banquo, the most powerful men in his dominions. Macduff next becoming the object of his suspicions, he escaped into England; but the inhuman tyrant wreaked his vengeance on his wife and children, whom he caused to be butchered. Macduff and Malcolm, son of Duncan, having obtained assistance from the English, entered Scotland and forced Macbeth to retreat into the Highlands, where he was soon after-wards slain in battle by Macduff. The above incidents are closely followed in Shakspeare's famous tragedy.

MacBeldz, David, m&d-brids, a distinguished physician, was a surgeon in the navy until

MacClellan

Macdonald

1749, when he settled in Dublin. In 1764, he published "Experimental Essays," which immediately attracted the attention of the faculty, and procured for the author a doctor's degree from the university of Glasgow. His most extensive publication, however, was a "Methodical Introduction to the Theory and Practice of Medicine." This work was translated into Latin, and published at Utrecht. B. 1727; D. 1778.

MACCLELLAN, George, mak-klel-lan, a fa-mous American general, who acquired conside-rable celebrity in the Civil War of 1861-4 between the Northern and Southern sections of the United States. He was educated at the American military academy of West Point, and served with distinction in the Mexican War of 1816-S. He was a member of the military commission sent by the United States government to the Crimea in 1855-6. He quitted the army in 1857, but received a commission as major-general of volunteers at the commencement of general or volunteers at the commonement of the civil war. He succeeded General MacDowell in the command of the army of the Potomac in July, 1861, and was appointed in the following November commander-in-chief in room of General Scott. Failing to take Richmond, which was defended with consummate skill by which was defended with consuminte skin by General Robert Lee, he was superseded by General Halleck. Soon after the drawn battle of Antietam, MacClellan gave up the command of the army of the Potomac to General Burnside. He was nominated for the presidency in opposition to Abraham Lincoln in 1864, and soon after, in the same year, again resigned his commission. B. at Philadelphia, 1826. commission. B. at Philadelphia, 1829.

MacClurroco, Sir Francis Leopold, mdi-klin'-tok, a distinguished officer of the British navy, who was knighted for his services in the Arctic regions, where, in 1857, he discovered the remains of the expedition sent out under Sir John Franklin. He was made a post-captain in 1854. B. at Dundalk, Ireland, 1819.
MacClurra, Sir Robert John Le Mesurier, malk-klurra', the discoverer of the north-west magestare, was at an early are anounted mid-passage, was, at an early age, appointed mid-shipman on board the Victory. Having attained the rank of lieutenant in 1836, he volunteered to serve in the exploring expedition then about to be sent to the Arctic seas. In 1848 he was made first lieutenant in Sir John Ross's expedition in search of Sir John Franklin and his amon in search of six done grained and the crew, and, on returning to England in 1849, was promoted to the grade of commander. In 1850 he again set out in search of Franklin, being appointed second in command of the ex-pedition under Captain Collisson. The Inves-tication MacQliner's citin parallel from the Enforpedition under Captain Collinson. The Inves-igator, MacCluré ship, partio from the Enter-pries, commanded by Captain Collinson, in a gale, in the Straits of Magellan, and they nover met again. The Enterpries was unable to enter Behring's Straits, and bore swap. Hong-Kong to pass the winter; but MacClure Kotzbus Sound. Besst by ice, he struggled owward, doubled Capes Bathurst and Farry, and, finally, sailing up Prince of Wales Straits, penetrated into Barrow Straits: that is to say, that the Atlantic Ocean: thus discovering, in after completing his education, was licensed as a clergyman by the presbytery of Kelso, and as a deregyman by one presoy on heast, such was at once chosen as pastor by a congregation at Edinburgh. In 1812 he produced his "Life of John Knox," a work popular with the educated, no less than the uneducated classes of cated, no less than the uneducated classes of Sociland, marked as it is by great learning and research. He also wrote the "Lifte of Andrew McWill," and a "History of the Re-formation in Italy in the 16th Century." s. in Bervickshire, 1773; p. 1835. MacCulzoon, John Ramssy, mcW-kul'-lok, an ominent statistical writer, who, soon after the commencement of the Edinburgh "Scotsman" newspaper, was employed upon its staff, and ultimately became editor of the same print. He likewise contributed a series of valuable articles to the "Edinburgh Review." His most imto the "Eumburgh Review." His most important labours were, however, the compilation of his Dictionaries of Commerce and Geography, and the publication of several works relative to political economy. For his services to literature, he received a pension of £200 per annum, and was appointed comptroller of the Stationery and was appointed computation of the conditionary office. The titles of his best works are: "A Dictionary, Practical, Theoretical, and Historical, of Commerce, and Commercial Navigation;" "A Statistical Account of the British Empire;" "A Statistical account of the British Empire;

"A Dictionary, Geographical, Statistical, and Historical, of the various Countries, Places, and Principal Natural Objects in the World;" and a new edition of Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations." B. in Scotland, about 1790.; D. 1864.

MACCULLOCH, Horatio, R.S.A., an eminent Scottish landscape painter, was named after Horatio Lord Nelson. He studied his art in Howatio Lord Nelson. He studied his art in Glasgow and at Edihurph, and first exhibited, in 1839, a "View on the Clyde." In 1834 he had in the Exhibition of the Southst Academy no fewer than nine pictures. In misty and rainy moor scenes he excels more especially. In 1836 he was elected an associate of the Soutish Academy, and the following year removed to Hamilton, to study the scenery of Cadzow-wood in that neighbourhood. While residing there he notinted two of his west calculations. Cadzow-wood in since neighbourhood. If most cele-residing there he painted two of his most cele-brated pieces, the "Highland Loch," and "Loch-an-Eilan." In 1838, in which year he was elected a member of the Scottish Academy. was elected a member of the Scottish Academy, and "View in Cadow Forest," which was universally admired. In 1833 he went to reside at Edinburgh; and after that time produced, among many other works, "Deam of the Highlands," "Misty Countries," "Look Achray," Mist Rising off Mountains," "Edinburgh from Dalmeny Park," &c. n. in Glasgow, 1862. n. 1867. 1806; p. 1867.

MACDONALD, John, F.R.S., mak-don-ald, only son of the celebrated Flora Macdonald, who so materially assisted in the escape of Churles Edward Stuart, in 1746, passed many years in the service of the East India Company, and attained the rank of captain in the corps (1) engineers on the Bengal establishment. On his succeeded in getting through, and resented engineers on the Bengal establishment. On his Kotzhuk Sound. Besst by ice, he struggled etum home, he was appointed Rentenant-naveral, doubled Capes Bathurst and Parry, on the structure of the structur on Telegraphic Communication, Naval, Military, and Political;" and, in 1816, a "Telegraphic Dictionary," extending to 180,000 words, phrases, and sentences. B. 1759; b. 1831.

MACDONAED, Etienne, Duke of Tarentum and Marshal of France, who was descended and marshall of France, who was descended from a Scotch family long settled in France, distinguished himself at the battle of Ge-mappes, and served under General Pichegru in mappes, and served under ceneral relayation the Low Countries. He crossed the Wall on the ice, under a severe fire, a signal feat of bravery, which resulted in the capture of the Dutch fleet. He was then appointed general of division. In 1788 he was named governor of Rome; subsequently he made a clever retreat before the superior forces of Suwarrow. Having fallen into disgrace for his defence of General Moreau, he remained for a long time without employment; but in 1809 Napoleon I, gave him the command of a division. He performed signal service at the battle of Wagram, and was honoured with the grade of marshal of the compire, and subsequently became duke of Tarentum. He also fought at Lutzen, Bautzen, and Leipsic. After the abdication of Napoleon, he was nominated a member of the Chamber of ne was nominated a member of the Channer on the Peers. In 1816 he became grand chimerller of the Legion of Honour. In 1765; D. 1860. MADDowner, Irvin, mid-dow-ell, a general of the United States army, who was defeated at Boll Rum by the Confiderate genoral, Beauregard, In 1861. In 10th, about 1818. MADDowner, Patrick, R.A., an Irish sculptor MADDowner, Patrick, R.A., an Irish sculptor of considerable eminence, who, in his youth, was apprenticed to a coachbuilder, but ultimately turned his attention to making models mately turned his attention to making models of the human figure. He scom obtained many commissions for busts. His first work that brought him prominently into notice was the "Girl Reading," oxecuted in marble and exhibited in 1838. Shortly after this ho became a R.R.A. and was made R.A. in 1846. Among his later works is the group of Europa, for the Albort Memorial in Eyde Park. z. in Belfast, Ireland, 1799.

Macgillivray, William, mak-gil'-liv-rai, an MAGGILLIYBAY, William, māle-jii-li-ri-ri, an eminent Stoch naturalist, who rose to be professor of civil and natural history in Marischal College, Aberdeen. Among the principal of his larger works may be mentioned "History of British Birds." "History of British Gundrupeda," and "Natural History of Dec-sito." D. at Aberdeen, 18ev. Magniture of Dec-sito." D. at Aberdeen, 18ev. Magniture natural republic, and became of a poor but old family of the Florentine republie, and became secretary and historic gracher of the republic of Elycompe. an office retains of a poor secretary and historic probaber of the republic of Elycompe. an office republic, and became secretary and historiogrupher of the republic of Florence, an office he bost in 1812, when the Medici family reentered this city. A year afterwards he was accused of being concerned in a conspiracy against the Medici, and was put to the torture.

He, however, 'declared that he had nothing to'
concless, and was subsequently released, according to a pardon sent front Boine by Heo X.
He resided during several years in privacy, and occupied himself with the composition of most of his many works. In 1821 he was employed by Hee Medici on several important missions. He was to, although the more conposition the state, spingled, "Upis Prince," in Ast (Horance, 1469; in 1859.

Maca, Charles, Baron von, mach, a celebrated Austrian general, who served with a distinct!

An the Low Countries against the 1792-93. In 1798 he was dispatched to command the Neapolitan army against the French. Being defeated by Macdonald and taken prisoner, he was sent to Paris, whence he made his escape, and returned to Austria. In 1805 he assumed command in Bayaria, but was compelled to surrender, with his army of 30,680 men, to Napoleon. For this he was condended to death; but the sentence was commuted to imprisonment in the fortress of Spielberg, where he remained during two years. B. in Franconia,

1752; D. at Vienna, 1820.

MACKUNZIE, Sir George, ma-ken'-se, an eminent Scottish lawyer and man of letters, studied at the universities of Aberdeen and St. Andrews, and subsequently at Bourges, where he specially devoted himself to mastering the principles of civil law. On his return to his native country, he was called to the bar, speedily rose into position as a pleader, at the speciary rose into position as a picader, at this same time psying attention to literature, and in 1660 published his "Arctina; or, The Serious Bomanee," exhibiting a say and huxuriant tancy, In 1661, he defended the Marquis of Argyle, who had been arraigned for high trenson, in so bold and free a manner as to evoke a rebuke from the bench, on which he retorted that "it was impossible to plead for a traiter without speaking treason." He was shortly afterwards was impossible to plead for a train'r without speaking treason." He was shortly afterwards raised to the bench, however; and in 1863, published his "Religio Laici; or, Short Discourses upon several Divine and Moral Subjects. courses upon several Divine and moral sungers, with a Priently Address to the Fanattes of all Sorts;" which was followed, in 1965, by an essay in praise of Solitude. His subsequent works were—"Moral Gallantry," in which he maintained that near should be virtuous on the point of homear, apart from all other considerations, as there is nothing so mean and sacrations, as there is nothing so mean and unworthy of a gentleman as vice; "Moral History of Frugality;" and "Reason," an essay, He was also the author of a play, and of a poem called "Calla's Counting-house and Closet," some passages of which were imitated Closet, some passages of which were infraced by Pope. He was returned to Parliament for Ross-shire about 1670; in 1674 was made king's advocate, became one of the lords of the sing s auvocate, occame one or the forus of the privy council in Scotland, and was heighted. Sir George resigned on the abrogation of the penal laws by James II., but was shortly after-wards restored to his post, which he continued to hold till the Eevolution, when he gave up all to doud till the Revolution, when he gave up his public employments, and went to England, where he devoted himself to study, at Oxford and in London. Besides the works already mentioned, Sir George was the author of several books on logal subjects, all held in high estimation in their day, but which if its unnecessary to accompanie to the commercial backs on logical subjects, all held in high estimation in their day, but which if its unnecessary to countrate here. B. at Dundee, 1639; n. in London, 1691. In his judicial capacity, he was rigid and sovere in administering the law, and in nigit and severe in administering the law, and in enforcing the dootrine of peasive obedience, and in consequence obtained from the Covenanters the epithete of the "Bloodthirsty advocate," and "Persecutor of the saints of God."

Micorrary, Sir Aloxander, a celebrated who as an and resided for eight years at the as an and resided for eight years at the case, and explored for eight years at the saint and resided for eight years at the case, and resided afterwards dispatched on an exploring expedition, discovered the greative known by his cases, and resided the protective known by his cases, and resided the first out on a journey, the object of which was to googh the Pacific. He proceeded he this enterprise, and returned in safety. A narrative of his expeditions was published by himself, in 1801, under the title of "Voyages from Montreal on the River St. Lawrence, through the Conti-nent of North America, to the Frozen and Pacific Oceans." For his services he was knighted about the year 1802. B. in Scotland,

about 1760; p. 1820.

about 1700; p. 1820.

Maxikazi, Henry, a Scottish writer, was one of the attorneys of the Scottish Court of Exchequer. He afterwards went to London, where, in 1771, he published his first and hest novel, "The Man of Feeling." He subquently wrote "The Man of the World," and "Julia de Roubigne," and edited, in succession, two papers on the model of the "Spectator," called the "Mirror" and the "Lounger." He subgrated the "Mirror" and the "Lounger." He likewise produced several plays, and a volume of daranatic works translated from the German. In 1804 he obtained the ampointment, of comp of dramatic works translated from the German. In 1804 he obtained the appointment of comptoller of taxes for Scotland, in recognition of his services to the Tory party. In the later years of his long life, he contributed nothing to literature. B. at Edinburgh, 1745; b. 1831.

MACKINTOSH, SIr James, mak-bu-losh, an eminent lawyer and writer, at first studied medicine, and obtained his diploma so physician; but having a most decided inclination.

towards politics and the law, he acted for some time as foreign correspondent of the "Oracle" newspaper, and afterwards set to work vigorously to qualify himself for practice at the bar, In 1791 he completed his "Vindicia Gallica," wherein he defended the principles of the French revolution against Burke. This work, French revolution against Burke. This work, which was highly successful led to his becoming acquainted with Fox, Sheridan, and other leading Whigs; but although he gave much of his time to politics, he did not neglect his legal studies. In 1795 he was called to the bar. In 1700 he produced his "Introductory Discourse," relative to international law, a work which attracted towards him the notice of the highest men in the kingdom. About the same time le was granted the use of Lincoln's Inn Hall, for the purpose of delivering therein a course of lectures "On the Law of Nature and Nations." His success was triumphant; he obtained "an auditory such as was never seen on a similar occasion. All classes were there represented; lawyers, members of Parliament, men of letters, and country gentlemen, crowded to hear him." His political opinions next underwent considerable mudification, and, applying himself more energetically to his profession, he soon began to acquire the reputation of an eloquent counsel. to acquire the reputation or an eloquent counsel. Illis speech during the action brought against M. Peliter, a French toyalist, for a libel on Bonapark, oraticd the greatest admiration, and, despite the efforts of the First Consul, was extensively read in France, in a transla-tion [made by Madame do Stall. In 1804] won't to India, having received the recordership of Rombay and bone hrighted on the occasion. wont to inous, niving received the recordersing of Bombay, and been knighted on the occasion. As an Indian judge, his administration was characterized by humanity and wisdom. While in the East Indias, he founded the Literary Society of Bombay, and produced a plan for forming a comparative vocabulary of the Indian languages. On his roturn to England, he was offered a seat in Parliament, with a prospect of high employment, by Mr. Perceval; a proposal which, together with those made later by Caning and Lord Liverpool, he respectfully declined. In 1813, however, he entered the House of Commons, where, though not eminent as a parliamentary debater, he nevertheless dis-tinguished himself by several great oratorical efforts, on important and special questions. such as Roman Catholic emancipation, the abosten as Roman Camone emanerpation, we asso-lition of slavery, municipal and parliamentary reform, and the amelioration of the criminal code. In 1818 he became professor of law and general politics at the East India College. Halleybury, an appointment he retained with much advantage to the students until the year 1824. It was expected that when the Whigs came into power, in 1830, Sir James Mackin-tosh would be appointed to an important office; but, like Burke and Sheridan, he was destined to experience the slight which that party so often puts upon merely able men, who have no "connexions" of a patrician nature. The only appointment his party could give him was that of "Commissioner for the Affairs of India," a post which, 18 years before, he had declined at the hands of the Tories. On the Reform Bill the lands of the Tories. On the Reform Bill he made an extraordinary speech, but, his health falling, he never again took a prominent part in debate. For many years he had entertained the intention of writing a History of England; and after his return from India, commenced the preliminary labour of collecting materials for the great stake. But his political employments, combined with his lave of social. employments, left him no time to carry out his project. His Essays in the "Edinburgh Re-view," indeed, appear to have been a species of compromise made with his own conscience, for abandoning a duty he had imposed upon him-self. After his death, his "History of the Revolution in England in 1688" was published. It was but a fragment of the great work, but a due philosophical one, nevertheless. He also wrote a brief survey of English literature, and alife of Sir Thomas More, for Lardner's "Cyclohand of Str Indias More, for lardier's Cyso-paedia," and a "Dissertation on the Progress of Ethical Philosophy," for the "Encyclopedia Britannica." His "Miscellaneous Works" were published in 3 vols. B. at Aldourie, near Inverness, 1765; p. 1832. ness, 1765; p. 1832.

MACKUK, Charles, wäk-lin, a comedian and dramatic writer, whose real name was Maclaughlin, which he altered to Macklin. He became a performer in the Lincoln's Inn company in 1725, and not long after was tried for killing another player in a quarrel, and found guilty of manslaughter. His features were so strongly marked, that Quin excinimed, "if God writes a legible hand, that fellow's a villain." His greatest character was Skylock, his proformance of which drew from Mr. Pope this re-markels compliance.

markable compliment:-"This is the Jew

That Shakspere drew." Macklin wrote ten plays, two of which, "Love à la Mode," and "The Man of the World," posa la mone, and the man of the word, seess considerable merit, and were frequently performed. B., it is said, in 1630; p. 1797.

MACKNIGHT, James, mak-nite, a learned Scottish divine, was born at Irvine, in Ayrshire, and was ordained minister of Maybole, where he composed his "Harmony of the Gospels," and his "New Translation of the Epistles." In 1772 "New Translation of the Episides." In 1779 he became one of the ministers of Edinburgh. e was occupied nearly thirty rears in the Greek of all the Apostolical Episedes? with commentaries and notes. B. 1721; b. 1590.

MICHAUERN, Colin, mate-ton-ries, an eminent X X 2

Macnish

Scotch mathematician, who received his education at the university of Glasgow, where he applied himself to the study of mathematics. In 1717 he obtained the mathematical protessorship in Marischal College, Aberdeen, aud, tessorship in Marischal College, Aberdeen, and, we years afterwards, became a fellow of the Royal Society of Landon. In 1725 he was chosen assistant-professor of mathematics at Edinburgh. In 1749 he published his "System of Pluxions," the most important of his works. In 1745, having taken an active part in fortifying Edinburgh against the Prefender and the needs heart a growthed to the one of the professor. and the rebels, he was compelled to fly, on which he took refuge with Archibishop Herring, at York. Maclaurin was a good as well as great man; his peculiar merit as a philosopher being, that all his studies were conducive to general utility. Besides the above work, he general unity. Issuas the above work, he wrote several papers in the "Philosophical Transactions;" "Geometria Organica," "On the Percussion of Bodies," "A Treatise of Algebra," and an "Account of Sir Isaac Newton's Philosophical Discoveries." B. at Kilmoddan, Argyleshire, 1698; D. 1746.

Maclist, Daniel, ma-kleese', an eminent modern painter, who, from his earliest years, evinced a decided predilection for art, and, although placed in a banking house at Cork, quitted it at the age of sixteen, and gave himquitted it at the age of sixteen, and gave nin-self up to the study of drawing and painting, maintaining himself the while by selling, sketches and optratist. He went to London in 1328, and entered the Royal Audemy, where he rapidly advanced in his studies, and carded off the medals for drawing from the antique. for drawing from the life, and for painting the tor drawing from the ine, and for painting the best historical picture. After spending several months in Paris, he exhibited his first picture at the British Institution in 1833, after which at the British Institution in 1833, after which period he acquired, with extraordinary rapidity, the highest reputation. In 1835 he became A.R.A., and five years later he was elected a Royal Academician. His range of subjects has been very large, as the enumeration of a few of his best pictures will show, "Robin Hood and Richard Coar de Lion," "Chivalrous Yow of the Ladies and the Peaceck," "Banquet Seen in "Macheth," "The Sievering Beauty," and "The Play Scene in 'Haullet," which last, destrict his defects of munerating and discrete. despite its defects of mannerism and disagreeable colour, is unquestionably the production of a master. It may be seen in the British col-lection at the South Kensington Museum, Maclise has likewise been extensively employed as a portrait-painter, particularly by the intellectual classes. His portraits of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, Dickens, Answorth, and Macready, are well known. p. 1811.

MACMARON, Marie-Patrick-Maurice, Count

MACMAHON, Marie-Patrick-Maurice, Count de, marshal of France, måk-mai'-hon, descended from an Irish family, which, after living with from an Irish family, which, after living with distinction for many centuries in Ireland, risked all for the last of the Stuark kings. The Macmahons, carrying their national traditions and historic name to France, mingled their blood by marriage with the old nobility of their adopted country, and obtained, with the hand of an heirars, the magnificent castle and extensive estates of Sally. The marshalf state, the Count de Macmahon, who was an officer of high rank, a poer of France, a Grand Cross of the order of St. Louis, and a personal friend of Charles X., espoused a lady of the decal house of Caraman, and left four sons and ducal house of Caraman, and left four sons and four daughters. Of that numerous family, the 678 youngest was the hero of the Malakhoff and of Magenta. Macmahon entered the military school at St. Cyr, on leaving which, in 1825, he entered the French military service, and in 1830 joined the army of Algeria, where he soon distin-guished himself alike by his gallantry and his guisticed himseit auxe by his gammery and his intelligence. After the combat of the Col de Terchia, in which he was aide-de-samp to General Achard, the latter said to him, "Can you carry to Colonel Rullières, at Blidah, the order to change his march? As the mission is order to change his hadren? As the mission is dangerous, I will give you a squadron of light dragoons as an escort." The young officer refused the escort, declaring that it was either too little or too much, and preferred going alone. On arriving at about half a mile from Blidah, he saw groups of the enemy's horsemen on each side, as well as behind him; but he on each side, as well as a deep precipice, called the ravine of Bidah, was a little way in front of him. He there drove his horse, a high-blooded animal, at the tremendous chasm, and the animal, without hesitation, sprang into mid-air. The rider held his seat immovenbly, and escaped unburt, but was obliged to abandon his charger, which had its fore-legs broken. Not one of the Arabs ventured to take the des-Not one of the Arabs ventured to take the des-cerate leap, and the young officer reached Blidah in safety. He rose rapidly through the different crades, and attained that of gene-ral of brigade in 1848. For a time he filled the position of governor of the province of Oran, and afterwards of Constantine; and in 1852 became general of division. In 1855, when General Canrobert left the Crimea, General Magnahon was selected by the emperor to succeed him in the command of a division; and when the chiefs of the allied armies resolved on assaulting Sebastopol, he had assigned to him the honourable and perilous post of carrying the the honourane and perious jost of carrying the works of the Malakhoff. This task he successfully performed; for which service he received the grand cross of the Legion of Honour, and was nominated a knight grand-cross of the British order of the Bath. In the war in Italy in 1859, he commanded a division of the French army, and signally distinguished humself at the battle of Magenta, where, although he had received no orders to do so, he pressed forward and arrived in time to secure the victory to the French, a piece of service which guined him the highest rank in the French army, and the the inguest raik in the Freien army, and the title duke of Magenta. After filling Various military posts at house, he was made Governor-General of Algeria, in room of Prince Napuleon, in 186 k. n. 1898.

MAO MUSON, William, C.B., mc&-mur-do, a Colonel in the British army, who, after a series of brilliant services in India under the lateSir of brilliant services in India under the lateSir

Charles Services in main under the lates in Charles Napier, and in the Crimes, became, in 1859, Inspector-General of the Volunteer Forces, a post which he held until 1864. B. about 1819.

Macrism, Robert, M.D., L.L.D., mak'-necsh, a native of Glasgow, who, while enjoying a con-siderable medical practice, devoted his loisure siderable medical practice, devoted his loisure hours to literary pursuits, and produced his "Anatomy of Drunkenness," "Philosophy of Sicep," "Book of Aphorisms," and "Metem-psychosis," &c., which gave him a prominent place among writers and thinkers. He likewise contributed to various magazines, andor the sig-nature of the "Modern Pythagorean," by which designation he was long most generally known. n. 1802; p. 1837.

REON, James, mike/fer-son, a Scotch poet, whose first work, and that which brought linn mostly into notice, was a translation of poems attributed by him to Ossian. These poems possess great beauty; but their antentietic was disputed by Dr. Johnson and other writers, and as zealously maintained by the editor and Dr. Blair: it is now, however, generally admitted that Ossian's poems are a forgery. In 1773 Macpherson published a translation of the "Iliad" into heroic prose, a work of little value. He was also the author of an "Introduction to the History of Great Britain, from 1800 to the Accession of the House of Hanover, "and of some political pamphids in defence of Lord North's administration, for which he obtained a place and a seat in the House of Commons. B. in Inverness-shire, 1738; p. 1796.

MACREADY, William Charles, mak'-reed-e, a celebrated English tragedian, was the son of the manager of a provincial theatrical company, and lessee of several houses; but, desiring a different profession for his son, sent the future actor to Rugby. At this celebrated school he acquired considerable reputation by his classical attainments, and gave promise of future celebrity at the bar, for which he was at that time destined by his parents. In his seventeenth year, whilst expecting to proceed to the university of Oxford, his father's affairs became deeply embarrassed. and the son resolved to aid his father with those talents which the latter had made sacrifices to improve. He exchanged the quiet of the school for the excitement of the theatre, and in June, 1810, made his first appearance at Birmingham in the character of komeo. Having industry as well as talents, he was soon recognised as a valuable actor, and saw his exertions in behalf valuable actor, and saw his exercious in bemain of his father convoied with success. Till Christmas, 1814, Mr. Macrendy remained with his father's company as a loading actor and stage-director; and in the two following years visited the capitals of Ireland and Seotland, increasing his reputation, which was now thought sufficient to warrant him in making his averagence, on the London stage. Accordhis appearance on the London stage. Accordingly, on the 16th of September, 1816, he came before a Covent Garden audience as Orestes in the "Distressed Mother." His début caused much excitement in the theatrical world, and Kean, among other eminent actors, witnessed and applauded his performance. Notwithstanding this favourable début, Macready had a hard buttle to fight for many years. Kean, Kemble, and Young were the great favourites of the town; and the monopoly which limited the representation of Shakspeare's dramas to the two patent theatres narrowed the arena of competition. Under these circumstances, Macready was compelled to refrain from assuming a number of Shakspearian characters in which he afterwards became a favourite with the play-going wards became a tavourite with the play-going public. His Virginius and Rob Roy were pronounced very masterly personations. After his triumph in the first, he speedily took his place as a Shakspearian actor. On removing from, Covent Garden to Drury Lane, he became the original representative of the respective heroes of Mr. Sheridan Knowles's "Caius Gracchuss" and "William Tell." Herappeared at Drury Lane in 1292 and from that time continued to hold a high 1826, and from that time continued to hold a high theatres, and sustained considerable pecuniary loss in his endeavour to cleavac the character of dramatic amusements. In 1826 he went to America, and in 1828 visited Paris, where he was enthusiastically received. In 1818 he paid a second visit to New York, where the jealousy of Forrest, an American netor, led to a rios, in which the Astor Opera-house, in which Macready was performing, was attacked by a mot, and the English actor barely escaped with his He. Mr. Macready returned to England shortly afterwards, where he was warmly welcomed by his friends. He commenced his final engagement at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, in the autumn of 1846 (Oct. 8), of which he was obliged to relinquish the completion, when about half fulled, on account of ill health; he resumed it in the autumn of the following year (October 28, 1850), and brought it to a conclasion, Feb. 3, 1851, and a banquet to him took place directly afterwards. He then retired from public life, living principally at Sherborne, Dorsetshire, and at Cheltenham, occupying himself with schemes for the education of the poorer classes. In Inclond, March 3, 1782.

Macro, Encius Newius Sertorius, mā-kro, a favourite of the emperors Theeries and Caliguia, famous for his nitrigues, perifdy, and cruelty. He destroyed Sejanus, raised himself on his ruin, was accessary to the nurder of Tiberius, and obtained the goodwill of Caligula, but soon became unpopular, and was compelled by Caligula to kill himself; together with his wife,

38 A.I

Machontus, Ambrosius Aurelius Theodosius, wacher-bl-eu, a Latin writer of the 6th century, is supposed to have been a Greek, but whether a commentary on Cicero's "Dream of Sujio;" and also "Saturnalia, or Miscellanies." MADAN, Mattin, mail-dan, an English divine, Manax, Martin, mail-daw, an English divine, was clucated for the bar, but took orders, and became a popular preacher at the Lock chapel, till, by publishing an apolegy for polygamy, in a work entitled. "Thelyphthora," he lost his popularity, and retired from the publit. He was also the author of "A Commentary on the Articles of the Church of England," a "Treatise on the Christian Faith," and translated Juvenial and Persius. s. 1726, p. 1790.

Maddish of the Christian Faith, and translated Juvenial and Persius. s. 1726, p. 1790.

Maddish of the Christian Faith, and the chapter of the middle and the chapter of the c

Maddensky, Sir Frederick, måd-den, an eminent antiquarian writer, who, in 1893, entered the library of the British Museum, and was entrusted with the post of keeper of the department of manuscripts in 1897. Both alone and in conjunction with other learned gentlemen, he produced many valuable works, the chief of which are an edition of the earliest English version of the Bible, made by Wycliffe and his followers; an adriged translation of M. Silvestrés d'Universal Paluography," and several of the old metrical romances of the 18th century. He became a knight of the Hautoverlan order in 1852. B. at Portsmouth, 1501.

Portsmouth, 1801.

MADISON, James, mad'-i-ron, President of the United States of America, who commenced his political career in 1776. He was a member of the first congress after the amendment of the constitution in 1789, and became president in 1809, an office he filled during two terms. 2. in Virginia, 1701; 5. 1836.

MADOC, ma-doc', the son of Owain Gwynedd, a Welsh prince, who is said to have gone 50 ses in ten ships with 300 mea, in 1170, after which no tidings were ever heard of him. It is

"William Tell." He reappeared at Drury Lane in 1828, and from that time continued to hold a high a Welsh prince, who is said to have gone so lead took in tearn the management of the two patent on tidings were ever heard of him. It is supposed that Madoc reached the American continent, as it is said there was a tribe of white

Indians on the northern branches of the Missouri river who spoke the Welsh language.

Madox, Thomas, mad'-ox, an English antiquary and historiographer royal, who published in 1702, a "Collection of Ancient Charters and in 1702, a "Collection of Ancient Charters and Instruments of divers kinds, taken from the Originals, from the Conquest to the Reim of Henry VIII." In 1711 appeared his "History and Antiquities of the Exchequer," which was reprinted in 1709. His last work was the "Firms lungi, or, Historical Essay concerning."

the Cities, Towns, and Boroughs of England."

MECENAS, Caius Cilnius, me-se'-nas, the intimate friend of Augustus, and so liberal a patron of men of letters, that his name has been immortalised in consequence, and it was chiefly through him that Virgiland Horacewere enabled through the heavy light and the devote themselves to poetry. According to Horace, he was descended from the ancient kings of Etruria. Augustus, one day, being engaged in the administration of justice, and exhibiting an inclination to be over-severe in exhibiting an inclination to be over-severe in his judgments, Macenas threw him a paper on which were the words: "Come down from the tribunal, thou batcher!" with which admonition the emperor was so struck, that he at once quited the judgment-seat without passing on the criminals before him thesenteuce of doath he hadintended. Virgil and Horace have both immortalised Mecenas in their works. He distinguished himself also in the field, particularly at the battles of Modena and Philippi. When Augustus and Agrippa went to Sicily, Macconas had the administration of the government. He wrote some tragedies and other works, which arc lost. D. 8 B.C.

MAGALHAINS, commonly, but erroneously, called MAGRILAINS, cridinand, ma-get-lan, a famous Portuguese navigator. In 1510 he served under Albuquerque, and distinguished binself by his bravery, and by his exact knowledge of the Indian seas. On his return to Portuguese have been also as the contract of the Indian seas. ledge of the indian seas. On his return to con-tagal he aspired to the rank of commander, but, being disappointed, entered the service of the emperor Charles V., who gave him the command of a fleet, with which, in 1520, he dis-covered the straits called by his name, at the extremity of South America; after which he took possession of the Philippine islands, in the name of the king of Spain. He was slain at those islands in a skirmish with the natives, in name of the Ring of Spain. He was siam at these islands in a skirmish with the natives, in 1831. Of this expedition, only one vessel, with 1831. Of this expedition, only one vessel, with eighteen men, returned to Europe.

Massz, William, ma-ger', a learned Irish prehate and theological writer, was born in humble life, and admitted as sizar at Dublin university. He was soon distinguished for his scholastic attainments; and in 1806 became a centor fellow of Trinity College, and professor of mathematics. In 1801 he published "Discourses on the Scriptural Doctrines of the Atonement and Sacrifice," a work directed against the tenets of the Unitarians. In 1818 he was advanced to the deenery of Cork; in 1819 was consecrated bishop of the published, in 1822, translated to the see of Dublin. B. 1787; D. 1831. Maentynyr, Francois, sin-absol-de, a celebrated Franch physician and physiologist, who, after a brilliant career as a shedent, became, in 1819, and, in 1881, obtained dire suppointment of the Aedelmy of Sciences in 1819, and, in 1881, obtained dire suppointment of the Aedelmy of Sciences in 1819, and, in 1881, obtained dire suppointment of

His contributions to science were very numerous-his "Elements of Physiology" was a standard ext-book, during many years, in France, Ger-many, and England. He pointed out that nonnitrogenous substances were devoid of nutrition; proved that the veins were organs of absorption; that strychnia acts upon the spinal ford, and destroys the nerves of respiration by paralysis; that prussic acid was a remedy for ertain forms of cough; and finally, like Sir Charles Bell, demonstrated the precise functions of the spinal nerves. He wrote and contributed of the spinal works. n. 1788; n. 1855.

MAGENTA, DUKE OF. (See MAC MARION.)

MEN, William, LL.D., mc'-gin, one of the most ferfile and yersatile writers of modern times, under the tuition of his father, made such apid progress that he was enabled to enter Trinity College, Dublin, when only ten years of Trinty College, Dialtin, when only ten years of age. Having tried his powers as an author by contributing various papers to the "Literary Cazette," and, under a feienced name, to "Blackwood's Magnzine," he settled for nearly three years in Edinburgh; and continued to enrich the pages of "Blackwood' with much wit, cloquence, learning, and fun, under the pseudonym of "Sir Morgan O'Doherty." He visited London for the first time in 1823, and settling there, wrote so much, and for such a variety of works, hat an enumeration of his productions is impossible here. Besides his labours as a contributor to periodicals of various kinds, he devoted a considerable part of his time to polities, and, about the year 1822, he became sub-editor of the "Standard," in which his newspaper talents and learning made him a formidable antagonist to the Liberals, and gave a proportionate degree of influence. While thus engaged, and while writing numerous light papers for publications, he also contributed voluminously to "Fraser's Magazine," in which voluminously to "Fraser's Magazine," in which he wrote a caustic review of a "issishionable" novel, entitled "Berkeley Castle." The author, the Hon. Grantley Berkeley, took oflower, and, in company with a friend, committed a violent of the comment of his friend and publisher, Dr. Maginn offered the offended author satisfaction, and a hostile meeting took place accordingly. The duel proved a bloodless one, but it was very near having a different result, as the doctor was hit on the heel of his boot, and his opponent on the collar of his cont. In the later years of his life, Dr. Maginn was involved in serious pecuniary difficulties, which arose, however, not, as is affirmed, from self-indulgence, but from his indiscriminate kindness to others. Learned among the learned, witty among the witty, gentle and unassuming as a child among men gentie and unassuming as a cliff among then of ability, Maginn was crushing in his sarcastic scorn against all whom he deemed enemies of the constitution. B. at Cork, 1793; D. 1842.

the constitution. n. at Cork. 1798: n. 1843. MacLianscour, Antonio, mug-'ye-a-bull-'ke, a learned Italian, who acquired such a store of knowledge as to be appointed librarian to jino grand-duke of Tuscauy. He corresponded with most of the learned men in Europe, and astomishing things, bordering on the marvellous, are told of his memory. His delight was wholly in books and manuscripts, and he refused preferencest and riches. An old cloak served him for a garment by day and a covering by night. He had one straw chair for his table, and another to sleep on. As at Florence, 1883; p. 3.714.

Michiertus, mid-new-shous, a German, who row, from being a private soldier, to the first employments in the empire. The emperor Constans had a great esteem for him, and, in a nutiny among the troops, delivered him from the fury of the soldiers, by covering him with his robe. Magnentius murdered his benefactor in 350, and assumed the title of emperor; but Constantius II. avenged the death of his brother, and, after a bloody battle, Magnentius was defeated; whereupon he killed himself, 353,

MAGNUS, Albertus, (See Albertus Mag-MUS.)

MARMOUD, ma'-mood, the founder of the Gasnevide dynasty, succeeded to the sovereignty of Khorassan and Bokhara in 997. He extended his territories by conquest, and formed a vast kingdom, extending from the banks of the Ganges to the Caspian Sea. He held his court at Balkh and Ghisni, and was the first eastern potentate who took the title of sultan (emperor) instead of emir (commander), which had been reviously borne by his predecessors. D. 1030.

zeriously borne by his predecessors. n. 1630.

Maincord I, sometimus called Malomet V, saitan of the Ottoman l'Inck, was son of Mustapha II, and ascended the throne at Constantinole in 1730. He interfered but little in the government of his kingdom, choosing rather to live a life of luxury, while the cares of state devolved upon his ministers. n. 1696 p. 1754. Mannord II, sultan of Turkey, was placed upon the throne by Mustapha Baïnstata, chief of the indisserge in 1818. Under his wider.

upon the throne by Musiapha Bairattar, chief of the janisaries, in 1819. Under his reign, despile his greatest exertions, the decadence of Turkey was greatly accelerated. In 1812, Bessarable was ceded to Russia by the peace of Budmerst. Between the years 1812 and 1817, Servia, Moldavia, and Wallachia were evacuated, and the Ionian islands proclaimed their independence. In 1820, Greece broke out into insurrection, and, after a struggle of eight years, threw off the Turkish yoke. A fresh war next broke out between Turkey and Russia, and the latter power was only prevented from taking possession of Constantinople by the intervention of the European powers, which brought about the peace of Adrianople, in 1829. During about the peace of Adminstor, in the bullet his time, Ali, pacha of Janina, had defied the sultan, and Mehemet Ali, pacha of Egypt, had rendered himself independent. The extermination of the janissaries in 1828, and the introduction of some details of civilization, weakened the Turkish power, but a.l not benefit Mah-moud. In 1833 h, was thrice defeated by the Egyptians, and the treaty of Unkiar-Skelessi leit him at the mercy of Russia. He was about left mm at the mercy of tussia. The was about to engage in a new war with Mehemet Ali, when his death took place. D. 1785; D. 1839.—He was succeeded by his eldest son, Abdul-Mejid. (See ABDUL-MEJID.)

MAHOMET. (See MOHAMMED.)
MAHOMET I., mail-ho-met, emperor of the Turks, was the son of Bajazet I., and succeeded was brought up. His letters, translated into Latin, were published in 1520. D. 1429; D. 1481. MANOMET III. succeeded his father, Amu-rath III., in 1595. He commenced his reign by strangling nineteen of his brothers, and drowning ten of his father's wives. He entered Hungary, took Agram by capitulation, and then massacred the whole garrison. The archduke Maximilian marched against him, and nearly obtained a complete victory, when Mahomet, who had made a false retreat, suddenly returned to the charge, and routed the imperialists. He was afterwards less successful, and obliged to sue for peace to the Christian princes whose states he had ravaged. D. 1003.

Manomer IV. became emperor in 1619, after the tragical death of his father, Ibrahim I. The Turks were at this time engaged in a war with the Venetians, and made themselves masters of the isle of Candia in 1669, after losing 100,000 men. Mahomet marched in person against Poland, and, having taken several places, made peace with that country, on condition of an annual tribute being paid to him. John Sobieski, irritated at this treaty, raised an army, and the year following defeated the Turks near Choczim. He also obtained a number of other advantages over them, and a peace was concluded, favourable to Poland, in 1676. In 1683 the Turks laid siege to Vienna, on which Sobieski marched to its relief, and routed the besiegers. The year fol-lowing, a league was entered into against the Turks, between the emperor, the king of Poland, and the Venetians. The janissaries, attributing their misfortunes to the indolence of the sultan, deposed him in 1687, and gave the sceptre to his brother Solyman III., who sent him to the same prison whence he had himself been taken. Mahomet died there, 1691.

MAHOMET V. (See MAMOUD I.)

MAI, Cardinal Angelo, ma'-e, un eminent Italian scholar, who, after having lived obscurely in a Jesuit convent, was promoted to the charge of the Ambrosian Library at Milan in 1813. 1819 he was called to Rome, where his researches in the Vatican library brought to light many ancient works and fragments till then lost to the world. The most important of these were "The Republic" of Cicero, discovered in 1822, nearly in a perfect condition, and the lotters of Fronto, the tutor of the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius. His valuable labours were rewarded with high distinction in the Church. He was created a cardinal in 1838, and subsequently became chief librarian of the Vatican. which office he held till his death. B. at Bergamo, 1782; d. 1854. MAILLET, Benedict de, mail-lai, a whimsical but ingenious French writer, who successively became consul at Egypt and Leghorn. His principal work, "Telliamed" (his name read backwards), contains a singular system of cos-

Turks, was the son of Bajazet I., and succeeded backwards), contains a singular system of contains brother Mousa in 143. He re-established mogony, in which he maintains that all the land the glory of the Ottoman empire, which had of the globe was originally covered with water, been ravaged by Tamerlane, and fixed the seat and that every species of animal, man included, of government at Adrianophe, where he died in oversite origin to the sea. p. 1385; p. 1738.

1421, aged 47.

MAINTONIC, LOUIS, make-boorg, a celebrated French coelesiastical historian, who entered into II., in 1451. He made many conquests, and the society of Jesuits; but having written a was the first who assumed the title of Grand Seigmior. After a long and victorious career, he dided as he was about to lead an attack against the order. Louis XIV., however, nade him the Knights of St. John, at Rhodes. Mahomet amends by giving him a peasion. His chief is said to have been a freethinker, and to have works are, "A History of Aranism, will be rived tory of Iconoclasts," "A History of Aranism, will be tory of Iconoclasts," "A History of the Cruranism." B. 1610; D. 1686.

Maimonides, Moses, mai-mon'-i-dees, or Moses Ben Maimon, a celebrated Jewish rabbi. He is commonly called Moses Ægyptus, because he lived in that country as physician to the sultan. He was versed in several languages and sciences, but particularly mathematics and medicine. He was also learned in theology, and the Jews acwas also learned in theology, and the Jows ac-count him as second only to Moses the legis-lator. He wrote a "Commentary upon the Old Testament," a "Digest of the Hebrew Laws," and other valuable works. B. at Cordova, Spain, about 1133; p. 1204.

MAINTENON, Frances d'Aubigné, Marchioness de, min'-fe-nawng, the mistress, and afterwards wife, of Louis XIV. In 1651 she married the celebrated comic poet Scarron, who taught her the Latin, Spanish, and Italian languages. In 1660 she became a widow in very narrow cir-cumstances; but the queen allowed her a pen-sion, with which she retired to a convent at Paris. The death of her patron deprived her of Paris. The death of her patron deprived her of her pension, and reduced her to great difficul-ties; but, by means of her old friend Madame de Montespan, the king's mistress, she obtained the renewal of her pension. By the command of his majesty she undertook the education of the children he had by Madame de Montespan, which trust she discharged with great fidelity. It this sixthing she pervised as second. In this situation she acquired an ascendancy over the mind of the king, who, in 1674, pur-chased for her the estate of Maintenon, which name she assumed. In 1685 the king made her his wife; but the marriage was never publicly avowed. On the death of Louis, she retired to St. Cyr, an institution she had herself founded or poor girls of good family. B. 1635; D. 1719.

MATNER, Joseph, main'-zair, a distinguished musician, and introducer of the system of teaching that is known by his name, began life as apprentice to mining engineering in the coal-field of Dutweiler and Sultzbach, but was obliged to quit this pursuit from ill-health. He then devoted himself to the study of music, for which devoted himself to the study of missie, nor make the had always had a predilection, and hierastudying under various musters, and in different parts of the world, returned to Trèves, his native place, and turned his attention to the development of his new system of tenching music, which he had long before conceived, and which soon began to attract attention in Germany. In 1830, he went to Paris, then in all the excitement of the second revolution, where he soon found a field for his plan of tenching and popularizing music; but the police became jealous of his popularity, and invited him to close his school, an invitation which he could not safely docline. During his residence in not salely decline. During his residence in Paris, Mainzer was a constant contributor to the "Revue des Doux Mondes," the "Revue die Nord," "La Balance," published by Böerne, and for six years was the relacteur of the musical department of the "National." In 1844 he wont to England, where his scheme of teaching singing to the masses was well received. Soon afterwards he established himself in Scotland; and in 1848 definitively took up his abode in Manchester, where he laboured with great assisduity and success till his death. He left a great number of works in almost every style of sades," and "Histories of Calvinism and Lutherenter the strait which bears his name, in South America. After visiting New Guinea, he sailed to Batavia, where he was made prisoner, and the only vessel he had left was confiscated, under the pretence of his having infringed on the rights of the Dutch East India Company

680

D. on his passage to Europe, in 1616.

MAITLAND, Sir Richard, mait'-land, an early Scottish poet, distinguished also as a lawyer and a statesman, held the office of a lord of and a statesman, held the office of a ford of session, and in that capacity took the title of Lord Lethington, from his estate. He was ap-pointed keeper of the privy seal in the reign of Ducen Mary: which office, as well as his judicial seat, he resigned a few years after, and died in 1586. p. 1496. He wrote several poems, some of which are in Allan Ramsay's "Evergreen."-William Maitland of Lethington, the eldest son of Sir Richard, was secretary of state to Mary Queen of Scots.—John Maitland, second son of Sir Richard, succeeded his father in the office of lord privy seal, and lost it through his attachment to the interests of the queen. He was afterwards scretary to James VI., and at length chancellor of Se-tland. In 1889 he attended the king on his voyage to Norway, where his bride, the Princess of Denmark, was detained by contrary winds. The marriage was immediately consummated, and they returned with the queen to Copenhagen, where they spent the ensuing winter. In 1590 Maitland was created Lord Maitland of Thurlstane. Towards the end of the year 1592, the chancellor incurred the queen's displeasure for refusing to relinquish his lordship of Musselburgh, which she claimed as being a part of that of Dunferuline. He absented himself for some time from court, but was at length restored to favour. Besides his Scottish poetry in the Maif-land collection, he wrote several latin epigrans, &c., to be found in the "Delicia Poetarum Scotorum." p. 1595.

MATTLAND, John. (See LAUDERDALE, Duke of.)
MATTLAND, William, a native of Breehin, For-farshire, was originally a travelling hair-mer-chant, but turning his attention to literature, chair, but turning his attention to interature, gained a competency, and was elected a member of the Royal and Antiquarian Societies. He wrote a "History of Edinburgh," a "History of London," and "The History and Antiquities of Scotland." in rubant 1608; p. 1757. Matriand, Rear-Adminal Sir Frederick Lewis, the third son of a rear-admiral, commenced his naval career at a very early age. Passing over the earlier part of his career, in the course of which he saw much service, and greatly distinguished himself, we find Captain Maitland commanding the armed launches employed to cover the landing of Sir Ralph Abereromby's army in Egypt in 1801, for which he received the thanks of the naval and military commanders-in-chief. His subsequent successes while cruising in the Mediterranean as captain of the Loire, nig in the accurrence as expense of the Lore, and in 1813 he was appointed to the command of the Goliath, and subsequently to the Bellerophon, of Yaguns, in which ship he was sent to watch the French coast off Rochefort. While there, Napoleon, after the events which followed the battle of Waterloo, resolved to throw him-self on the generosity of "the most powerful, composition. B. 1801; b. 1851.

MARE, James Lz, Le(r)-mair, a Dutch navigator, who salided from the Texel in 1815, with thome occurrence of the following year he distributionally to Captain Malliand on the 1611 July, two vessels. In the following year he dis-

Maintenon, Madame de.

MARIA THERESA.

MALY, QUEEN OF SCOTS.

Louis XIII. (OF FRANCE)

MARIE DE MEDICI.

lats 42.]

captive on board, proceeded to Plymouth, off terior. Under his administration, prisons were which port he was removed to the Northum-berland on the 7th of August, having previously offered to present Captain Maitland with his portrait set with diamonds, of the value of 3000 pourman set with a manning, of the value of solo guineas, which offer was politicly declined. Maithand was subsequently appointed to the command of the Fenger, of 71 guns; after-wards attained to the rank of rear-admiral; and was appointed commander-in-chief in the East Indies, where he died, after several years' service, Dec. 30, 1839.

MALATESTA, MALATESTI, Lords of Rimini, and-n-tais'-ta, a great Italian family during the middle agos, and the head of the Guelph party at Rimini. The tragedy which occurred in the household of one of this family forms one of the finest cpisades in Daute's "Interno." After being despoiled of their possessions by Pope Clement VIII, in 1528, the family retired to Venice, and their names were afterwards recorded in the annals of that republic.

MALCOLM, mall-kom, the name of four kings of Scotland, who reigned between the 10th and 12th centuries. The most celebrated was Maleoim III., son of that Duncan immortalized in Shakspeare's "Macbeth." After the murder of his father, he took refuge in England; but, upon the fall of Macbeth, in 1057, he recovered possession of the Scottish crown. He afterwards engaged in a war with William Rufus, and was slain fighting against the English, 1093.

MALCOLM, James Peller, an artist and antiquary, was a native of America, studied paining in England, and eventually became an engraver. He was the author of "Londinium Redivivum," "Aneadotes of the Manners and Customs vivum, Ameedotes of the atminers and Customs of London," "First Impressions," &c. D. 1815.

Malcorm, Sir John, a colobrated British officer, and author of the "History of Persia," went to India at the age of thirteen, and, after serving with distinction in both political and military capacities, was appointed, in 18-7, and mintary capacities, was hippointed, in 187, minister plenipoentainar to Persia. On his return to England, in 1812, he was kinghted, and three years afterwards published his "History of Persia," a most valuable contribution to literature, derived from native sources. He returned to India in 1817, and adolt as second in command in the campaigns against second in command in the campaigns against the Mahrattas and Pindarces. On the conclusion of this war, he was nominated to the civil and military command of Central India, which, during his administration, became tranquillized and prosperous. He returned to England in 1821, but again went out to the East in 1827, as 1821, but again went out to the Bast in 1827, as governor of Bombay. He finally left India in 1879, and soon afterwards entered Parliament. He was the author of a "Ith of Lord Cilve," Political History of India," and a "Memoir on Central India," in in Secdand, 1763; D. 1833.

Malebranche, Nicholas, and bronch, one of the most librations displayed for the contral India, and the proposed for the most librations displayed of Dec Carles, whose philosophy he devoted his life to propagate and explaint. His works were numerate and explaint. His works were numerate gate and explain. His works were numerous, and of the highest excellence. B. at Paris, 1039; p. 1715.

MALESHERBES, Chrétien Guillaume Lamoignon, muls'-hairle, an eminent French lawyer, whose talents procured him the place of president of the Court of Aids in 1750, which post he held with great reputation for upwards of visited, and numerous abuses removed, but the year following he resigned. At the beginning of the Revolution he conceived a hope that it would have been productive of good, but the Ilusion soon vanished. He voluntarily pleaded the cause of the unfortunate Louis XVI., and defended him with all the ardour of conscious rectitude. This excellent man was condemned to death, with his daughter and grand-daughter, by the revolutionary fribunal in 1791. He wrote some treatises on natural history and agricul-ture, and a work entitled "Memoire sur la Libertó de la Presse," n. 1721. LALDEAN DE BERIOT, Maria Felicita, mal'-i-bri dai bai'-re-o, a celebrated vocal per-former, was the eldest daughter of Manuel Garcia, a well-known tenor singer of the Italian Opera. She was taken to London by her parents when eight years old, devoted her un-ceasing attention to the study of music, and made her début in 1825, when only sixteen years of age, as prima donna at the opera. In the succeeding year she accompanied her father to America. where her union with M. Malibran, an elderly French merchant at New York, took place. Shortly after their marriage her husband failed, and was thrown into prison; and Madame Mali bran, believing she had been deceived, separated from him, and returned to Europe. Intense study, the love of her art, and the motives she had for exertion, had already made her a performer of unrivalled excellence. The Parisian audiences were perfectly enraptured, and every night she concluded her performance amidst a thunder of applause and a shower of flowers. From Paris she went to London, where she shone with increased lustre, through the season of 1829, in the characters of Rosina, Tancredi, Desdemona, Semiramide, Zerlina, and Ninetta. Her reputa-Seminanica, Zerrina, and America. Her reputa-tion now extended over the whole of Europe; and after travelling great distances to fulfil different engagements, and receiving vast sums for her performances, she revisited England in 1835, and made her first appearance at Covent Garden, in an English version of "La Somnambula," on the 18th of May, and at once entranced her audiences with her marvellous powers of vocalization; not only in the theatre, but also at numerous royal and noble entertainments to which she was invited, and at the concerts of professors. After almost incredible exertions in the evening, she often rose by five o'clock in the morning, and practised for several hours those wonderful passages by which audiences were again to be electrified. In March, 1836, Madame Malibran, while in Paris, having been freed, by the French courts, from her union with Monsieur Malibran, was from nor tution with Monsieur Mainbran, was married to Monsieur de Beriot, a Belgian, whose ability as a violinist had placed him in the highest rank of his profession. In May following, she resumed her performances at Drury Lane Theatre; and, at the close of the season, accompanied her husband to Brussels, and other cities on the Continent. But the close of the recommendation of the season, was at hord. Having been meaned her career was at hand. Having been engaged for the Manchester grand musical festival, she arrived in that town on the 11th of September, and, though indisposed, commenced her arduous task the next day. Her illness rapidly increased; and, though she endeavoured to conceal it, by twenty years, and then retired to his paternal sustaining her part with the apparent vigour of estate. In 1775 he was recalled from his retreat, and made minister of state for the ineffort. On Wednesday, the 14th, her part notes alberghi in petto," from "Andronico," with Madame Caradori Allau. She fainted under the effort, was immediately bled, and removed to her apartments; but notwithstanding she had the best medical attendance, she breathed her last on the 23rd of September, 1836.

Paris, 1803.

Malins, Sir Richard, ma'-lins, an eminent Chancery barrister, who was appointed Vice-Chancellor of the Court of Chancery in December. 1860. He graduated at Cambridge, and was called to the bar at the Inner Temple in 1830. He represented Wallingford in the Conservative interest from 1852 to 1865, when he lost his seat in the general election of that year. He reshortly after his appoint: at as Vice-Chan-1805.

and totally unworthy of the duchess of Marlborough left him a legs 421000 to write the life of her husband; which it was observed, that as he had forgot Bacon was a philosopher, so he would probably mit to notice Mariborough as a general: of this omit to notice Marinorough as a general; of this life, however, he never wrote a lime. Frederick Prince of Wales appointed him his under-scretary, Lord Bofundroke left him his phi-losophical works, which he published after the author's detail. His pedicial works were cal-lected and published by himself in 1759. n. in Perils blinching 1700. a. 1801.

rected and phoissness by masser in 1763. B. in Perthshire about 1760; n. 1765. Malmeshury, William of, mams'-ber-e, an old English listorian, whose lather was a Norman, his mother being an Englishwoman, was early in his life placed in the monastery whose name he is known by, and became its librarian. He wrote "The History of the Kings of England," "The History of the Prelates of of England," and many less important works. His England," and many less important works. His "History of the Kings" terminates at the year 1142: it has been reprinted in Bohn's Anti-quarian Library. He is regarded as one of the most truthful and impartial of the early historians, B., it is supposed in Somersetshire, about 1095; D. about 1150.

MALMESBURY, James Harris, first Earl of, an English diplomatist, was son of the celebrate! James Harris, author of "Hermes," (See Harris, James,) He was appointed ambas ador to the court of Frederick H. of Prussia in 1772, and subsequently filled the same post in Russia and at the Hague. In 1784 henegotiated the marriage between the Prince of Wales and Caroline of Brunswick; and many valuable details of the mission were afterwards published tails of the mission were interwards published by him in his "Diary." His last employments were in 1796-7, at Paris and Lille, for the purpose of obtaining a treaty of peace with the French republic. His "Diarles and Correspondence" were published in 1844. H. at Salisbury, 1746; p. 1820.

Malons, Edmund, ma'-lone, an Irish lawyer, who devoted his life to literature, and became celebrated for his commentaries and editions of Sinkspearo's works. B. 1741; D.1812.

Maltz-Brun, Courad, mill-te bru(r), a celebrated Danish geographer, commenced life by writing poems and treatises in lavour of liberty, for which he was c 1736. Afte, casing refure in Sweden for a short time, he went to Paris in 1850, where he was creamed as foreign editor of the "Journal de Itelsa C and published a number of highly-important geogra-phical works, the chief of which are "Geography, Mathematical, Physical, and Political. "Sunmary of Universal Geography,"

"Annals of Voyeres and Travels," n. in land, 1775; n. at Paris, 180

MALTHUS, Rev. The nate Robert, mill-thus, an English elergyman of the established church. who wrote several works on population and on political economy, which have attracted considerable attention. In the famous "Essay on Population," the proposition developed by Mr. Malthus were, that the population, when unchecked, doubles itself every twenty-five years, or increases in a geometrical ratio; the means of subsistence, on the other lead, could not be made to increase to ter than a an arithin theil ratio. He then proceeded to how that the natural check for the was newly, which, bether with ice, chorters human hale. Mr. s is s: I to have he n much miscon-

by plantifully cloused for ted theories; it is clear, r ived: he was c his comments on however, that house, Be do t' had to wrote a number of others 1 and philosophic on the same subjects, n. in Surrey, 17 | 1 Bath, 1834. Marcs, Etienne Louis, pasted, a French ex-1 Dath, 1834

perimental philosopher and mathematician, professor in the Polytechnic school, and a ter wards served as an officer of curin , both on the Rhine in 1797, and in Egypt under B parte. He then devoted himself to philosophy, part call by studying had the good fortune to discover the polarizahad the good name to measure the pounting tion of hight, for which he was elected a mem-her of the Institute. The gold medal of the Royal Society, and homours from all quarters, were bestowed up a lum, re' he ultimately be anne director of the Polytechnic School, and superintendent of fortifications. R. at Paris. 1775; p. 1812.

MANCO-CAPAC, man-ko ka pak, founder and first inca of the empire of Peru, civilized and remaited the different tribes of Peruvians, to whom he pretended that he was born of the sun. After his death, he was we deity. He is said to have hourished about 1025. His dynasty endured 500 years, but became extinct soon after the conquest of Peru by Pizarro.

MANDRYLLE, Sir John, min de-neel, an English traveller, who spent thirty-four years in travelling through various countries, in-cluding Palestine, Egypt, and a large portion of Asia. He lived for three years at Pekin, and on his return published a narrative of his voyages, which abounds in much curious matter, but blended with the most extravagant fictions, The first English edition of his travels was printed by Wynkyn de Worde, at Westminster, in 1499. n. at St. Albans, about 1300; p. at c, 1372.

MANETHO, mains-tho, an Egyptian historian, who flourished in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus, at Mende, or Heliopolis.

Greek, a History of Egypt, of which a fragment only has come down to us; there is, however, i work by him on the !

Manfred

Mansfield

MANFRED, mun'-fred, king of Naples and Sielly, was a natural son of the emperor Frederick II. After the death of his brother Courad. he became regent of the kingdom, during the minority of Conradino, his nephew. Pone Innocent IV. exciting a revolt against him, he was driven from his kingdom; but he reconquered it a year atterwards, and eaused himself to be erowned in 1258. Popo Urban IV. excommu-nicated him, and offered his kingdom to Charles Manfred perished in a desperate of Anjou. battle with the latter near Benevento, 1266.

Alant, or Manicheus, ma'ne, an heresiarch of the 3rd century, a Persian, who taught that there were two principles of all things, co-eternal and co-equal; that all good pro-ceeded from the former, and all evil from the lutter; that the good being was the author of the New Testament, and the bad of the Old; the one the creator of the body, and the other of the soul. His followers became numerous. and were denominated Manicheans. Mani was eviled by order of Sapor, king of Persia, for failing to cure his son, and was subsequently flayed alive by Hormisdas, successor of Sapor, in 274.

Manurus, Marcus, man'-il-e-us, a Roman poet, who flourished in the Augustan era. If a undertook a didactic poem, of which we have but five books, entitled "Astronomica." It is valuable chiefly as a work of science, but contains, however, a few beautiful passages, par-ticularly in the introductions.

Manin, Daniel, ma'-na, an illustrious Italian patriot, formerly president of the Venetian republic. The son of a distinguished advocate, young Manin was educated for the profession The son of a distinguished advocate, of the law. About 1825 he married, and went to reside at Mestre, a small town near Venice. There he practised as an advocate, and occupied his leisure with historical studies, taking no part in the discussions or proceedings of the no part in the discussions or proceedings of the secret societies then existing in Halty, but hating Austrian rule, and hoping for the independence of Venice with the whole force of his nature. That such a man should come into collision with the Austrian government was perfectly natural; and, at the beginning of 1818, he was imprisoned for the liberal opinions expressed by him as advocate during several trials. A few months later, the Austrians were driven from Milan; the insurrection quickly spreat throughout the Italian peninsula, and at Venice, Count Zichy, the Austrian governor, was forced to surrender. Manin here stepped forth, and exhorted his countrymen to act like men who were worthy of freedom. He organized a government, at the head of which he was placed, with Tomaseo; formed a committee of defence, created ten battalions of garde mobile, and improvised a corps of artillery. Charles Albert took the field against the Austriuns, in the name of Italy, the Venetians agreed to a fusion with Lombardy and Piedmont, under the name of the kingdom of Northern Italy. The defeat of the Picdmontese, howto defend herself alone against Austria; thereupon a republic was proclaimed, Manin being named chief triunvir, and the military com-mand confided to the Neapolitan general Pepe Name control was besieged by the Austrians in August, 1848, but held out heroically until the end of the same month in the following year, and did not surrender before it had been sub-ected to a fearful bombardment. According to the terms of capitulation, Manin was permitted to go into exile, and theroupon retired to Paris, where he supported himself by giving lessons in Italian. B. at Venice, 1894; D. at Paris, ILEY, Mary de la Riviere, man'-le, the daughter of Sir Roger Manley, governor of Guernsey, a gentleman who suffered much for is adherence to Charles I., and also distinguished himself as a writer. She was left to he care of a cousin, who seduced her under he mask of a pretended marriage, and then bandoned her. Being thus dependent on her wn exertions for support, she became a dra-natic and political writer. Her first effort was The Royal Mistress," a tragedy, which was uccessful. She then composed "The New successful. She then composed "The New Atalantis," in which, under feigned names, and with much warmth and freedom, she reates the amours and adventures, real and suposed, of many distinguished persons of the was committed to the custody of a messenger, out afterwards admitted to bail; and a Tory administration succeeding, she lived in high reputation and gaiety. She was also employed in writing for Queen Anne's ministry; and when Swift relinquished the "Examiner," she ontinued it for a considerable time with great consider to or a considerator time with great spirit. Besides the works before mentioned, she wrote "Lucius," a tragedy; "The Lost Lover," a conedy; "Memoirs of Europe to wards the Close of the Eighteenth Century," Court Intrigues," "Adventures of Rivelle," * See 19 1721. D. 1724.

Manlius Capitolinus, Marcus, kap-i-to-li'nus, a celebrated Roman consul and commander, who, when Rome was taken by the Gauls, re-tired into the Capitol, and preserved it from a sudden attack made upon it in the night. The dogs which were kept in the Capitol made no noise; but the geese, by their cries, awoke Manlius, who had just time to repel the enemy. Geese from that period were always held sacred among the Romans, and Manlius was honoured with the surname of Capitolinus. He after-wards endeavoured to obtain the sovereignty of Rome, for which he was thrown from the

Tarpaian rock, 381 B.c.

MANLIUS TORQUATUS, tor-kwai-tus, a famous Roman, who displayed great courage in his youth as military tribune. In a war against the Gauls he accepted a challenge given by one of the enemy, and having slain him, took his of the enemy, and naving sain man, dook me chain (torques) from his neek; on which account he assumed the name of Torquatus. He was the first Roman advanced to the dictatorship without being previously a consul. But ship without being previously a contain the tarnished his glory by putting his son to death for engaging in single combat with an enemy contrary to his order. This greatly disgusted the Romans, and, on account of his severity in his government, all ediets of ex-treme rigour were called "Manliana Edieta."

He flourished 310 n.c.

MANSFIELD, mans-feeld, William Murray, Earl of, an illustrious lawyer, received his education at Westminster School, whence he was elected student of Christ Church, Oxford, in 1723. After Taking his degree as M.A., he went abroad, and on his return, entered of Lincoln's Inn, where he was called to the bar. His eloquence and legal acquirements soon gained him an extensive practice, and when he pleaded, the court was crowded. Pope, with pleaded, the court was crowdes. Pope, with whom he was stimate, complimented him with the appellation of "silver-tongued Murray," In 1788 he became solicitor-general, and was elected member of Parliament. In 1734 he was ande a titorney-eneral, and in 1756 their finstice of the Kimg's Benefit, soon after which he was ereated Baron Mansfield. In 1776 his lordship was created an earl. His conduct on the bench at the trials of the publisher of Junius's Letters, and of Wilkes, caused him to become very unpopular, and during the famous riots of 1780 his house in Bloomsbury-square was burnt down by the mob, who also threatened his life. By that disaster, he lost a prodigious number of valuable manuscripts and books; yet, when the House of Commons voted him a compensation for the injury, he refused to accept it. After filling his high office with great dignity many years, he resigned it on account of his infirmities, in 1788. His reputation is that of a irmites, in 1788. This reputation is that of a great lawyer, an uprigite man, and an elegant scholar. His remains were interred in Westminster Abbey. D. at Perth, 1704; D. 1793.

Manutius

Many, Right Rev. Richard, anad, Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore, was educated at Winchester and Oxford, where he gained the chancellor's prize for an English essay "On Commerce," 1799; and, after taking his degree of M.A., travelled for some time on the continent; on his return he became successively curate at Buriton and Sparsholt in Hampshire. In 1810 surrion and Sparsholt in Hampshire. In 1810 he was presented to the vicerage of Great Coggeshall, in Essex; and the sermons which he preached at the Dampton Lecture, in 1812, having attracted general attention, he rese rapidly in the church. In 1815 he beare rector of St. Botolph's, Rishopsgrate-street, and, three years later, vicar of East Horsley, Surrey. In 1920 he was consecrated bishop of Killalue, and translated to the see of Down and Connor in 1823, and the care of the diocese of Dromore devolved upon him in 1842. During his long life, Dr. Mant was constantly engaged in authorship, chiefly on subjects connected with his professional duties. Of his numerous ms processional duties. Of his maintrous writings, those which have gained him greatest celebrity are, probably, the edition of the Bible with notes and commentaries, which he prepared in conjunction with Dr. D'Oyly, and pared in conjunction with Dr. D'Oyly, and tructs printed by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, such as "A Step in the Temple," &c. "Romanism and Holy Serip-ture Compared," "The Churches of Rome and England Compared." 1,778; p. 1818. MANTELL, Gideon Algernon, man-tel, a distinguished English geologist, who, while pursuing his profession as surgeon at Lewes, studied the geological formations of Sussex with the greatest assiduity and success. His works written upon the science of geology are peculiarly attractive to the general reader, in consequence of the elegant and lucid style in consequence of the elegant and lucid style in which the information is conveyed. The first of these works was published in 1822, and was entitled "The Fossils of the South Downs," which was followed by "Illustrations of the Geology of Sussex." For his great discoveries of the iguanotion and its colossal allies, the Geological Society, in 1835, awarded him the Wollaston medal and fund, 'Mn 1225 he was elected a fellow of the Royal Society, and this learned hold valse marked its sense of his dislearned body also marked its sense of his discovery of the iguanodon by awarding him the royal medal. In 1839 he went to reside at

Clapham. About the same time the trustees of the British Museum purchased his collection of fossils for £5000. His well-spent life had two phases—original discovery and popular teaching. At the former we have glanced in mentioning his discovery of the gigantic fossil; and in proof of his labours in the latter direction, we may mention the delightful "Wonders of Geology," and "The Medals of Creation," works long and deservedly held in the highest esteem by the general reader. Dr. Mantell was also an industrious contributor to scientific Transactions; and in the "Zoology and Geology" of Agassiz and Strickland no less than sixty-seven articles have been attributed to him. B. at Lewes, Sussex, about 1790; D. 1852.

MANUEL COMNENUS, man'-n-cl, emperor of the East, was the son of John Commenus, whom the East, was the Soil of Jane Childrens, Whom he succeeded in 1143, to the prejudice of Isaac, his elder brother, whom his father had disinherited. Roger, king of Sielly, invaded the empire in his reign; but Manuel expelled him, and then turned his arms against. Palmatia and Hungary with various success. He also marched into Egypt, which country he would have conquered, had he not been betrayed by Amauri I., king of Jerusalem, his ally. D. 1120;

D. 1150.

Manuel Palmologus, emperor of Constantinople, was the sin and successor of John Palrologus I. The Turks having invaded his dominions, he applied to the Latius for succour, dominions, he applied to the Latins for succoup, but without effect, on which he resigned his seepfre to John Palacologus II., his son, and took a religious habit. n. 13(5; p. 1425.

Manuar, Jacques Antoine, entered the republican army as a volunteer in 1783, and took to the rank of captain. After the peace of Campo Formio, he quitted the army, studied law, was admitted to the bar at Aix, and soon acquired a high reputation for talent. In 1815 he was cleeted to the chamber of depaties which was convised by Manukon and after which was convenient to the chamber of depaties. which was convoked by Napoleon, and after the abdication of that moment, Manuel strenuously contended for the rights of his son. In 1818 he was elected a member of the chamthe 1818 he was elected a memory of the chain-ber of deputies by three departments, and be-came one of the most formidable opponents of the ministers. He was fervid and ardent in the cause of the party to which he had attached himself; but having used some violent expresnmssif; but having used some voicent expres-sions in his first speech, in the session of 1823, on the subject of the Spanish war, his expui-sion was loudly demanded; the result of which was that a body of the gendarmerie was intro-duced to arrest him; but he was again chosen to the chamber of deputies in 1824. n. 1773; D. 1827.

Manutius, Aldus, man-oo'-sha-us, or Manuzio, Aldo, a celebrated Italian printer and author, of the 15th and 16th centuries, was born at Bassano, in 1447; became tutor to Alberto Pio, prince of Carpi; and in 1488 established a printing office at Venice. Ho printed nume-rous valuable editions of Greek and Latin classics; compiled a Greek and Latin Diccompared a Greek and Latin Dictionary and Grammar; and was the inventor of the Italic character, honce called Aldine, for the exclusive use of which, for a term of years, be obtained a material. the exclusive use of which, for a term of years, he obtained a patent. n. 1615.—Paolo Manuzio, son of the preceding, distinguished as a classic scholar, no less than as a printer, was born at Venice, in 1612, and died in 1674—Aldo Manuzio, the younger, was a son of Paolo, and equally celebrated as his father and grand- to Louis XIV. n. at Camerino, in the March father, B. 1517; D. 1597; and with him expired

Mangoni

the glory of the Aldine press.

MANZONI, Alessandro, mon-zo-ne, a celebrated Italian poet and novelist, who, after completing his education at Milan and Pavia, went to Paris in 1808. While in the French capital, he produced a poem in blank verse, of strongly deistical opinions, but after his return to Italy, in 1807, he became a zealous Roman Catholie, and his subsequent poetical works were imbued with a devotional feeling. He is known throughout Europe as the author of a fine historical novel, called "The Betrothed Lovers," which has been translated into Incrementarian novel, cancer and refronted Lovers," which has been translated into English, French, and German, and is allowed to be worthy of taking rank with the best productions of Sir Walter Scott. After the death owing of his first wife, in 1833, Manzoni continued to live in retirement near Milan. n. 1734.

Mares, or Mar, Walter, maips, an old English poet, who was chaplain to Henry II., by whom he was despatched on a mission to the court of Louis VII. of France. He wrote some satirical and convivial poems, in Latin, which were edited and published by Thomas Wright, in 1841. He was also the author of several prose works, both in Latin and Norman-French, from which a large portion of the romance of the Round Table is said to be taken. Mapes rose to high posts in the church; but, after he became archdeaeon of Oxford, in 1190, no further mention is made of him. B. probably in Herefordshire, about the middle of the 12th century.

MARADI, James Philip, ma-rail-de, a cele-brated Italian mathematician and astronomer, who was employed under Cassini in constructing the great meridian through France. left behind a valuable catalogue of the fixed stars, and a body of important "Observations."

n. nt Niev, 1665; p. 1729. ARAT, Jean Paul, mul-ra, a notorious demagogue, who went to Paris, where he studied physic, and set up as an empiric, selling his nostrums at an extravagant price. On the first outbreak of the Revolution, in 1789, he became a leader among the most violent of the revolufloorry factions. In his first journal, the "Publiciste Parisien," he attacked Neeker, and other eminent men. This was followed by his "Friend of the People," in which he excited the troops against their generals, the people at large against their king, and declared in print that France could never become happy until 270,000 heads had been struck off by the guillotine. Named deputy for the department of Paris in the Convention, he appeared there armed with pistols. The most atrocious murders were committed by his means, and he appeared to delight in nothing but the effusion of blood, when he was assassinated, in the midst blood, when he was assessmented, in the mass of his career, while taking a hath, by Charlotte Corday. (See Corday.) Marrat published a work on Man, or "Principles of the Reciprocal Influence of the Soul and Body," and Tracts on Electricity and Light, in which he attacked the Newtonian system.

Agricoman system. B. near Sentenater, 1923 M. Sassasiantol, M. Sazarri, Carlo, ma-raf-1e, an eminent Italian obscure pointer, who became the pupil of Andrea throno Sacchi, and chiefy applied himself to painting. His vel femilo saints. Popo Clement 1X. race thin a year, pension, and conferred on him the order of measure. He was also painter in ordinary jn. 257.

Marcianus

of Ancona, 1625; n. at Rome, 1713.

Manner, John, mar-lok, a musician of the 16th century, who is believed to have been the aun century, who is believed to have been the first composer of the eatherla service of the Anglican church. He held the office of organist at St. George's Chapel, Windors, and wrote a "Concordance of the Bible," "Lives of the Saints, Prophets, and Patriarchs," Ex. MARCHAY, Francois Severin Desgraviere, marse, a distinguished French general, eminent could for his allient will be a "Miller Anglica".

equally for his military skill and courage, and for his virtue and humanity. These qualities he displayed in La Vendée, at Fleurus, and on These qualities the Rhine. He was killed at Hochsteinbach, and when buried in the entremeded camp at Coblentz, so high was the respect in which he was held, that both the French and the Austrian armies fired volleys of artillery in honour of the cerethree volleys of architecty in almost of the cere-mony. b. at Chartres, 1709; killed, 1706.

Marcellinus, mar-sel-li-nus, a pope and aint, succeeded Caius in 200. He signalized himself by his courage in a severe persecution. The Donatists charged him with having sacrificed to idols; from which he was vindicated by Augustine, p. 304.

Augustine, D. 393. Marsatil, Denodict, mar-sail/-lo, an eminent composer, denominated in Italy the Prince of Music. This highly-grited man was equally minent as a poet, philosopher, and musician, 'lis compositions in music were numerous. Its principal prose work was his "Teatro alla Modn" (the Pashionable Stago), intended as a millerous exities on a modern opens. 2 at 1 udicrous criticism on modern operas. B. at Venice, 1086; p. 1739.

MARCELLUS, Marcus Claudius, mar-sel'-lus, a famous Roman general, who, after the first Punic war, had the command of an expedition against war, and the command of an expectation against the Gauls, where he obtained the spolie opine, by killing with his own hand Viridomarus, the king of the enemy. Soon after he was intrusted to oppose Hannibal in Italy, and was the first Roman who obtained any advantage over him. Marcellus in his third conscibility. over him. Marcellus, in his third consulship, over nm. Marchus, in his fund consistings, was sent with a powerful force against Syracuse. He attacked it by sea and land, but his operations proved ineflectual, the inventions of the philosopher Archimedes baffling all the efforts and destroying all the great and stupendous military engines of the Romans, during three successive years. (See Archimers, authors)
The perseverance of Marcellus at last gave him the victory. After the conquest of Syracuse, une victory. After the conquest of Syracuse, Marcellus was called upon to oppose Hamillad a second time. He displayed great military talents in his operations against this general but was not, however, sufficiently vigilant against the snares of his adversary. He imprudently soparated himself from his camp, and was killed in an ambuscade, B.C. 208

MARCELLUS I., Pope, succeeded Marcellinus. The emperor Maxentius banished him from Rome for excommunicating an apostate. p. 310.

MARCHLUS II. was secretary to Paul III., who made him a cardinal, and one of the pre-sidents at the council of Trent. He succeeded Julius III. in 1555, but died a few weeks after

n. near Neufchatel, 1744; his election.

Materiary, nur-shi-ci-nua, a Thradan of Materiary, who obtained the imperial nue the pupil of Andrea throne on the death of Theodosius II, in 450, pulled himself to painting lis reign, though it lasted little more than six years, was marked by peaceful and energetic measures. B. about the and of the 4th century;

Maria Theresa

MARCO POLO. (See POLO.) MARDONIUS, mar-do'-ni-us, a famous Persian general, a son of the satrap Gobryas, and a cousin of Xerxes. When Darius determined to consin of Acress. When Darius determined to invade Greec, the command of the immense army and fleet that was raised to crash that power was entrusted to him; but a storm de-stroyed his ships off Mount Athos, while his army was beaten in Macedonia. He accompanied Xerxes in his invasion of Greece, some years after, in 480 B.C., and was left in occupation of Athens, which he held for some months after the return of Xerxes to Asia. He was defeated and slain by Pausanias, at the battle of Platera,

September 22, 479 B.C.

September 22, 479 B.C.

Mangang, mar-gu-ret, daughter of Waldemar III, king of Denmark, and wife of Haco VII, king of Norway, was placed on the throne of both kingdoms, on the death of her son, Olaf VI, in 1837. The Swedes, disastisted with their king Albert, offered their crown to Manganet, who accepted it, and defeated Albert in 1804. Three years afterwards, the states of Demonse's Weeden and Marway massed allow. in 1804. Three years afterwards, the states of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway passed a law, known by the name of the Union of Calmar, by which the three kingdoms were united, and the monarchy limited. Blargaret, however, violated the conditions of the Union, and was called the Semiranis of the North. n. 1353; n. 1411.

Margaret daughter of Réné of Anjou, king of Sicily, and wife of Henry YI., king of England. In the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, she displayed the character of a heroine. Her busband being taken prisoner, in 1456, by the carl of Warwick, bush care of a heroine. Her busband being taken prisoner, in 1456, by the carl of Warwick, bush character of London in triumple. But, in 1460, her arms, she friends, persecuted by ny enemies, attacked by levied forces, set Henry at liberty, and entered London in triumple. But, in 1460, her arms, she friends, persecuted by ny enemies, attacked by London in triumple. But, in 1460, her arms, she friends, persecuted by ny enemies, attacked by London in triumple. But, in 1460, her arms, she friends, persecuted by ny enemies, attacked by London in 1460, her arms, she friends, persecuted by ny enemies, attacked by London in 1460, her arms, she friends, persecuted by ny enemies, attacked by London in 1460, her arms, she icon, and this pathelic additions, I have no other resource my enemies relations, I have no other resource my many friends, pour fieldity, in your courace, and constitution, and this pathelic additions, I have no other resource my many friends, pour fieldity, in your courace, and constitution, and this pathelic additions, I have no other resource my many friends, pour fieldity, in your courace, and constitution, and the pathelic additions, I have no other resource my many friends, pour fieldity, in your courace, and constitution, and the pathelic additions, I have no other resource my many friends, pour fieldity, in your courace, and constitution, and the pathelic additions, I have no other resource my many friends, pour fieldity, in your courace, and constitution, and this pathelic additions, I have no other resource my hard friends, I have no other resource my many friends, pathelic additions, I have no other resource my hard friends, I have no other resource my many friends, pathelic additions, I have no other resource my hard friends, I have no other resource my many friends, pathelic additions, I have no other resource my hard friends, I have no other resource my many fri York and Lancaster, she displayed the characwho fell in the battle of Wakefield. She next defeated Warwick at the second battle of St. adleans; but was routed, after a bloody contest, at Towton; on which she fled to France, to implore succour from Louis XI., who refused her any assistance. This intrepid woman then returned to England, where she was joined by several of her party, but was defeated at Hex-ham. In 1471 she sustained a final defeat at Towkesbury, where she and her son were taken prisoners. In 1475, her brother Louis XI. of France purchased her liberty by a large rausom. She then retired to France, where she died in 1482. B. about 1425.

MARGARET, Countess of Richmond and Derby.

(See BRAUFORT, Margaret.)

MARGARY of Valois, queen of Navarro, and sister to Francis I., king of France, was the daughter of Charles of Orleans, duke of Angou-lème. In 1509 sue married Charles, duke of lême. In 1509 site married Charles, duke of Alençon, two years after whose death site became the wife of Henry d'Albret, king of Navarre, by whom she had Jeanne d'Albret, mother of Henry IV. Margaret assisted her husband in improving his dominions, and grady encouraged the Protestants. Desdites other works, site wrote the "Heptameron," a collection of tales after the manner, and with more then the license, of Boccaccio. 21, 1492; D. 1549.

MARGARET of France. ocean of Navarre.

MARGARET of France, queen of Navarre, daughter of Henry II., ranked as one of the greatest beauties of her age, with talents and accomplishments corresponding to the charms of her person. She married Henry, then prince of Bearn, but afterwards king of France. On his accession to that throne, he proposed to dissolve their marriage, to which she consented, on condition of receiving a suitable pension; and, having returned to Paris, lived in great splendour and dissipation till her death in 1615. B. 1552. Some very agreeable poems by her are extant, and her "Mémoires" are curious.

MARIA LICZINSKI, ma-ri'-a lek-zins'-ki, daughter of Sianislas, king of Poland, married Louis XV, of France in 1725. D. 1768.

Maria Theresa, tai-rai-sa, archduchess of Austria, queen of Hungary and Bohemia, and empress of Germany, was the daughter of the enmeror Charles VI. and of Elizabeth Christina. of Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel. Her father having lost his only son, the archduke Leopold, constituted Maria Theresa the heiress of his estates. In 1713 was framed the famous Pragmatic Sanction, by which, in default of male issue, the succession passed to the eldest of Charles's daughters. She married, in 1736, Francis Stephen of Loraine, atterwards emperor by the name of Francis I. In 1740 her father died, which event plunged Europe into war. Frederick of Prussia invaded Silesia, to which conquest he added Moravia. The elector of Bavaria aspired to the crowns of Bohemia and the empire; was sup-ported by France in violation of the Pragmatic Sanction; and was crowned emperor at Frankfort, in 1742. Meanwhile, Maria Theresa threw herself upon the support of her Hungarian subjects, to whom, with her child in her arms, she made this pathetic address:—" Abandoned by my lungerians drew there salves, and exchained, as with one voltee, "Morianary pro regre nestro Maria Theresa." (We will die for our soven, in Maria Theresa.) A powerful rung was formed, with Kevenhuller at its head, which recovered several important places. Maria formed a treaty with Eugland, which supplied her with money and trops, and, what was of gr. ater consequence, detached the king of Prussia from the league, on condition of his retaining Silesia and Gratz. Maria Theresa was crowned queen of Gratz. maria Theresa was crowned queen or Bohemia, at Prague, in 1743; and, in June of the same year, the king of England and his son, the duke of Cumberland, gained a great victory at Dettingen. The king of Sardinia now declared himself for the queen of Hungary, who in 1745, had placed the imperial crown on the head of her husband, at Frankfort. After eight years of war, a peace was concluded at Aix-la-Chapelle, by which Maria Theresa was secured in her rights. (See FRUDERICK II.) She employed the interval of peace in organization i armies, repairing or constructing forti-regulating and encouraging commerce, military schools, and in erecting colleges of learning. She also caused observatories to be learning. She also caused observatories to be built at Vienna, Gratz, and Tyrnau, which she supplied with the best instruments. The wounded and infirm soldiers found an asylum in hospitals, and the widows and children of officers were liberally provided for. In 1756 this calm was disturbed by the king of Prussia, who marched into Saxony and Bohemia; Count Daun, however, eventually forced the Prussi to raise the slege, by gaining the victory of Kollin (1767.) On this instituted the military order called by her name. After many engagements, peace was concluded in 1763, leaving Austria and Prussia with the same boundaries as before the war. Her husband died in 1765, and she never put off her mourning attire till her death. In 1772 she, meaning attre til ner death. In 1772 she, somewhat unwillingly, joined the king of Prussia and the empress Catharme in the dismembranent of Poland. On the death of Maximilian Joseph, cledor of Bavaria, in 1777, war was rekindled between Austria and Prussia, but was beautisted in 1770 het between Austria and Prussia, but was terminated in 1779 by the peace of Teschen, which added to the former state a small portion of Bavaria. Maria Theresa was one of the most energetic and noble of rulers; and so well and wisely had she governed her people, that she earned, and fully merited, the name of mother of her country. B. 1717; D. at Vienna, 1780.

Maria Louisa

Maria Louisa, mă-ri-u loo-e'-su, ex-empress MARIA LOUISA, Macri-16 1000-414, exempress of the French, and second wife of Napoleon Bonquarte, was the eldest daughter of Francis I., emperor of Austria (who must not be confounded with Francis I., emperor of Germany). In 1810 she was married to Napoleon I., then in the authle for the presence of the second the zenith of his power; in 1811 she presented her husband with a son-afterwards called king of Rome—to the great joy of the French nation: and, in 1813, on his departure to the army, and, in 1813, on his departure to the army, she was nominated regent. In 1814 she refused to necompany Napoleon to Elba on the plea of ill-health; and having obtained, by treaty with the allied powers, the duchies of Parma and Placentia, &c., she repaired thither with her chamberlain. Count Neiperey, for whom she had conceived an attachment, and above the refrequently maying. whom she subsequently married. Maria Louisa was endowed with considerable talents, which she had cultivated with some care. Her mar-affection or her esteem: but she is still liable to the charge of selfishness of character and coldness of heart, which the difficulties of her position may perhaps extenuate, but cannot justify. B. 1791; D. December 18, 1847.

MARIANA, Juan, ma-re-u'-na, a celebrated Spanish historian, who at the age of 17 entered the order of the Jesuits. He distinguished himself by a famous book, entitled "De Rege et Regis Institutione," in which he justified the assassination of heretical princes : it was burnt the above, and several other learned works, he wrote a "Treatise on Weights and Measures," and another on the "Faults of Government and Society," in Spanish. r. at Talavera,

Marie Da' Medici, me-de'-che, daughter of Francis I., grand-duke of Tusemy, married Henry IV. of France, in 1600. The union was rendered unhappy in consequence of the jealous, obstinate, and violent character of the queen; but, although she was constantly quarrelling with Henry, the most reliable historians acquit with Henry, the most romanic instorans acquit her of the oddious charge with which some writers have sought to brand her—that of being prily to the king's nurder. On the death of Hanry IV, in 1610, she was named regent, but her administration was disgraced by the countenance she afforded to unworth favourites. She even quarrelled with her son, afterwards Louis XIII., who was compelled to 687

Marie Antoinette

quit the court. A reconciliation was, however, effected between them by Richelieu. That minister subsequently forced her to leave France. The remainder of her life was spent in exile, in Rapland, Belgium, and Germany. In 1628 her death took place at Cologne, where he was almost without the common necessaries he was almost without the common necessaries.

of life B. at Florence, 1573.

Marie Antoinette, ma'-re an'-twoi-net, queen of France and archduchess of Austria, was the daughter of the emperor Francis I. and of Maria Theresa. In 1770 she married the dauphin of France, afterwards Louis XVI. the celebration of the ceremony, in May of that year, two tremendous thunderstorms happened; and at the fete given by the city of Paris, a few weeks afterwards, above 1200 persons perished by the falling of a building creeted for letting off fireworks, and a great number of spectators fell into the Seine and were drowned. The dauphiness, on that melancholy occasion, sent all the money she possessed to the licutenant of police, for the relief of the distressed. At the death of a monarch in France, it was the custom trease of a monare in France, to was the custom or the people to pay a tax to the new queen; his she caused to be dispensed with, when, by the demise of Louis XV., she ascended the brone. When the Revolution burst forth, in 789, the public fury was directed against her; but she supported herself, amidst the vilest indignities and brutal scenes, with unshaken for-titude. On the famous 6th of October, when the frantic mob led the royal family in triumply from Versailles to Paris, and uttered dreadful exclamations against the q cen, she presented herself before them alone, v en her introplid ar for a period disarmed their maliee, and turned On that metheir menaces into applause. morable journey the mob carried before the carriage the heads of two of the king's guard on pikes. The courage of the queen, after being arrested at Varennes and conducted back to the Tuileries, remained unshaken. In the Temple her behaviour was marked by heroic fortitude. When apprised of the condemnation of her husband, she felicitated him on the termination of his sufferings, and upon his approach to an immortal crown. (See Louis XVI.) In July, 1798, she was separated from her son, which excited in her the most affecting grief, and in August she was conducted in the night to the Conciergeric, where she was confined in a dark and damp dungeon. In October she was brought to trial on the charge of having embezzled the public property, corresponded with foreign enemies, and transmitted large sums to the emperor. Accusations of crimes the most unnatural were also produced; to which she opposed the spirit and resolution of conscious innocence. Though nothing was proved, sentence of condemnation was passed against her, which she heard with triumph. On the 16th of the same month she was conducted where, after elevating her eyes to heaven, she suffered the fatal stroke. Her body was thrown into a grave and conner pour was thrown into a grave and con-sumed by quicklime. Her misfortunes had made great ravages in her beautiful coun-trannee, and altered the colour of her hair. Marie Antoinetto possessed an accomplished mind; she spoke the French language with murity and thu bellimes how any teach. purity, and the Italian as her own tongue. She understood Latin, and had a perfect knowledge of geography and history. She was kind-hearted and honest; thoughtlessness was perhaps the greatest vice that could be attributed to her: and it caused her to be most unjustly slandered on several occasions. She left a son, who died (See Louis XVII.) B. at Vienna, in prison. (See Lours 1755; guillotined 1793.

Marignano

Marignano, John James Medichino, mar'-MARIONANO, John James Medichino, mar-cil).nam, Marquis de, a celebrated commander, born at Milan, in the beginning of the 18th century. Francis Sforza, duke of Milan, em-ployed him and another officer to nurder Viscouti, a Milanese nobleman; after which he determined to sacrifice the two instruments, less he should be discovered as the author of the ne snound be discovered as the addition of the assassination. The one perished, but Medichino escaped, and obtained the government of Musso. In 1528 he envered into the service of the emperor, and exchanged Musso for Marignano. In 1544 he defeated the French, commanded by Marshal Strozzi, in Tuscany, and took the city of Siena, where he committed herrible cruelties. p. 1. vi.

Marino, John Baptist, mu-re'-uo, an Italian MARINO, John Baptist, marri'no, an Italian poet. His father having disaarded him for re-fusing to study the law, he became secretary to the grand admiral of Naples, after which he went to Rome, where he was patronized by Cardinal Aldebraudino. His principal poem was entitled "Adonis," dedicated to Louis XIII. was enumed. "Adons," deficated to Louis XIII.
at the time when Marino was at Paris, whither he had been invited by Marie de Medici. He afterwards retired to his native city. B. at Naples, 1569; p. 1625.

MARINO FALIERI. (See FALIERI.)

MARIOTTE, Edme, mul-re-ot, an eminent mathematician, who was admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, in 1666. He us an accusion of sciences at Paris, in 1606. He distinguished himself by his hydraulic experiments. His principal works are, "A Treatise on Thilosophy," "On the Motion of Waters," "On the Movement of Pendulums," "Experiments on Colours," "Treatise on Levels." The whole were published in a collected form at Leyden, in 1717. D. 1684.

MARIES GIURG and Priva a cold broad December 1988.

Marrus, Chius, ma'-ri-us, a celebrated Roman. who was seven times consul. He was of obscure origin, and in his youth was a husbandman; which employment he quitted for the army, and which employment he quitted for the army, and became a fleutenant under Sepice, who, when asked one night at supper where as good a general as himself might be found when he was dead, replied, placing his hand on the shoulders of Martis. "Here, perhaps." Martius ended the war with Jugurtia, whom he conducted in turingh to Rome. After this, he served against triumph to Rome. After this, he served against the Cimbri and other barbarous nations who had invaded Italy; but tarnished the glory of his victories by the beast cruellies to the vanquished, especially the women. Plutareh reports that, having experienced some disavantages in contending with the Cimbri, he was warned, in a dream, to evert the wrath of the gods by secrificing his daughter Calpurnia, which inhuman direction he obeyed. In his sixth consultate he had Sulla for his rival, who which inhuman direction he obeyod. In mis sixth consultate he had Sylla for his rival, who marched to Rome with his army, and obliged Marius to quit the city. After wandering some time, he was recalled to Rome by Clinna, with whom he was chosen consul. 20, 88, in which year he died from excessive drinking. 2, at 5.or near Arpinum, about 157 B.C.—His son, Marius the Younger, had all the ferocious characteristics of his father. He usurped the consular dignity 82 n.c.; but was defeated by Sylla, and slew himself at Præneste.

Marlborough

mon soldier in the reign of Valerianus Gallienus. who attained to supreme command in the army, and, on the death of the former, seized the imperial throne, but was shortly afterwards killed by a soldier. D. about 260.

Mariyaux, Pierre Carlet de Chamblain de. ma'-re-vo, a celebrated French writer, whose ma'-re-ro, a celebrated French writer, whose comedies and romanees are distinguished by their moral tendency. His best works are, "The Poor Philosopher," "Marianne," "Le Paysan Parvenu," "Pharsamon," Healso wroto a work entitled "The French Spectator," L. at Paris, 1688; p. 1763.

MARK, a pope and saint, succeed d Sylvester I, in 336, and died the next year. There passes under his name an epistle addressed to St.

Athanasins

MARK ANTONY. (See ANTONIUS, Marcus.) MARKLAND, Jereminh, mark'-1 and, a learned critic, who in 1723 distinguished himself by his eritie, who in 1723 distinguished himself by his "Epistola Critica," after which he published "Remarks on the Epistles of Cicero to Brutus, and of Brutus to Cicero; with a Dissertation on Four Orations ascribed to Cicero." Ho wrote several other works, and as-isted many learned men in their labours. B. in Laneashire, 1693; p. near Dorking, Surrey, 1776. MARLBOROUGH, John Churchill, Duke of, mark-bur-o, an illustrious English general and statesman. He received but an indifferent education, for his father, Sir Winston Churchill, a royalist gentleman of ancient family, took him to court at the age of 12 years, where he became page to the duke of York, and, in 1666, obtained a commission in the guards. His first service was at the siege of Taurier, against the Moors, and on his return to England, he became the favourite of the duchess of Cleveland. who gave him £5000, with which he purchased who gave him 45000, with which he purchased an annuity for life. He served afterwards under the great Turenne, who was so pleased with his person and bravery, as to call him the "Hand-some Englishman," and furthe declared that he would one day prove a moster in the art of war. He di-tinguished himself so gallantly at the siege of Maestricht, that the king of Franco publicly thanked him at the head of the regiment. On his return to England he was made licutenant-colonel, gentleman of the bedeham-ber, and master of the robes to the duke of ber, and master of the robes to the duke of York. He attended that prince to Holland and Scotland, and about this time married Miss Srahl Jennings, maid of honour to Princess, afterwards Queen Anne. In 10°2 ho was slip-yrecked with the dake of York, in their passago to Scotland, on which occasion lik royal light-ness expressed the utmost unively to save his favourite. The same year he was made a peer, by the title of Baron Eymouth, in Scotland; and when James came to the crown, was sent to France to notify the event. In 1685, he was created Lord Churchill of Sandridge, and, soon afterwards, materially assisted in suppress ing Monmouth's rebellion. He continued to serve King James with great fidelity till the arrival of William of Orange; whereupon he went over to that prince, an act of treachery which has been stigmatized by several writers, and not unjustly, as fraught with base ingratiand not unjusty, as fraught with the religion and constitution of his country. King William created him earl of Marborough in 2 n.c.; but was defeated by Sylia, and slaviny imself at Preneste.

MINITES, MARCUS Aurelius, a smith and comnext served in Ireland, and redoced; Cort, with other strong places. But in 1692 he was suddenly dismissed from his employments, and committed to the Tower; whence, however, he was soon released. After the death of Queen Mary, he was restored to favour: and at the close of William's reign he had the command of the English forces in Holland, and was appointed ambassador extraordinary to the States, who chose him captain-general of their forces. On the commencement of Queen Anne's reign, he recommended a war with France and Spain, which advice was adopted. In the first campaign of 1702 he took a number of strong towns, pargicularly Liège. He returned to England the following winter, and received the thanks of both Houses, and the honour of a dukedom from the queen. In 1704 he joined Prince Eugene, with whom he fought the French and Rugene, with whom he lought the French and Bavarians at Blenheim and obtained a com-plete victory, taking Marshal Tallard prisoner. Just before this event, he had been created a prince of the empire. In the winter he returned to England, bringing with him Marshal Tallard, and 26 other officers of rank, 121 standards, and and 25 other olicers of rank, 121 standards, and 170 colours. He again received the thanks of Parliament, and the grant of the crown lands at Woodstock, a village near Oxford. In 1706 he fought the famous battle of Ramilies, in which his life was frequently in the most imminent danger, a cannon-shot taking off the heard of Colour Blueire, as he was believe the head of Colonel Bingly as he was helping the duke to remount. This victory accelerated the fall of Louvain, Brussels, and other important places. He arrived in England in November, and received fresh honours and grants from the Queen and Parliament. A bill was passed to settle the titles upon the male and female issue of his daughters; and Blenheim House was or ins taugitiers; and incinem House was ordered to be built to perpetaate his gallant services. He had also a pension of £5000 a year granted him. The following campaign year granted him. The following campaign presented nothing worth recording; but the ensuing one was pushed with such vigourbeing distinguished by the victory at Oudenarde, followed by the passage of the Schelde and the capture of the fortress of Lisies that the French king was glad to enter into a negotiation for peace, which, however and result. In 1709, Mariborongh defeated Marshal Villars at Malplaquet; for which victory a general thanksgiving was solemized. In the winter of 1711 he returned to England, having added considerably to his laturels; but soon whiter of 1711 he returned to England, having added considerably to his larvais; but soon after was dismissed from his employments. To add to this disgrace, a prosecution was commenced acquists him for applying the public money to his private purposes. Thecupon he went into voluntary bunishment, accompanied by his duchess, and remained abroad till 1714, when he landed at Dover, amids the acclamations of the people. Queen Anne was just dead, and her successor verstored the duke to his miliand her successor restored the duke to his military appointments; but his infirmities increasing, he retired from public employment, having survived his intellectual faculties. B, in Devonshire, 1650; D. 1722, and his remains were interred with great pomp in Westminster Abbey.

MARLBOROUGH, Sarah, Duchess of, wife of makenogoufer, spran, Dugness of, wile of the preceding, was a lady of strong mind, but overbearing passions. For a long time she exercised over the weak and easy nature of Queen Anne a most commanding influence. The queen threw off all royal ctiquette when corresponding with the haughty duchess. In their letters, Queen Anne was simple "Mrs. Morley," while the duchess was addressed as "dear Mrs. Freeman." In the end, however, the queen felt her yoke to be intolerable, and after a long struggle for power, the duchess was dismissed the court, the duke, her husband, sharing in her disgrace. She outlived the duches sward years. D. 1744.

Marlows, Christopher, mar-lo, an English dramatic writer, who studied at the university of Cambridge and took his degree as MA in dramatic writer, who studied at the university of Cambridge, and took his degree as M.A. in 1857. It is said he subsequently became a writer for the stage, and, pechaps, an actor. His course of life appears to have been very bad, and he met his death in a disgraceful quarrel. The plays which have been attributed to him are, "Dr. Funsturs;" "Edward the Second;" "The Jow of Malia;" "Tamburlaine the Great;" "Lust's Domition;" "Dido, Queen of Carthage;" and "Massacre at Paris." All these works have reached our times in a very these works have reached our times in a very imperfect condition, owing to the carelessness of the printers; but they convey, nevertheless, abundant proof of the great power their author possessed of drawing characters more than human in their intense malignity and terrible depth of villany. Marlowe's productions were the link between the plays of Shakspeare and the old "Moralities." B. about 1864; killed, 1593.

MARMONT, Marshal. (See Ragusa, duke of.)
MARMONTEL, Jean François, mer'-mon-tel, ac celebrated French writer, who in early life was professor of philosophy at Toulouse. In 1745 lie went to Paris, and obtained the friendship of Voltairo. His talents and virtues procured him a pension and the place of historiographer of the royal buildings, and also the management of a journal called the "Mercure;" but, having written a satire against a nobleman of distinction, he was sent to the Bastille. On obtaining his re-lease, he recommenced his literary career, and wrote some tragedies and an opera; but his wrote some trageness and a obeta; but his fame rests principally, if not wholly, upon his "Moral Tales," a work universally known and esteemed. The French Academy appointed him perpetual secretary in 1789. During the Revolution he led a retired life, and though reduced to destitution, remained secure amidst all the violent scenes of that event. In 1797 all the violent seemes of that event. In 1707 he was dissented by the department of Eure. Besides his dematic pieces and "Moral Tales," he vrote the comance of "The Literary Observer," "The Charms of Study," The Literary Observer," "The Charms of Study," The Literary Observer," "The Charms of Study," an episite; a French translation of Lucan's "Pharasalia," "Foctique Françoise," "The Incas: or, title Detartiction of the Empire of Peru," "Essay on the Revolutions of Music," "Stemants of Literature," and soveral articles in the French "Encyclopédie." In in France, 1723; p. 1739. MARNOMA, Alfonso, Marquis della, mor'mora, a modern Italian general, who received his cliudion in the military school at Turia. In 1823 he entered the artillery as litutemant, and rose, during the ensaing twenty-five yours,

In 1823 no entered the artisty as incurenally, and rose, during the ensuing twenty-five years, through the intermediate grades, till, at the latter period, he attained the rank of major-general. During the struggle between Piodmont and Austria, in 1818, he held office as minister of war? and on the abdication of Carlo Alberto, he was appointed to reorganize the shattered army. In 1855 he went out to the Crimea, as commander-in-chief of the Piedmontese army of 15,000 men, which had been sent thither to co-operate with the English and French against the Russians, and, with his troops, took an active part in the defeat of the Russians on the Tehernaya. At the conclusion of neace Della Marmora resumed office under Cavour as minister of war. He was not engaged in the field during the Italian war of 1859; but in 1861 became commander-in-chief of the Italian army, and in 1862 was viceroy in the Neapolitan provinces. During the years 1864-66 he was twice premier of Italy, and in the last-named year took an active part in the brief war between Italy and Austria. B. 1804.

MAROCHETTI, Charles, Baron, mar-o-ket'-te, an eminent modern sculptor, who, having commenced the practice of his profession at Turin, went to Paris, and afterwards to London, where he remained, constantly employed by the most fashionable circles. The English public became acquainted with him during the Great Exhibition of 1851, when he contributed his colossal model of Richard Cour-de-Lion, which was placed in the open air at the western end of the Crystal Palace. He was afterwards extensively employed by the royal family and the highest nobility to carve busts, &c. In 1856, he produced a bust of her Majesty in stained marble, and two years before he executed a colossal equestrian statue of the queen, for the citizens of Glasgow. Une of his last works was a bust of Sir Edwin Landseer, exhibited in 1867, and another, a statue of Lord Cyde, which was completed in the same year. B. at Turin, of French parents, 1805;

Marozia, mar-o-ze'-a, a Roman lady, who married, about 906, Alberic, count of Tusculum and marquis of Camerino. Becoming a widow while still young, she exercised, by her beauty and intriguing spirit, great influence over the most powerful nobles of Rome, and during many years set up or deposed popes almost at her mere whim. She made herself mistress of the city, and caused, in succession, the election of Sergius III. in 904, Anastasius III. in 911, and Lando in 913. In 928 she deposed John X., who had been elected through the influence of Theodora, her sister and rival, and put him to death, with the assistance of Guido, duke of doath, with the assistance of Guids, duite of Tuseany, her second husband. In 931 she seated in the pontifical chair her son, under the title of John XI. (See Join XI.) In the following year she married her third husbands Hugh of Provence, who became king of Italy; but that moment having struck Alberie, eldest son of Marozia, he, out of revenge, roused the Roman youths, and massacred the guards of his father-in-law, who sought safety in flight. Marozia was imprisoned in the castle of St. Angelo. where she died

MARPURG, Frederic William, mar-poorg, an eminent German writer on the theory of music. Of his personal history scarcely any-thing authentic is known, further than that he , was either coansellor of war to Frederick II., or secretary to one of his ministers. His "Manual of Harmony and Composition" is so correct and sound that it has earned the title of the "Musisound that it has earned the title of the "Muscal Bucklid." Dr. Burney remarks of Marpyrg, that "he was the first German theorist who could patiently be read by persons of taste, so addicted were former writers to prolikity and pedantry." n. in Prussia, 1718; p. 1796.

MARRAST, Armand, mar-rast, an eminent French political writer, who, after completing his education, went to Paris, where he soon distinguished himself by his brilliant attacks upon the government of Charles X. In 1830 he started "La Tribune," in which Louis Philippe and his ministry were subjected to an unceasing flow of the most pungent satire. Fines and law expenses, however, put an end to that remarkable journal, and at one time its former editor was compelled to seek refuge in England. He sub-sequently became sub-chitor of "Le National," sequently became sub-editor of "Le National," then under the guidance of the unfortunate Armand Carrel, (See Carrell, When the latter fell, in a duel with threadin, Marrast succeeded to the editorship in chief of "Le National," and therein contributed, in no slight degree, to bring the government of Louis Philippe into contempt, as well as to produce the great crisis of 1848, which resulted in the loss of his throne by the old monarch. After the fall of the Lamartine administration, Marrast retired into private life. B. 1802; D. 1852.

MARRYAT, Frederick, var'-re-at, a celebrated

English novelist, who, before he had commenced the first line of his first novel, had proved himself a man of heroic mould in many desperate conflicts. After receiving some educa-tion at various schools in the vicinity of London, he entered the navy at the age of fourteen. His lest ship was the famous Imperiouse, 44 gros. commanded by that brilliant seaman, Lord Cochrane, afterwards Earl of Dandonald. Under this celebrated chief, the young sailor fought in upwards of fifty engagements, between the years 1806 and 1809. The reputation for bravery and skill which he had acquired under his first commander, was continued and increased during his after-career. On five occasions he rescued sailors from drowning by leaping overboard to their assistance. After various services, he was gazetted commander in 1815; in 1823 he sailed in command of the Larne, 18 guns, to the East Indies, where he co-operated in the attack on Rangoon. For his services he received the rangoon, for his services he received the thanks of the governor-general, and, after his return home, became C.B.; a further honour was bestowed upon him by the Royal Humane C.S., which havarded its gold media to him, in with the Chemond force in the control of the control of p the novelist's pen, and produced, in put succession, a series of excellent works of fiction, most of them depicting life at sea. To inction, most of them depicting life at sea. To cumerate a few of them will suffice for the present purpose:—"Peter Simple," "Jacob Pathful," "The King's Own," "Japhet in Soarch of a Father," "Midshipman Easy," "Rattlin the Reefer," "Poor Jack," the "Pirate and the Three Cutters," "Masterman Ready." The preceding are his best novels, but almost constitute to weet one evaluate. In 1917 beeverything he wrote was excellent. In 1837 he produced a most valuable work, outflied A. Code of Signals for the use of vessels employed in the merchant service, for which Louis Philippe bestowed upon him the cross of the Legion of Honour. The code is now in use both in the English and foreign navies. For exversi years below his death he was insepectated from literary labour by shattered hostith. It must be manifored that the safe vessors was consequently the safe vessors was consequently the safe vessors when the safe vessors was the safe vessors was the safe vessors when the everything he wrote was excellent. In 1837 he citated from literary labour by shattered nextin.

328, 1829, and 1830. At the age of forty he

It must be mentioned that the sole reason why this bold and skilful seaman did not rise in his profession, was that he had given free utterance to his opinions against the practice of impressment. He was a fellow of the Royal Society.
B. in London, 1792; b. in Revolls, 1364.

Mars, Mademoiselle, mar, a great Fronch

comedian, made her début at the early age of was made bishop of Llandaff; and, three years thirteen, and enjoyed the rare privilege of re-later, translated to the see of Peterborough, taining the public favour till an advanced age. Eminent as were his talents and learning, and thirteen, and enjoyed the rare privilege of re-taining the public favour till an advanced age, having kept the boards of the Théâtre Français at Paris, where she had gained imumerable triumphs, till 1841, when she retired in her 63rd year. B. 1779; D. 1847.

Marsure, William, mars'den, a distinguished Orientalist, who was educated at various schools in Dublin, with the view of proceeding to Trinity College, and entering the church. His father was, however, induced to send him out to India when he had attained his sixteenth year. He reached Bencoolen in 1771, and entered the civil service of the government, While fulfilling the duties of secretary, he mastered the Malay language, and acquired a large and valu-able store of local knowledge, which, at a later period, he turned to good account in his writings.

After residing at Sumatra during eight years, he returned to England, where he made the acquaintance of Sir Joseph Banks, who introduced him to most of the scientific and learned men of the day. In 1732 he published his ex-cellent "History of Sumatra." The success of cellent "History of Sumatra." The success of this work was, from the outset, very decided; and through the influence of distinguished persons, whose acquaintance he had made, the author became second secretary, and afterwards chief secretary, to the Admiralty. While he held that appointment, the battles of St. Vincent, Camperdown, the Nile, and Trafalgar took place; and, during that stirring and glorious period, Mr. Marsden's efforts were marked by untiring energy, integrity, and intelligence. In 1807 by refired upon a page of $1000. untiring energy, integrity, and intelligence. In 1807 he retired upon a pension of £1500 per annum; and five years afterwards produced his Grammar and Dictionary of the Malay Language," which was followed, after several years' interval, by a translation of the "Travels of the celebrated Marco Polo," His other important works were "Numismato freintallia; or, Description of Eastern Coins," and some treatizes on the Polynessian or East Insular Languages. In 1831 he voluntarily gave up his pension to the public an age of librarily which treatises on the Folyaceian or Less insum-Languages. In 1831 he voluntarily gave up his pension to the public; an act of liberality which elicited the warmest thanks of the House of Commons. At his death he bequeathed his collection of coins and medals to the british Museum, and his library to King's College. n. at Dublin, 1754; p. 1836. Marsix, Right Rev. Herbert, D.D., marsh, bishop of Peterborough, was chiefly known as the tensible at the profound and claborate the translator of the profound and elaborate work of "Michaelis on the New Testament." After finishing his classical studies at St. John's College, Cambridge, he resided for many years at Göttingen, where he acquired an intimate at Göttingen, where he acquired an intimate acquaintance with the German language. On the invasion of Germany by the French, he returned to Cambridge and took his B.D. degree, and in 1807 was elected Lody Margaert's professor of divinity, delivering his lectures in English instead of in Latin, as had been the practice previously; and as he lectured from the university pulpits, all ranks flocked to hear him. Besides several immortant translations. Besides several important translations from the German, and a long list of controver-sial pamphlets, he published "A Course of Lecslal pamphlets, he published "A Course of Lec- son, are some american interactives, containing a Description and Systematic tions for a histery of England, but never published them. He also wrote a "History of the liked them. He also wrote a unwearied as was his zeal as a divine, he probably owed much of his success in life to some important information on publicaffairs, which he transmitted to the English government during his residence in Germany, and which Mr. Pitt considered to be so important, that he rewarded it with a pension. B. 1768; p. 1838. MARSHALL, William, mar. shal, a distinguished

Marsaar, William, waw-shab, a distinguished modern writer on agricultural and trust economy, among whose works are, "Minutes of Agriculture," "Planting and Rural Ornament," "The Rural Economy of the Midland, Southern, and Western Counties," and "Experiments and Observations concerning Agriculture and the Weather." B. 1745; D. 1818.

Marsaar, William Calder, R.A., sculptor, was educated at Edinburgh, and for some years practised his art there. He next stadied under Chantzer in London, and under Bally; and in 1830 visited Rome. He first exhibited at the English Academy in 1835; and took un his resi-English Academy in 1835; and took up his residence in London permanently in 1839. In 1842 the was elected associate of the Scottish, in 1844 of the English Academy, and in 1852, R.A. Mr. Marshall resisted the attractions of the more lucrative branch of his art, portrait-busts, and devoted his great skill as a modeller of the figure to poetic sculpture; and with gradual success. The "Broken Pitcher" (1842), "Rebecca," and other models in plaster, were selected by Art-Union prizeholders; and the former executed in marble to the purchaser's order. A reduction of the "First Whisper of order. A reduction of the "First winsper of Love" (1845), was chosen by the holder of a $200 prize. The "Dancing Girl reposing" ob-Love" (1845), was chosen by the holder of a 2800 prize. The "Dancing Girl reposing" obtained the Art-Union premium of 2500; reduced copies in Parian being distributed among the subscribers. One of his best works for refinement of feeling and of execution is "Satisma" (1847). For the new Palace at Westminstar, Marshall, one of the three sculptors consulted as country in the first of Westminstar. employed, executed the fine statues of Hyde, Lord Clarendon, the historian, and Lord Somers. Lord Clarendon, the historian, and Lord Somers. He was also selected for important statues erected by public subscription—that in bronze to Peel at Manchester; others proposed to be placed in public sites, to Jonner, Campboll, and Cowper. In 1857, Mr. Marshall obtained the first prize of 8700, for a design for the national monument to the duke of Wellington; and was considered to the charter of the control o employed to execute various statues to the employed to execute various statues to the memory of Prince Albert, E. 1819.

MARSHAM, Sir John, mar-sham, a learned English writer, who, after studying the lawbeame one of the six clerks in Chancery, During the civil wars, he adhered to the royal marshame of Prince and the status and is 1660 was observed to the royal to the control of the status and is 1660 was observed. cause, and in 1660 was chosen member of Parliament for Rochester. Charles II. conferred on him the honour of knighthood. Ho is distinguished for his "Diatribe Chronologica," or tanguished for his Diacrice Chronologica, or a Chronological Dissertation, wherein he examines the principal difficulties which occur in the chronology of the Old Testament; an enlarged edition of which work he afterwards produced. B. in London, 1602; p. 1685.—His son, Sir John Marsham, made large collec-tions for a history of England, but never pub-lished them. He also wrote a "History of the taken prisoner by the Tartars, who sold him to in India, received a good mathematical edugeneral; but when the Count d'Arco was con-domned for giving up the fortress of Brisach to defined for gaving up the fortress of brisach to the duke of Burgundy, Marsigli, who com-manded under him, was dismissed the service. He then retired to Bologna, where he formed a museum, and erected a printing-office; the first he bequeathed to the senate, and the last to the Dominicans. He also founded the Academy of Arts and Sciences at that place. Count Marsigli was a member of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, and of the Royal Society of London. He wrote, among other important works, "A Philosophical Essay on the Soa," "A Descrip-tion, Historical, Geographical, &c., of the Da-nube," and "A Treatise on the Bosphorus."

Warston Martin

nuc, and A frentise on the Bosphorus.

H. at Bologna, 1658; D. 1730.

MARSTON, John, mar'-stor, an English dramatic writer of the time of Elizabeth and James I., who is said to have been a student of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and an intimate friend of Ben Jonson; but boyond these facts, nothing is known of the circumstances of his life. Nine of his plays have been printed separately: one of them, "The Malcontent," is a very fine production; it is said, however, to have been altered from Webster. His miscellaneous poems were collected and edited in 1764. He also assisted Ben Jonson and Chapman in writing "Eastward Hoe."

MARTIAL, Marcus Valerius, mar'-she-al, a Latin epigrammatic poet. From some hints that he went to Rome when young, and re-mained there during 35 years, after which he retired to his native place, Bilbilis, in Spain. The emperor Domitian conferred on him many The emperor Dominan conserved on him many favours, and raised him to the office of tribune. Martial, in return, complimented him as more than human; but, after his death, painted his enormities in glowing colours. His engrams are very pointed and severe. D. about 108.

MARTIN I., Pope, man'-tin, succeeded Theodoro in 649. He held a council at Rome, in which the heresy of the Monothelites was condemned. This giving offence to the emperor Constantius, he caused Martin to be sent to Constantinople. whence he was removed to the Crimea, where he died of ill-usage, in 655.

Marxin II. succeeded John VIII. in 882. He condemned Photius, patriarch of Constanti-MARTIN III., a Roman, succeeded Stephen VIII. in 942. He founded many churches and

VIII. in 92. He founted many charches and charitable institutions. 5,486.

MARTHS IV., a Frenchman of noble birth, succeeded Nicholas III. in 1281. He excommended the second of the second of the second of the latter to Charles de Valois, sen of Philip the Hardy, king of France. 5, 1285.

MARTHN V. (Otho Coloma) was elected pope in 1417, after the abdication of John XXIII. and of the antipopes Benedict and Gregory. His inauguration was very pompous, and he was attended, in a submissive manner, by The omperor and the elector-palatine. He persented the followers of Huss B Bohemia, and closed the council of Constance, in 1417. p. 1431.

the Tirks. The year following he was ren-somed, and obtained a colonel's commission. 20 entered the army with one of his brothers, the was afterwards advanced to the rank of His regiment was sent to India with General Lally, and in the war of 1750 he behaved with great gallantry; but, being ill-treated, he deserted into the English service, in which he signalized himself by many acts of bravery. Being employed to make a map of the estates of the nabob of Oude, he recommended himself to his patronage. The nabob loved the European arts, in which he was assisted by Martin, who opened a profitable bank and other commercial opened a production of oans and other commercial institutions under his protection, and thereby goined prodigious wealth. Having settled at Lucknow, he built there a magnificent but curious house, in a style of his own, and in which he could enjoy all the mildness and coolness of a European climate, with the fervour of the Asiatic. He also creeted another on the banks of the Ganges, which was fortified in the European manner. He formed a large museum of natural history; constructed an immense garden, stocked with a prodigious variety of plants; and built an observatory, which he furnished with the best astronomical instru-At his death, his great wealth was disments. tributed principally in charity. He founded at Lyons a school of commerce and industry which is called La Martinière, after him. B. at

Lyons, 1732; p. 1800.

Martin, John, a modern English painter, of considerable originality. Having in early life evinced a desire to become an artist, his father apprenticed him to a Newcastle coachmaker. for the purpose of learning heraldic painting; by the purpose of reating parameter and this indentures, were, however, cancelled after a short time, and he was placed in the studio of Bouifacio Musso, an enunel painter. In 1850 he went to London with his master, who obtained employment for him in the firm of Mr. C. Muss, his son. Martin, speaking of his life at that period, says, "By close application till two or three o'clock in the morning, in the depth of winter, I obtained that knowledge of perspective and architecture which has since perspective and arcintecture which has sind the been so valuable to me. I was at this time, during the day, employed in Mr. C. Muss's firm, painting on china and glass; by which, and making water-colour drawings, and teaching, I supported myself; in fact, mine was a struggling artist's life when I married, which I did at 19. In 1812 he resolved to paint a large picture; he set to work, and in a month produced "Sadak in search of the Waters of Oblivion." This obtained a place in the Royal Academy Exhibition, and was purchased for 50 guiness. Thus encouraged, the painter worked diligently, and became, for a period, the most generally popubecame, for a period, on those generally looked a lar artist in his native country. He produced a number of striking works, which, as depicting awe-inspiring subjects, in a manner charackingdom of the latfer to Chañes de Vilois, son terized by fervid imagination and a feeling for f Philip the Hardy, king of France. D. 1985. the grandeur of nature, captivated the general MARTIN V. (Otho Coloma) was elected pope public, and caused Martin to be regarded as possible 1417, after the abdication of John XXIII. As an essenting a "sublime style." Some of his most of the antipopes Benedict and Gregory. His attractive and successful pictures, were—"Belianguration was very pompous, and he was shazurs's Feast," "The Seventh Plaque," "The attractive and the elector-platine. He persecuted the followers of Huss 2 Bohemia, and closed the council of Constance, in 1417. D. 1431.

MARTIN, Claude, a Frenchman, who attained the rank of major-general in the English service the sanitary improvement of the metropolis, terized by fervid imagination and a feeling for

Martineau Marvell

published some pamphlets on the subject, and of the plants about London. He co-operated took out patents for sewer-pipes, &c. At one time, his services were eagerly sought by publishers as an illustrator of books; and for one set of drawings-those made for an edition of Milton's poems-he is said to have been paid 2000 guineas. B. in Northumberland, 1789; p. 1854.

MARTINEAU, Harriet, mar'-te-no, an eminent modern authoress, was descended from a family of French extraction, which, on the revoca-tion of the Edict of Nantes, commenced and carried on, during several generations, the business of silk-manufacturers at Norwich. In early youth she displayed great earnestness of character, and an unremitting eagerness to acquire knowledge. Her talent for literary composition was also very decided. Her father be-coming embarrassed in his commercial affairs, Harriet, the sixth of eight children, resolved to support herself by literature. She commenced accordingly by publishing, in the year B23, a volume of "Devotions for Young People," which was succeeded by her "Christmas Day" and "The Friend," in the two following years. Some tales and tracts occupied her pen up to 1830, when she published a more ambitious work entitled "Traditions of Palestine." About the same time she gained the prizes offered by the British and Foreign Unitarian Association for three tracts on the "Introduction and Promotion of Christian Unitarianism among the Roman Catholics, the Joys, and Mohammedans." Her next efforts were the "Illustrations of Political Economy," which, although they had been rejected by the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge and several publishers, proved a most decided success. "Illustrations of Taxation" and "Poor-Law and Paupers" appeared next, and in 1837 she gave to the world her "Society in America," which was the result which was the result of a visit to the United States. "Deerbrook" and "The Hour and the Man," were the subsequent productions of her pen; but, although two excellent novels, they did not attain great two excellent novels, they did not attain great popularity. Between the years 1839-44, her health was exceedingly delicate; but, on her recovery, she resumed the pen with her formerergy, and produced "Life in the Sick Room," "Forest and Game-Law Tales," "The Billow and the Rock," and "Eastern Life, Past and Present," which last contained her travelling. Present, when has contained her wavening impressions of Syria and the Holy Land. Mr. Charles Knight having been compelled to relinquish the composition of the "History of England during the Thirty Years' Peace," Miss Martineau undertook the task, and was generally allowed to have produced a most interesting and valuable contribution to historical literature. She next published, in conjunction with Mr. Atkinson, a volume containing opinions relative by being directly opposite to those she had hitherto displayed. About 1856 she went to reside at a pleasant cottage she had built for herself at Ambleside. Her pen was next employed in the service of the "Westminster," and other reviews, and in occasional contributions to the daily and weekly press. Her last work of importance was a condensed reproduction of "Comto's Positive Philosophy." n. at Norwich, 1802,

MIRTEN, John, mar'-tin, an eminent English botanist, who, in 1720, translated "Tounctort's History of the Plants growing about Paris," which induced him to make a similar catalogu with Dillenus in forming a society of botanists, which continued till 1726. About this time he read botanical lectures in London, and on the death of Bradley was chosen professor of botany at Cambridge. He became, in 1727, a member of the Royal Society. He practised physic in the city, and afterwards at Chelsea, but, in 1752, retired to Streatham. His principal works were several treatises in Latin on botany; a Translation of the Georgies and Bucolies of Virgil, with notes; translation of Boerhaave's creatise on the Powers of Medicine; Harris on the Diseases of Infants; and an abridgment of Philosophical Papers from the Memoirs of the Academy of Sciences at Paris. B. in London, 699; p. 1768, LARTYN, Thomas, F.R.S., an eminent anti-quarian and natural philosopher, the son of the quartan and natural pincosopher, we son or compressions, born at Chelsea, was educated at Cambridge, and, on his father's resignation in 1761, succeeded to the botanical professorship, 1781, succeeded to the botanical professorship, which he held for 64 years, together with valuable church preferment. His philosophical writings by which he is most generally known, are, "Plantæ Cantabrigienses," "Herbationes Cantabrigienses," "The English Comonisseut," "The Antiquities of Heretalmeum," "Elements of Natural History," "Flora Rustica," and an enlarged edition of "Miller's Gardener's Dictionary," 2, 1786; p. 1825.

Mayyre, Peter surf-dir, an Italian diplo-

MARTYR, Peter, mur'-tir, an Italian diplomatist, who was employed by Ferdinand V., king of Castile and Aragon, in the education of his children. He also obtained some ecclesiastical benefices, and wrote a history of the discovery of America, in Latin; also a curious relation of his embassy to Egypt, in 1500, and a collection of letters relating to the history of Spain. B. 1455; D. 1523.

MARTYR, Peter, a celebrated Protestant diving, whose family name was Vermight; but his parents gave him that of Martyr, from one Peter, a martyr, whose church stood near their house. After receiving a private education, he entered an Augustine monastery at Fiesole. He became a distinguished preacher, and held an appointment in the cathedral of Naples, which he relinquished after reading the writings of Luther and other reformers. This change in his religious sentiments rendering it expedient for him to quit Italy, he went to Strasburg, where he married a nun, who, having adopted the principles of the Reformation, had fled from her convent. On the invitation of Edward VI. he went to England, and was made professor of divinity at Oxford, and canon of Christehurch. But in the succeeding reign he was obliged to leave the kingdom; on which he went to Switzerland. His wife died at Oxford, and, in the reign of Mary, her remains were taken up and buried beneath a dunghill; but when Queen Elizabeth came to the throne, they were honourably in-terred in Christchurch. Peter Martyr wrote some pieces against the errors of the church of Rome, and commentaries upon the Holy Scrip-ture. B. at Florence, 1500; B. at Zurich, 1562. MARYELL, Andrew, mar-vel, an English poet and politician, who, at the age of thirteen, was sent to Trinity College, Cambridge, and, in 1657, became assistant to Milton, as Latin secretary. In the Parliament which met at the Restoration, he was chosen to represent his native town. He distinguished himself by his integrity as a senator, and by his wit as a writer against the corruptions of the court. Charles but her reign lasted only a few days. The II. delighted in his conversation, but could partisans of Mary became numerous, and she never prevail upon him to support his measures, catered London without opposition. In putting The following anceded, so strongly depicting to death Lady Jane and her husband, Lord his political incorruptibility, was narrated in a Dadley, she indicated that sungqianary and renever prevail upon aim to support ais measures. The following ancelote, so strongly depicting his political incorruptibility, was narrated in a small work published in 1784. "The bourough of flull, in the reign of Charles II. chose Autorw Marvell, a young gentleman of little or no fortune, and maintained him in London for the service of the public. His understanding, integrity, and spirit were dreadful to the then infamous administration. Persuaded that he would be theirs for properly asking, they sent his old schoolfellow, the Lord-Treasurer Danby, to renew acquaintance with him in his garret, At parting, the lord-treasurer, out of pure affection, slipped into his hand an order on the Treasury for $1000, and then went to his chariot. Marvell, looking at the paper, calls after the treasurer, 'My lord, I request another moment.' treasurer, by ford, I reduces another monters to They went up again to the garret, and Jack, the servant-boy, was called. 'Jack, child, what had I for dinner yesterday?' 'Don't you remember, sir? You had the little shoulder of mutton ber, sir? You had the little shoulderfol mutch that you ordered me to bring from the woman in the market. 'Very right, child; what have I for dinner to-day?' 'Dn't you know, sir, that you bid me lay by the blade-bone to broil?' 'Tis so, very right; child, go away. My lord, do you hear that?' Andrew Marvell's dinner is provided; there's your piece of paper. I want it not. I know the sort of kindness you intended. I live here to serve my constituents; the mi-nistry may seek men for their purpose; I am not one," The close of his political career was brought about, according to Mr. Dove, in the himself so obnoxious to the usual friends of a corrupt court, and to the heir presumptive, James, duke of York, that he was beset on all sides by powerful enemies, who even proceeded so far as to menace his life. Hence he was obliged to use great caution, to appear seldom in public, and, frequently to conceal the place of his abodo; but all his care proved ineffectual to nis aroug; our air nis care proven interectual to preserve him from their vengeance; for he died at the of fifty-eight years, not without strong suspicions (as his constitution was active and vigorous) of having suffered under the effect of poison." Although his fame as a wit, satirist, and poet, was considerable during his time, it is as a man of great political integrity that he is as a man or great position integrity that he is remembered. A complete edition of his works was published, with his life prefixed, in 1776. b. in Yorkshire, 1620; p. 1678. Mary I., mair's, queen of England, was the daughter of Henry Vill., by Catharine of Area-gon, his first wife. Her education was libral, and she acquired so great a knowledge of the Latin language as to multiple a translation of and the additional so great a knowledge of the Latin language as to undertake a translation of the paraphrase of Erasmus on St. John's guspel, which, however, she did not complete. During the life of her father she experienced many marks of his fierce temper; and the treatment which her mother had experienced vengeful temper which was soon displayed in a violent persecution of the Protestants; even Cranmer, to whom she is said to have been in-Oranner, to whom say is said to have been in-debted for her life, did not escape her bigotry and cruelty. In 1554 she married Philip of Spain, eldest son of Charles V., with whom she Spain, encess soil or charges v, with whom sing lived on indifferent terms. A disappointment, occasioned by a supposed miscarriage, and aggravated by the loss of Culais, produced a fever, of which she died in 15-58, and with her ended the domination of the papal power in

Empland. B. at Greenwich, 1516.
MARY II., queen of England, the wife of William III., was the daughter of James II. by Anne llyde, daughter of the earl of Clarendon. At the age of 15 she was married to Villiam, Prince of Orange, with whom she went to Eng-land, in 1689. The same year, Parliament having declared the crown yearnt by the abdication of James, conferred it upon William and Mary. She was of a meek disposition, and did not interfere in matters of government, except not interfere in matters of government, except when her husband was absent. (See William III.) She died, without issue, of the small-pox, in 100 £. B. 1002.

Many Severn, stateart, commonly called Mary queen of Seois, the daughter of James V, king of Seotland, by Marie of Leavine, daughter of the duke of Guise, was only cight days old when her lather died; on which she became heiress to the throne. Henry VIII. of England endeavoured to unite the two kingdoms, by a marriage between his son Edward doms, by a marriage occurrent is son leavarie and the infant queen of Scots; but his offer being rejected, he sent his tre ps into Scut-land, where they took and plandered Edin-burgh, but were soon obliged to return. In 1548, Mary was betrothed to Francis, dauphin of France, at which court she acquired those accomplishments which rendered her an object accomplishments which rendered her an object of universal admiration; and there, also, she inhibited these prejudices which proved the source of her misfortunes. In 155s the marriage was celebrated, and, by the direction of their father-in-law, Mary and her husband assumed the title of king and queen of England, on the supposed ground of the illegitimacy of Elizabeth, an art of villegalous, suitifies. of Elizabeth; an act of ridiculous ambition, which was afterwards fatal to Mary. In 1559 Henry II. died, and Francis became king of France; but, in less than two years, he left Mary a widow; on which she returned to her native country, after an absence of nearly thir-teen years, and, says Robertson, "a stranger to her subjects, without experience, without allies, and almost without a friend," Scotland was at that time a prey to function terian party, gooded to desperation by the flerce intolerance of the Roman Catholic elergy, car-ried the work of reformation to the extreme, by destroying abbeys, cathedrals, libraries, and oven the monuments of the dead. Such was treatment which her mother had experienced ried the work of reformation to the extreme, contributed much towards intereasing her dislike by destroying abboys, cathedrals, libraries, and to the alterations which he introduced into the church. During the reign of, the state of the kingdom at the landing of Mary, Edward, she could not be prevailed upon to join | who, the first Sunday after her arrival, ordered in communion with the Protestant divises; orn mass to be said in her chapel; an act which this account, that amiable prince was persuaded planting the sets proteined that may attempts towards to set aside his sisters from the succession, and to declare Lady June Grey his heiri. At his church should be freaded as a capital offuere. death, in 1853, that lady was proclaimed queen; Although she held several conferences with gious opinions. Several offers of marriage were made to Mary, who rejected them, and bestowed her hand on Henry, Lord Darnley, son of the earl of Lennox, a young nobleman of prepossessing appearance, but weak and impetuous in mind and temper, and mean and intemperate in his habits. This inauspicious marriage was mind and temporal in his habits. This inauspicious marriage was soon followed by alienation, and the enemies of both did their utmost to widen the breach. They persuaded Darnley that David Rizzio, an Italian musician, whom the queen had appointed her foreign secretary, had supplanted him in her affections. A conspiracy was formed, and one night, while the queen was at supper with the countess of Argyle, Darnley conducted his confederates to the royal apartment, where Rizzio was murdered in the presence of Mary, who was then advanced in presence of Mary, who was then advanced in pregnancy. The next favourite at the court of Scotland was James Hepburn, earl Bothwell, a man of considerable talents, but of unprincipled mind. By his arts he gained an ascendancy over the mind of Mary, who appointed him lieutenant of the Marches. In 1566 she was delivered of a son, afterwards James VI. of Scotland and I. of England. Darnley was soon afterwards seized with a strange distemper, whilst staying at his father's house at Glasgow. He returned to Edinburgh; but, instead of proceeding to Holyrood Palace, went to a solitary house, which was blown up ten days afterwards, the body of the king being found in the garden, without any marks of violence upon it. This deed occasioned universal horror, and as it was believed that Bothwell was its principal contriver, he was brought before the privy council, but, after a mock trial, was acquitted. His influence over Mary increasing, he laid aside the mask, and, in 1567, seized the queen, and carried her to the eastle of Dunbar, where, by entreaties and force, he prevailed on her to marry him. This is the great stain on the character of this ill-fate woman, which has called forth the condemnawoman, which has been defenders. A confederacy of the most powerful lords in the kingdom was formed against Mary and Bothwell; but, after a time, the queen abandoned the earl, and was taken first to Edinburgh, and hearl, and the eastle of Lochleven. The afterwards to the castle of Lochleven. The lords of the confederacy forced her to sign a renunciation of her crown in favour of her son, and he was accordingly crowned at Stirling. After this, the enemies of Mary, who had suffered Bothwell to quit the kingdom, caused different persons to be executed for being concerned in the king's murder. Mary, after nearly a year's confinement, escaped from her prison in the island of Lochleven, and raised a large army; but the regent Murray marching against her, the royal party was defeated. On this, Mary fled into England, and implored the protection of Elizabeth, who acted with great duplicity for some time, and at length declared that no assistance could be afforded her unless she subassistance could be afforded her unless she sub-mitted to a legal trial. After some difficulties, this was agreed to, and the cause was to be de-termined at York, by a commission, which finally removed to London, where it was de-clared that "nothing had been produced whereby the queen of England could conceive or take any arrill contino of the good sister for or take any eyil opinion of her good sister, for anything yet seen." Mary was, notwithstand-

Knox, during one of which she was bathed in ing, kept in close confinement. The duke of teurs before the reformer's fierce cloquence, Norfolk formed the design of marrying her, Mary could not be induced to change her rell. in which he was encouraged by several of the English nobility, and also by the regent Murray; but this being discovered by Elizabeth, the duke was sent to the Tower, whence he was not re-leased till he promised to renounce all corre-spondence with the queen of Scotland, but afterwards renowing his ambitious project, he was tried and executed. After a long confinement at Coventry, Mary was removed to Fotheringay Castle, where she was to undergo the mock formality of a trial, on the charge of fomenting conspiracies against Elizabeth. When brought before the commissioners, she dis-claimed their authority and asserted her innocence; but though no proof appeared of the cence; but though no proof appeared of the charges, sho was declared guilty of conspiring against the life of Bizabeth. Mary received the tidings with complacency, being wearied by her unparalleled persecutions. Many foreign powers interested themselves in her behalf, and her son James endearoured to save her life, but in vain. She was beheaded in the eastle of Pathelia Charles and Charles and the castle of in vain. Sine was beneauer in the eastie of Fotheringay, February 8, 1587, after praying to God to forgive all who had thirsted for her blood. Thus fell Mary Stuart, a princess of uncommon beauty and accomplishments, as well as misfortunes. Her remains were intered in Paterborough Cathedral, whence they were removed by her son, after he had ascended the Eurlish throug and drougstaff in Wasterder. the English throne, and deposited in Westminster Abbey. B. 1542.

Mary, queen of Hungary, was sister to the emperor Charles V., and married, in 1521, Louis, king of Hungary, who soon after was killed at the battle of Mohatz. His widow was appointed governor of the Low Countries in 1531, and in that station behaved with great courage and prudence. She headed the troops in several actions, and was so fond of hunting as to be called Diana, and the Huntress. She favoured the Protestants, and had a taste for literature. Between her and Henry II., king of France, there was a great animosity, and she committed there was a great annussing and she committed considerable ravages in the French provinces. Henry, on his part, invaded Flanders, and do-stroyed the palace of Mary, who, in return, carried devastation into Picardy. The Spanish soldiers called her the mother of the camp. She resigned the government in 1855. D. 1558.

Many of England was daughter of Henry
VII., and married Louis XII. in 1814. Becoming a widow in the following year, she was united to the duke of Sulfolk. B. 1497; p. 1534.

united to the diffe of Sulloik, B. 1897; B. 1898. Marx, an Anglo-Norman pootess in the 18th century, was born in France, but resided chiefly in England. She was the authoress of a collection of fables, entitled "Ysopet" (the Little Esop). M. Legrand d'Aussy published her fables in modern French prose.

MASACCIO, Thomas, ma-sa'-che-o, a celebrated Italian painter, was accounted the principal artist of the second age of modern art, from its revival under Cimabue. Fuseli says of him, "Masaccio was a genius, and the head of an epoch in the art. He may be considered as an epoce in the art. He may be considered as the precursor of Raffield; who imitated his frinciples, and sometimes transcribed his frinciples, and sometimes transcribed his figures." His most perfect works are the frescoss of So Pietro del Carmine, at Florence, where vigour of conception, truth and vivreely of expression, are supported by surprising harmonic delivers.

mony of colour. B. about 1401; D. about 1420. MASANIELLO, ma'-san-e-el'-o, a fisherman of Naples, whose real name was Tomaso Aniello, and who, in 1647, headed an insurrection of his countrymen, besieged the vicercy, the duke of Arcos, in his palace, and compelled him to capitulate. During seven days, Masaniello was master of Naples; but, at the end of that time, was assassinated by some emissaries of the vicewas assassinated by some clinical rest of the drama-roy, in a riot. His story has been often drama-tized, and he forms the hero of two operas, entitled "Masaniello," and "The Dumb Giri of Fortici." n. 1623; n. 1647. Mascagni, Paul, mas-kaw-ye, a celebrated

Italian anatomist, who was professor at Siena, Pisa, and Florence, and was elected an asso-ciate of the College of France. He completed the fine collection of anatomical preparations contained in the Museum of Florence. Several learned works were produced by him; among the rest, "Universal Anatomy," which appeared after his death, at Pisa, illustrated by many fine aner ins ceath, at risa, inistrated by finity meeter contravings, and which is one of the most complete and valuable works of its class. n. in Tuscany, 1752; n. 1815.

Mascaron, Julius, snaw-kärvarng', an eminent French ceelesiastic, entered among the called to court, to preach before Louis XIV.; and successively became bishop of Tulle and Agen. At the latter place he founded an hospital. A collection of his "Funeral Orations" was published, among which the most admired are those on Marshal Turenne, the Duke of Beaufort, and the Chancellor Seguier. Versailles, 1634; p. 1703.

MASCHERONI, Lorenzo, mas'-kui-ro'-ne, an Italian mathematician, who published notes on the "Integral Calculus" of Euler, and assisted in the experiments performed by the Institute of Bologna, with a view of proving the figure of the earth by the descent of bodies. The invention, however, which has rendered his name conspicuous, was his celebrated Geometria del compasse, "the compass geometry." n. at Ber-gamo, 1759; n. at Paris, 1800.

Masenius, or Masen, James, mas-ou'-e-us, a Jesuit, who wrote a Latin poem, called "Sarocthea, or the Fall of Man;" which Lauder brought into notice by pretending that Milton was indebted to it for part of his "Paradise Lost." He was also the author of "The Art of Poetry," Palmstra Styli Romani," "The Lives of Charles V. and Ferdinand," "Notes on the Annals of Trèves," &c. B. 1606; D. 1681.

Masares, Francis, ma-sair, an eminent Eng-lish mathematician, who was descended from an old French family. He was educated at Cambridge, and adopted the law as his profession. After spending some years in America as attorney-general for Camada, he returned to Lingland in 1773, and afterwards became cursitor-baron of the Exchequer, deputy-recorder of London, &c. He was not only an able maof London, &c. He was not only an able ma-thematician, but a most munificent pattron of the science. At his own expense, he reprinted many valuable works relating thereto. His own works were, "Elements of Plane Trigono-metry," "Principles of the Doctrino of Life Annuties," and an "... digs to Friend's 'Principles of Algebra," ... tween the years "Principles of Despetition of Principles of the Doctrino of Life 'Principles of Algebra's tween the years 1791 and 1807 he published, at his own expense, a collection of works on Logarithms, in 6 large volumes, entitled, "Scriptores Logarithmici." At a later period, he produced reprints of the optical treatises of James Gregory, Descartes, Huygens, Barrow, and Halley. n. in London. 1731; D. at Reigate, 1824.
MASHAM, Mrs. Abigail, mash-am, the favourite of Queen Aune, and cousin of the duchess of Marlborough, who placed her in the queen's service as waiting-maid. She subsequently supplanted the duchess, and obtained a powerful influence over the queen. Harley, after-wards earl of Oxford, cutered into an alliance with her, and the pair, during some time, virtually ruled at court. Her husband, Mr. Masham, was raised to the peerage, and both took a large share in the secret negotiation with France for placing the Pretender on the English throne. After the death of the queen, she retired into private life, p. 1734.

Mastes, Andrew, ma-si'-us, a learned gram marian, who became counsellor to the duke of marian, who became counsellor to the duke of Cleves. His principal works are, "A Syriac Lexicon and Granman," and "A Commentary on the Book of Joshua," n. 1516; n. 1573. MASKELYNY, Rev. Nevil, mais-ke-line, an eminent English astronomer, was educated at Cambridge, and, in 1753, took orders, his becoming acquainted with Bradley, the astro-ponce assisted him in his solutific bastronent French ceclesiastic, entereu annous projects of the Oratory; and soon became so becoming acquainted with Bradley, the astro-popular a preacher, that multitudes througed propagation of the propagatio wards, he became astronomer royal, and, in 1767, commenced the publication of the world-famous "Nautical Almanack." In 1790 he gave to the world some of the results of his official labours at the Greenwich Observatory, in a work entitled "A Standard Catalogue of Stars." B. in London, 1732; D. 1811.

Mason, William, mail-son, an English poet MASON, William, materona, an English poet and divine, who, in 17ts, published a poem entitled "Isis," which being considered as an attack on the university of Oxford, was answered by Mr. Warton in another, called "The Triumphs of Isis." In 1754 Mason entered into orders, was appointed chaplain to the king, and presented to the living of Aston, in Yorkshire, He also obtained the precentorship of York cathedral, which leading his mind to church music, he composed a book on that subject. music, he composed a book on that subject. Gray, the pool, appointed him one of his executors; and Mason wrote the life, and published the letters, of his friend. He also composed the critiquh for Gray's monument in Westminster Abbey. In the American war, Mr. Mason showed himself a warm defender of the rebels, as they were termed; for which he was struck out of the list of royal chaplains. The horrors of the French revolution are said to have caused an entire change in his political opinions. His "Elfrida" and "Caractaeus," two dramas on hardina and caracterist, two drams on the Greek model, are extermed the best of his works. He also wrote a poem, entitled "The English Garden," and translated into English verse Du Fresnoy's "Art of Painting," to which Sir Jushua Reynolds added valuable notes. D. 1725; p. 1797. Masow, Sir John, an eminent English states-mason, Sir John, an eminent English action man, who, becoming a favourtie with Henry VIII., was employed in several embassies, and made a member of the prity council. It afterwards served Edward VI., and contrived to hold his places under Mary. Queen Elizabeth made him treasurer of her chamber, and he was chosen-chanceller of the puiscester of Oxford His ohancellor of the university of Oxford. His favourite maxim was, "Do, and say nothir-" B. at Abingdon, Borks, about 1500; D. 1566.

x, John, a dissenting minister, born as

Dummow, Essex, was the author of an excellent little volume of ethies, entitled "Self-knowledge," of which there have been numerous editions; he also wrote "Practical Discourses for the use of Families," "An Essay on Election," two "Essays on the Power of Poetical and Prosate Numbers," "Christian Morals," I. 176; p. 1763.

MASQUE DE FER, mask-de(c)-fair, or the "Iron Mask," the name of an unknown person in France, who was conveyed in the most are range, who was conveyed in the most severet manner to the castle of Pignerol in 1662, whence he was transferred to the isles St. Margaret in 1686. He was a man taller St. Marcaret in 1689. He was a man taller than ordinary, and extremely well made. His accomplishments were evidently great, and he had a fine taste for music. He always wore a mask, according to some, of velvet, while others assert it to have been of steed, furnished with springs, which was so constructed as to allow him free liberty to eat and drink. His keepers treated him with the greatest respect. At Pignerol he was intrusted to the charge of an officer named St. Mars, on whose appointment as lieutenant of the isles, this unknown personage accompanied him, as he finally did to the Bastille, where he died in 1703, and was buried under the name of Marchiali. Two gentlemen, who were prisoners in the room over him, contrived to hold some conversation with him by means of the chimney, and found that he was a man of general learn ing; but he informed them that a discovery of his name and rank would be death both to him and them. Numerous conjectures have been formed, and dissertations written, on this histoformed, and dissertations written on that insto-rical subject, which, nevertheless, still remains in impenetrable obscurity. It has been conjec-tured that he might have been the count de Vermandois, son of the duchess de la Vallière, thus imprisoned for having given a blow to the Dauphin; or a twin-brother of Louis XIV, so disposed of to prevent rivalry between the two brothers. This last opinion is that of Voltaire, and appears to derive some support from the Memoirs published by the Duke de Richelieu in 1790. Massena, André, mas'-se-nu, prince of Ess-ling, duke of Rivoli, and marshal of France, ing, dake of myol, and mashad of rance, joined a French regiment at an early age, and distinguished himself in the first wars of the Revolution. In 1795 he was promoted to the rank of general of division, and bore a glorious part in the Italian campaigns of Bonaparte. In 1798 he was placed at the head of the army charged to establish the republican government in the Papal States; but both his own soldiers and the inhabitants of the subjected states complaining of his insatiable avarice, he was compelled to resign his command. He remained unemployed until the following year, when he was given the command of the armies of the Danube and Switzerland, and defeated the Russians at the battle of Zurich; thus saving France from invasion. He was next sent to defend Genoa from the attacks of an Austrian army and the English fleet. In 1804 he was nominated marshal of France and duke of Rivoli, and in the following year received the command-in-chief of the army of Italy, when he succeeded in driving the archduke Charles before him, and effecting a junction with Napoleon. In 1806 he accompanied Joseph Bonaparte to Naples; and, by defeating the insurgent Calabrians, enabled Joseph to take possession of the throne. He commanded the fifth corps in Austria in 1809. commanded the inth corps in Austria in 1899, and decided the victory at Essling, for which Napoleon created him prince of Essling. He was charged, in 1810, with the task of diviring the duke of Wellington out of Portugal, but met a signal failure before the lines of Torres Vedras; and, after a masterly retreat into Spain, he was recalled in 1812. Ill-health prevented his taking part in the Russian campaign; and, in 1813, while commanding a division at Toulon, he declared his adhesion to the Bourbons. After the Hundred Days, he became commanderin-chief of the National Guard of Paris. He was chosen a member of the council of war before which Noy was arraigned, but formed one of the number who pronounced the court to be incompetent. This remarkable general, who was called by Napoleon "the spoilt child of Victory," was one of the ablest tacticians among Napo leon's subordinates; but although he possessed in the field all the best qualities of a commander, his character was disgraced by an avarice which was apparently without limit. Disraeli appears anxious to establish the fact that Masséna was a Jew. In his "Coningsby" he says, "several of a Jew. In his "Coningsoy" he says, "several or the French marshals, and the most famous— Massena, for example, was a Hebrew: his real name was Manassch." p. at Nice, 1758; p. 1817.

name was Manassch." n. at Nice, 1758; n. 1817.

Massillon, Jean Baptiste, was'-see-yawng,
a famous French prelate, who at the age of 18 entered the congregation of the Oratory. He acquired a superiority over all the preachers of his time; and Louis XIV. once said to him, "Father, when I hear other preachers, I go away much pleased with them; but when I hear away much gloesed wint talen; out when I near you, I go away much displessed with myself! In 1717 he was applied hishop of Cdfmont; and, in 1710, admitted a member of the French Academy. His works were printed in 12 vols, in 1745. B. at Hisros, Provence, 1063; D. 1742. Basismous, Philip, mad-in-jon, a celebrated English dramatic author, was the son of one of the carl of Pembroke's retainers, and was sent to the university of Oxford. Having lost his patron's favour, for what reason is uncertain, he quitted the university without a degree, and went to London in 1600, where he enand went to London in 1800, where he engaged in dramatic composition until his death. At the outset he appears to have assisted others in writing plays, but, in 1822, produced an entire play of his own—"The Virgin Martyr." Some of the best of his remaining extant plays are, "A New Way to pay Old Debts," the "Maid of Honour," the "Patal Dowry," the "City Madam," and the "Bashful Lover." As Isalisbury, 1854; p. 1860.

Massox, David, massom, an English littletatur, who, after completing his education at the university of Edinburgh, want to London, and devoted himself to literature, and was caugated devoted himself to literature, and was engaged

Rabelais," the "Dignity of Labour," "Modern pre-Raphaelitism," Shekspeare, Göthe, &c. In 1859 he undertook the editorship of "Macmillan's Magazine," n. at Aberdeen, 1822.

MASTRES, Thomas, mas'-ters, a poet, was born at Cotes, in Glowestershire, and educated at Winchester and New College, Oxford. He was the author of various Greek poems and oratious; assisted Lord Herbert of Cherbury in his "Life of Henry VIII.;" and had a share in writing his "Tractatus de Veritate." D. 1643.

MATHER, Cotton, mai'-ther, an eminent

Mattheson

American divine, became assistant to his father, also a clergyman, and distinguished himself by his piety and learning. In 1710, the university of Glasgow conferred on him the degree of D.D., and in 1714, he was chosen a member of the Rayal Society of London. He wrote a number of books; among which are a "Beelestatical History of New Encland," "The Curistian Philosopher," "The Wonders and Curistian Philosopher," and the word of the The Curristian Philosopher," "The Wonders of the Invisible World, being an Account of the Trials of several Withees study executed in New England," &c. In this last work, he showed an astonishing degree of credulity. n. at Boston, 1983; n. 1728.

MATREW, Rev. Theobald, ma'-thu, the "Apostle of Temperance," was the son of an illegi-timate member of the Llandaff family, and was educated for the Roman Catholic priesthood, at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth. After being appointed missionary at Cork, he acquired the greatest respect and consideration from all classes, and established religious societies for visiting the sick and poor. At a later period, he became president of a temperance association at Cork. He then devoted himself to the task of inducing spirit-drinkers to "take the pledge" of abstinence; and in a few months, converted no less than 160,000 in Cork alone. He afterwards made a progress through Ireland, visited Dublin, Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, and London, where the same success greeted his philanthropic efforts. A striking proof that he disregarded his temporal interests in the cause he had espoused, was afforded by the fact that a large distillery, owned by his brother, and from which he himself drew almost his whole income, was shut up in consequence of his crusade against alcoholic liquids. In recognition of his against abcolon indust. The ecogonic of 3001, per annum. B. in Timperary, 1790; D. 1856.

MATELEWS, Charles, a concelian of transcendant ability, and one who was long regarded as the master-mind of the minic art, was the son of a bookseller in the Strand, London, who had placed him in Merchant Taylors' School, and apprenticed him to learn his own business. The stage, however, proving more attractive to young Mathews than the shop of his father, the young Mathews than the shop of his father, the latter gave him twenty guines and his inden-tures, with permission to follow the bent of his inclinations; and a promise of twenty eginess more if he would abundon histriconies, and "turn to an honest calling." He rambled about with provincial companies for a time; but the great versatility of talent he possessed soon placed him at the top of his profession, and rendered him a general favourite with the public. After a long career of successful performances, his metropolitan engagement grew irksome, from managerial interference and pro-fossional rivalries, and he determined to "set up for himself," and to depend solely on his own exertions. For sixteen years previous to his death, he was accustomed to entertain whole audiences by his single efforts, in a species of entertainment entitled "Mathews at Home;" entertainment entitled "Mathlews at Home," him, called "The Two Misers," at Windsor and never were admiring crowds more highly Castle. B. at Antwerp, 1469; p. 1509. delighted than in witnessing the wivid portraits, MATTERSON, John, mad-the-son, an ominent which he drew. The "At Homes" of Mathlews muscal composer and performer, was a native were not only well received throughout Great of Hamburgh, and of so precedous taient, that Britain and Ircland, but also in America, where some of his most felicitous portraitures were compositions of his own at the organ. He comseled. While on his passage from that cocuntry he was taken ill, and on arriving at Li- and was always present at the performance of the country he was taken ill, and on arriving at Li- and was always present at the performance of the country he was taken ill, and on arriving at Li- and was always present at the performance of the country he was taken ill, and on arriving at Li- and was always present at the performance of the country he was taken ill, and on arriving at Li- and was always present at the performance of the country he was taken ill, and on arriving at Li- and was always present at the performance of the country he was taken ill, and the performance of the country he was taken ill, and the performance of the country he was the company of the country he was taken ill, and the performance of the country he was a native were not only well as the performance of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country he was a native were not only well as a country of the country of the country of the coun on his birthday, June 28th, 1835. B. 1776. Mathews was twice married, but had one child only, Charles Mathews the younger, also a famous actor of genteel comedy, and for some years lessee of the Lyceum Theatre, London.

MATTHAS CONVINUS, mat-thi-us kor'-ri-ms, called the Great, king of Hungary and Bohemia, was the son of John Hunniades. The enemies of his father confined him in prison in Bohemia; but, on regaining ins marely, we need cleeted king of Huncary, in 1458, when only inferen years of age. His election, however, was opposed by many of the Huncarian lords, who is the first of Bohemia; but, on regaining his liberty, he was Turks, profiting by these divisions, invaded the country, but were expelled by Matthias, who compelled Frederick to yield to him the crown of St. Stephen, of which he had obtained pos-session. The war was afterwards renewed, and Matthias, overrunning Austria, took Vienna and Neustadi: on which the emperor was obliged to Rensiant; in which includes a consider we make a peace, in 1487. Matthias reformed many abuses, particularly with respect to duels and lawsuits, and was preparing an expedition against the Turks, when he died of an apoplexy, in 1490. B. 1443.

Matignon, Jacques de, ma'-fren-yawng, prince of Montague, and count of Thorieni, a famous general of France. He displayed great courage general of France. The displayed great contract when young, in several battles, and in 1572 commanded the royal army in Normandy. In 1570 he was made a marshal of France, and assisted as constable at the coronation of Henry

IV. B. 1825; b. 1897.

MATLEDA, or MAUD, mettil'-da, the daughter of Henry I., king of England, and wife of Henry V., emparer of Germany, was nominated by her lather, in 1135, successor to the English throne; but, in her absence, Stephen, the nephew of Henry, usurped the title. Ar-riving in England with a large army, in 1139, riving in Enviand with a large army, in 1139, she defeated Stephen, and was acknowledged queen by a parliament held in 1141. Stephen afterwards defeated the empress; on which the people declared for him, and Mattlea was obliged to leave the kingdom. On the death of the emperor, she murried Geoffrey Plantag-net, earl of Aujon, by whom she had a son, afterwards Henry II. of England. n. 1160; p. 1167.

Mattlea Carolians, queen of Denmark, the daughter of Frederick Louis, Prince of Welley and father of George III., was married at the age of fifteen to Christian VII., king of Denmark, but, having been accused of an in-

Denmark; but, having been accused of an in-trigue with the minister, Struensce, was divorced and sent into exile. B. 1751; D. at Zell, Hanover, 1775.

MATSYS, Quintin, mat'-sis, an eminent painter, of the Dutch school, is stated to have been brought up as a blacksmith, which trade he abandoned on falling in love with a young lady, to obtain whose hand he studied painting, and became an excellent artist. A "Descent from the Cross," in the cathedral of Antwern, is his masterpiece, and there is a celebrated picture by lim, called "The Two Misors," at Windsor Castle. B. at Antwerp, 1460; p. 1529.

Matthew Cantacuzenus

Maurice of Nassau

to the pursuit of his favourite science, producing operas, authems, and treatises on music, he held the office of secretary to the English resident in Hamburgh for several years, and was intrusted with the conduct of various important negotiations. B. 1681; D. 1764.

MATTHEW CANTACUZENUS, kan-ta-ku-se-nus, the son of John, emperor of the East, and his associate in the empire in 1347. John abdicated the throne some time after, on which Matthew remained emperor, with John Palmologus I. These princes at length disagreed, and had re-course to arms. A battle was fought between them in Thrace, and Matthew being taken prisoner, was compelled to renounce the throne to his rival. He then retired to the monastery of Mount Athos, where he composed commentaries on the Song of Solomon.

MATTHEW of Westminster, an English monk and historian of the 14th century, who wrote a chronicle entitled "The Flowers of History." published at London, in 1567, in which he commences with the creation of the world; but the most valuable portion is that which he devotes to the chronicle of English events from the Conquest to the end of Edward I.'s reign. A translation of the work has been published in translation of the work has been published in Bohn's "Antiquarian Library." Matthews, Thomas, math-thews, an English admiral, who commanded in the Mediterranean in 1711, and fought an obstinate but indecisive battle off Toulon, with the combined fleets. Owing to his not being supported by Lestock, his second in command, Admiral Matthews falled to gain a complete victory; and yet for this he was dismissed the service, and Lestock was acquitted. He retired to his estate in Glamorganshire, and died there, 1751.

MATTHEAS, math-thi-as, emperor of Germany, was the son of Maximilian 11, and succeeded his brother, Rodolph 11., in 1612. The empire was then at war with the Turks, with whom Matthias concluded a peace in 1615; but the Matthias concluded a peace in 1615; but the war was renewed in 1618, and continued during thirty years. p. 1567; d. at Vienna, 1010.

Matthiat years, p. 1567; d. at Vienna, 1010.

Matthiat year, and attended Louis XIII. to the siego of Montauban. He wrote "A History of Memorable Events in the Reign of Henry the Great," the history of the death of that monarch, "The History of St. Louis," "The History of France, from Francis I, to Louis XIII." p. 1563; p. 1621.

Mayurun, Rey, Charles Robert, with the control of the state of the side of the s

MATURIN, Rev. Charles Robert, mat-u-rin, an Introduct, now charles notores, mate-not, mit in this divine, who produced several successful novels, and, in 1816, brought out a tragedy, cutiled "Betram," in Druy-lane Theatre. B. in Ireland, 1782; p. 1825.

Marx, Matthew, mol-te, an eminent physician, who took his doctor's degree at Leyden, and in 1784 by cutiled is Euclidean 1874.

and, in 1740, settled in England. In 1750 he commenced a periodical work, printed at the Hague, called "Le Journal Britannique," giving an account of the principal productions of the English press. In 1758 he was chosen fellow of the Royal Society, to which, in 1765, he became secretary. He also rose to be librarian of the British Museum. The life prefixed to the "Memoirs of the Earl of Chesteriick!," and many smaller works, were written by him.

B. near Utreeht, 1718; D. 1776.

MAXY, Paul Henry, son of the preceding, became chaplain to Lord Stormont, ambassador

the British Museum, and, in 1779, a secretary of the Royal Society. In 1782 he commenced a literary review, which was continued till 1786, In 1784 when there were great divisions in the literal property of the secretary of the Royal Society, occasioned by the dismissal of Dr. Hutton from the post of foreign secretary, Maty resigned his place. B. 1745; D. 1787.

MAUPERTUIS, Peter Louis Marcau de, mo'-pairt-we, a celebrated French philosopher, was some time in the military service, which he quitted, and devoted himself to scientific purquitzed, and devoted nimser to scientale pur-suits. In 1723 he became a member of the French Academy, and, about four years after, was chosen a member of the Royal Society of London. In 1736 he was sent, with other academicians, to the north, to determine the figure of the earth, which service they performed with perfect success. At the invitation of the Frince of Prussia, afterwards Frederick the Great, he went to Berlin in 1740, and was ap-ointed president and director of the Academy.

e accompanied that king in his campaigns against the Austrians; but exposing himself too much at the battle of Molwitz, he was made too much at the dutile of MONTIZ, he was made prisoner, and sent to Vienna, where he was well received by the emperor. He was soon permitted to return to Berlin, after receiving several marks of the imperial favour. He was of a vain and irritable temper, and had a dispute with Kenig, and another with Voltaire, who exerted his satirient lelents against him. This, however was not much to the credit of the however, was not much to the credit of the poet, who had before paid the highest compliments to Mannertuis, and from whom he had ments to Manpertus, and from whom he had received no injury to justify his wanton attacks; Frederick, however, ordered the satire to be burnt by the executioner; upon which Voltaire quitted Berlin. His works are.-"The Figure quitted Berlin. His works are,—"The Figure of the Earth determined," "The Measurement of a Degree of Meridian," "Discourse on the Figure of the Stars," "Elements of Geography," "Nautheal Astronomy," "Elements of Astronomy," "Redictions on the Origin of Languages," &c. n. at St. Milo, 1093; p. 1769.

MAUREPAS, Jean Frédéric Phelippeaux, Count de, mor'pa, a French statesman, who, at an early age, was made secretary of state. In 1725 he was made superintendent of the marine, and, in 1738, minister of state. By the intrigues Madame de Pompadour, he was exiled to Bourges in 1749. He was not recalled till 1774, when Louis XVI. intrusted the public affairs to his management. He entirely remodelled the marine department, and was a liberal encon-rager of the sciences. His memoirs, by himself, are curious, but carelessly written; they were printed at Paris in 1792. B. 1701; D. 1781.

MATRICE OF NASSAU, Prince of Orange, mor-ice, was the son of William the Silent; after whose death, in 1584, he governed the Low Countries, being then only eighteen years and, in the same year, compelled the Spaniards to abandon the Low Countries. In 1600 he was forced to raise the siege of Dunkirk, but he soon afterwards obtained a great victory over Albert near Nieuport. This was came chaplain to Lord Storment, ambassador tory over Albert near Nieupert. This was at Paris, and afterwards one of the librarians of followed by numerous conquests, In 1619,

THE DICTIONARY

Maurice of Saxony

Maxentius

aiming at the sovereignty of Holland, he was opposed by the virtuous Barneveldt, who was sent to the scaffold for resisting the ambition of Maurice. He was one of the greatest captains Maurice. He was one of the greatest captumes of his age, but his cruelty to those who opposed his aspirations to absolute power has east a stain upon his memory. B. 1567; D. 1625.

MAURICE OF SAXONY. (See SAXE, Marshall.)

MAURICE, Thomas, a learned Oriental scholar and historian, was educated by Dr. Parr, and at St. John's and University Colleges, Oxford; and distinguished himself as a writer. In 1791, he published the first two volumes of his "Indian was completed in a third volume, in 1709. In 1802, he produced the first volume of the "Mo-dern History of Hindostan;" and in 1804 the second volume. Besides the works above mentioned, Mr. Maurice wrote "Poems," "Sermons," his own "Memoirs," &c. p. at Hertford about 1754; p. 182

Rev. Frederic Denison, a modern MAURICE. English divine, regarded as the chief of the "Broad Church" party, was son of a Unitarian elergyman, and was sent to the university of Cambridge, where, although he did not take a degree, he passed his examinations with considerable distinction. After leaving Cambridge, he went to London, and was employed to write for the "Athenaum" upon its being started by Mr. Silk Buckingham. He likewise produced, at the same period, a novel, entitled "Eastace Conway." His religious views next undergoing considerable modification, he went to Oxford, took his degree there, and became a clergyman of the Church of England. His orthodoxy on many doctrinal points has been brought into question, but by every section of Moral and Metaphysical Philosophy to the "Encyclopædia Britannica." He was one of the promoters of the Christian Socialist move-College, an institution at which instruction is given at nominal charges, to those who are desirous of self-improvement. n. 1805.

MAURUS, Terentianus, maw'-rus, a Latin poet and grammarian, who flourished under Trajan, and is alluded to with respect by St. Augustine. The only work by him which has survived, is a

The only work by him which has survived, is a dissortation on the Art of Poetry, MATER, Jean Siffenh, Cardinal, mort, e. a distinguished French crater, who, after pursaning his theological studies at Avignan, went to Paris in his 18th year, to gain a livelihood by the exercise of his t-lents. His first works attracted considerable attention; but, being re-solved to devote himself to pulpit elequence, he took orders, and having projuced, in 1774, an clogy on Fénélon, was nominated a vienran clogy on relation, was communed a vicer-general. He was cleeted a mamber of the Academy in 1785, and was sent four years sub-sequently to the States-general as a deputy of the clergy. He took a prominent part in the debates upon every great question, whether of finance, ecclesi stied affirs, or general administration.

A partisan of the aristocracy, his cloquence was constantly brought to bear against Mirabeau, whose most formidable antagonist he became. whose most formidable antagonist he became, Upon the closing of the National Assembly, he left France, and went to Italy, when Pope Pins VI. nominated him cardinal, and bishop of MonvI. nominated and caronia, and issuited to return to France, and from that period he became the devoted servant of Napoleon. The latter made him archbishop of Paris in 1810, a dignity ho retained until the fall of his master, in defiance of the pope's commands to the contrary. events of the year 1814 compelled him to again events of the year 1312 compensed that to again seek a refuge in Italy; where upon the pape, for his former disobedience, imprisoned him for some mouths. Cardinal Maury was an acute some months. Cardinal analy was an acque to logician and fluent orator, but was far from possessing the energy and cloquence of Mirabeau. As a divine, his habits were not a model beau. As a divine, his manus were not a moner for imitation. An edition of his works was published at Paris in 1827, under the title of "Select Works of Cardinal Maury." B. in

France, 1716; p. at Rome, 1817.

MAURY, Matthew, a distinguished American hydrographer and astronomer, who, at the age of nineteen, entered the United States navy as of inhereen, interea are times causes may us midshipman, and made a voyage round the world, which lasted four years. After his return, he passed his examination, and was appointed, with the grade of lieutenant, to the Zoda mits. Subsequently, he was charged with the astronomical department of an expedition dispatched to the South Sea. He was next placed at the to the South Sea. He was next placed at the head of the hydrographical department of the United States Naval Board. In this last posi-tion he constructed his "Wind and Current Charts," a work deduced from a great number of nautical journals and logs, and of the highest utility to seamen. Of a similarly excellent character is his work cutified "The Physical Geography of the Sen," which has been transbrought and question, the by every section of character is his were control. The he clergy his normal and inclined and the has Goography of the Sen," which has been frans-been freely admitted. He wrote largely on thee-logical matters, and contributed treaties on the Civil War of 1816 [5, he held a commission as captain in the naval service of the Confedeas capatain in the haves ever the Confederate States. n. in Viginin, 1846.

Mayos, Rev. William, LL.D., mai-zor, anatico of Abordeenshire, who went to England early in life, and after acting as assistant in a school the promotors of the Christian Socialist morement, which had for its object the abidition of Aberdenshire, who went to England early of the system of competitive labour, and the in life, and after acting as assistant in a school seoclation of the working classes into small at Burden, established thinself as the master of communities, which should undertake work in an ecademy at Woodstock, where he gained the common, and drivide the proceeds. He is the larour and patronage of the Duke of Marifounder and principal of the Working Men's College as institution of which however. iavour and patronage of the Duke of Mari-borough, entered into holy orders, and was presented to the vicerage of Hurley, Berkshire, It is, however, as an author and compiler of useful books that Dr. Mavor will be chiefly remembered. Among his literary labours are a "Universal History," in 25 small volumes, a colle-tion of "Voyages and Travels," also in 25 vols.; "The British Tourist," 6 vols.; "The Modern Traveller," 4 vols.; Histories of Greece, Rome and England. Specifier and Class Bucks. Rome, and England; Spelling and Class Books; Miscellanies in Prose and Verse; and many others. n. 1758; D. 1837.

others. n. 1738; n. 1837.
MAWE, Joseph, state, an eminent mineralogist and conchologist, who travelled in various parts of South America, and published numerous works on the subject of his researches. Among them are, "Travels in the Interior of Brazil," a "Treatise on Diamonds and Precious St.nes," "Familiar Lossons on Mineralogy and Geology," and "The Linnean System of Conchology," and "The Mineralogy of Derbyshire." about 1235. p. 1839 logy," and "The Mineralogy of Derbyshure.

D. about 1755; p. 1829.

MAXENTIUS, Marcus Aurelius Valerius, mileuna file son of he-us. Roman emperor, was the son of

Waximianna

Maxwell

Maximianus Hercules, and declared himself hand in 1689. He was afterwards governor of emperor in 306. He was opposed by Galerius Maximianus, who was defeated, and slew himself. Maxentius then marched into Africa, where he rendered himself odious by his cruelties. Constantine afterwards defeated him in Italy, and he was drowned in crossing the Tiber, 312.

MAXIMLENUS, Marcus Aurelius Valerius, māx-im-ai'-nus, a Roman emperor, who, from being a common soldier, was associated in the government by Diocletian, in 286. He distin-guished himself by his military skill and bravery against the barbarians, and defeated Aurelius Julius, who had assumed the imperial title in Africa. When Diocletian abdicated the cross, in 305, he compelled Maximianus, much against in oo, he competed Maximanus, much against his will, to do the same; but, about a year after-wards, he resumed the dignity, and opposed his son, Maxentius. The troops, however, mutinied against Maximianus, who iled into Gaul, where he was put to death by order of Constantine. 310.

MAXIMIANUS, Galerius Valerius, emperor of Rome, was originally a shepherd in Dacia, afterwards a soldier, and raised to the imperial dignity by Diocletian, who also gave him his daughter in marriage. He conquered the Goths and Dalmatians, but was defeated by the Persins, over whom he afterwards gained a com-plete victory. In 305 he induced Diocletian to abdicate the throne; but his cruelty soon rendered him odious to the Romans, who raised Maxentins to the throne. He was a bitter persecutor to the Christians, whose god he implored section to the christians, whose got he implored for relief in his last illness, after vainly seeking aid from the heathen deities. n. 311.

MARKITLIAN I., max-i-mil-gan, emperor of Germany, was son of Frederick III., and was created king of the Romans in 1486. Upon the death of his father, in 1493, he became emperor. He engaged in several wars with France, in most of which he was successful. Forming the design of making himself pope, he, to further his purpose, assumed the ancient title of the Roman emperors, Pontifex Maximus, and endeavoured to prevail upon Julius II. to admit him as his coadjutor. He united with England against France, and served under Henry VIII. in 1513. He wrote some poems, and the Me-moirs of his own life. B. 1459; D. 1519.

MAXIMILIAN II., emperor of Germany, the son of the emperor Ferdinand I., was elected king of the Romans in 1562. He was chosen king of Hungary and Bohemia, and succeeded his father in 1564. He was a tolerant ruler and and sciences. n. 1527; n. at Ratisbon, 1576.

MAXIMICIAN, duke of Bavaria, in the 17th century, was named, on account of his courage and success, the Defender of Germany, and, for his singular prudence, he acquired the name of Solomon. He zealously opposed the Protestants, and was considered as one of the principal supporters of the Catholic religion. In 1620 he gained the battle of Prague, against Frederick, prince palatine, who had been elected king of Bohemia. For these services Maximilian was named an elector of the empire. B. 1581; D. 1651.

MAXMILIAN ELLANUEL, e-mān'-u-ei, elector of Bavaria, rendered groat service to the emperor Leopold. He signalized himself at the siege of Neuheusel, in 1695; at that of Buda, in 1888; and, the year following, in the buttle of deed to the English at Solway Moss. After Mohatz. He commanded, about this time, the the death of James V. he was ransonned, and army of Hongary, and took Belgrade, sword in returned to his native country, where he in 1883

the Low Countries; but, taking part with France in the war of the Spanish succession, was put under the ban of the empire, and, in 1706, deprived of his states regaining them at the general peace. B. 1662; D. at Munich, 1726.

MANIMILIAN JOSEPH I., jo'-sef, king of Bavaria, succeeded his uncla, Charles Theodore, in varia, succeeded his uncle, charles Theodore, in 1799. Attaching himself to the fortunes of Napoleon, he gave his daughter in marriage to Eugene Beauharnais, in 1805. In the same bugene beaumarnas, in 1805. In the same year his duchy was erected into a kingdom. In 1813, however, he formed a member of the league against the emperor, and, by that proreague against the emperor, and, by that pro-ceeding, retained his throne after the fall of Mapoleon. His reign was marked by a great number of reforms in the administration of his kingdom. B. 1756; D. 1825. This prince bore the title of Maximilian Joseph II., as elector of Bavaria, from 1799 to 1805.

MAXIMILIAN JOSEPH II., king of Bavaria, succeeded Louis Charles, his father, in 1848.

в. 1811: р. 1864

MAXIMILIAN, Emperor of Mexico and brother of Francis Joseph, the present emperor of Austria, ascended the imperial throne of Mexico in 1864 being summoned thither by the nobles of that country, and having the promise of material support from Napoleon III. The French troops, however, that had been sent to Moxico prior to the coming of Maximilian, were withdrawn in 1886, and the emperor, after a vain effort to assert his authority, was betrayed by treachery, captured, and shot at Queretaro by order of Juarez, June 19, 1867. B. at Schoenbrun, 1832.

MAXIMINUS, Caius Julius Verus, max-i-mi'nus, emperor of Rome, was the son of a Thra-cian peasant, and having displayed great courage in the Roman armies, rose to command. On the death of Alexander Severus, he caused himself to be proclaimed emperor, 235. His strength was such that he is said to have stopped a chariot in full speed with one of his fingers. He was killed in a revolt of his soldiers, 238 A.D.

Maxmus, Magnus, mdw-i-mus, a Spaniard, was general of the Roman army in Britain, when he proclaimed himself empero, 383. Having made himself master of Gaul, Britain, and Spain, he fixed the seat of his empire at Trèves. He next marched into Italy, where he committed dreadful cruelties; but was at last besieged in Aquileia, by the emperor Theodo-sius. His soldiers delivered him up to Theodo-sius, who ordered him to be beheaded, in 388, MINIMUS OF TYRE, a Platonic philosopher, who visited Rome in 146, but died in his own country, in the reign of Commodus.

MINIMUS SHE DYSTA, and tutor of Julian the Apostate, was a native of Ephesus. He professed magic, and initiated Julian into the Eleusinian preseries, and assured him of success in his Persian expedition; he was put to death by the emperor Valens, in 366.

death by the emperor vaines, in 300.

Maxwer, Lord Robert, min-wei, one of the lords of the regency that governed Scotland in 1589, while James V. was absent in France upon 2 matrimonial expedition. At a subsequent period, taking offence at the appointment of Oliver Sincles of the Continuous of the army, he, with many of the Scottish nobility, surren-

he presented to the Lords of Articles a bill for the authorization of the Scriptures to be read in the vulgar tongue; an act which formed one of the most important of those which preceded the Reformation. The measure became law despite the energetic opposition of Cardinal despite the chergetic opposition of Cardinan Beaton and the hierarchy. Lord Maxwell was soon afterwards apprehended, at Beaton's command but escaped. p. 1546.

MAY, Thomas, mai, an English dramatic poet and historian, was educated at Cambridge, after which he entered at Gray's Inn, where he wrote some plays, and translated several authors, particularly Lucan's "Pharsalia." Charles I. employed him in writing two historical poems; one on the life of Henry II., and the other on the reign of Edward III.; but, in the civil war, May joined the Parliament, and was appointed their secretary and historiographer. He pub-lished the History of the Parliament which be-gan in 1640, and a "Breviary of the History of the Parliament of England." He is said to have written five plays, two of which are printed in Dodsley's collection. B. 1595; D. 1650.

MAYENNE, Charles of Loraine, Duke of, mai-

en, was the second son of Francis of Loraine, duke of Guise. He displayed great courage at the sieges of Poictiers and Rochelle, and at the battle of Moncontour; he also defeated the Protestants in Guienne, Dauphiny, and Sain-tonge. When his brothers were killed, at the meeting of the States at Blois, he declared himself head of the League, and assumed the title of lieutenant-general of France. He proclaimed the cardinal of Bourbon king, by the name of Charles X.; but was defeated by Henry IV. at the battle of Arques, and again at Ivry. In 1506 he was reconciled to the king, who made him governor of the Isle of France. B. 1554; D. 1611. MAYER, John Frederick, mi-er, a Lutheran divine, who became superintendent of the divine, who became superintendem or time churches of Pomerania, and professor at Stettin. His greatest work is the "Biblio-theca Bibliog." printed in 1713. Besides this, he wrote "A Treatise on the Method of Study-ing the Holy Scripture," "Dissertation or Particular Parts of the Bible." In at Leipsic, 1650; p. 1712. MAYER, Tobias, a celebrated German astro-nomer, who was self-taught, and, by his own application, acquired a knowledge of the Latin language. In 1750 the university of Göttingen appointed him mathematical professor. Mayer appointed him mathematical professor. Mayer made several discoveries in germatry and astronomy, and published some excellent works, the chief of whick are his "Table of Refractions," "Theory of the Moon," and "Astronomical Tables and Precepts," for which last the English Board of Longitude gave his widow 25000. n. at Wittenberg, 1723; n. 1762.

MATERIS-TURQUEN, Theodore de, Baron d'Aubonne, mad-yers, an eminent physician and chemist, was physician to Henry IV. of Prance; but, on the death of that monarch, went to England, and was appointed physician to James I, who conferred on him the honour to James I., who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He continued in favour with Charles I., to whom he adhered in the civil

Charles 1, to Whom he manersu in time Grun war. B. 1875; D. 1855.

MATHEW, Henry, mod'her, a molicitor English Littlerateur, whose father, a solicitor in good practice, sont him to Westminster school, whence he twice ran naway, and subsequently made a voyage to Calcutta on beard a ship of war. Returning to England, he served three years in his father's office as articled clerk. He years in his father's office as articled elerk. He next spent some time in Wales, and, on his return to London, commenced his literary career. With his old schoolfellow, Ar, Gilbert A'Beckett, he took the Queen's Theatre, in London, and there produced his literary called "The Wandering Min-trel." About the same time he started the came publication, "Figure in London," he was also the chief originator of "Punch," which was care the chief originator of "Punch," which was care the chief originator of "Punch," which was commenced in 1811, and of which he was for a long time the editor. Between the years 1846-1851, he published, in conjunction with his brothers Horace and Augustus, a series of humorous tales, which became very popular. Some of these were entitled "The Greatest Planne of these were circular The Greatest Frague of Life; or, the Adventures of a Lady in Search of a Servant," "Whom to Marry, and How to get Married," "The Image of his Father," and get Married," "The Image of the Father," and "The Adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Sandboys and Family at the Great Exhibition of 1851," Mr. Mayhew's most important work was that produced in 1851, entitled "London Labour and the London Poor; a Cyclopedia of the Condition and Earnings of these that will work, those that cannot work, and those that will not work." Of a similar character was "The Great World of London," commenced by Mr. Majhew in 1836; but the former only of these works was completed. He likewise wrote a series of excellent books for boys; one, founded winders of Science; another, called "The Wonders of Science;" another, entitled "The Peasant-Boy Philosopher," being based upon the life of James Ferguson; and a third on the "Boyhood of Luther," B. 1812.

MAYHEW, Horace and Augustus, brothers of the preceding, besides assisting in the composition of several of the above-mentioned works, were the authors of a number of tales and sketches of a broadly humorous character, which enjoyed a considerable share of popularity. The novel, entitled "Paved with tiold," was commenced by Henry and Augustus in co-partnership, but was soon afterwards continued and conducted to a most effective termination by Augustus alone, who has also written "The Prettiest Girl in Bloomsbury," and a great variety of lively and interesting tales and sketches, puclished in various periodicals.-Horace Mayhew was for many years a principal contributor to the pages of " Punch,"

the pages of remen,
MAYNARD, Sir John, mai'-nard, an English statesman and lawyer, who, after having studied at Exeter College, Oxford, entered at the Middle Temple, was in due course called to the bar, and distinguished himself as one of the prosecutors classinguished fitnised as one of the prosecutors of Strailford and Land, but afterwards opposed the violent proceedings of the army, and the assuration of Coronwell, for which he was twice sent to the Tower. After the Restoration he was knighted, but refused the honour of being a judge. At the Revolution he displayed great scients in the configurace between the Lords and Commons, on the question of the abdication of the throne by James II, and warmly alvocated that measure. When William III., in allusion to Serjeant Maynard's great age, remarked that he must have outlived all the lawyers of his time, Sir John happily replied, "Yes; and if your highness had not come over to our assist-ance, I should have outlived the law too." He was appointed one of the commissioners of the great seal in 1889, n. about 1989. Commons, on the question of the abdication of great seal in 1689. B. about 1602; D. 1690.

MAYNE, Jasper, main, an English divine and

Mazarin

Mazzini

poot, who was educated at Westminster school. poor, who was educated at westminster school, whence he removed to Christ Church, Oxford, of which he became student. In 1646 he was created D.D., and two years afterwards was deprived of his studentship for his loyalty. At the Restoration he was promoted to a canonry of Christ Church. Mayne was a man of considerable wit and humour, which he often carried to some excess, particularly in his will, wherein he left his servant man, who was fond of tippling, an old trunk, in which, says he, there is some-thing to make him drink. The man eagerly sought for his legacy, and, on opening the trunk, found a red kerring. Dr. Mayne wrote some poems, now obsolete, sermons, and two plays, called the "City Match," and "The Amorous Warre," the latter of which was a satire upon MAZARIN, Julius, mas-a-ra, a Roman cardinal and minister of State to Louis XIV. of France, who, being appointed nuncio-extraordi-nary to France, acquired the friendship of Richelien and the confidence of Louis XIII. In 1641, Pope Urban VIII, made him cardinal, and, on the death of Richelieu, Louis appointed him the death of Richelies, Louis appointed time minister of state. He was also nominated one of the executors of the king's will, and had the principal management of affilirs during the minority of Louis XIV; but at length time murmurs of the people rose so high against him, that he found it expedient to quit this kingdom, and a price was set on his head. He afterwards recovered his power, and continued to render the state the most important services, the principal of which was the restoration of peace between France and Spain in 1659. His application to business produced a discase which caused his death, B, 1602; D, 1661. His letters have been published in 2 vols.—One of his nicees, Hortense Mancini, duchess of Mazarin, was celebrated for her wit and beauty. She married, in 1001, the duke de la Meilleraic. from whom she separated, and went to England, where she was surrounded by a crowd of admirers, but particularly patronized St. Evre-mond. D. in London, 1699.

Mazerra, John, ma-zep'-pa, hetman or com-mander-in-chief of the Cossacks of the Ukraine, was the son of a Polish gentleman, and be-came a page at the court of John Kasimir, king of Poland. After his return to his native pro-vince of Podolia, he engaged in an intrigue with the wife of a neighbouring lord, who sur-prised him and caused him to be bound naked upon the back of a wild horse. The frightened animal ran with his burden until it reached the country of the Cossaeks of the Ukraine, where Mazeppa was released and restored to health. He subsequently adopted their course of life, and rose by degrees to the rank of their hetman. In that capacity he displayed great energy and talent, and succeeded in gaining the esteem of tanene, and successed in gaming the essent of the Czar Peter, who appointed him prince of the Ukraine. Being desirous, however, of rendering himself independent, Mazeppa fought against the Czar, and onlisted his forces under the banner of Charles XII. at the battle of Pultowa. After the defeat of the Swedish king, he took rouge first in Wallachia, and afterwards at refuge first in Wallachta, and alterwards Psender. His extraordinary ride forms the subject of one of Lord Byron's poems. B. about the middle of the 17th century; D. in Turkey, 1709.

Mazza, Angelo, mat'-sa, an eminent Italian poet, a native of Parma, in the university of iterature. He translated the odes of Pindar, and Akenside's "Pleasures of Imagination;" and, having attained a high degree of literary eputation, was admitted into the Arcadian cademy at Rome. p. 1740; p. 1817.

Mazzhingi, Joseph, Count, mat'-sen-je, a istinguished composer, the descendant of an minent Tuscan family, was born in England, of an English mother. He was very early noted or his musical ability, and so diligently did he oursue his studies, that he was considered qualified for the post of director of the opera house when but little more than 18 years of age. The heatre having been destroyed by fire in 1789, mong the valuable property lost was the whole of the music of Paesiello's opera, "La Locanda. and Mazzhingi re-wrote the orchestral parts from memory. "The Blind Girl," the "Turn-sike Gate," "Paul and Virginia," and a long ist of other once popular pieces, were from his ertile pen, and Sir Walter Scott warmly thanked him for the manuer in which he set to music ome of that author's poetry. B. 1764; D. 1844.

MAZZINI, Giuseppe, mattsel-ne, a modern talian politician, who was educated for the aw, but being inspired with an enthusiastic love of liberty, abandoned his profession, soon after he had commenced its practice. Allying himself with a small circle of ardent Genoese gentlemen, he became the soul of a movement which had for its object the regeneration of thaly. In furtherance of their ideas, these roung Genoese established a literary journal, which was soon suppressed, but was again commenced at Leghern. In 1830 Mazzini became an active member of the secret society called the Carbonari, but being denounced to the police, was arrested. After a detention of six months, he was set at liberty, on the understanding that he should quit Italy. He took refuge at Mar-seilles, and founded there a journal and a society, both of which were significantly named "Young Italy." The main idea of both was that "the freedom of Italy, both from domestic and foreign tyranny, could only be attained by a union of all the separate states into one nation—Romans, Piedmontese, Tuscans, Nea-politans, Lombards, Venetians, &c.—all merging their separate interests in the one common name of Italians, and under this name forming a single powerful European nation." The prea single powerful European matom. The pre-cise form of government was to be decided by circumstances; Mazzini himself preferred the republican. After months of secret plotting, a conspiracy was organized, which from Genoa as a centre, spread through all Italy, from the Alps to the extremity of Sicily, and even the officers and soldiers of the Piedmontese and Neapolitan armies were concerned in it. This formidable organization was discovered, however, and a organization was discovered, however, and a great number of the chief agents therein either lost their lives or sought safely in flight. This took place in 1833, and from that year until 1818, Mazzini was mainly employed in a propagandism of his ideas throughout the Italian peninsula. He resided in Prance, in Switzerland, and was expelled from both countries in the same unconvisible he used to London elements. turn; upon which he went to London, always turn; upon when he went to London, stways cooping up a close correspondence with his party in Italy. In 1848, Sir James Graham, then home segretars, authorized the opening of several letters in the post-office. It was thereby ascertained that the brothers Bandiera were plotting an insurrection in the Ventian states. This was communicated to the American government of the substant government of the control of

ment, and the lives of the Bandieras were lost in consequence. After the French revolution of 1848, and the insurrection at Milan, Mazzini went to Italy with the view of giving a turn to the great Italian movement in conformity with the ideas he had so long advocated. After the the meas no had so long advocated. After the defeat of Charles Albert, and the consequent re-establishment of the Austrian rule in Italy, Mazzini was accused of mullifying the king's cflorts by causing the republican party to keep aloof from him. He next travelled about in Garibaldi's wake, and, in 1849, went to Rome. The pope had fled before his arrival, and an assembly, elected by universal suffrage, had passed decrees for the total abolition of the temporal sovereignty of the pope, and for the creation of the Roman states into a republic. Mazzini's advent at this crisis was hailed with Mazzin's account at this cross was latter with acclamations by the Romans. With Saft and Armellini, he was appointed triunvir, and charged to defend the republic against its nemics. The French, under General Oudinot, landed soon afterwards at Civila Veechia. It was generally believed that the French would be allowed to enter Rome without impediment; but Mazzini and his great ally, Garibaldi, pre-pared for a desperate resistance. Garibaldi had only 14,000 regular troops under his command; he nevertheless maintained the city against the invaders during two months, with an obstinate bravery that excited the astonishment and admiration of Europe. On the entrance of the French, Mazzini returned to England and resumed his pen. His ideas were promulgated as zealously as before; and the expulsion of the Austrians from Lombardy, and its annexation to Piedmont in 1859; the subsequent adhesion of Tuscany, Modena, Parma, Naples, Sicily, and other portions of the country to the kingdom of Itay, have gone far to realize the idea originally broached by Mazzini; and although these events have been brought about directly by somewhat different agencies from those which he contemplated, it is certain that the influence of his writings on the minds and actions of the Italians has of late years been very potent indeed. B. at Genoa, 1808.

MAZZUOLI, F __, mar -soo-o -le, commonly called Parmigiano, a famous Italian painter, who has also been designated as the inventor of the art of etching. He had an admirable genius for painting; his invention was ready, and he had a peculiar talent in giving grace and sweetness to his figures. B. at Parma, 1504; D. 7540

MEAD, Richard, mede, a celebrated English physician, who studied under Grævins, at Utrecht, after which he removed to Leyden, and contracted a close intimney with Boerhaave On complete his studies in that celebrated school of phy , he went to Italy, and took his doctor's degree at Padua. In 1696, he returned to his native country, and commenced the prac-tice of physic at Stepney, where he resided seven years. In 1702 he published his trentise on Poisons, which procured him considerable reputation. In 1704 he was admitted a member reputation. In 1704 he was admitted a member of the Royal Society, of which, in 1707, he became vice-president, and, in 1727, he was appointed physician to George II. He was also author of "A Discourse concerning the Place author of "A Discourse concerning the Plague," a treatise "On the Scarve," and "Medicina Sacra." His works were very Popular at the time when they were written, and have been translated in Italy, France, and Germany. B. in London, 1673; n. 1754, Meane, George Gordon, a 1 the United States army, who graduated at the military academy of West Point in 1835, and received his commission as second-lieutenant of artillery. He resigned his commission the following year, but entered the army again in 1842, and served with great distinction in the subsequent war with Mexico. He was raised subsequent war with decayed. He was raised to the rank of brigadies-goneral of volunteers in 1862, during the American Civil War, and took part in the battles of Antietam and Fredericksburg in the same year, in the latter of which, the troops of the Northern States, commanded by General Burnside, were routed with much loss. In 1863 he was appointed commander-in-chief of the army of the Potocommuner-meener or the army of the Pedramae, and soon after fought the battle of Gettysburg. In the following year, General Grant, who had been nominated commander-Grant, who had been manuacut commanders, in-chief of the United States armies, took command of the army of the Potomae, and Meade being second in command, rendering able assistance in the operations that brought the war to a close. B. at Cadiz, 1816.

v. Pierre François André, mek'-a, an eminent French astronomer, whose great merits were first discovered by Lalande. In 1782 he gained the prize of the Academy for his memoir on the conict of 1981, which was expected to return in 1790. He became editor of the "Connaissance des Temps," which work he improved. In 1792 he was employed in the great work of measuring the are of meridian between Dunkirk and Barcelona. He returned from this task in 1798; but wishing to extend it as far as the Halarie sloes, he set out for them in 1883; but death prevented the accomplishment of his object, n. in France, 1774; n. 1895.

MICHIERA, or MERHTER, mek-hi-far, the founder of the order of Mechitarists, and reviver of Armenian literature, in 1691 entered an Armenian convent at Sebaste, and subsequently became secretary to Archbishop Michael, Meeting with a work by an Italian priest on the reconciliation of the Armenian church with that of Rome, he secretly became a proscitte to the latter church. In 1700 he sought to reconcile the two parties of the Armenian priesthood at Constantinople; but, meeting with little suc-cess, he openly preached submission to the pope. The Armenians were so enraged at this, that, The Armenians were so entragest as the to fly to save his life, Mechitar was compelled to fly from the city. He went first to Smyrna, and afterwards to the Morea, then under the dominion of Venice. On the conquest of the M nion of venice. On the conquest of the si by the Tarks, he went to Venice, where he was permitted to found a convent, wherein he set up a printing-press, which, in his hands and in those of his followers, produced hundreds of volumes in the form of Armenjan translations of the best works in European literature. Me-chitar published an Armenian Bible in 1733, and chitar published an Armenlan Bible in 1733, and an Armenlan (frammar and Dictionary. B. at Sebasto, Cappadocia, 1874; D. 1749.

MEDB, Joseph, meed, a learned English divine, who, in 1802, entered at Christ's College, Cambridge, where he studied with intense appliements, was chosen fellow, and proceeded to his degree of bachelor in divinity. He provestship of Trinity College, Dublin, which was repeatedly of Trinity College, Dublin, which was repeatedly of Trinity College, Dublin, which was repeatedly inhed in 1874 were collected into one volume folio, and published in 1872. The principal is his "Commentary on the Apocalypse," in explaining which his plan has been followed by Bishops Newton

his plan has been followed by dishops account and Hurd, and a number of other great divines. B. at Berden, Essex, 1588; D. 1635.

Medici, Cosmo de', med'-o-che, called the Elder, and the Father of his Country, founder of an account. illustrious family at Florence, was a merchant, who acquired great wealth, which he approprinted to the noble purposes of advancing learning and supporting learned men. He col-lected a noble library, which he curiched with inestimable manuscripts. The envy excited by his riches, raised him many enemies by whose intrigues he was obliged to quit his native country. He then retired to Venice, where he was received as a prince. His fellow-citizens afterwards recalled him, and he bore a principal share in the government of the republic of Florence during thirty-four years. On his tomb was engraved this inscription: "The Father of his People, and the Deliverer of his Father of his People, and the Deliverer of his Country." n. 1889; p. 1484.

MEDICI, LOVENDO (1, SURTAMEN OF THE MEDICI, LOVENDO (1, SURTAMEN OF THE MEDICI, ADDITION OF THE MEDICINE OF THE ME Pazzi formed a conspiracy against the Medici in 1478, and Julian was assassinated as he was attending mass. Lorenzo was also wounded. but escaped with his life, and was conducted to his palace by the people, with loud acclamations of joy. Having inherited the great qualities of his grandfather Cosmo, he was accounted the Macenas of his age. It was a singular but noble spectacle to observe the citizen engaged in commerce at one moment, and managing public affairs at another; now entertaining merchants, and next receiving ambassadors; giving public shows to the people, and erecting asylums for the sick and unfortunate; ornamenting his country with magnificent buildings and sending learned men to the East in search of valuable Greek manuscripts: such a man was Lorenzo, whom the Florentines, grateful for all these benefits, declared chief of the republic, He drew to his court a number of learned men, and sent John Lascaris into Greece to purchase literary treasures to enrich his library. Lorenzo himself cultivated letters, particularly poetry, and his compositions have been several times printed. He was so universally esteemed that the princes of Europe were glad to choose him and princes of Europe were glad to choose him as arbitrator in their differences. This illustations man had three sons,—Peter, who succeeded him, Julius, and John, who become pope by the name of Leo X. Lorenzo forms the subject of a splendid biography by William

Roscoe. B. 1418; D. 1492.
Medital, Sir John, mai-de-na, a portrait painter, was born at Brussels, went to England painter, was born as brussels, went to England in 1686; and after painting a great number of pictures, proceeded to Scotland, where he was knighted. B. 1659; D. 1711.

MEHENED, or MOHANMED, mail-hai-maid, the name of seven kings of Granada, who reigned between the years 1238 and 1454.

MEHENET ALL, me'-he-met, Pacha of Egypt, commenced his remarkable career as the keeper of a small shop at Cavalla, in Roumelia; but, abandoning the pursuits of a trader for the

the British, and assisted in the expulsion of the French from that country. He soon acquired great influence in Egypt, and formed an alliance with the Mamelukes, against Khosrew Pacha, the vicercy of the sultan. The Mamelukes having regained all their former influence, chose Mehe-met as their viceroy. The suitan created him pacha of Cairo in 1808, and added to this dignity the pachalic of Alexandria in the following year, ostensibly for the services rendered to the Ottoman empire, but gained over, in reality, by Mehemet's gold. His next step was to turn against the redoubtable soldiery that had helped him to gain so much power, and, after a vain effort to reduce the turbulent Mamelukes to subjection, he ordered them to be exterminated. subjection, no creared them to be exterminated within the citadel of Cairo, where they were ruthlessly put to the sword, 1200 more being massacred throughout the country. By this step Mchemet Ali became the undisputed master of Upper Egypt. The Wahabees, a fanatical sect, were his next victims, and these he destroyed after a war which lasted six years. He subsequently dispatched an army into Nubia, under the command of one of his sons, Ismail Pacha, who succeeded in conquering the pro-Facia, who succeeded in conquering the pro-vinces of Dongola, Sennan, Kordofan, &c.
Upon the Grecks raising the standard of inde-pendence, he assisted the sultan against them, by dispatching to the suhrers of the Morea a facet of 163 vessels, under the com-mand of his son, Ibrahim Pacha. This fleet wrought havoe upon the country during three years, but was destroyed at Navarino by the combined squadrons of England, France, and Russia, in 1827. As a reward for his co-opera-tion against the Greeks, the sultan ceded to Mehemet Ali the island of Candia, in 1830; but this was not sufficient to gratify his ambitious desires, for he further demanded of the sultan the cession of Syria. This being refused, he invaded the country with a powerful army, and rapidly conquered the province. After a great victory at Konich, in 1832, he was in triumphant march upon Constantinople, but was brought to a halt by European intervention: he succeeded, nevertheless, in gaining, by the treaty of Kutaych, the possession of Syria and the province of Adana. In 1839 the sultan, Mahmoud vince of Adams. In 1859 the suitan, Manmouta II., resolved to regain Syris; but suffering defeat at the hands of Mehemet Ali, he sought the assistance of England and other Buropean powers. By this means, Mehemet, after having been defeated near Beyrout, and finding Alexandria blockaded, consented to forego his claims upon Syria, on condition that his family should be constituted hereditary pachas of Egypt. Thenceforth he ruled in peace, but in 1819 resigned the government to his son, Ibrahim Pacha, who dying soon afterwards, the pachalic was vested in Abuss Pacha, Mehemet's grandson. During the last two years of his life he was deprived of reason. Mehemet Ali was unquestionably an extraordinary man and wise ruler: he introduced European organiza-tion and tactics into his army, encouraged agriculture, commerce, and industry, and founded military and medical schools in his dominions. His rise was due to his native intelligence and abandoning the pursuits of a tracter for the problem of a tracter for the profession of arms, he took on active part in markalle fact that this farmer Albanian peasant suppressing a rebellion of the pirates of Candia. was throughout his carlier career totally destined in 1789 he headed a corps of Albanians, and tute of cancation. He only learnt to read at the contract of the pirates of the pirates of Candia. indomitable courage and energy; for it is a re-markable fact that this former Albanian peasant

the age of forty-five. It is, however, to regretted that his rise was assisted by such violent measures as intrigue, treason, and assassination. For the French people he had a particular admiration, and sent to Paris two of his sons and a number of Egyptian youths to receive their education. n. at Cavalla, Rou-receive their education. n. at Cavalla, Rou-mella, 1709; n. at Cairo, 1849.

Minnus, Stophen Henry, su(r)l, a selebrated composer, who, in 1773, went to Paris, and there became the friend of Glack. In 1770 be pro-duced, at the Oriens Comique, "Euphrosyna" and "Coradin," both of which were eminently successful. He subsequently composed, among other opens, "Stardonice," "Joseph," "Cora and Alonzo," and "Melidor." A large number of through sengiate and the oclemeted remultican of hymus, sonatas, and the celebrated republican airs, "Chant de la Victoire," "Du Départ," and "Du Retour," issued from his pen. B. 1763; D. at Paris, 1817.

MEINERS, Christopher, mi'-ners, a German historian and miscellaneous writer, who studied at Göttingen, where he became professor of philosophy; and subsequently pro-rector. Among his numerous works are, "A History of the Origin and Progress of Philosophy among the Greeks," "On the Origin and Decline of the Sciences among the Greeks and Romans," and others on kindred subjects. B. in Hanover, 1747;

D. 1810.

MEISSNER, Augustus Gottlieb, mise'-ner, a MEISSEE, Augustus Gottlieb, mise-ner, are popular German writer, who composed a large number of romances, essays, and tales. His style was exceedingly agreeable, lively, and shrewd. The most important of his works were "Alcibiades," "Blanca Capella," and "Spartacus." a. in Upper Silesia, 1753; D. 1807.

MEISSONNER, Jean Louis Ernest, mison-e-air, a celebrated French painter, of the style termed in France genre. His most celebrated works were,—"The Painter in his Studio," "Le Corps-do-Garde," and "A Barricade—June, 1843." All his works were painted with Flemish care and finish, but were, nevertheless, thoroughly original in their treatment. His pietures, although generally of a small size, brought very large sums, and he stood at the head of a crowd of antholistic militators. He was likewise very successful as a leading of the web likewise very successful as a leading of the web likewise very successful as a leading of which is stated in the state of these hast were the stockes for "Laul and Virghtina," Bistrac's novels, and "The French People painted by themselves," as at Lyons, 1912.

MELS, Pomponius, me'da, a Lathin geographical writes, was a native of Spain. His valuable work, spittled "Do Stin Orbis," is divided into three pixts, and contains a description to the world as it was known in his time. Floarished in the early half of the list century.

MELINGWON, Philip, me-lake's-how, the famous reformer, and friend of Luther. His family name was Schwarzerde, or black serid, which Reuchlin, his friend, altered to the corresponding Greek word, Melanothon. He made rapid progress in his studies at the university of a crowd of enthusiastic imitators. He was respirating Greek rote, Mcdaacton. He made rapid progress in his studies at the university of Heidelberg, whence he removed to Tubingen, where he continued six years. In 1618 Pc ob-tained the Grook professorahip of Wittenberg, where he formed a close friendship with Luther, where he formed and his writings, In 1687 the elector of Saxony appointed him to visit the churches in his territories; but his greatest labour was in drawing up the Augsburg Confession of Faith. His learning and moderation became famous 708 throughout Europe, and the kings of France and Europa invited him to their kingdoms. with flattering offers, which he declined. During the progress of the Reformation, he exhibit d a different temper from Luther, being more cantious and timid; on which account he was often reproved by him in severe terms. The prudence of Melanethon, however, was of great service, and tended considerably to the propagation of the Protestant doctrines, by guarding them from the abuses of intemperate real. In 1529 Melanethon assisted in the conferences at Spires, and, in his journey thither, visited his spires, and, it ms journey thrater, vested his mother, a pious woman, who a-bed him what she should believe, and how she should pray and these religious disputes, at the same inna-repeating her simple ereed and form of devetors. "Continue," said her son, "to believe and to oray "Continue," said her son, "to hence and to pray as you do at present, and do not trouble your-self about controversies." He distingue hed himself in the conferences held at Ratisban in 1511 and 1518. He wrote a "Censure of the Interim," and all the papers presented at these conferences. The works of this learned and amiable man were collected in 1511, and pulslished at Bale, n. at Bretten, or Bietheim, in the palatinate of the Rhane, 1897; p. at Witteng. 1560.

drass melta, a celebrated Austrian general, who, in 1706, commanded against the French in Ifaly, and uniting with Suwaroff, in 1709, de-feated Championnet at Genola, but was landelf heaten by Napoleon at Marengo, in the following year. D. 1807.

MELBOURNE, William Lamb, Viscount, rectification, an English statesman, who entered the House of Commons in 1805, under the auspices of the Whigs. Comming appointed him se retary of the Whits, a maint appointed into a constraint of state for Ireland, a post he filled with very finguished success. In 1828 he was call of to upper house, after the death of his father, and while a member of Earl Grey's cabinet and write a member of Earl Grey's calamet greatly contributed to the passing of the Reborm 19th. In 1844 he became first load of the Trea-sury, and head of the Winz party, a position he retained, with only one short interruption, until the year 1844. Lord Melborrne was but be qualified to head the ministerial councils of a great nation; but his engaging and conellintory manners secured the allegiance not ne of the Whig, but also of several distin-

shed members of the Tory party. n. 1779; D. 1844.

MELEO, Philip de, mel'-lo, an eminent divine and Biblical translator, and the first native of Ceylon who was admitted into the Christian distry. His learning and labours carned him the titles of "Rabbi de Melho," and the "Great the titles of "Rabbi de Melho," and the "Great Labourer." As an oriental poet, also, he ranks high. After being educated at the only semi-nary In his native town, and passing an exami-nation in Hebrew and Greek, he was licensed to preach before attaining the age of 21, and officiated with much distinction in Portugues, Datch, and Tamil. His principal works are Tamul versions of the New Testament from Tamul versions of the New Testament from the Greek, the Dutch littary, and the Psalms of David; a work against Popery, entitled "Triumph of the Truth"; a Catechism in Portuguese; and a Version of the Peutsteuch from the Hebrew, published in 1790. At his death, be left translations of the books of hun, Judges, and Ruth, in MS. He also wrote many original poems of great mests, at Colombo, Ceylon, 1723; p. 1

MELANCTHON, PHILIP.

Meyerbeer, Giacomo.

MILTON, JOHN.

MIRABEAU, COUNT HONORÉ DE.

Melville

MELL Giovanni, mai'-le, a celebrated Sicilian poet, was a physician by profession, and for some time held the professorship of chemistry at the university of Paleamo. He was most successful in bucolic verse, and has been placed by his admirers after Theoretius. He likewise produced odes, canzoni, satires, epistles, fables, and some captivating short poems. B. at Palermo, about 1740; D. 1815.

Alt Lissus, me-lis-us, a philosopher of Samos, who flourished about 431 n.c., and who is distinguished not only as a teacher of the Eleatic doctrines, but, in the history of his country, as a statesman and naval commander.

Mulitus, mel-i'-tus, a Greek orator and poet, and the principal accuser of Socrates. The Athenians, out of compunction for their unjust treatment of that great man, put Melitus to death, B.c. 400.

Mellon, Harriet, mel'-lon, Duchess of St. Alban's, was the posthumous daughter of a Mr. Matthew Mellon, who held a commission in the East India Company's service, and whose widow married a Mr. Entwistle, a musician. Mrs. Entwistle, who was an accomplished woman, went on the stage; her husband became leader of the band in various provincial theatres; and the services of Harriet were put in requisition at a very tender age, in order to augment a seanty income. After passing her childhood in playing juvenile characters in the provinces, she appeared, under the auspices of Sheridan, at Drury Lane, in January, 1795, as Lydia Lan-guish, in the "Rivals;" and although attracting but little notice at first, gradually rose in public estimation, and ultimately attained to a considerable degree of professional celebrity, par-ticularly in characters of a vivacious or hoyendish east. Thomas Courts, the wealthy banker, mar-ried her in 1814, and died in 1822, appointing his widow universal legatee, and bequeathing to her his share in the banking house and business in the Strand, and all benefit and interests to arise therefrom. She was now immensely rich, and rumour was soon busy in naming the fortunate suitor of the banker's widow; till at length, in June, 1827, the question was settled by her marriage with William, duke of St. Alban's, then in the 27th year of his age. The bulk of her immense property, including the half profits of the banking house, her mansion in Stratton Street, and all her movables, plate, diamonds, &c., she bequeathed to Miss Angela Burdett, youngest daughter of Sir Francis Burdett, and grand-daughter of Mr. Coults, who in consequence took the name of Courts, who in consequence does are mand of Courts. n. about 1775; n. 1837.

MELATOTII, William, mel-math, an English writer, who was a bencher of Lincoln's Inn, and, in conjunction with Williams, edited Vernon's "Reports." He was the author of the "Great Importance of a Religious Life," a valuable little book, which has gone through many editions.

D. 1666; D. 1743.

Melmoth, William, son of the preceding, Pliny's and Ciecro's Epistles, and was a so the author of the letters which bear the name of Sir Thomas Fitzosborne; some poems in Dods-ley's Collection, and Memoirs of his father. B. 1710; p. 1799.

MRLVILLE, Sir James, mel-vil, a Scotch writer, who became page to Mary queen of Scots, whom he attended in her last moments: he who become page to Mary queen of Sects, versations, and only proved to have been negli whom he attended in her last moments: he gent of his duty with respect to his agents, he afterwards entered the service of the duke of took no further part in public affairs. Ilis 2707

Montmorency. On his return to Scotland, in amounterney. On his return to Scotland, in 1561, he was appointed privy councillor and gentleman of the bedchamber. He was the author of some very curious "Memoirs of Affairs of State." n. about 1535; p. 1607.

MEDVILLE, Andrew, a celebrated Scotlar express who found that the stability of the property who found to the stability and the stability of the stabilit

mediulus, androw, a celebrated Scotch re-former, who, four years after the establishment of the Reformation in Scotland, left the uni-versity of St. Andrews, where he had acquired considerable proficiency in languages and philosophy, for that of Paris. After studying in France during five years, he went to Geneva, where he was appointed to the chair of Humanity in the Academy. In 1574 he returned to Scotin the Academy. In 1574 he returned to Scot-land, on which occasion Beza wrote a letter to the General Assembly, declaring that "McVille was equally distinguished for his piety and his erudition, and that the church of Geneva could not give a stronger proof of affection to her sister church of Scotland than by suffering herself to be bereaved of him, that his native country might be enriched with his gifts." As a writer, teacher, and reformer of the church of his native country, Melville soon displayed unand establishment of presbytery were the objects of his constant efforts. In 1530 he was appointed principal of St. Mary's College, in the university of St. Andrews, and there taught the Hebrew, Syriac, and Chaldee languages. His boldness giving offence to the Scottish court, he was cited before the privy council, which sentenced him to be imprisoned, and to be punished in his person and goods. On this he made his escape to London, where he remained for nearly two years. After James I. had ascended the English throne, he invited him to London; but Melville, having written a short epigram in contempt of a rite of the English shurch, the privy council convicted him of gross scandal, and after a year's continement in the houses of the dean of St. Commenced in the mouses of the dean of St. Paul's and the bishop of Westminster, he was sent to the Tower, where he remained nearly four years. In 1811 he was released, and went to the university of Sedan, whence he never again returned. M'Crie says of Melville: "Next to the Reformer, I know of no individual from whom Scotland has received such important services, or to whom she continues to owe so deep a debt of national respect and gratitude." B. 1545; D. at Sedan, 1622.

MELVILLE, Henry Dundas, Viscount, the son of Lord Arnistone, a Scotch judge, and the friend and coadjutor of the younger Pitt, received his education at the university of Edu-burgh. In 1773 he became solicitor-general; and soon after was appointed to the offices of lord advocate, and joint keeper of the signet for Scotland. In 1782 he was made privy-councillor and treasurer of the navy; and from that time took a lending part in all the measures of the litt admiration. Pitt administration. He was appointed president of the board of control at its formation; in 1791, became secretary for the home department; and, in 1794, secretary of war, which latter post he held till Mr. Pitt's retirement from office. He was then created a viscount; and when Mr. Pitt again became premier, Dundas was made first lord of the admiralty. Dundas was made hist lord of the administration in 1805 he was impeached by the Commons on a variety of charges of peculation, &c.; and though he was acquitted of the alleged mal-influence was for many years supreme in Scot-land, and he did not always wield his power and, and he did not always when his pover with much consideration for opponents. In fact, his will was law, and the flat of "the Dundases" was sufficient to repress all comment on public matters in that part of the country.

on puone matters in that part of the conflict.

A monument was, however, creefed to Lord Melville's memory in Edinburgh. B. 1740; D. 1841.

MREVILLE, Herman, a modern American novelist, who, incited by passion for maritime adventure, in his eighteenth year went on board ship as a common sailor. In 1841 he joined a whaling vessel, and went on a cruise. After eighteen months of that monotonous mode of life, he took advantage of the vessel putting into Noukahiva, to desert, in company with another young sailor. He gained the interior of the island, but was detained a prisoner during four months by a savage tribe. A vessel from Sydney having put into the port, he succeeded in getting on board. He afterwards visited Tahiti and the Sandwich Islands, and, in 1813, returned to Boston, after four years of travel and adventure. In 1847 he married, and went to reside upon his farm in Berkshire, U.S. "Typee," the first work of this author, had an immense popularity, and in it was recounted in a delightjudgmann, and in rewas reconnect in a concentral ful manner his adventures in the Marquesas Islands. In his next works, "Omoo," "Martii," and "Redburn," the unknown regions of the Pacific Ocean were described with all his former vigour; but his style became by degrees eccentric and unequal. "The White Jacket," " Peter," and "Israel Potter," were subsequently produced, and were greated with almost as much popularity as his first works. Mr. Melville also supplied a number of romances and sketches to the periodical literature of his country. B. at New York, 1819.

MERCING, Haus, mem'-ling, a celebrated painter and missal illuminator of the 15th century, of the circumstances of whose life very little that is authentic is known. He is said to have become an inmate of the hospital of St. nave become an immate of the nospital of St.
John, at Burges, in 1477, and to have therein painted the exquisite pictures which still adorn the establishment. His most celebrated works are the "History of St. Ursula," "I he Marriage of St. Chahrine," and "The Descent Ton the Cross." As a decorator of missals and to the stablishment of the stable stable. church books, he was eminently successful; and the specimens of his art which have been preserved are accounted inestimable treasures.

D. at the close of the 15th century.

Mamnon, mem-non, a Greek historian, who wrote an account of the rulers of Heraclia, of which fragments have been preserved by Photius. They have also been translated into French by Gedoyn, and inserted in the fourth volume of the "Memoirs of the Academy of Inseriptions." Flourished in the 2nd century.

MEMNON, of the isle of Rhodes, an able general of Darius, king of Persia, whom he advised ratio desolate his country, in order to impede the progress of Alexander the Great, and then to attack Macedon; but this counsel was overruled by the other generals. After the battle of the Granicus, Memnon defended Miletus with vigour, took the isles of Chios and Losbos, carried terror into Greece, and was rear putting a stop to the conquests of Alexander, when he was carried off in the midst of his successes. His wife was taken prisoner with the family of Darius, and became the mistress of Alexander. D. at Mitylene, B.C. 333.

703

MENANDER, me-nun'-der, a Greek comic poet, who was called the prince of new comedy, and preferred to Aristophanes. All his plays are lost; but the six comedies of Terence were borrowed from him; by which we may form some indement of his excellence. B. 311 B.c. : D. 290 B.C.

Menuelssoun, Moses, men'-del-sone (which signifies Moses the son of Mendel), a learned German Jew. He was brought up for the parsuits of commerce, but devoted himself to lite-rature, in which he attained a distinguished reputation. In 1755 he published his first piece, entitled "Jerusalem;" in which he pretended that the principle of the Jewich religion is that the principle of the Sowish religion is defisin. His next work was "Pheedon; or, a Discourse on the Spirituality and immateriality of the Soul." In this excellent treatise the principle of the immateriality of the soul was acutely maintained. On account of this book. the author gained the appellation of the Socrates the author gamea the appearance of the Jews. He also wrote "Philosophical Works," "Letter to Lawater," "Commentary upon Feed-sastes," and a translation of the first book of the Old Testament, In 1729; p. 1786. lix.naclebrated

German musician, was grandson of the propeding. As early as his lith year, he distinguished ing. As early as nos roan year, to maniguasared himself as a planist and musical composer. His first work was the opera cutifled "The Wed-ding of Camacho;" this was quickly followed by the overture to Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," In 1829, having just completed his 20th year, he made his first visit to fongland, where his overture was played, and received with enthu-man. Thenceforth, he paid an almost annual visit to this country, where he felt he was even more appreciated than in his native land. "St. Paul," his first man in its native and. "St. rant," his first conductor, was composed for an English musical society, as was "Elijah," his third and hest work of the same kind. His last visit to Engliah took place in 1847, when he candeted his "Elijah," at London, litriningham, and Man-"Edjahr" at London, Birmingman, and Man-chester. In the same year, his health, which had been declining for some time, became very bad, and he went to reside in Switzerland; but, although he appeared to derive considerable benefit from the mountain air, he was carried off by an affection of the brain, soon after his on by an ancerton of the brain, soon meer instrume to Leipsic. He left behind a large collection of musical manuscripts, portions of which were published. Mendelssohn's works which were published. Metalessedm's works embrace every department of the musican's art; and it is the firm conviction of the most competent erities, that his oratorios "84. Paul" and "Hijah" will live to charm and delight the world as hone as the "Messiah" and the "Israel in Egypt" of the immertal Handol. B.

at Hamburg, 1809; n. at Leipsie, 1817.

Mendez, Moses, nea-des, an English poet, born in London of Jowish parentage, who received a liberal education at theford, and graduated as M.A. in 1750. He wrote some very popular musical entertainments, and reveral poems, which were published in one volume; and was the intimate friend of Thomson, p. 1753.

MENDOZA, Diego Hurtado, mendol-thu, an eminent Spanish statesman and scholar, under Charles V., who distinguished himself as a soldier, diplomatist, geographer, historian, and poet. Charles V. intrusted him with several important missions, and, during six years, he held the military command of Tuscany. He made a noble collection of Greek and Arabic manuscripts, and used all the resources of his wealth and power to advance learning. Under Philip II. he fell into disgrace, and was banished from the Spanish court; but his leisure was occupied by the composition of his "War against the Moors," and in collecting upwards of 400 Arabic manuscripts. At his death he bequeathed his library to the king. B. at Granada, 1503; D. at Madrid, 1575.

MENECRATES, mo-nek'-rai-te:s, a Greek physician, celebrated for his pride and vanity. He crowned himself like the master of the gods, and, in a letter which he wrote to Philip, king replied, "Philip to crates, greeting and better sense." Philip once invited him to his board; but a separate table was set for the arrogant physician, served only with perfumes and frankincense, while before the other guests was placed good and substantial cheer. Menecrates lived 360 B.c.

Menedraus, men-ed-e-mus, a Socratic philosopher, who was a native of Eretria. He was first a tent-maker, then a soldier, and lastly a disciple of Plato. He was called the Eretrian bull, on account of his grave and stolid look, p.301 B.c.

MENENIUS AGRIPPA. (SecAGRIPPA, Menenius.) MENGS, Anthony Raphael, mengs, a celebrated German painter, who studied under his father, painter to Augustus III., king of Poland, and subsequently greatly improved himself at Rome. Charles III. of Spain invited him to his kingdom, and became his patron. Mengs formed his style after Raffaelle, Correggio, and Titian. To his excellence as an artist, he added literary "The Life of Correggio," "Reflections on Beauty," and a treatise on "Taste in Painting," "On the Principal Pictures at Madrid," &c., which have been translated into English, with his life prefixed. B. at Aussig, Bohemia, 1728; D. at Rome, 1779.

MENNER, Sir John, mens, an English poet and wit of the 17th century, was a native of Sandwich, in Kent, and by profession a naval officer. He was knighted by Charles I., and obtained the post of comptroller of the navy, but was removed from his station during the civil war. At the Restoration, however, he regained his appointment, and attained to the rank of admiral. His postical productions are comprised in a small volume, entitled "Musarum Deliciæ." D. 1671.

MENNO, Simonis, or Simon, men'-no, chief of a sect which sprang up in Germany at the time of the Reformation, and which was called after his name, was originally aminister in Friesland, but left his parish, and, for a time, joined the Anabaptists. He gathered about him a number of disciples in Germany, Holland, and Flanders, maintained the necessity of rebaptism in adults, maintained the necessity of repayment in adults, and denied that Jesus Christ received a human body from the Virgin. The Mentonites still continue a considerable seet in Holland, and are not to be confounded with the Anabaptists. A considerable amount of curious information relating to Menno and his followers is to be found in Mosheim's "Ecclesiastical History." B. 1505; D. in Holstein, 1561.

MENSCHIKOFF, Alexander, men'-ski-kof, a prince of the Russian empire, was the son of a peasant, and the servant of a pastry-cook, who employed him to cry pies about the streets. His appearance pleasing Peter the Great, he took him into his service. Menschikoff soon insinuated himself into the confidence of his sovereign, who, in 1704, made him governor of Ingria, with the rank of major-general, and at length conferred on him the title of prince. In 1713 he was accused of peculation, and con-demned to pay a heavy fine, which the ezar re-mitted, and restored him to favour. Under the Czarina Catharine he had still more power, and Carria Cataurine he had still more power, and his daughter was married to Peter II, who made Menschikoff duke of Cozel, and grand master of the imperial hotel; but, by the intrigues of Dolgarouschki, mistross of the czar, he fell into disgrace, and was banished to his estate, where he lived in such magnificence that Peter was persuaded to send him, for his own safety, to Siberia, where he died in a poor hut,

1729. B. at Moscow, 1674.

MENSGRIKOFF, Alexander Serjevitsch, Prince, a Russian admiral and general, was the grandson of the preceding. He was at first attached to the embasy at Vienn; but, becoming aided-camp to Alexander I., in 1812, he shared in the military service of the period, and attained the grade of general. When Nicholas ascended the throne, he dispatched Menschikoff on a mission to Abbas-Mirza, shah of Persia, who, taking advantage of a revolt in the Russian army, suddenly broke off the negotiations, and the ambassador narrowly escaped death. In 1824 he commanded a division of the Russian army which took Anapa, and was afterwards severely wounded at the siege of Yarna. In 1831 he was appointed governor of Finland, and in 1834 attained the rank of admiral. In 1853 the Czar Nicholas sent him to Turkey on an embassy relative to the holy places; but his hanglitiness and obstinacy were little suited to further the end he had in view. In a short time he presented his ultimatum; his departure soon followed. The war with Russia was the result of this act, and when the allied forces landed in the Crimea, he was in the chief command of the Russian forces. Defeated at the Ahna, he hastily retisted Schastopol, and sank the Russian fleet at the entrance to the port. Shortly after the defeat at Inkermann, and the death of the Czar Nicholas, he fell ill, and was superseded in his command in the Crimea by Prince Gortschakoff. A few months later he was, however, charged with the defence of Cronstadt against the allied English and French fleets. In 1856 he was recalled to occupy a position at the court of the emperor Alexander Posture as a Life of the age of Minton, men'-for, a Greek artist of the age of Pericles. He excelled in polishing cups and a company them.

MENU, me-nu', a Hindoo legislator, and the supposed author of a code of laws and morality. This vast work, which is still extant, is written in verse, and in the Sanserit language. Sir Wil-liam Jones translated it into English in 1796. The Hindoos consider Menu as the son of Brahma, and the first created man. There is no authentic date to be assigned for his birth, but the ode which is attributed to him is considered to be older than the Vedas, which latter were composed about the 11th or 12th century B.C. MERCATOR, Gerard, mer-kail-for, a celebrated geographer, who composed a Chronology, a greater and lesser Atlas, and "Geographical Tables;" also "A Treatise on the Creation," &c. He was the first to represent the meridians by equidistant parallel lines, and the

Mersch

parametes of congruence by once at right angles with the meridian; whence the name Mercator's Projection, now employed in nautical maps. He engraved and coloured his own maps. n. in Flanders, 1512; p. 1694.

Nicholas, an eminent mathematician, who settled in England, where he became fellow of the Royal Society, and published several valuable works on astronomy.

B. 1640; D. about 1690.

MERCIER, Louis Schastien, mair'-sc-ai, a celebrated French author, who wrote works in almost every department of literature. In 1781 he commenced his celebrated "Picture of Paris, wherein he dissected the social system of the French capital with so much vigour and truth. that he judged it prudent to leave Paris and earry on the publication in Switzerland. So completely did this work exhibit the corruption , and frivolities of French society, that its publication has been claimed as one of the great precursors of the French revolution. He returned cursors of the French revolution, and edited the "Particulate Annals," a regulation, and edited the "Particulate Annals," a regulation of journal, but moderate in tone, as at Paris, 1749; p. 1844. MERLEY, Matthew, mer'i-an, a German en-graver, who set up a book and print busness at Frankfort-on-the-Alaine. Many of his ougrav-

Frankort-on-the-Alame. Blany of his chigary-ing were excellent. He published the "Topo-graphy of the Universe," in 31 volumes. B. at lbsscl, 1563; D. about 1050.
Merila, Matthew, an eminent German painter, chiefly of portraits, was son of the pre-cading. As a stream to device in the prepainter, enemy of portraits, was son of the pre-ceding. As a stadent, ho derived instruction from Sandrart, from Vandyck in London, from Les wear at Paris, and from Carlo Maratti at Rome. Although he produced some historical pieces, his fame chiefly rests upon his portraits. The emperor Leopold L and some of the highest men and must enument of se-German princes and nobles sat to him. Upon the death of his father, he carried on his business, without, however, neglecting his professional efforts. B. at Basel, 1621; D. 1637.
MBRLN, Sibylla Maria, a celebrated naturalist, who excelled in drawing insects, flowers, rains, who excelled in drawing insects, nowers, and fruits, was sister of the painter, and daughter of the engraver, mentioned above. She became the wife of John Andriez Graff, a painter, in 1665; but her own name was so celebrated as an artist, that her husband's was prevented from being adopted. She painted flowers and insects after nature with scrupulous exactness, and, in 1699, undertook a voyage to Surinam in order to make drawings of the insects of that country. Although her fame mainly rests upon her artistic performances, she was an excellent writer. Her principal work was, the "Origin of Caterpillars; their Nourishment and Changes," which was afterwards enlarged by herself and daughters, and was reproduced in France by daugnors, and was reproduced in France by Marret, under the title of "Histoire Générale des Insectes de l'Europe." She also wrote "Generation and Transformation of the Insects of Surinam." Both of these works were published in Paris under the general title of "Hisin 1771. Sir Hans Sloane purchased many of her drawings for a considerable sum, and they are drawings for a consacrasor sum, and they are now continued in the physical residual reasons are now continued in the physical residual residual parallels of longitude by lines at right angles profession of the law; but after the revolution of 1830 obtained high employment under the consti tutional government. In 1831 he was appointed to an inspectorship of the antiquities of France. The duties of his office caused him to make several archeological tours throughout France. and the result was the publication of a number of illustrated works of considerable importance. In 1844 he was elected a member of the French Academy. In addition to his archaeological labours, he wrote historical works, romances, labours, he wrote historical works, ronamees, and plays. His bestknown historical studies were the "Jacqueria" and "Chronicle of the Reiem of Charles LX." of his nevels, one became European in its popularity—this was "Colomba," a wonderful between Correlational Colomba, and recently a wonderful between the contained only a small amount of n. at Paris, 1803.

MERIMER, Prosper, mer-e-mai, a modern he remained until the French litterateur, who was educated for the session of the country.

Market Audresse mark-this a Betti, Market Audresse mark-this a Betti.

MERGIN, Ambrose, mer'-lin, a Britis who lived about the year 480, and was in his time as a magician and propi t. The idlest tales are told of him by some ancient writers; such as that he was currendered by an incubus, and that he conveyed by enchantment the stupendous stones on Salisbury Plain from Ireland. There also pass under his name some extravagant predictions. Near Carmarthea is a mount called Merlin's Hill, beneath which traditon relates that he was buried.

Murovavs, mer-o-re'-us, hinger Prance, sucoccided Clodion in 41s, and defeated Attila in 451. He is said to have extended the bounds of his kingdom to Treves, which city he took and plundered. He began the race of French kings called Merovingian, n. about 111; n. 458.

and poet, fermed by Lowth one of the best of as' "Car sture of Troy," and poems on sacred subjects but his principal performance is a version of the Psalins, with annotations. u. 1720; p. 1769.

MERRY, Robert, merere, a dramatic writer, was the son of a London merchant, and received his education at Harrow and at Christ's College, Cambridge, after which he entered at Lincoln's Inn; but, abandoning legal study, bought a commission in the Guards, which sertice he also quitted, and went abroad. He became a member of the Della Crusean Academy at Florence, and affixed that signature to a number of poems, which appeared in the Fug-lish newspapers, and became the object of the satire of Gifford, in his "Bavisd" and "Maviad." In 1791 Merry married Miss Brunton, an actress, with whom he went to America, where be died.
His dramatic compositions are, "L - - - - ," a

greaty: "The Magician no Company, "Pégetty; "The Magician no Com...., 'Pé-néion," and "Ambitious Vengeauce," p. 1755;

D. 1798. , John Andrew van der, mairsh, tho famous leader of the Brabant patriots in 1789, entered the French service, in which he acquired the title of "The Brave Floming." He afterwards served in the Austrian army, and rose to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. By a series of ful operations against the imperial troops he remained until the Austrians recovered pos-

MIERSENNE, Marin, mair-sen', an eminent where he occupied himself in the composition French mathematician, who in 1015 was apo of a new work upon his discovery. Mismer's pointed professor of philosophy at Nevers, principal works were "Momoirs on the Disco-After resigning this office, as well as that of very of Animal Magnetism," and "Collection superior of the convent in which he lived, he travelled in Italy, Germany, and the Nether-lands. He subsequently took up his final resi-dence at Paris. His chief work was "Harmonic Universelle," which contains a variety of useful information connected with the science of music. B. 1588; D. at Paris, 1648.

MERTON, Walter de, mer'-ton, a learned and munifleent prelate of the 18th century, and founder of the college which bears his name at Oxford, was born at Alerton, in Surrey, and educated at the convent of that place. After obtaining several preferments, he became lord chancellor in 1258; was deprived of the seal the same year by the barons, but restored to it in 1261, and in 1274 conscerated bishop of Roches-

r. D. 1277. Mesmer, Frederick Antony, mes'-mer, a celebrated German physician, who first propagated the doctrines of animal magnetism, long called Mesmerism, after his name. In 1766 he took the degree of M.D. at the university of Vienna, and wrote a treatise on the "Influence of the Planets upon the Human Body." In conjunction with Father Hell, a Jesuit and professor of astronomy at Vienna, Mesmer, in 1772, engaged in a series of investigations relative to the influence of the loadstone in curing disease. They achieved what they termed an "extraor-They achieved what they termed an "extraor-dinary success;" but Hell having published a work in which he declared Mesmer to be only a physician who had been employed by him to practically test the new discovery, the latter engaged in a violent controversy with his rival. All the scientific men of Vienna, however, sided with Hell, and Mesmer, who was pronounced to be an impostor, was obliged to quit the city, He visited several parts of Germany and Switzerland, everywhere working astonishing cures, and, in 1778, reached Paris, where he speedily became the most popular professor of the healing art in the French capital. Thousands of people, from peer to peasant, flecked to his apartments for the purpose of being "mesmo-rized." In a short time, however, he found a rival in a French physician, who embraced his doctrine, and practised it with such success as the gain £100,000 in fees from his patients.

Mesmer declared that he was rained, and applied to the government to grant him "a chateau and its lands, where he might be enabled to continue his treatment at leisure, and inde-pendently of persecution." The French government would not comply with this request, but Mesmer was offered a very large sum, on condition that he would permit certain individuals named by government to witness his proceed-ings, and report thereon. He soon afterwards ings, and report thereon. ligs, and report incream. He soon ancewards left France and settled at Spa, whither a crowd of wealthy patients followed him. A subscription was subsequently entered into for his benefit, and the sum of £14,000 was raised. With this money Mesmer returned to Paris, and again commenced his public treatment; but of Facts and Documents relative to Animal Magnetism."B.atMarsburg, Baden, 1734; D. 1815.

MESSALINA, Valeria, mes-sa-le'-na, wife of the emperor Claudius, was of a most libidinous character, and committed adultery with all the officers of her court. Having been repudiated by Claudius, she espoused her favourite, Silius, who was put to death with her, by order of the emperor, A.D. 46. She was as cruel as she was debauched, and caused many distinguished Romans to be put to death.—There was another of the same name, who was the third wife of Nero, after her first husband, Atticus, had been put to death by that tyrant. On the death of Nero, she devoted the remainder of her days to study, and acquired a great reputation.

MESTON, William, mes'-ton, a burlesque poet, was educated at Aberdeen University, where he became professor of philosophy in Marischal college. He was an accomplished scholar and mathematician; but is best known by his bur-lesque poems called "Mother Grim's Tales,"

B. 1698; D. 1745.

Metastasio, the Abbé Peter Bonaventure, martastasia, an eminent Italian poet, who carly displayed a genius for poetry, and wrote verses at the age of six years; and was only fourteen when he composed his tragedy, "II Giastino." A celebrated lawyer and critic, named Gravina, was his instructor, and made him his heir when he died. In 1724 Metastasic pro-duced his play of "Dido," acted at Naples, with the music of Sarro. The success of this piece stimulated him to follow up the same career; and, in 1729, the emperor Charles VI. invited him to Vienna, where he gave him a large pension. The empress Maria Theresa bestowed upon him magnificent presents, as also did Ferdinand VI., king of Spain. The emporor offered him a patent of nobility, and the empress the order of St. Stephen; but he declined both. the order of St. Stephen; but he declined both. He wrote a great number of operas and other dramatic pieces, which are highly admired in his native country. n. at Rome, 1698; n. at Vienna, 1792. In England he is chiefly known as the author of the libretif of several operas, such as "Artaserse," "La Clomenza di Tito," and "Semiramide."

METOALES, Charles Theophilus, Lord, met'-kaf, a distinguished British colonial statesman, at the age of afteen was sent out to India as a cadet in the Company's service, where, for seven years he filled various offices, and in 1809 was selected by Lord Minto to take charge of a difficult mission to the court of Lahore, the object of which was to secure the Sikh states, between the Sullej and Jumna rivers, from the grasp of Runjeet Singh. In this he fully succeeded, the treaty being concluded in 1809. He subsequently filled several other high offices of trust; and, in 1835, upon Lord W. Bentinek's resignation, was provisionally appointed governor-general, which office he held until Lord Auckland's arrival, in chose persons who had conducted the subscription having set up a society for graduitously in the year following. During this short period practising minnal magnetism, Mesmer, inding no more money was to be got out of his discopers so I inva from all restrictions. This, howevery, left France, and repaired to England, ever, giving umbrage to the direction of the directions. This, howevery, left France, and repaired to England, ever, giving umbrage to the directions of the directions of the direction of the direct subsequently returned to his native country, was appointed governor of Jamaica—the difficult duties of which (the emancipation of the negroes having but recently occurred) he discharged to the satisfaction both of the government and the colonists. After two years' residence, the climate proved so unfavourable to his health, that he was compelled to resign; but was shortly afterwards selected to undertake the government of Canada. In this important post, his judgment, firmness, and general states-manlike qualities were most advantageously exerted; and he was raised to the prerage by the title of Baron Metcalfe. His health, how-ever, was greatly impaired by long service in such widely different climates as India and Canada, and in 1845 he once more returned to his native country, but did not long survive. B. in Berkshire, 1785; p. 1846.

Metelli

METELLI, Augustin, mai-tai'-le, an eminent painter, who excelled in painting perspective painter, who excelled in painting prespective and architecture; and, in conjunction with Michael Angelo, produced several great works. a. at Bologna, 1009; p. at Marid, 1000.

MERELUE, Q. Cleilles, metel-we, an illustricus Roman, who distinguished linnself against Jugurlba, king of Numidin (a. c. 109), and thence acquired the name of Numilhieus.

METIUS, James, me'-te-us, a native of North Holland, who is said by Descartes to have been the inventor of the refracting telescope. About the beginning of the 17th century, this in-dividual, "while one day amusing himself with a few burning-glasses, after looking through them singly, began to look through them by pairs, placing one at each extremity of a short tube. In this way a convex and concave lens happening to be employed together, the first refracting telescope is said to have been constructed." Barlow, in his "History of Optics," however, declares that the refracting telescope must have been known in England at a much earlier date. Metius lived in the 17th century.

METON, me'-ton, an Atheniau mathematician who invented what is called in chronology the golden number. Flourished 432 n.c.

Metrodorus, met-ro-dor'-us, a disciple of Democritus, and the master of Anaxarchus and Hippocrates. He was a physician of Chios, and maintained that the matter of the universe is eternal, Flourished 414 B. c.

METTERNICH, Clement Wenceslas, Prince, met'-ter-nik, a celebrated German diplomatist. His ancestors had been distinguished in the wars of the empire against the Turks, and his father, Count Metternich, had obtained some distinction as a diplomatist, and as the associate of Kaunitz. At the age of lifteen, he entered the university of Strasburg, and, two years afterwards, removed to Mayenec, to com-plete his studies. In 1790 he made his first appearance as master of the ceremonies at the coronation of the emperor Leopold II.; and, in 1794, after a short visit to England, was attached to the Austrian embassy at the Hague, in the following year marrying the heiress of his father's friend Kaunitz. All this time he was serving his apprenticeship in diplomacy. He serving his apprenticeship in diplomacy. He his power was really gone. Renowned rather first came into notice at the congress of Rastadt, than great, "venerated more for his age than where he represented the Westphalian nobility, for power,—admired, but not lamented, the old after which he accompanied Count Stadion to Stateman passed away. n. 1773; n. 1898.

St. Petersburg; was, in 1801, appointed ministed Mauss, Anthony Francis van der, meh? 'len, at the court of Dresden; then, in 1894, proceeded as ambassador to Berlin, where he foot Louis XIV. on his campaigns, the incidents of a leading part in forming the well-known coalition which was dissolved by the battle of Ansing the horse, he was without an equal in his terlitz. After the peace of Fresburg, he became

Austrian minister at the court of Napoleon. The rise of the young ambassador had been unusually rapid, and the French emperor greeted him with the remark, "You are very young to represent so powerful a monarchy;" "Your majesty was not older at Austerlitz," replied majesty was not oner at Austernit, Tepnea Metternich, with all the address of a courtier. When war broke out, in 1800, he refurned to the Austrian court, then about to seek refuge in the fortress of Comorn, and was appointed minister of foreign affairs. It was during his tenure of office, that he struck out the idea of a marriage between Napoleon and an Austrian archduchess. Napoleon was divorced from Josephine, and Maria-Louisa was escorted by Metternich to Paris. But Austria had only adopted termen to raiss. Due awstra macony aropica this course as an expedient, and, after the French defeat in Russia, again deel ared war against France. The grand alliance was signed at Tophitz in the same year, and Metternich was, upon the spot, created a prince of the empire. He took a very prominent part in the subsequent conferences and treaties, and signed the treaty of Paris on behalf of Austria. He afterwards past a visit to Eugland, and received the honour of a doctor's degree from the university of Oxford. Upon the opening of the congress of Vienna, he was chosen president. With the continental statesmen, the war against Napoleon was also a war against revolutionary principles. England, however, fought not against principles, but for self-pre-servation. What the potentials of the confinent desired quite as much as the putting down of Napoleon, was the extinction of revolution. This was the aim of that "Holy Albanee" which has been the object of merited oblo-quy, and of which Metternich was the prequy, and or which acceptance was the pre-siding genius. In 1822, when Cauning assumed the direction of the Foreign Office, England entered an indignant protest against this infamous compact. After the French revolution of 1830, the emperor Francis exclain ed, "All is lost;" Mettermeh, however, thought otherwise. When Pius IX, ascended the papal throne, in 1846, his professions aroused all Italy, and Austrian influence was shaken throughout the peninsula. The French revolution followed, and half the thrones of Europe were emptied of their occupants. At Vienna the shock was also felt; the government felt, in spite of the resistance of Metternich, who maintained his state policy to the last. To calm the people, the old diplomatist was asked to resign : he answered, diplomatist was asked to resign: he answered, "I will not recisin, gentlemen; I will not resign." The arehuluke John, without replying to Metternich, simply repeated his former statement: "I have already told you, Prince Meternich, resign." "What I is this the r turn I get for my fifty years' services?" he said, and the next day left the city with an escort of cavalry. He went to England, where he remained some time. In 1851 he again appeared at the Austrian court, but the old diblomatist. manuer, some time. In 1881 he again appeared at the Austrian court; but the old diplomatist was never again requested to undertake office; his power was really gone. Henowned rather than great,—venerated more for his age than for power,—admired, but not lamented, the old

MEYER, Jeremiah, mi'-er, a miniature painter, a native of Tubingen, who went to England in 1749, with his father, a portrait painter, who placed him under Zincke, the eminent painter in enamel, but he soon surpassed him. In 1761, cuamet, but he soon surpassed mm. In 1761, the Society of Arts having offered a premium for the best drawing of a profile of the king, the prize was gained by Meyer; and he was afterwards appointed painter in enamed to their majesties, and was one of the founders of the Royal Academy. B. 1735; D. 1789. MEXERBERR, Giacomo, mi'-er-bair, a cele-METERBERS, Glacomo, mi'-er-beir, a cele-brated composer, of Ilelorew desent, who came of a wealthy family, and was the schoolfellow of Carl Maria von Weber. His first draunatic piece, "Jephtha's Danghter," was produced at Berlin when he was only 18 years of age. His style was furmed upon the Italian models. His style was furmed upon the Italian models. His best opens were "Semiramide," "Robert le Diblo," "Les Hugenots," "Le Prophète," "L'Etolie du Nord," and "Dinorah," Another opens, entitled "L'Africalue," was produced in 1855, after his dark a sit leglu 1704t. p. 1851 1865, after his death. B. at Berlin, 1794; D. 1861. 1865, after his death. B. at Berlin, 1794; p. 1801, MENERGE, ISSCAMUR! Rush. mer. "vish, an eminent antiquary, whose chief works were "Arms and Armour," "Costume of the Original Inhabitants of the British Islands," and "A Critical Enquiry into Ancient Armour, as it existed in Europe, but more particularly in England, from the Norman Conquest to the Reign of Charles II." B. 1783: D. 1848.

MEZERAT, François Eudes de, mez'-e-rai, an eminent French historian, who was educated at the university of Caen; on leaving which, he the university of Caen; on leaving which, he obtained a military employment, and served two or three campaigns in Flanders. Having abandoned the army, he projected the "History of France," while writing which he was liberally encouraged by Cardinal Richelieu; and on its completion in 1651, obtained a pension from the king. He was also admitted a member of the Academy, and had a principal share in the convollation of that distinguer. Bestless his the Academy, and nad a principal snare in the compilation of their dictionary. Besides his "History of France," and an abridgment, he wrote a treatise on the "Origin of the French," a continuation of the "History of the Turks," several satires against the ministry, "History of a Mother and Son," &c. D. 1610; D. 1683.

MEZZOTANTI, JOSCIN CASPAT, Med-so-fund-te, a chalabrated liquids the step of a compacture.

celebrated linguist, was the son of a carnenter. celebrated inguist, was tame son of a carpenter, and was intended for the same trade; but being taken under the patronage of Father Respight taken under the university of Bologna, where he so distinguished himself, that at the age of 22 he was appointed professor of Arable. At that period he was master of the Latin, Greek, Ithorew, Arable, Spunish, French, German, and Swedish languages. During the war of which northern Italy was so long the field, Mezzofanti came into contact with soldiers of the Austrian, Russian, and French armies, and aways the Russian, and French armies, and area with the opportunity such meetings afforded him of studying the modern languages to the best account. In 1812, be became assistant, and in 1815, chief librarian of his university; and princess, a few months after the death of her every traveller through Bologna made a point in the visited the place, called him "a walking loyled to receive the place, called him "a walking loyled to retire to a monaster of languages, and a Briarcas Turks, and Michael regained the throne. In of parts of speech." In 1822, according to Lady Morgan, he spoke forty languages. Although of the Turks, and Michael was obliged to retire he had received many flattering offers to take up his residence in Paris, terma, and Russian the findend was obliged to retire to a monastery. He afterwards took orders, up his residence in Paris, terma, and Russian the findend was obliged to retire to a monastery. He afterwards took orders, up his residence in Paris, terma, and Russian the findend was obliged to retire to a monastery. He afterwards took orders, up his residence in Paris, terma, and Russian the findend was obliged to retire to a monastery. He afterwards took orders, up his residence in Paris, terma and the call of the control of the empire daring the minority of John some minor posts, he was nominated keeper of the Vaticau library, retaining the post until the year 1838, when he was created a cardinal. Mezzofauti, although incomparably the greatest linguist that ever lived, left no works, philo-logical or otherwise, to perpetuate his fame; and notwithstanding his ability to express himself in fifty-six different languages, and his acquaintance with sixty-four others, he wrote nothing of importance relative to any one of them. n. at Bologna, 1774; n. at Rome, 1849. MICHARLI, mv-kel, emperor of the East, succeeded to the throne on the death of Staura-chius, in 811. He was a great prince, and the father of his people; but was deposed by Lee the Armenian, his general, in 813. He then retired to a monastery, where he spent the remainder of his days in devotion.

MICHAEL II. was born in Upper Phrygia, of obscure family: but was ennobled by Leo the Armenian. That monarch afterwards sent him to prison, and condemned him to death; but the night previous to his intended execution, Leo was assassinated, and Michael placed on the throne, A.D. 820. He endeavoured to force his subjects to celebrate the Jewish sabbath and passover, and was guilty of great cruelties; on which his general, Euphemius, revolted, and proclaimed himself emporor; but tius, patriarch of Constantinople, into exile. Michael afterwards put Bardas to death, and elevated Basil the Macedonian to the title of Casar, by whom he was assassinated in 867

MICHARI IV., usually styled the Paphlagonian, from the country where he was born, of obscure parentage, obtained the imperial throne in 1034, through the influence of the empress/oe, who, having fallen in love with him, murdered her husband, Romanus Argyropulus, to obtain her wishes. Michael made war, with success, against the Saracens and Bulgarians; and afterwards retired to a monastery, where he died in 1041.

MICHAEL V. succeeded his uncle, the preced-MICHAEL V. Succeeded its union, one preced-ing emperor, in 1041, after having been adopted by the empress Zoo, whom he exiled a few months afterwards, which so irritated the people, that they deprived him of his eyes and sent him to a monastery. Zoe and her sister Theodora then reigned in conjunction.

MICHAEL VI., or the Warrior, reigned after the empress Theodorn, in 1056; but, the year following, was compelled to relinquish the sceptre to Isaac Comnenus; on which Michael a union between the Greek and Latin churches, a union between did not succeed. Popo Martin IV. excommunicated him, as the supporter of herees and schism. D. 1282.—Prom the termi-nation of the short relem of Isaac II. in 1204 until 1261, the seat of the Eastern empire under its Greek princes was at Nicc.

Michael Angelo

Middleton

MICHAEL ANGELO BUONAROTTI, an'-jai-to bo-na-rot'-te, a celebrated Italian painter, sculptor, and architect, was born of an ancient Tuscan family, and evinced, from his earliest youth, the greatest talent for art. He was placed under the tuition of Domenichino and Ghirlandajo, the two most celebrated artists of the time; the two most egicoratea artists of the time; but quitted them at the age of fifteen years, having already acquired all that they could teach him. Lorenzo de' Medici soon afterwards assigned him apartments in his palace, and treated him as if he were his own son. At the death of his magnificent patron, his fame was established. Popo Julius II, invited him to settle at Rome, where Michael Angelo carved the mausoleum of that pontiff; he also painted in fresco sheam of the Sistine chapel, and was, in succession, the favourite artist with three popes,—Leo X., Paul III., and Julius III. At the age of forty, he turned his attention to architecture, and constructed one of the grandest examples of that art,-the cupola of St. Peter's. Michael Angelo's commanding genius has never been contested: all place him in the first rank as painter, sculptor, and architect. At Mantia there is a "Sleeping Cupid," and at Rome a "Dacchus," which Raffaelle said were worthy of Phidias or Praxiteles. His "Last Judgment" remains a marvellous proof of his great genius as a painter. Beauties and excellences of all kinds are to be seen in his works; but his manner was sometimes exaggerated, -a defect which may be pardoned in one who was ever seeking to attain the sublime in art. He was the nuthor of some sonnets. B. 1475; D. 1564.
MICHARLIS, John David, mil-ai-lis, a learned orientalist and biblical critic, was born at Halle, in Saxony, and there educated. He visited England, and for a time was preacher at the German chapel, St. James's valuee; and on his return to Germany was made professor of theology at Göttingen; was honoured with the order of the Polar Star, conferred on him by the king of Sweden; and was made an aulie councillor of Hanover. Among the most valuable of his works are his "Introduction to the New Testament," translated into English by Hishop Marsh, and his "Commentaries on the Law of Moses." p. 1717; p. 1791.

MICHAUD, Joseph, me'sho, a French historian, who was a member of the Institute under the first empire, and celebrated, in verse, the marriage of Napoleon and the birth of the king marriage of Napoleon and the birth of the king of Rome. Under the restoration he acted as newspaper censor. His principal works were, "Ilistory of the Crusades," and "History of the Hundred Days." 2. in Savoy, 1767; J. 1839, MICHELET, Jules, met-kk-tai, an eminent modern French historian, who, in 1829, was appointed teacher of history and languages and the Calleon Rollin. Haconymond has likensus attention of the government towards him as a a reservoir prepared for its reception at Sadlers

Lascaris, whom he deprived of his throne and writer of research. He received the appoint-his eyes, in 1200. The year following, he retook ment of chief officer in the historical depart-Constantinople. He signed an act for effecting ment of the French Archives, and was soon afterwards selected by (juizet to continue the latter's lectures on history to the Faculty of Literature. In 1838 he was appointed professor of history in the College of France. In 1845-16 considerable attention was directed towards two works of this author, translations of which appeared in England, under the titles, "The People," and "Priests, Women, and Familles," In consequence of the attacks made in these works upon the coelesiastical party, Guizet, the prime minister, interdicted his lectures. In 1847 he co nmenced his "History of the French Revolution;" upon which, and the "History of France," he was for several years engaged. His latest works are "The Bird," "The Insect," "The Soreerer," and two small treatises on social questions. D. at Paris, 1793.

Mickle, William Julius, mik-el, a poet, born at Laughelm, in Dundriesshire, was first raced in business as a brewer; but not sueecceling, went to London, and devoted him-self to literature. In 1765 he was employed as corrector of the press in the Clarendon printingoffice at Oxford, where he published a poem, called "The Concubine," in imitation of Spenser, emilet "The concuous, in mutation of spenser, which he afterwards republished under the title of "Sir Martyn." His principal produc-tion, a translation of "The Lusiad" of Camoens, appeared in 1775; prefixed to which is a historical and critical Introduction, with a life of Camoens. He was also the author of many of the linest pieces in Evans's "Old Ballads?" and in 1778 accompanied his friend Commodore Johnstone on a mission to Lisbon as secretary.

MIDDLETON, William, mid'-cl-ton, a Welsh poet, soldier, and sailor, was born at Gwenynog, Denbirhshire, served in the armies of Queen Elizabeth, and afterwards commanded a ship of war. He wrote a paraphrase of the Book of Psalms in Welsh verse, and was also the author of the "Art of Poetry." D. 1545. Middlerox, Thomas, an English dramatio author, who wrote in conjunction with Jonson, Flotcher, and Massinger. Three of his plays,—

"A Mad World, my Masters," "The Mayor of Queenborough," and "The Rearing Girl,"—are included in Dodsley's collection of old plays, These were his best works; but there are many others by him. n. about 1020.

MIDLETON, or MYODLETON, Sir Hugh, a wealthy cilizen and goldsmith of Loudon, who, weating cutzen and goldsmith of Loudon, who, in 1600, offered, at his own cost, to supply London with pure water. His proposal being accepted, he commenced what he termed the Now. Binary that the termed the "New River," selecting the Chadwell and Amwell springs at Ware, in Heritordshire, as the sources thereof. The river had a course of 37 miles, and its projector had stipulated to complete it in four years; but the mechanical appliances of that day not proving equal to such a speedy accomplishment of the work, and Middleton's fortune being, moreover, exhausted, he applied to his fellow-citizens for assistance. Meeting with no response, he petitioned James I., who entered into an agreement with him to pay half the present or prospective expenses, on condition of being entitled to half the proappointed bearing or instary and suggested as yet must the present or prospective expensions the College Rollin. He commenced his literary on condition of being satisfied to half the procureer by the composition of several elementary works on the study of history, which, ob work was completed, and on the 39th of September of the start of the considerable popularity, attracted the ber, 1613, the water of the New River entered elements of the considerable popularity. Wells, near Peutonville. The work had occupied live years and five months in its execution, and had cost £50,000. There was no dividend, however, for ninoteen years, and then only one under £12. Meanwhile Middleton had been knighted, but had been compelled to sell his shares, and made a profession of what is now termed civil engineering. In acknowledgment of his sorvices, he was created a baronot in 1622. These services were set forth as follows:—"For bringing to the city of London, with excessive charge and greater difficulty, a new cut, or river of fresh water, to the great benefit and mestimable preservation thereof. 2. For gaining a very great and spacious quantity of land, in Brading Haven, in the Isle or Wight, out of the bowelles of the sea; and, with banks and pyles, and most strange defensible and charge-able mountains, fortifying the same against the violence and fury of the waves," &c. In 1836, Charles I. made over to Sir Hugh the whole of his father's shares in the New Ever for a yearly set of £500. In data propose, and well fully the control of the control rent of £500. In date unknown; p. about 18th Maintenant Convers, eventual 18th Maintenant Convers, eventual 18th Maintenant Convers, eventual 18th Maintenant Converse of the seaders of the west close of the 18th Maintenant Converse of the Maintenant Converse of th

Migras, Francis, sucer's, called the Elder, a celebrated Dutch painter, was the disciple of Gerard Douw, whose manner he imitated. His pictures are very valuable. n. at Leyden, 1835; D. 1831.—10 had a son, William Mieris, called the Younger, who was a good landscape-painter, and a modeller in chy and wax. n. at Leyden, 1803; D. 1747.—His grandson Francis was also a carled in the sense line. In 1804. Service of the control of the control of the care of the ca r, Francis Augustus Alexis, neceyi, a noodern French historian, who was educated for the legal profession at Aix, but removed to Paris, where he lougde with M. Thiers, and in 1824 produced, when only 28 years of general results of 1826, and the second of the second removed to 1826, and was associated with Armand Carrel and Thiers in conducting the "National" After the revolution of 1830, he was appointed director of the archives in the foreign ministerial department, which office he vacated in 1848. His principal works are, "History of Mary Staart," Carries v., "Western Louis XIV.," and several treatises on Moral and Political Science. p. at Aix, 1700.

1002; b. 1797.—His graduson Francis was also an artist in the same line. D. 1783; D. 1763. MIGNARD, Peter, meeri-jurd, called the Roman, from his long residence in Rome, was the favourite artist of Louis XIV., whose portrait he painted ten times. He also adorned the palaces of St. Cloud and Versailles, and was ennobled by Louis. D. 1619; D. 1696.

Mills Mary Sir Walter, mild -may, a stateshuist of great integrity, while delegate structures.

MILDMAX, Sir Waller, milet-may, a statesmust of great integrity, who filled soveral situations under the Tudors. Under Henry VIII, he was employed in the court of augmentation; under Edward VI. he had an office in the mint; in queon Mary's reign he sat in Paviliament as member for Cumberland; and in Elizabeth's, he was appointed chancellor of the exchequer, an office which he held for 23 years, and dis-harged with zeal and impartiality. He was the founder of Emanuel College, Cumbridge. D. 159.9

Milkhouse, Robert, milkhoos, by trade a weaver, possessed much of the poot's power as well as of the poot's feeling. His "Vicisitude" and "Sherwood Forest," contain passages of which any poot might be proval; but are greatly marred by a melancholy and querellous tone. His productions made him many generous friends; and though not rich, he excapat from the sufferings attendant on genius in poverty, Shortly before his death he published "The Destines of Man," a poem in two parts, which contains several bourtiful passages, p. 1849.

contains several beautiful passenges. B. 1890.

The several beautiful passenges. B. 1890.

State, John, mtl, a tenned divine and tiblicat critic, was born at Shalp, in Westmoreland; received his education at Queen's College, Orford; became rector of Bietchingdon, in Oxfordshire, prebendary of Canterbury, and chaplain ordinary to Charles II. It was employed 30 years in preparing a valuable cellion of the Greek Testament, with various readings, amounting in number, it is said, to upwards of 30,000. B. 1645 p. 2.1707.

Mrn., James, an eminont historian, who, after receiving some education at the grammar-school of Montrose, and continuing it in the house of Sir John Stant, all.P. for Kinerdineshire, was sent to the University of Edinburgh to study for the Church. After distinguishing himself as a Greek scholar, he obtained a license to preach in 1783; but, changing his views, he, two years afterwards, went to London with Sir John Stuart. For some time he supported this self by means of the "Literary Journal;" ami, on the discontinuance of that print, was engaged to write for others, and occasionally contributed to the "Edinburgh Review." He commenced his "Lithory of thish India" in 1806, and completed it in 1818. This great work was much decreled at one time. Macaulay wrote bitterly against both it and its author, but changed and ability displayed in the course of this history, led to his being employed as head of the Correspondence Department of the East India Company. Besides his great work on India, Mr. Mill contributed articles on Education, Government, Jurisprudence, Law of Nations, Liberty of the Press, &c., to the "Encyclopedia Britannica." In 1822 he published "The Elements of Political Economy," and, seren years subsequently, "The Analysis of the Phenomena of the Human Mind." His latest Grots were the "Frement on Macintosh," and the articles on "The Formation of Opinions" and "The Ballot," in the "Westminster Review." n. at Montrose, 1773; p. 1836.

Mrs., John Staart, an eminent writer on pelitical ceanomy, the son of the preceding, was at an early age appointed to a clerkship in the East India I fours, and was to the prade of canminer of Indian correspondence, the post formerly hold by his father. It is first ilterary efforts appeared in the form of centributions to the Westminster and Edinburgh Reviews; but the work which made him generally known was his "System of Logic, Ratioeinative and Inductive," the first edition of which was published in 1843. The practical portion of this work was, says its author, "an attempt to contribute something towards the solution of an duestion which the decay of old opinions and the agitation that disturbs European society to work was the "Rssays on some Unsettled Questions of Political Economy," in 1844. The more extensive "Principles of Political Economy," succeeded this in 1861. Among his other works may be named "An Essay on Liberty," and "Thoughts on Parliamentary Reform," produced in 1859; "Considerations on Representative (dovernment," in 1861; and an "Examination of Sir William Hamilton's Philosophy," in 1865. If was one of the meabers for the city of Westminster from 1865 to 1868. n. 1809.

Mittats, John Everett, mill-luis, an eminent English painter, and the acknowledged head of that body of innovators in modern art termed the "Pre-Raffiellite" school, or, as it was formerly, called, the "Pre-Raffiellite Brother-hood." A student of drawing from a very certy-period, he entered the Royal Aendemy school, and, by the time he had reached his nineteenth you, had carried off all the honours to be called in that probationary sphere. With William Holman Humb (see Hvsv) and others, he assisted in founding the "Brotherhood" mentioned above, and, in 1839, exhibited his first picture in the new style, which was afterwards to become celebrated. The picture was not named, but was a representation of the child Jesus in the shoo of his repute father, Joseph the carpenter. This picture shadowed forth all the great qualities, no less than the defects, of the painter. It was harsh, uncouth, and medicaval in its drawing and perspective; but it was full of thought, invention, richness of colour, and displayed great power over pencil and brush. Year after year Mr. Millais departed further from his old manner, and ultimately became one of the bast of modern English minters. Most poople are acquainted with his beautiful works, called, respectively, "The Order of Release," and "Autumr#Leaves." Horder of Release, and "Autumr#Leaves." AR. A. in 1858, and ill. A. it 1808. s. at South-

Millar, John, mill-lar, a learned writer, was been at Shotts, in Lamrkshire, and educated at Glasgow, where, by the interest of Lord Kames, in whose family he had been a tutor, he obtained, in 1761, the professorship of the which he held for nearly forty years. He wathe author of "The Origin of the Distinction of Ranks in Society" and "An Historical View of the Eurishi Government." n. 1783: n. 1800

The antico of a no origin of the Distinction of the English Government," n. 1735; n. 1801.

MILLEA, shospin, mil-ler, a witty actor, who was a Lavourite low comedian about the time that Congreve's plays were fashionable, to the success of which, it is said, his humour greatly contributed. The compilation called "Joe Miller's Jests" was the work of John Motley: but Miller's Jests, was the work of John Motley: but Miller's Jests, was the work of John Motley: but Miller's Jests, wance has not only been used to pass off the original stock, but thousands of other jokes and withcissus manufactured lone after the bones of Joe were deposited in the churchyard of St. Clemnt, Strand; where a stone still exists, with an epitaph written by his friend, Stephen Duck. n. 163; p. 1728.

islated in 1843. The practical portion of this work was says its author, "an attempt is instructed and advantage question which the decay of old opinions under the signature of a question which the decay of old opinions are into a Miller, James, a political and dramatic work is invost depth, render as important in the investigation that disturbs European society to its invost depth, render as important in the first many the property of the pr which is the tragecy of "standings. B. in Directshire, 1763; D. 1714, MILLIE, Edward, Mis. Doc., was the son of a pavior at Noweich, and bred to the sume business; but having a dislike to it, he ran away, and became a pupil of Ur. Burney, who was then resident at Lyun. In 1750 he became organist of the church of bonon-ster, where he remained till his death. Ir. Miller published institutes of Music," "The Elements of Thorough Bass and Composition," "The Psints of David, et al. Mirch, and arranged for every Sunday in the Year," and "The History and Artiquities of Donester," "D, 1897.

MILLIE, Hugh, an eniment geologist, whose ather was best at see on board a small vessel of which he was sent to the partis school, and in course of time was apprenticed to the trade of a stour mason. From the time he shad mastered the art of reading, he had been assistance in his search after knowledge, and a love of materal history had been fostered in him by his uncle. While hewing stones in the quarry, he was curaged in observing their geological lacts. Of pactry, also, he was very fond; and, after sching in value of verse, which brought him into notice, and obtained for him the clerkship of a bank in his native place. The leisure afforded by this occupation he turned to good account. After centributing for a short period to the "inverness Courier," he published "Seenes and Legends of the North of Scotland." He was next selected by the "Free Church" party to edit their organ, the "Witness" newspaper, a post which he continued to fill until his death, list first geological paper appoared in this print, and having been followed by a series of there, when the Geological Association met at Glasgow, Sir Charles Lepell, Dr. Bockland, and Sir Roderlek Murchison, all expressed thomselves astonished and dolighted at the lacurs of the rew signification, all expressed themselves astonished and dolighted at the lacurs of the proper of the writer. One of the fishes described by him in this series, was named by Professor Agassiz after Mr. Miller. A republication of the papers afterwards took place, under the title of the "Old Red Sand-stone; or, New Walks in an Old Field." His stone; or, New Walks in an Old Field." He ready, picturesque, and vigorous pen was henceforth constantly employed; and he pro-duced, after a visit to the south, "First Im-pressions of England and its Pcople;" "Foot-rwits of the Creator,"—n answer to some of the statements of the "Vestiges of Creation;" the "Geology of the Bass," and the "Testi-mony of the Rooks." He also lectured upon his favourite science in Edinburgh and London, and, in 1855, read a paper on the Fossil Flora of Scotland, before the British Association at Glasgow. In addition to the above-mentioned works, he gave to the world a most interesting account of his early life, in a work called "My Schools and Schoolmasters." Miller shot him-

OF BIOGRAPHY.

Willin

Schools and Schoolmasters. Miller snot may self in 1836, while labouring under discuss of the brain. p. at Cromarty, 1802.

MILLIN, Athib-Louis, mee'-yd, a celebrated French antiquary, who acted as keeper of the medals and antiquities in the Royal Library at Paris. His chief works were. Dictionary of medals and autiquities in the koyal Library at Paris. His chief works were, "Dictionary of the Fine Arts," "Dictionary of Mythology," "Monuments of Antiquity," und "Gallery of Mythology." He edited the "Magasin Ency-clopédique" during twenty years, and also pro-duced a number of works relative to the antiquities of his native land, Savoy, &c., which were full of valuable historical matter. B.

1759; D. 1818.

Millingen, James, mil'-lin-jen, an English archeologist, who, about the time of the French revolution, went to Paris with his father, but was arrested at the instance of the National Vas arrested as the instance of the Flational Convention. After his liberation, he became partner in a bank at Paris, and henceforth de-voted his leisure to archæological pursuits. He voted in sensure to inclinatological plarsitis. Fire was fortunate enough to become the purchaser of several vases full of gold online of the koman emperors, day up at abbeville. Being afflicted with disease of the chest, he was compelled verpair to I fully, where he resided until dienth, making, however, occasional with the French capital, where he was always withouthed. by antiquaries as the bearer of some valuable by antiquaries as the bearer of some Vantanie ancient relic. His most important works were, "A Medallic History of Napoleon," "Ancient Coins of Greek Cities and Kings," "Ancient Incilited Monuments of Greeian Art," and "Remarks on the State of Learning and Fine Arts in Great Britain;" besides which he was becoming fellow of his college. In 1815 he published "Fazio," a tragedy, which was played at Covent Garden Theatre without his consent, in consequence of the defective state of the law in consequence of the defective State of the law at that period, In 1817 he entered into hely orders, and obtained a living at Reading. In 1820 he produced "The Fall of Jerusalem," a sacred poem, founded upon Josephus's narrative. The university of Coxford appointed him its professor of poetry in the following year. The "History of Christianity from the Birth of The History of Christianity from the Britanic Christ to the Abelition of Paganism in the Roman Empire," was his next important publication. In 1849 he produced a beautiful edition of Horace, adding to it a most interesting life of the poet. In the same year he was ap-pointed dean of St. Paul's, and shortly afterwards gave to the world a continuation of his "History of Christianity," under the title of a "History of Latin Christianity." He likewise "History of Latin Christianity." He likewise produced a new and copiously annotated edition of Gibbon's. "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." In addition to the works already mentioned, he was the author of "The Martyr of Antioch," Belshazar, "Anne Boleyn," and a "History of the Jews." A 1791; p. 1868.

MINNE, Colin, miln, a driven and naturalist, was educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, of which eithe we was a native. He afterwards became rector of North Chapel, Essex, and was the author of a "Botainel Dictionary." Institutions of Botany," "Indigenous Botany," & Roman Scholm, "Indigenous Botany," & MINNE, Oldn, miln-grap a catholic divine, and

MILNER, John, mil'-ner, a catholic divine, and writer on theology and ecclesiastical antiquities, was educated at the schools of Sedgley Park, near Wolverhampton, and Edgbaston, Birmingham, and completed his studies at the college of Douay. In 1777 he was ordained a college of Douay. In 1777 he was ordained a priest, and commenced his pastoral duties in 1779, at the Catholic chapel, Winchester. After publishing some controversial pieces, he devoted his attention to the study of ecclesiastical architecture, and in 1790, became a member of the Royal Society of Anticuaries. He contributed several papers to the "Archeologia;" and published, in 1798, a "Dissertation on the Modern Style of Altering Catherlands as exempli-Modern Style of Altering Cathedrals, as exemplified in the cathedral of Salisbury," a "History, Civil and Ecclesiastical, and a Survey of the Antiquities of Winchester," and subsequently, a "Treatise on the Ecclesiastical Architecture of England." He was afterwards engaged in some controversial squabbles, in which he MILLOT, Claude François Xavier, mee'-yo, a French historian, who was for some time a member of the Society of Jesuits, which order he was permitted to quit, after officiating as a preacher at Versailles and Luneville. He was professor of history at Parma many years, and infossor of history at Parma many years, and an his return to France beame tutor to the due d'Enghien. His works are, "Elements of the History of France," "Elements of Universal History," "History of the Troubadours," "Memoirs for a History of the Troubadours," "Memoirs for a History of the Troubadours," and "Translations of Orations from the Latin Historians," D. 1726; D. 1735.

MICHARM, Rev. Henry Hart, mil'-min, an empty English histories and pate, who was educated to the control of the Contro 1803, with the title of "bishop of Castabala," 1803, with the title or "Disnop of Castionar," and in 1814 visited Rume, where he stayed about a year. He published, in 1818, a work entitled the "had of Religious Controversy," in which he windicated Roman entholicism on those points of faith usually attacked by Protestants, and was more or less engaged in similar contest till shortly before his death. n. 1753; D. 1826.

D. 1820.

Minnss, Richard Monekton, Lord Houghton,

Minss, apolitician, poet, and prose writer, who, a few years after concluding his university career at Cambridges was elected member of pariament for Pontefract, and distinguished himself therein as a zealous supporter of all quesnent English historian and poet, who was edutions relative to popular education and complete cated at bion and Brasenose Cellege, Oxford, religious equality. His literary efforts were 717 various in kind and of an excellent character. various in kind and of an executive character.

THE DICTIONARY

Tilton

As a poel, he produced "Poems of Many Years,"
"Memorials of Many Seenes," "Poems, Legendary and Historical," and "Pulm Leaves." His "Life, Letters, and Literary Remains of John Keats" was an appreciative and delightful commemoration of departed genius. He was understood to have been the writer of several interesting articles in the "Westminster Re-He published several of his speeches, delivered from his place in the House of Commons, and wrote a number of political pamphlets, the most important of which were "Thoughts on Party Politics," and "Real Union of England and Ireland." He was raised to the peerage as Baron Houghton in 1863. n. 1809. Milo, mi'-lo, a famous allete of Crotona, in Italy, who is said to have carried a bullock on his shoulders above forty yards, and then killed it with one blow of his fist, after which he devoured it in one day. He received the prize seven times at the Pythian games, and six at the Olympic. Many other marvellous things are

MILO, Titus Annius, a Roman, who made several parties for the purpose of obtaining the consulate. He was opposed by Clodius, and supported by some of the first members of the senate. In a quarrel between Clodius and Milo, sonne of the domestics of the latter. Cleero undertook to plead the cause of Milo; but the restrum being surrounded by soldiers and a crowd of people, who expressed their disapprobation, he was so dismayed as to be unable to proceed. Milo was exiled to Marseilles, whither the orator sent him his discourse; on which he said, "O Cleero! if thou hadst spoken this, Milo would not have been now at Marseilles." Killed 48 B.c.

MILTIADES, mil-ti'-ā-dees, a celebrated Athenian general, who succeeded his brother in the government of the Athenian colony in the Chersonese, n.c. 513. He proposed to destroy the raft over which Darius had passed in his Seythian expedition, and so cut off the Persian king's retreat: his comrades, however, over-ruled the proposal, and Miltiades became so unpopular as to be compelled to return to Athens. Twenty years afterwards, the Persians Athens. Twenty years atterwards, the Leasuns having declared war against Greece, their army landed in overwinelming numbers at Marathon. The Athenians, under Miltiades, were very fow; yet, by his superior skill, the Persians were defeated with great slaughter, and part of their fleet destroyed, 490 B.C. After this, he had the command of a naval squadron, with which he took several islands; but being obliged to raise the siege of Paros, and also dangerously wounded, he returned to Athens, where he was accused of holding intelligence with the Persians, and condemned to death, which sentence was altered to imprisonment. He died shortly after of his wound, B.C. 489, Milron, John, mil-ton, an illustrious Eng-lish poot, was educated first at St. Paul's school, and afterwards at Christ's College, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, being designed for the bar or the church; but, not having an inclination for either calling, he returned to his father, who had retired from business with a good fortune, and settled at Horton, in Buckinghamshire. Here the poet 718 wrote his "Comus," "L'Allegro," "H Penseroso," and "Lyckles," poems of such merit as would alone have immortalized his name. In 1637 he travelled into France and Italy, On his return to Encland, he settled in London, and undertook the tuition of his nephews, for which molession he appears, by his "Tractate which profession he appears, by his "tractate on Education," to have been well calculated. On the outbreak of the differences between the King and Parliament, Million engaged as a political writer on the popular side; and before a great animosity to the hierarde, he published some pamphlets against the bishops. In 1 The married the daughter of a justice of reace in Oxfordshire; but, his wife ha brought up with different senti husband, and disapproring of his zeal, I him, and returned to her ed and the representation diated his wife, and published some traces on divorce, to vindicate this act, which he was about to carry into effect, when his wice s friends brought about a reconciliation. He continued an ardent , for the related of his enormous strength. According mentary party, even after the execution of to Ovid, he was devoured by wild beasts, about Charles I. He also wrote with great asperity contains I. In any word with grigar appears against the king's book of prayers and medita-tions, entitled "Elkon Basilike." About this time he was wholly do rived of owing to a natural all ness and latence application to his studies. In 1652 he last has wife, and soon afterwards took another. He was wite, and soon afterwards took mother. He was a determined republican, and words with the merzy against monarchical government, "the very trappings of which," he said, "would suppart a commonwealth," while, as Latin recretary to the Council of State, he rendered good is tive to the cause of rational liberty. Miton endeavoured to prevent the Restoration; which revent he had undended agree to deem considering he had undoubted cause to dread, considering the active part taken by him in the tebellion. And when the Restoration took place, he was excepted from the act of indemnity; on which he kept himself concealed some time. By the ne sept amused concented some time. By the interest, however, of Sir William Dacemant and others, he obtained a pardon, som after which he lost his second wife. In the time of the plague he removed, with his family, to the kinghamshire, where he completed his "Paradle Lost," which was first printed in 1887. This immortal work he sold to a bookseller for £5. For the idea of it he is said to have been indebted to an Italian drama on the Fall of Man; and it is certain that he had himself an intention at first of writing only a tragedy on the same subject. As the work grew under his hand, his soaring genius gave it the form and hand, his soaring genuts rave it the norm one consistence, the variety and elegance, of an epic poem. He subsequently compased "Paratites Regained," which, though abounding in bran-ties, is in all respects inferior to "Paradisa Lost," though Milton, remarkably enough, is said to have considered it the better pasm. "Paradisc Lost" was unknown in the past's lifetime, and for many years after. It was not till Mr. Addison wrote his admirable critique upon it in the "Spectator," that its beauties became generally understood, and the whole merits of the poem to be admired. Dryden had, indeed, given his approbation of the work and his opinion of the author in an excellent epigram, which is usually prefixed to the "Paradiso Lost." Besides this, and the other poems mentioned above, Milton wrote a drama on the Greek model, entitled "Samson Agonistes," which possesses uncommon beauties, though not adapted for theatrical representation. His "Comus" has been several times performed, and the first time was for the benefit of the author's granddaughter, Mrs. Clarke, a widow in reduced circumstances. On that occasion in reduced circumstances. On that occasion Johnson wrole a prologue. Among the prose works of Milton, we shall only mention his "History of England," which comes down only to the Conquest, and his "Arcopagitica," in which he pleaded the cause of a free press with great force. The whole of his prose works great force. The whole of his prose works have been published in five volumes in Bohn's Standard Library. When at Cambridge, he was so handsome as to be called "The Lady of was so nanosome as to be called "The Lady of Christ's College," and retained his comeliness to the last. By his first wife he had three daughters, two of whom used to read to him in eight languages, though they understood only their own, it being a usual saying with him, that "one tonque was enough for a woman. His remans were interred at the parish church of St. Giles, Cripplegate, where a monument has been erceted to his memory; and there is another in Westminster Abbey, B. in Bread Street, London, 1608; p. 1674.

Mimnermus

Mirabeau

Minnenny, min-ner' mus, a Greek poet and musician, was a native of Colophun, and con-temporary with Solon. He excelled in elegiac poetry, the invention of which has been ascribed to him. Some fragments of his are included in the "Analecta" of Brunel. Flourished about 630 n.c.

MINA, Don Francisco Espazy, me'-na, a distinguished Spanish general, who for a long time was commander-in-chief of the Catalonian army, first distinguished himself in guerilla warfare, and by the incessant activity and admirable presence of mind he displayed. Having cooperated in the blockade of Pampeluna, and recovered several other places, he was mortified to find that, at the general peace in 1814, he had to find that, at the general peace in 183%, to had been labouring only to re-establish the despotic policy of Ferdinand VII., and made an ineffectual effort in the cause of freedom to gain over the garrison of Pampeluna. He then sought an asylum in France; but whilst resident in the French capital, was arrested by a commissary of police, employed by the Spanish ambussador. On this occasion the conduct of Louis XVIII. was most honourable, he dismissed the commissary insisted upon the ambussador being recalled, and not only released Mina, but granted him a pension of 1000 francs. When the army of vadiz, in 1822, unfurled the standard of freedom, by proclaiming the consti-tution of 1812, Alma hastened to Navarre, and was advancing against Pampeluna at the head of a few hundred followers, when he was informed that the king had accepted the constitution. He was subsequently appointed captaingeneral of the three armies of Navarre, Catalonia, and Arragon; but when, by the intervention of France, Ferdinand was again enabled to diseard his professed adherence to the constitution, Mina left Spain for England. After the accession of Isabella II, under the regency of her mother Christina, Mina took an active part against Don Carlos; and to him and his wife the charge of educating the young queen was committed. B. in Navarre, 1782; D. 1836.

Minis, Claude Ettenne, min'e-a;, commonly min'e, the inventor of the rifle which bears his name, entered the French army as a private soldier, and rose to the grade of brigadier. If was among the first of those scientific gentlame:

ho in recent times endeavoured to perfect the ng-known but neglected principle of the rifle. Although it is now superseded, the Minié was 'or some time the best rifle extant. The Minié all was a great advance upon everything of the kind that had preceded it. It was an elongated kind that had preceded it. It was an congactome, conical at its point, and with a hollow be-nind, in which was placed a metal cup or thimble. Captain Norton, Mr. Greener, and I. Caron, a French artillery officer, arrived at similar results with M. Minié; but, at any rate, is inventions were the first to become extenively employed, and they form, undoubtedly, he first steps in that grand march of improvement in guinery which has taken place within the last few years. n. at Paris, 1800.

MIRABAUD, Jean Baptiste de, mir'-a-bo. French writer, who was at first a member of the Congregation of the Oratory, and afterwards in he army, His works are translations of Tasso's Jerusalem" and Ariosto's "Orlando" into Truch. In 1770 was published, under his aame, an atheisteal book, entitled "The Syssense Says and the steel book neare, an antersucan took, entiried in the Sys-em of Nature," which was translated into Eng-lish, and attracted much attention at its first appearance. This work, though it still passes under the name of Mirabaud, was in reality the roduction of Baron d'Holbach and others.

production of Baron d'Holoden and Gabers, b. al Paris, 1675; p. 1709.
Miranbar, Victor Riqueti, Marquis de, ssir-a-bo, born of an ancient family, in Provence, was one of the principal institutors of a political sectical ed. Economists. For his "theorie do l'Impôt," a trace in which he male some free remarks on the finances and governments. ment, he was incarcerated in the Bastille for some time. His principal work was entitled "L'Ami des Hommes" (the Friend of Mankind). In this work the author displayed considerable knowledge of rural and political economy, and also furnished some judicious hints for the good

ATTEMENT SOME JUGGEORE MINES FOR THE GOOD OF SOCIETY. B. 1715. D. 1789.

MIRADEAU, Honoré Gabriel Riquetit, Count de, one of the leaders, and the greatest orator during the French revolution. After serving some time in the army, he espoused a rich heiress of Aix; but he soon squandered away the fortune he had received with her, and plunged himself into debt. He was confined in plunged himself into deel. The was conflicted in different prisons, and on obtaining his liberty, cloped to Holland with the wife of a French mobileman, the Marquis de Monnier. For this he was afterwards imprisoned in the castle of Wincennes, and remained there a considerable time. In 1780 he regained his liberty, and pub-lished his work on "Lettres de Cachet." He lished his vork on "Lettres de Cachet." He subsequently wisted London, and, on his return to Paris, employed himself with literature. In 1786 his great sabilities recommended him to the notice of the minister Calonne, who dispatched him on ascert mission to Prussia. The Freehor evolution offered Mirabean an ample field for his activity. Intiblute the occurine of equality, he opened a shor, over the door of which was inscribed "Mirabean, caler in draper," He was elected deputy of the third ostate for Air, and the courtiers termed him the Plebeium He was elected deputy of the third estate for Aix, and the countiers termed him the Pielecian Count. In the National Assembly he displayed the very highest powers of an orator, but died in the milet of his political career, as is supposed, of poison, and his obsequées were celevated with great pomp. Mirabeau wrote "A Comparison between the Great Condéand Scapio Africanus," "Illisory of Prusia under Frederick the Great," a collection of his orations in the National Assembly, "Secret History of the Court of Berlin;" this book was burnt by the common executioner. The character of this remarkable man, who might be styled the Aleibiades of the Revolution, was, till lately, but imperfectly understood. It is certain, that if he crushed the old aristocracy upon the one hand, he, on the other, kent down the fury of demoeracy. When he became president of the state tional Assembly, in 1791, he rendered immense services to his country, in introducing clearness and order where all had before been entanglement and confusion. Had his life been prolonged, it is more than a question whether the French revolution would have been other than a bloodless one—a simple change from despothe grave," he once said, "the last shreds of the monarchy." His death was a public calathe monarchy." His death was a public calamity. His ambition was not to set up or destroy absolute monarchy, but to raise himself to the position of prime minister of a constitutional regime. "Much has been said of the vensity of Mirabeau," says his friend Dumont, "as if his talents were actually put up to the highest bidder; but this is an exaggeration. It may be admitted that he was not over scrupulous in money matters; but he was too proud to be dishonest, and he would have thrown through the monest, and the world mive thrown thought the window any one who dared to make a huntiliating proposal." At one time he received a pension from Monsieur (afterwards Louis XVIII.), and subsequently, during the last six XVIII.), and subsequently, during the last six months of his life, one from the king; but he considered himself as an agent intrusted with their affairs, not to be governed by, but to govern and direct, those who granted them. "When I am gone," he said, "my value will be appreciated. Misfortunes, to which I have put a stop for the present, were overwhelming France in every direction; but that base faction of the Jacobian which I may overware will be let. France in every direction; but that base faction (the Jacobins), which I now overawe, will be let loose upon the country. They want to govern the king, instead of being governed by him; but soon neither they nor he will govern: a vile faction will rule the country, and debase it by the most atrocious crimes." But Bigmon, near Nemours, 1749; D. 1791.

MILLAYAL, Firenesso, me-raw-da, the founder of the independence of Snanish America. He rose to be colonel in the Spanish army, and was for some time intrusted with important matters by the governor of Guatemale, but, taking part in a conspiracy against the Spanish viceroy, he was compelled to fly from his native country. He went to Paris in 1789, and allied himself with the republican party, who appointed him to a command under General Dumouriaz. In 1806 he resolved to achieve the independence of his country; and, after a lt., struggle, succeeded in establishing a republic at Caracas, in 1811. He sustained a defeat by the Spanish army subsequently, and was trea-cherously betrayed to the Spanish general, who send him in chains to Spain, where he died in the prison of the Inquisition, 1816; n. at

Caracas, about 1750.

MIRANDOLA, Giovanni Pico della, mer'an-do'-la, Count and Frince of Concordia, was one of the brightest ornaments of literature in the 15th century. In his youth he gave affonishing proofs of genins; and, when little more than twenty, set up in all the universities of Italy a number of difficult problems in the sciences, which he orgaged publicly to defend. If finally fixed his residence at Florence, where he lived on terms of intimacy with the most distinquished men of the age, particularly Lorenzo de' Medici and Poliz'ano. n. 1463; p. 1494. MITORIEL, Sir David, mit'-chel, an eminent naval commander in the reign of William 111.,

MITCHELL, Sir David, mit-chet, an eminent naval commander in the reign of William 111, was descended from a respectable family in Scotland. He commanded the Blitabeth of 70 guns at the battle off Beachey Head, where he behaved with great galantry. In 1693 he was made rear-admiral of the Blue, and in 1694 had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him. He was employed in bringing over to England and carrying back Peter the Great, exar of Muscovy, and was also sent on a diplomatic mission to Holland. D. 1710.

matic mission to Holland. p. 1710.

MITCHELL, Joseph, a dramatic writer, who was patronized by Sir Robert Walpole. He wrote "The Fatal Extravaganee," a tragedy; "The Highland Fair," a ballad opera, 8vo.; and several poems. p. in Scotland, 1834; p. 1738.

MITCHELL, Sir Andrew, a British admiral, born in Scotland, accompanied Sir Edward Vernon to Ludic in 1774 as widelingman, and with these Mrcrinza, Sir Andrew, a British admiral, born in Scotland, accompanied Sir Edward Vernon to India, in 1776, as a midshipman; and while there odd such good service that he was rapidly promoted to the rank of post-entain. On the commencement of hostilities with the Prench republic, he was appointed to the command of the dair, of 64 guns, and next to the Jungraphile, of 90. In 1705 he was made rear-admiral of the rank of vice-admiral of the White, he joined Lord Duncan off the coast of Holland, and on the right of the rank of vice-admiral of the White, he joined Lord Duncan off the coast of Holland, and on the result of the last, and in 1802 was appointed commander-in-chief on the American station, a door 1707; but Dermuda, 1806.

MITCHELL, Sir Thomas Livingstone, an able geographer and military surveyor, who served with distinction during the Peninsular war as an officer of the staff. The military maps which he constructed throughout the campaign are preserved in the Ordnance Office, as models he produced "Outlines of a system of Surveying for Geographical and Military Purposes," and was about the same time nominated deputy surveyor-general of New South Wales, which post he retained until his death. He proved himself one of the most distinguished explorers of the Australian continent, and, under circumstances of great difficulty and danger, traced the course of the river Darling to its junction with the river Murray, and discovered Australia Felix. An account of these labours was pub-lished in 1838, in a work entitled "Three Expeditions into the interior of Eastern Australia, with descriptions of the recently explored re-gion of Australia Felix." On coming to Enggion of Australia Felix." On coming to England for the purpose of passing his works through the press, he received the honour of knighthood from her Majesty, was elected fellow of the Royal and of the Geographical Societies, and became D.C.L. of the university of Oxford. He subsequently discovered the Victoria river. and invented a new propeller for steam-vessels, on the principle of a weapon used by the abo-rigines of Australia. While staying in England, in 1853, he read an account of his invention at the United Service Institution, and afterwards published it, with the title, "Origin, History, and Description of the Boomerang Propeller." In addition to the works we have already mentioned, he produced a "Map of the Colony of

720

New South Wales," in three sheets; "Journal of an Expedition into the Interior of Tropical Australia," and "Australian Geography, with the Shores of the Pacific." He attained the grade of colonel in 1854, and at his death his re-mains were honoured by a public funeral at Sydney. B. at Craigend, Stirlingshire, 1792; D. at Sydney, 1855.

MITFORD, William, mit-ford, an eminent English historiam, who studied at Oueen's College. Oxford, and subsequently entered himself at the Middle Temple; but, succeeding to the family estates upon the death of his father in 1761, he retired into the country, and devoted his life to the study of the Greek language and literature. In 1769 he was appointed captain in the South Hampshire militia, of which Gibbon was the major. Some conversations between the historian of the "Decline and Fall" and himself led, it is said, to his undertaking a history of Greece. That his dory was produced in successive vo-lunes, the first of which appeared in 1784. Although supers ded at the present time by the works of Grote and Bishop Thirlwall, Mittord's history affords new and accurate views of many important events. The great defect of the work is the strong prejudice of the author against democracy,—a prejudice which caused him to regard Philip of Macedon as a perfect here, and the Athenians as a set of miscreants. With the Ariemans as a set of mescenius. With him Demosthenes was nothing less than an un-principled demagogue. Mr. Mitford also pub-lished a treatise on the Religious of Ancient Greece and Rome. He was returned to Par-liament in 1785, and sat there during many years; but his speeches were principally made upon the militia laws. A treatise by him upon The Military Force, and particularly the Militar of England," created some excitement in its day, but is now forgotten. B. in London, 1711; p. in Hampshire, 1827.

Mirronn, Mary Russell, an eminent modern authoress, was the daughter of a clever phy-sician, but whose unthrifty habits involved him in constant poeuriary embarrassments, When the future authoress had attained her when the intere authoress had attained her tenth year, her father made her a present of a ticket in the Dublin lottery, which eventually turned up a prize of #20,000. This large sum was, however, dissipated by the extravagant parent, who was, nevertheless, a most kindly man and affectionate father. Mary was placed at school at Chelsea, where she met as pupils, at various times, Miss Landon (L. E. L.), Fanny at various times, Miss Lamoof (L. E. L.), Fainty Kemble, and Lady Caroline Lamb. Before she reached her twentieth year, she put forth a volume of years, which was demoished by the "Quarterly Review" Nowise disheartened, she brought out another, and, in reality, adopted literature as a profession. For some time, her pen was engaged upon short tales and sketches for the magazines, the success of which emholdened her to take a higher flight. The "Sketch Book" of Washington Irving was pub-"Sketch Book" of Washington Pring was pub-lished about that period, and attained the greatest popularity. This led Miss Mitford to turn her attention to the composition of a series of rural tales and descriptions of rustic life and scenery. She had long been residing at a pleasant village on the borders of Berkshire and Hampshire, and was familiar with every house, cottage, and green lane, and dweller therein. She accordingly set to work to give faithful delineations of the place and its inhabitants. Her first essays were sent to the "New Monthly Magazine," but the then editor, Thomas Campbell, at once rejected them. After many disappointments, they appeared in the "Lady's Magazine." These were afterwards put forth in a collected form, and were en-titled "Our Village," a book which justly merits its great popularity, being truly un-rivalled of its kind. Five series of "Our Village" were published. "Belford Regis; or, Skotches of a Country Town," subsequently appeared, the materials for which were drawn aspeated, due materias in which where drawn from the town of Reading. Her later, though less celebrated works, were "Stories of Country Life," and "Atherton," a novel. She also wrote several dramas. Her "Julian" was performed in several dramas. Her "Inlian" was performed in 1823, Macrasyl enacting the leading part. The "Foscari" and "Aienzi" were also very successful; but "Charles the First" was interdicted by Colman, who at the time was licenser of plays. It was subsequently played at a minor theatre, but soon disappeared from the stage. Her latest effort was "Recollections of my Literary Life; or, Books, Places, and People," which is a light gossiping commentary upon many of the meanls and of the december which intinaced people and of the circumstances which influenced her life. B. at Alresford, Hampshire, 1786; D. at Swallowfield Cottage, near Reading, 1855.

MITHRIDATES, mith'-ri-du'-tees, the name of six kings of Poutus, of the first five of whom there is nothing particular to record. MITHERDATES VI., the greatest of the name, and one of the most determined enemies that the Romans encountered, succeeded to the throne n.c. 120, at which time he was only cleven years of age. The Romans, anxious to weaken his power, declared war against him, and he, in revenge, ordered all the Romans in his dominions to be massacred. He then marched with a powerful army against Aquilius, whom he defeated; but Sylla, after some vicwhich he deleated; but syna, after some vic-tories, forced Mithridates to make peace, s.c. 84. He renewed the war in alliance with Tigranes, king of Armenia. After conquering Bithynia, Mithridates laid siege to Cyzicum, in the Propontis; but Lucullus, having marched to its relief, besieged Mithridates in his camp. The king of Pontus defeated the Romans in two combats, but was completely vanquished in a third. Glabrio being sent to supersede Lucul-lus in the command, this change was advanta-geous to Mithridates, who recovered the best part of his kingdom. Pompey, however, obphrates, B.c. 65, upon which Mithridates fled to Tigranes, who refused him an asylum. He next sent ambassadors to Pompey to sue for peace, but the Romans insisted upon his surrendering in person. Meantime his people revolted, and proclaimed his son Pharmaces king. Rather than fall into the hands of the Romans, Mithridates put an end to his life, B.C. 63. B. about 131 в.с.

irsonermon, Eilard, miteld-er-lik, a dis-nished German chemist, who was, in 1821, appointed professor of cleaminty in the university of Berlin. He was the discoverer of the dark, that two bodies having the same composition could assume dil.com form; to which berzellus grey the name "Isomerism." His greates literary work is "Manual of Chimistry," which details the principles of the mistry, which details the principles of the mistry, with technical and physical point of view. B. at Neurede, near Jever, 1794. D. 1863.

MOBLLENDORF, Richard Joachim Henry, tdc.met/len/dorf,aPrussian general, whose

Moffat Moir

behaviour at the battles of Molwitz and Ketewitz, in the first Silesian war, having attracted the notice of Frederic II., whom he accom-panied thither as a page, he was promoted to a panied inflier as a page, he was producted to company in the Guards; became a colonel in 1761, afterwards lieutenant-general, and in 1783 governor of Berlin. During the dismem-1783 governor of norm. During the dismon-berment of Poland, in 1793, he commanded the Prussian troops, and did everything in his power to alleviate the sufferings of the Poles. On his return home he was created a field-marshal, and made governor of South Prussia. He succeeded the duke of Brunswick in the command of the brussian army on the Rhine, in 1794; and gained the victory of Kaiserslautern, and was present at the battles of Jena and Auerstadt, where he was wounded. B. 1724; p. 1516.

Morear, Robert, not fut, an eminent missionary, who, with John Williams and others, needed the task of preaching the gospel to barbarous tribes, in 1810. In 1840 he visited England, and, at several public meetings, narrafed his adventures among the savage and fre-quently warlike tribes of Africa. About the same time he published a work, entitled "Missionary Labours and Scenes in Southern Africa;" he also completed a translation of the New Testament and the Psalms into the Bechuana language. He returned to the seene of his missionary labours shortly afterwards. His daughter married the celebrated Dr. Livingstone. n. in Scotland, at the close of the last century.

MORAMMED, in Turkish MAHOMET, mo-ham'med, or mai-ho-met, the founder of the Mussulman religion, sprung from the noble family of Korcish. Losing his father in his infancy, his guardian-hip devolved on his uncle, Abu Taleb, who employed him to go with his caravans from Mecca to Damaseus. In this emplayment of camel-driver he continued till he may ment of camerature necessary was twenty-five years of age, when he married Khadijah, a rich widow, becoming thereby one of the wealthiest men in Mecca. He soon made himself remarked for his religious zeal: and having observed in his travels the infinite variety of sects which prevailed, he conceived the project of reforming the religion of his country, and uniting the various seets into the worship of one God. He accordingly spent much of his time in a cave near Mecca, seemingly alone, and employed in meditation and prayer; but in reality he called to his aid a Persian Jew, well versed in the history and laws Persian Jew, well versed in the history and laws of his persuasion, and two Christians, one of the Jacobite and the other of the Nestorian sect. With the help of these men, he framed the "Koran," or Mahometan Bible, which he predended to have received at different times from heaven, by the hands of the angel Gabriel. At the age of forty, he publicly assumed the upostile of Gold. At first he had only his wife well aging the depth of the prostile of Gold. At first he had only his wife well aging the followers, but in three wifes and eight other followers; but in three years his disciples were considerably more numerous. O. these he imposed the most marvellous tales, but well adapted to decrive ignorant and superstitious minds. He prefended to have passed into the highest heavens in one night, on the lack of a beautiful ass called 41 Borak, and accompanied by the angel Gabriel. There he had an interview with Adam, Abraham, Moses, David, and Jesus Christ, who acknowledged his superiority, which was confirmed to him by the Deity himself. This romance staggered even life. Dr. Moir was a graceful essayist, and a

some of his best friends; and a powerful consome or ms best trends; and a powerful con-federacy being formed against him, he was forced to quit Mecca, and to seek a refuce in Medina. This retreat occasioned the founda tion of his empire and of his religion. Mohammedans adopt it as their chronological standard, calling it the Hegira, that is, the Flight or Persecution, being the 16th day of our July, 622 A.D. Mohammad had still a number of disciples, upon whom he inculcated this principle, that they were not to dispute for their religion by word, but by the sword. This was a doctrine well adapted to a lawless and wandering people, and was seen carried into profiles by them. The Jewish Arabs were the first who experienced its effects. Mohammed coen de d upon them the most shocking cruekter, page upon them the more shocking effective, place numbers to death, sold others for slave, and distributed their goods amour Lie soldiers. A faith thus propagated could not out support in accountry like Arabia. He rewarded his adherents by plunder, and held cut to them a certain happiness of the most sensual Lind hereafter. In 627 he made a trenty with the in-habitants of Meeen, which two year afterwards he violated, and stormed the pla e with the and sword. Having made himself moster of Arabia. he extended hitout al c id lad:

under tribute. While engaged in this victorious career, a Jewess poi oned some meat which was laid before him, and of which he and his cora-panions are heartily. One of them died immediately, but the prophet lingered some time. When the woman was examined, she declared that she had perpetrated the deed on purpose to try whether he was really a true prophet. Of the offeets of this poison he died, 632 A.D., and of the Hegira 11, aged 62. After the death of Khadijah, he had several wives and concabines, by whom he had many children, but left only a daughter, named Fatima, who married his sudaugmer, named rating, who matrice this su-cessor, Ali. It is a vulcar error, that the body of Mohammed was laid in a steel collin, and aspended in his tomb at Medina beween two magnets. The "Koran" of this impostor conmagnets. For Koran of this might, drawn tains a good deal of practical mornity, drawn from the Scriptures, but blended with extrava-gant tales and blasphenous doctrines. It has been well translated into English by Sale, and into French by Savary.

Mois, David Macheth, moir, a modern poet and prose writer, who was educated for and practised the medical profession. He made his first appearance as an author in 1812, by writing a few minor poems and essays. He next wrote for some local magazines and journals, and, at the commencement of "Blackwood's Magazine," he became a contributor to its Magazine," he became a contributor to its pages, and remained so until his death. For the same magazine he also wrote "The Auto-hisparaphy of Mausic Wanch." In 1831 he published the "Intilines of the Ancient Bilstory of Medicine," and, in the same year, excrete hisparaphy of the properties of the control of the same year, excrete his soft operactically while the cholera raced in Musselburgh, where he practised his profession, and subsequently published a pumphlet entitled " Practical Observations on Malignant Cholera." In 1851 he delivered a course of lectures upon the " Poetical Literature of the Past Century, at the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution. As a poet, he was tender and pathetic, rather than forcible and original. His poetical works were collected in 1852, and to them was prefixed his competent man of science, and was, moreover, a kind and excellent man, B. at Musselburgh, 1798; p. 1851.

MOITTE, Jean Guillaume, moit, a famous French sculptor, whose father was an engraver of some eminence. After studying under Pigal and Lemoyne, he obtained the grand prize for sculpture, in 1768, for a statue of David with the head of Goliah. This entitled him to be sent to complete his studies at Rome, from which city he returned to Paris in 1773. He was admitted a member of the French Academy in 1783. His chief works are bas-reliefs, the most worthy of notice of which are the great basso-relievo of the front of the Pantheon, which was removed after the restoration of the Bourbons, and one in the gallery of the Luxembourg. Among his sta-tues are the colossal figures of Britanny and Normandy at the barrier des Bons Hommes, and an equestrian statue of Napoleon. B. 1747; D. 1810.

Mola, Pierfrancesco, mo'-la, a clever historiat Coldre, in the Milanese, about 1621; D. 1866.
MOYNE, Abraham de. (See Demoyne.)
MOLL, Jaques de, mo'-lai, was the last grand-master of the order of Templars. The pro-digious wealth of the knights having excited the envy and hatred of Philip the Fair, king of France, he resolved to suppress the order. Acgrantee, he resolved to suppress and other. Accordingly, a violent persecution broke out against the knights, on charges the most absurd and abominable. Molai was tried, condemned, and burnt alive near Paris, in 1314, He endured his suffering with fortifude, and vindicated the innocence of his order to the last.

Mole, Francis Réné, mo-lai, an eminent French concedian, who during the revolution became an associate of the Jacobins, and officiated in the church of St. Roch, as the priest of the goddess of Reason. B. 1734; D. 1802.

The goodes of Leasten. B. 1749, B. 1802. Mon. L. Louis Mathieu, Count de, a distinguished French statesman, was the son of President Molé, who fell a victim to the French revolution. After living some time with his mother in Switzerland and England, he returned to France in 1790, studied at the Ecole Centrale, which was subsequently converted into the Polytechnic School, and in 1806 at-tracted the attention of Napoleon, by a volume of "Essais de Morale et de Politique," which contained opinions of a highly absolute cast. From this time his rise was rapid, and in 1913 he was appointed minister of justice, and received the title of count. On the fall of Napoleon he was made a peer of France, and in 1817 filled the office of minister of the navy under the Duke of Richelieu, but quitted this post when his colleagues displayed the reactionary tendencies which ended in the expulsion of Charles X. from the throne. After the revolution of 1830, Count Molé, for a brief period, held the office of minister of foreign affairs; and in 1836 was eleminister of foreign mains; and in 200 was activated to the post of prime minister, of which he was dispossessed in 1839 by the coalition of Thiers and Guizot. After the revolution of Thiers and Guizot. After the revolution of 1848, though elected both to the constituent and the legislative assemblies, he took comparatively little interest in political affairs, but remained stanch to his conservative views, and after the sument to his conservator views, and after the coup-d'état of 1951, against which he protested, retired into private life. p. 1780; p. 1855.

Moleswerth, Lord Robert, moles werth, a nobleman who contributed so effectually to the revolution of 1688, that William III. admitted

upon an embassy to the court of Denmark. Having given some offence at Copenhagen, he was recalled, and after his return to England, published an account of the kingdom of Demark, which enjoyed great popularity. Under George I. he acted as commissioner of trade and plantations. The same monarch also advanced him to the Irish peerage in 1716. B.

advanced him to the Irish piecage in 1/10. B. at Dullin, 1865; p. 1725.
MODESWORTH, Sir William, an English stateshman and man of letters, was the eight baronet in his family, an old Cornish one, originally of Irish extraction. After spending some time at Cambridge and Edinburgh, where an Italian refugee was his tutor in classics, metaphysics, and mathematics, he repaired to Germany. Philology and history were his chief studies in the latter country; and, after com-pleting his collegiate course, he made the tour of Europe, and returned to his native land in 1831. In the year following he was returned to Parliament as member for East Cornwall; was re-elected in 1834; but, in 1837, declining to con-test this seat, he sought and obtained the suf-frages of Leeds. He represented this latter place until 1841, after which time he remained out of Parliament during several years. The constituency of Southwark chose him as their representative in 1845, and in that capacity he sat in the House of Commons until his death. In the Aberdeen administration of 1853, he was appointed first commissioner of public works, and in 1855 commenced his short but briland in 1858 commenced his short but bri-liant career as secretary for the colonies. As a speaker, he was too philosophical to be generally popular; but several of his speeches were as well received as they, and, indeed, nearly all he uttered, deserved to be. These were orations on the colonies, on the state of the nation and condition of the people, and on transportation. He was for some time the proprietor and conductor, in conjunction with his friend John Stuart Mill, of the "Westminster Review." Many valuable articles from his pen likewise appeared in the newspapers and periodicals. A noble edition of the works of Thomas Hobbes (see Hobbes), in 16 volumes, was produced by him at his own expense. B. in Cornwall, 1810; p. 1855.

Molie ne, Jean Baptiste, mol'-e-air, a cele-brated French comic poet, whose real name was Poquelin. His father, who was a tapestry-maker, intended him for the same business; but young Poquelin being in the habit of visitbut young rought being in the limit of visioning the theatre, conceived a violent inclination for the stage. At the ago of 14 he commenced his studies under the Josuits, and made a rapid progress in belies lettres. His father becoming reduced in circumstances, the youth associated himself with some persons of his own age, who had a like attachment to dramatic representation. It was in consequence of this connexion that he took the name of Molière. This event took place in the year 1645, after which time we hear no more of him until 1653, when he was hear no more of him until 1683, when he was appointed by the prince de Conti who had known the youth at college, director of an histricatic company at Languadoc. He subsequently went with his players to Lyous, where, in 1865, he brought out his listst comedy, entitled "L'Ebourdi," or, "The Blunderer," which piece was received with great appause, and greatly pleased his patron, the prince of Conti. That prince officed to make him his sporedary, which honourable station Molère declined, saving, that "though he was a passable saving." him of the privy council, and dispatched him saying, that, "though he was a passable Molieres author, he should make but a bad sceretary." author, he should have but a bad severely, After performing at various places, Molière's company visited Paris, where, in 1638, they performed several of his plays before Louis XIV., who took the troupe into his own service, and gave their leader a pension. During the subsequent fifteen years, Molière worked hard as a dramatic author and actor, and received many substantial marks of the royal favour. His last piece, "L'Hypocon-driaque; on, le Malade Imaginaire," occasioned his death; for, by his exertions in performing Argan, the principal character, he was seized with a convulsion, of which he died. The arch-bishop of Paris refused to allow his remains to be interred in consecrated ground, on account of his profession, till he was compelled to do so by the king. Molière left a widow, with whom he had lived a very unhappy life, and who married a comedian named Guerin, and died in 1728, aged 92. The works of Molière have been often printed; one of the best editions is that of Paris, 1838. They have been translated into English; and several of his comedies have been adapted to our stage with success. Molière is justly called the French Aristophanes. n. at Paris, 1622; p. 1673.

Paris, 1622; p. 1073.

Mothers, Joseph Privat de, molt-c-air, a philosophical writer, became a member of the congregation of the Oratory, and was a pupil of Malobranche, on whose death he quitted the society and devoted himself wholly to physics and mathematies. He was afterwards professor of philosophy at the ruyal college, and died in 1742. Moliter's works are, "Philosophical Lectures," "Mathematical Lectures," and "hathematical Lectures," and " Premier Partie des Elémens de Géométrie." B.

Tremer Fartie des Erleins de déconétre. B. at Tarascon, 1677; D. 1742.

Mollin, Louis, mo-lé-na, a colobrated Spanish Jesuit. He completed his studies at Coimbra, Jesuit. He completed his studies at Combroa, after which he was professor of divinity at Evora during twenty years. Molina wrote "Commentaries on the 'Summa' of Aquinas," a treatise "De Justitia et Jure," another "De Concordia Gratia et Liberi Arbitrii." The last is a work of merit, and occasioned great disputes a work of merit, and occasioned great disputes fartewards between the Jesuits and Dominicans, the latter order accusing Molina of reviving Pelegianism. p. 1538; p. 1601.

Mollnos, Michael, mo-le'-nose, a Spanish divine, who published a book called the "Spiritual vine, wno published a book called the "Spiritual Guide," in which he maintained that man must amilitlate himself, or reduce his mind to an absolute quiescence, in order to enjoy God. For this he was sent to the prison of the Inquisition, where he died. The religious opinions of Molinos occasioned great disputes in Prance, where they were known by the name of "quiet-ism," on account of the passive disposition of mind which they inculcate. Fencion and Madame Guyon were the great advocates and improvers of this system. B. 1627; p. 1696.

Mollow, Charles, moll-loi, a dramatic writer, who became a student of the Middle Temple, and was the editor of a periodical paper called "Common Sense." His plays are, "The Perplexed Couple," "The Coquette," and "The Half-pay Officers." in Dublin, 1706: p.

1766.

Molo, mo'-lo, a rhetorician, who went to Rome p.c. 87. He taught rhetoric with great reputahis pupils. The former followed him to Rhodes to profit by his instructions. Some years afterwards, Molo was sent ambassador by his countrymen to the Roman senate, and was received with great honour.

MOLYNEUX, Sir William, molt-i-mo, a gallant knight in the reign of Henry VIII., who displayed great bravery at the battle of Flodden Field. On his death-bed he gave this advice to his son : "Let the underwood grow; the tenants are the support of a family, and the commonalty are the strength of a kingdom. Improve this fairly; but force not violently, either your bounds or rents, above your forefathers'

Molyneux, William, an eminent mathemati-eian, who received his education at Trinity Colloge. Dublin, after which he entered as a student of the Middle Temple, London. The Philosophical Society, established at Dubha in 1683, owed its origin to his endeavours, and he became the first secretary. Soon after, he was appointed or-general of the works and chief engi-

In 1685 he was chosen a member of the Royal Society, and in 1689 settled with his family at Chester, where he employed himself in finishing his "Treatise on Dioptries," which was published in 1692. In this year he returned to Dublin, and was chosen one of the representarunni, and was chosen one of the representa-tives for that city. Besides the above, he wrote: "Sciothericum Telescopium;" or, a description of a Telescopic Dial invented by him; also, "The Case of Ireland stated, in relation to its being bound by Acts of Parliament in England;" some papers in the "Philosophical Transactions: and several letters between him and Mr. Locke. B. at Dublin, 1656; p. 1608, - Samuel, son of the preceding, became secretary to George II, when Prince of Wales, and was distinguished by his skill in astronomy. He improved the method of making telescopes, and presented one made by himself to the king of Portugal. But being appointed a commissioner of the Admiralty, he was left without time to pursue his scientific inquiries. He gave his papers on the subject to Dr. Smith, professor of astronomy at Cambridge, who printed them in his "Treatise on Optics." B. at Chester, 1689; p. 1738.

MONDODO, James Burnett, styled Lord, mon-bod'-do, a learned Scotch writer, and one of the lords of the Court of Session, received his education at Aberdeen, and at the university of Groningen. In 1738 he returned to Scotland. commenced the practice of the legal profession, and was, in 1767, clevated to the bench. As a well, in a note in his "Tour to the Hebrides," says, "there were soveral points of resemblance between him and Dr. Johnson: learning, clearness of head, precision of speech and the source of the sou research on many subjects which people in general do not cultivate." Foote paid Lord Monneral do not cultivate." Foote paid Lord Mon-boddo the compliment of saying, "that he was an Elzevir edition of Dr. Johnson." His most important works were, a "Dissertation on the Origin and Progressof Language," and "Ancient He held the singular notion Metaphysics." that men were only a civilized species of monkeys, and that the savage state was that in which virtue and happiness could be best attained. His extravagant admiration of the ancients led him to make, like them, supper his principal meal, and at these entertainments he had for. Nash, Dr. Hutton, and many of the learned of Edinburgh, as his gueste. D. at Monbod Kineardineshire, 1714; D. at Edinburgh, 179 MONGEY, Adrien, manni-sai, duke of Congliano and marshal of France, who, though he entered the army at 15 years of age, did not become a captain till 1791. In 1793, having been subsequent period, became duke of Monmouth sent to the Pyrenees at the head of the "chas- and knight of the Garter. He was for some sours Cantabres," he so distinguished himself time in the service of France, with an English by his gallantry, that in a short time he became successively general of brigade and became successivery general or originate and general of division. In 1705 and 1708 he made most successful campaigns in Spain and Italy, and, after the peace of Luncville, was appointed inspector-general of the gen-darmerie; in which capacity he rendered such important services to Napoleon, that he was made one of his first marshals in 1804, and soon afterwards created duke of Conegliano. In 1808 he once more took part in the war with Spain, and contributed to the capture of Saragossa in 1809; but, during the last years of the empire, he ceased to participate in military opcrations which he disapproved, and did not re-appear till 1814, when he tried, as major-general of the national guard, to defend the walls of Paris, laying down his arms only after the ca-pitulation was signed. After the "hundred days," Moncey refused to preside at the council of war appointed to try Marshal Ney; and for this generous act was imprisoned in the fortress of Ham for three months, deprived of all his functions, and expelled from the chamber of peers, to which, however, he was readmitted in 1819. In 1823 he joined the Duke d'Angoulème in his invasion of Spain, and finished his military career with a success worthy of his first exploits. He was afterwards nominated gover-nor of the Hotel des Invalides, and in this capacity received the ashes of Napoleon in 1840. в. 1751; р. 1842.

Moxes, Gaspard, mawnzh, an eminent French geometrician, was the son of an hotel-keeper, and was employed, at the age of 16, to teach natural philosophy in the college of Lyons. In 1780 he became member of the Academy of Sciences, and, three years afterwards, was appointed examiner of naval aspirants. Energetically espousing the principles of the Revolution, he became, in 1792, minister of marine, which post proving to be little in accordance with his genius, he renounced the employment soon afterwards, and turned his attention to providing his country with the most efficient methods of defence. He was one of the foun-ders of the Polytechnic School, accompanied Romaparte to Egypt, and became president of the Institute of Cairo. The emperor subsethe institute of Cairo. The emperor subsequently maninated him senator, Count de Peluse, and loaded him with honours. After Peluse, and loaded him with honours. After the restoration of the Bourbons, he fell into disgrace. His various works on geometry are among the clearest and best in the French language, which is particularly rich and excellent in this department of science. B. 1746; D. 1813

Monge, Lieutenant-colonel, was sent to Vienna by Napoleon, after his escape from Elba, to carry off Maria Louisa and her son to France; and under various disguises, reached the Austrian capital, and had nearly succeeded in his mission, when the police got notice of the project. Monge was obliged to flee, but effected his escape to France, rejoined the emperor, and fought at Waterloo. He was ultimately reduced to such poverty as to be obliged to work as a common regiment, and signalized himself against the Dutch; for which he was made lieutenantgeneral. On his return to England he was sent, in 1679, to quell an insurrection in Scotland: after this he joined the disaffected party, who were for excluding the duke of York from the succession to the throne. He was also concerned in a plot against his father, for which he was pardoned, and then went to Holland, whence he returned on the accession of James II.; and having landed in Dorsetshire, obtained followers, but was defeated at Sedgemoor, in Somerseishire, and being taken prisoner, was conveyed to London, where he was tried and sentenced to death. B. at Rotterdam, 1849; beheaded, 1685.

Monnover. Jean Baptiste, mo-nuoi'-yai, a celebrated fruit and flower painter, who was employed by Le Brun to decorate the palace at Versailles with examples of his art, and became member of the French Academy of Painters. His fame reaching England, he was invited to London about 1680, by the duke of Montague, to embellish his house (the late British Museum). These beautiful decorations were, however, destroyed when the palace was pulled down to allow of the erection of the present building. Monoyer likewise decorated the mansions of several others of the English nobility, and fourteen flower-pieces by him are to be seen in the room called George the Second's private chamber, at Hampton Court Palace. He etched a collection of his own designs, which was published in a folio volume. B. at Lille, 1635; D. in London, 1699.

Monro, Alexander, mun-ro', a celebrated physician, who studied at Leyden, and contracted sican, who studed at Leyden, and contracted an intimate friendship with Boerhauve. In 1719 he returned to Edinburgh, where he read lectures on anatomy. His most important and valuable works are,—"Osteology," Anatomy of the Nerves, soveral papers in the "Medical Essays" of Edinburgh, and on the "Sacess of Incollation in Edinburgh," They were collected and published together in 1781, in one volume.

B. in Scotland, 1697; D. 1767.

MONROE, James, fifth president of the United States, was of Scotch descent, and entered the Duales, was or scotce descent, and entered the American array of independence, as volunteer, in his 16th year, and, at the close of the war, became colonel, on the recommendation of General Washington. He next studied the law at the William and Mary Collecq, in Virginia, and was sent as representative of Westmoreland county to the legislature. After forming a member of the senatorial body of the United States for three years, General Washington ap-pointed him minister to France. In 1798 he was recalled, but was, two years afterwards, chosen governor of his native state of Virginia. He held that office for three years, at ginia. He heid that office to three years, at the end of which he again went to France as United States minister. While in Paris, he ne-gotiated the purchases of New Orleans and 8f Louisiana. He next represented his native country at the courts of Spain and Great Britain, and, in 1808, returned home. After poverty us to be conged to work as a common Britain, and, in 1808, returned home. After labourer. D. in the first of St. Louis, 1829. serving as secretary of state under President Moork, George. (See Albergard, duke of.) Madison, he was chosen president, in 1818, and Moorkgover, James, duke of, mon-mouth, nor re-elected in 1831. Upon the termination of his truril son of Charles II, west, at his finther's presidentship, he retired to Virginia, where he restoration, created earl of Orkney, and, at a acted as a justice of the peace. During the last 725

Monsey

Montagu

was first promulgated by Monroe. It reserves the whole American continent for the inhabitants of the United States, and declares that no foreign power ought to possess jurisdiction over any portion of it. B. in Westmoreland county, Virginia, 1751; D. at New York, 1831.

Monsey, Messenger, mon'-sc, an English physician, was a man of great eccentricity of manners, and of considerable talents, and was for many years physician of Chelsen Hospital. Having a great aversion to interment in churches or churchyards, he ordered, by his will, that his body be dissected, and the skeleton preserved in Chelsen Hospital, B. 1692; D.

Monson, Sir William, mon'-son, an English naval officer, born at South Carlton, in Lincolnshire, was educated at Baliol College, Oxford, sand, was enacted at hand conger, volunt and entering the unval service, served in several expeditions in the reign of Elizabeth. He was knighted by the Earl of Essex, for his conduct in the expedition to Cadiz; and in the reign of James I, he distinguished himself against the Dutch. B. 1569; D. 1643. MONSTRELET, Enguerrand de, mon'-stre-lai, a celebrated French chronicler, relative to whose appointed provost of the city of Cambrai, and bailiff of Wallaincourt, which offices he retained until his death. His chronicles commence about the time that Froissart's terminate, and, about the time that Proissart's terminate, and, like his predecessor, he gives a clear and picturesque narrative of the wars of France, and of the principal persons engaged in them, from the year 1440 to 1453. The best modern edition of Monstrelet's Chronicles is that of Buchon, published in 1836. An English translation of the work was made by Mr. Johnes, in 1810. B. about the close of the 14th century; p. 1453.

Monragu, Basil, non-ta-gu, an English writer on law, and editor of the works of Lord Bacon, after concluding his educational career at the university of Cambridge, entered himself at Gray's 1nn, and was called to the bar in 1738. Possessed of little talent as a pleader, he turned his attention to the laws of pleater, he turned his attention to the laws of bankruptey, obtained a good practice in that department, and wrote many valuable works connected therewith. Lord Ersking while lord chancellor, appointed lilm a commissioner of bankrupts, but Mr. Mortagu, convinced of the hijury done to suitors by this most of administering the law, published, and presented to the House of Commons, some statements which led to the abolition of the commissionerships and to the audition of the commissioner any and the enactment of a new law, under which he received the post of accountant-general in bankrupter, and retained it for ten years. His legal works are too numerous to be here His legal works are too numerous to be here quoted; but in general literature the most important of his labours were "Selections from the Works of Taylon, Hooker, Hall, and Lord Bacon," "The Works of Francis Bacon, Lord Chancellor of England," in 16 vols, to which was added a life of that great writer. Altogethes was saided a life of this great writer. Altogethes he is said to have published forty volumes, leaving belind him upwards of a lundred more in Ms. a. in Loudon, 1770; p. 1861.

Monaracy, Lady Mary Wortley, was the eldest Monaracy Lady Mary Wortley, and afterwards dutk of Kingston. She received a liberal deducation, and taught hereoff the elements of deducation, and taught hereoff the elements of the Latin language. In 1712 she married papers, for a wife without fortune, in order that,

years of his life, he lived at New York. The Edward Wortley Montagu, grandson of the first line of policy known as the "Monroe Doctrine" earl of Sandwich. This gentleman distinguished himself in Parliament as an able and upright senator, and was the intimate friend of Addison. In 1716 he was appointed ambassador to the court of Constantinople, whither he was accompanied by his lady. During this embassy, she wrote an elegant and interesting description of Constantinople, in letters to her friends. Of these, a surreptitious edition appeared in 1763, in 3 vols., to which was afterwards added a fourth volume. The editor was the notorious Cleland. These letters were so well received, as to pass through several issues, and to be translated into many languages. A g maine edition of these, and Lady Mary's other works, was published under the authority of her son, the marquis of Bute, in 1803. While at Constantinople, she obtained information of a practice among the villagers, of inoculating for the small-pox. This operation she performed on her son, and by this means wer in-trumental in introducing inoculation into the cast of Europe. At the end of 1718, Lady Mary returned to England, and settled at Twick nham, where she formed an intimacy with Pope; but the friendship was afterwards broken off, and the poet did not seruple to write salues against pact and not scripte to write status against her talents and reputation, which, however, he was mean enough to deny. In 1739, on account of her health, Lady Mary went to Italy, and took up her residence in Venice, where she remained till 1701, when, at the request of her daughter, Lady Bute, she returned to England, B. at Thoresby, Nottinghamshire, 1690; D. 1762. A complete edition of her usings was published by her great-grandson, Lord Wharneliffe, in 1836, under the title of "Letters and Works of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu.

MONTIGU, Edward Wortley, son of the pre-eding, whom his niece, in her blography of his mother, describes as "betraying from the beginning that surest symptom of moral (or mental) giming that surest symptom of mora (or meman) disease, an habitual disregard of truth, accom-panied by a fertile and ready invention, never at fault." He received his education at Westminster school, whence he ran away, and entered into the service of a chimney-sweeper. His family the service of a commer-sweeper. His family had given him up as lost, when a gentleman recognised him in the street, and took him home to his father. He escaped a second time, and engaged with the master of a fishing smack; after which he shipped him elf on board a vessel bound to Spain, where he served as a muleteer. In this situation he was discovered and conveyed home to his friends, who placed him under a tutor, with whom he tra-velled abroad. His father being rather seanty in his remittances, owing probably to the son's extravagance, the tutor is said to have committed a curious fraud to obtain a supply. This mitted a curious raud to obtain a supply. This was the printing a book entitled "Observations on the Rise and Fall of Aucient Republies, by Edward Wortley Montagu, Esq." This work, whether the production of the son or not, gave great pleasure to the old gentleman, who acknowledged it in a handsome manner. Edward snowingers in a nanosome manner. Edward was for some time in Parliament, and conducted himself in a manner becoming his rank. He adopted the dress and manners of the Turks. Out of pique against his family, he caused an advertisement to be inserted in the English

Montague

Montalembert

Transactions. n. 1/15; D. 1/7/0.

MONTAGUE, George, a distinguished English naturalist, was one of the original members of the Linnean Society of London. His "Ornthological Dictionary, or Alphabetical Synopsis of British Birds," was first published in 1802, and may be advantageously consulted by the student of natural history, even at the present time. In the following year, he put forth a "Natural History of British Shells, Marine, Land, and Fresh-water," to which a supplement was added in 1809. His most important contributions to the Transactions of the Linniean Society were, a "Description of three Rare Species of British Birds," "On some Spe-cies of British Quadrupeds, Birds, and Fishes," "Of several New or Rare Animals, principally Marine, found on the South Coast of Devonshire," and "Some New and Rare British Ma-rine Shells and Animals." Mr. Montague was a gentleman of ancient family, who resided upon his estate in Wiltshire, and afterwards at Kingsbridge, in Devonshire, and his works were the result of a polished and lettered ease.

MONTAGUE, Richard, a learned English pre-late, who, in 1616, became dean of Hereford, and in 1621 published a learned answer to Sel-den's "History of Tithes." He afterwards den's "History of Tithes." In afterwards engaged in a controversy with the Roman Catholies, on which occasion he wrote his "Appello Casarem," for which he was ordered to appear at the har of the House of Commons in the first Parliament of Charles I, on the charge of maintaining Arminian and popish errors. He was made bishop of Chichester in 1989, where he was practical to Newrick in errors. He was made inshop of Chenester in 1628, whence he was translated to Norwich in 1638. His principal work is an "Ecclesiastical History," in Latin, in which his learning ap pears to great advantage. B. in Buckingham-shire, about 1577; D. 1641.

MONTAGUE, Elizabeth, an English authoress, the care of whose education was undertaken by the celebrated Dr. Conyers Middleton. (See MIDDLETON, Conyers. In 1769 Mrs. Montague published "An Essay on the Writings and Genius of Shakspeare," which obtained a great and deserved reputation. She formed a literary society, known by the name of the Blue-Stocking Club, from the circumstance that a gentleman belonging to it wore stockings of that colour. Mrs. Montague was noted for another peculiarity,—that of giving an annual dinner on May-day to the chimney-sweepers of the metropolis, to celebrate the fact of her kinsman necopons, to eventue the fact of her kinsman (see Morradu, Miward Wortley) having been for some time a chimney-sweep. George Lord Lyttleton was a warm admirer of Mrs. Mon-tague, and was assisted by her in the composi-tion of his "Dialogues of the Dead." p. 1720; by laving an heir, he might disappoint his re-lations, which expedient, however, failed. He the States-general at Blois in 1583, when the Duke wrote "Observations on Earthquakes," and some curious papers in the "Philosophical Transactions," in 1713; p. 1776. murdered. After an active life, he retired to his seat of Montaigne, in Perigord, where he devoted himself for the remainder of his life to philosophical studies. The celebrated "Essays" were written at a time when Montaigne was suffering from deep melancholy, which had been induced by the horror with which the massacre of St. Bartholomew (1572) had inmassacre of St. Bartholomew (1972) had inspired him. He kept a journal of his tour in Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, which was discovered two centuries afterwards, in his assovered two centuries atterwards, in his family chiefau, and given to the world under the title of "Journal of the Travels of Michel de Montaigne." The "Essays, "which were justly called by Cardinal du Perron "the breviary of free-thinkers," treated of the most diverse subfree-thinkers, Treated of the most diverse sur-jects, were evidently composed without plan, and were the simple and truthful expression of Montaigne's mind upon certain occasions. They are written in a facile and quaint style; on which account, as well as for their deep sinon which account, as well as for their deep sin-cerity, they have a great charm for most readers. The most remarkable essays are those on the administration of justice. The best English translation of the "Essays" is that of Cotion. n. at Montaigne, Pericord, 1533; p. 1592.

MONTALEMBERT, Marc René, Marquis de, mon-tal'-em-bair, a celebrated French engineer general, and member of the Paris Academy of Sciences, displayed great military talent in the French, Russian, and Swedish services; but is best known by his works, which were, "Perpendicular Fortifications; or, the Art Dofensive superior to the Art Offensive, by a New Manner of employing Artillery; "Correspondence with Ministers and Generals," and some comedies and poems. B. at Angoulême.

1714: p. 1800.

MONTALEMBERT, Charles Forbes, Count de, a celebrated French writer, who sprung from an old family of Poiton, and whose father was a bear of France, and ambassador at Stockholm from the court of Charles X. His mother was a Scotch lady. He received his education at the university of Paris. At the outset of his career ho was an advocate of the union of Catholicism and democracy, of which Lamennais was the and democracy, of which Lamennais was the apostole (see LAMENNAIS), and was one of the editors of a journal founded to advocate that union, called "i/Avenir." He subsequently commenced a kind of crusade against the university, and opened, in 1831, with Lacordaire, a school called the "Ecole Libra" (See Lacordaire, a) this opposition to the then existing government at length trought him before the tribunals of justice; but, during the process of trial, his father dick, and as he thus became a peer of France, he claimed the right of being tried by the upper charmler, by which he was tried by the upper chamber, by which he was condemned to a fine of a hundred francs. His tion of the "Discovered to the Control of the Contr defence, pronounced before the chamber, may be considered as the beginning of his political opposed the educational measure of M. Villethe learned Tertulian; but, in the end, he main, and in the following year published separated himself from them. n. about the his Catholic manifesto. In 1843 he delivered, middle of the 2nd century, at Ardaba, in Mysia; in the Ghamber of Peers, three remarkable n.at the beginning of the 3rd entury. in the Chamber of Peers, three remarkanes speeches on the liberty of the church, the liberty of education, and the liberty of the monastic orders. He also made himself notorious by the part he took on behalf of oppressed nationali-ties; and in 1847 had a solemn funeral service celebrated in Notre Dame to the memory of Daniel O'Connell, After the establishment of the republic, M. de Montalembert was elected a member of the Constituent Assembly, and then acted with the opposition party. He was opposed to the measure for again requiring journals to furnish security, to the continuance of the state of siege, and to the admission of Louis Bonaparte. At the end of the session, however, he supported a bill for the restriction of the press, and highly approved of the French expedition to Rome. He was re-elected to the Legislative Assembly, and distinguished hunself by his frequent encounters with M. Victor Ilugo, his only rival in oratory, and by his defence of the president. When the corp d'chet defence of the pressured. When the compaction came, he protested strongly against the imprisonment of the deputies, but was nevertholess named a member of the Consultative theless named a member of the Consultative Commission—a distinction in declined, and was, in 1852, elected into the Corps. Logislati, and At the election in 1857, be lost his sent, and retired into private life, but came before the public again as the writer of an article in the "Correspondant," which led to his being sumand to his subsequent trial, which attracted the attention of all Europe. For that effusion he was fined 8000 francs, and ordered to be imprisoned for six months. M. de Montalembert was likewise known in England as the author of two cloquent works, entitled, respectively, "Catholic Interests in the 19th century," and the "Political Future of England." The first was a brilliant but partial review of Catholicism in Europe: the conclusion arrived at being, that that form of religious belief promised to spread and to endure. In the latter work he displayed great knowledge and still greater sympathy with English intelligence and energy: its schools, its English intengence and energy: its senous, its journalism, and its political institutions, were discussed in a liberal and enlarged spirit; but the work can have little practical benefit, on account of the singular view of the author, that account of the singular view or the aninor, that England would gain by removing her connexion with Rome. Both these works have been translated into English. M. Mentalembert proved himself one of the first men in Europe, both as a writer and as a speaker; and, by his eminence and his great interest. in literature and education, was among the leaders of the French Academy, of which he was elected a member in 1852. II. in London, 1810.

MONTANUS, mon-tai'-nus, the founder of the sect of Christian heretics called Montanists, or marrages as auditerous. his followers, who were numerous, affected extraordinary agitations of the body, as the effects of the Spirit, and pretended to make prophecies. Among others who were gained over to this strange sect was Monravsten, Charles de St. Maure, duke de, mon-to-se-ai, peer of France, was appointed by Louis XIV., in 1068, governor of the dauphin, He was a man of indexible integrity and austere virine, and inculcated in the mind of his puril the purest sentiments. Bossnet and Huet were nominated by him as the young prince's pre-ceptors; it was for the use of the dauphin that the Delphin edicion of the ancient classics was first made. Before his marriage with his wife he presented to her a poetical offering, entitled "The Garland of Julia," which contained ma-drigals transcribed by the caligraphist Jarry, and was decorated with floral designs by the painter Robert. This splendid volume excited much interest on account of its beauty, n. 1610; p. 1690, MONTCALM, Louis Joseph, Maronis de, montkam, a brave and distinguished French general. who entered the army at an early age, and signalized himself on many occasions, particularly at Piacenza, in 1746. In 1756 he became field-mar-hal, and was appointed to command the French army in Canada, where he opposed Lord London with considerable skill and suc-He afterwards defeated Abereromby, his lordship's successor; but in the battle fought under the walls of Quebec, in 1759, Montealm received a mortal wound, as did also his brave opponent, the English general Wolfe. n. at Candiac, near Nimes, 1712.

MONTRUCCULI, Count Schastlan, mon'-tak koo'-koo-te, an Italian gentleman, who went to France in the suite of Catherine de' Medici, and became cuphearer to the dauphin Francis, sen of Francis I. He was accused of having poisoned the young prince at Valence, in 1535, and, being put to the torture, confe, sed that he was hired to do it by the partisans of Charles V. The friends of the emperor, however, fully rethe treats of the emperor, nowever, they re-futed the aboniuable charge, and threw it back upon his patron, Catherine de' Medici, wife of Henry 11., brother to the dauphin. Put to death 1536.

Montecueult, Raymond, Count de, a famous cneral in the service of Austria, entered early into the army, under his uncle, who com-manded the artillery of the emperor. The first action in which he distinguished himself was in 1638, when, at the head of 2000 men, he surprised 10,000 Swedes, who were engaged in besieging Numslau, in Silesia, and whom he comsegging Attussing, in Suesia, and whom he com-pelled to abandon their bargage and artillery, but was subsequently taken prisoner by General Bannier. He did not regain his liberty till two years afterwards; but employed that time to great advantage in study. On returning to his profession, he defeated the Swedes in Rohemia. After the peace of Westphalia, he travelled in different countries. In 1657 he was appointed field-marshal, and sent to the relief of John Casimit, king of Poland, who was attacked by Sweden and the prince of Transylvania. After Cataphrygians, pretended that the Holy Spirit descended upon him, as well as upon two of Sweden and the prince of Transylvania. And this followers, Priscilla and Maximilla, ladies defeating the latter, he took Cracow from the of considerable property. He denied the Swedes, and gained several important successes, dectrine of the Trinity, and condemned second which produced a peace. He next served dectrine of the Trinity, and drove them out of Transylvania for which he was made prosident Transylvania, for which he was made president of the imperial council. In 1673 he was sent against the French, and had to oppose the great Turenne, who fell in the contest, and Montecuculi, in his despatch to the emperor, regretted the loss of a man who was an honour to humanity. He afterwards acted with great humanity. He afterwards acted with great courage and skill against the Prince de Condé.

B. at Modena, 1608; D. 1680. Montenayor, George de, mon'-tai-mă-yor, a Castilian poet, who took his name from the place of his birth. After serving in the army, he was employed at the court of Philip II. He

he was employed at the court of Emily 11. 12. wrote "Diana" a pastoral romance, which was continued by Gil Polo. n. 1520; n. 1562. Mowrespan, Madame de, mon'tespé, a celebratei French lady, who was wife of a nobleman of that title, and mistress of Louis XIV. over whom she gained a complete ascendancy, which she maintained till that monarch became attached to Madame de Maintenon. Madame de Montespan had children by the king, one of whom became duke of Maine and another count of Toulouse. B. 1641; D. 1707.

MONTESQUIEU, Charles de Secondat, Baron atorstsquire, thanks de Seconda, Lurion de, mot-fees, pa, an eminent French writer, who was educated for the legal profession. His first Herary performance that became famous was entitled "Persian Letters," published in 1721, which gave proofs of a fine genius and a sound judgment. The year following he pleaded with so much eloquence against the imposition of a so much eloquence against the imposition of a new tax, that it was suppressed. In 1728 he was admitted a member of the French Academy, though not without opposition from Cardinal Fleury, who conceived that there were some things dangerous to religion in the "Persian Letters." Montesquien having formed the de-sign of his great work, the "Spirit of Laws," travelled into Germany and Holland, and lastly to England, where he resided two years, calling this the country for thinking and France that for living. On his return home he published his treatise "On the Causes of the Greatness and Decleusion of the Romans." In 1748 appeared his "Spirit of Laws," which ought rather to have been termed the Spirit of Nations. In it the author distinguished three sorts of government, the republican, the monarchical, and the despotic; all of which he examined with much clearness, the whole work being an admirable exposition of political science as it was understood in the author's time. Montesquieu was an apright man and a conscientious judge. B. near Bordeaux, 1689; p. 1755.

MORT EQUAL, MON-TO-W-ma, the last emperor of Mexico, was a prince of noble qualities. He opposed the invaders of his country with firmness, but was at last seized by Cortes, who forced him to acknowledge himself a vassal of Sentin 1994. Markany butter associated in the country was a complete to the country of the countr Spain. The Mexicans having assembled in great numbers against the Spaniards, Cortes, being apprehensive that he was not sufficiently strong to resist them, obliged his royal captive to a peur in his robes, in order to appease his subjects. The insurgents, however, discharged their arrows while he was speaking, and mortally wounded him, in 1820. Prescot has finely narrated his history in his "Conquest of Mexico." Montexuna left two sons and three daughters, who embraced the Christian reli-gion. The eldest received an estate and the title of count from Charles V. D. 1608.

MONTFAUCON, Bernard de, mawat fo-kawng, a learned French antiquary, who in his youth served as a cude in the army; but the death of to him the idea of alight machine, made buyant his parents made so great an impression upon by inflation, for traversing the air. After his mind, that he entered the congregation of various trials, it being ascertained that a balthe Benedictines of St. Maur, in 1675. He ap- loon, with a car attached to it, could be kept plied himself to study with prodigious applica-tion, and acquired a great knowledge of lan-guages, theology, history, and general litera-ture. In 1698 he went to Italy, to consult the public libraries there, and was received with much distinction at Rome, by the college of cal-dinals and Pope Innocent XII. On his return to Paris, in 1702, he published a curious relation of his journey, under the title "Diarium Italicum." His principal works were "Anglaria" cum." His principal works were, "Analecta Gracea," an edition of the works of St. Athanasins, Greek and Latin, with notes; a collection of ancient Greek writers, a French translation of Philo's "Contemplative Life," with notes; "Palæographia Græea," "Antiquities Explained," in French and Latin, and a supplement to the in French and Latin, and a supplement to the same (this is a work of immense crudition, and of the greatest value to students of art); "More unuments of the French Monarchy," an edition of the works of Chrysostom, "Dissertation on the History of Judith." a. At Soulage, Lauguedoe, 1655; p. at Paris, 1741.

MONTPOR, Simon, Count de, sacent fort, a famous French general, who, in 1209, conducted.

the crusade against the Albigenses, on which occasion he tarnished his reputation by his crucities. In 1213 he gained a complete victory over Raymond, count of Toulouse. p. 1165;

over highload, count of Toulouse, 1218.

Montroor, Simon de, earl of Leicester, montfort, was younger son of the preceding, by an English lady. He went to England in 1236, to assume the English title in right of his mother, and was well received by Henry III., who appointed him to the government of Gaseony, with the title of seneschal, and gave him his sister in marriage; but, rendering himself odious by his cruel rule, he incurred the displeasure of the English monarch. In revenge, he incited the English barons to revolt, placed himself at their head, in 1258, and forced the king to convoke a Parliament, called, by the old chroniclers, "the Mad Parliament," at Oxford, and extorted from him many important Oxiord, and extorted from him many important concessions. During many years, he exercised almost absolute power in England, and took the king and his son Edward prisoners at the battle of Lewes, in Sussex, in 1964. In the following year, however, Prince Edward made his secape from Hereford, where he had been confined; and, in the same year, the royal and baronial forces having met at Evesham, the latter were defeated with immense slaughter, both De Montfort and his son being among the slain. Much difference of opinion has existed among historians as to the character of De Montfort; but he was certainly a brave and able man, and, although probably more ambitious than he had openly professed to be, was undoubtedly greatly instrumental in founding English national liberty. Killed, 1265.

MONTGOLFIER, Jacques Etienne, mon-go'-fe-ai, the inventor of air-balloons, was a native of Vidalon-les-Annonai. In conjunction with an elder brother, he devoted himself to scientific pursuits, and was the first who manufactured pursuits, and was the first who manufactured veilum paper, still so much admired for its beauty. One day while boiling water in a coffee-flot, the top of which was covered with paper folded in a spherical form, he saw the paper swell and rist—a circumstance that suggested suspended by a supply of heated air, the experi- office to be printed. For this he was fined £20, suspended by a supply of heatest an, the experiment was repeated on a large scale at Versailles, when the Marquis d'Arlandes assended in the presence of the royal family, and a vast concourse of people. In 1745; D. 1789.

THE DICTIONARY

Montgomery

MONTAGUNEN, Gabriel de, Count of, montgom-ree, a celebrated French nobleman, of Scotlish descent, who, in 1538, land the unistonated of the control of the country of the coun tune to kill Henry II, of France, by aecidentally wounding him in the eye, as they were tilting at a tournament given by that monarch, on the occasion of the marriage between his daughter Elizabeth and the king of Spain. After this unfortunate disaster, Montgomery went to Italy, and lived there and in other countries, till the civil wars recalled him to France, where he attached himself to the Protestants, and became one of their principal chiefs. He defended Rouen in 1562 against the royal army; and, when the city was taken by assault, he escaped when the eny was then to a issuin, to escape to Havre. In L369 he raised the siege of Boarne, in Xavarre, then closely pressed by the Catho-lies, after which he followed the besiegers to Orthez, which he took by assault. Montgomery was at Paris at the time of the massacre of the Protestants in 1572, but escaped, though closely pursued. With his family, he retired first to Jersey, and afterwards to England. In 1573 he screey, and accessed to the control of the protection of the Protestant nobility at St. Lo, at which place he was besieged by Matignon, lightenin-general in Lower Normandy; but Montgomery escaped, and went to Domfront, whither he was followed by Matignon, who, after a prolonged contest, made him prisoner. This gallant nobleman was subsequently codemned to death by Catherine de' Medici, who was then regent of the kingdom, and beheaded in 1574.

MONTGOMERY, James, an English poet, was the son of a Moravian preacher, and was sent to be educated at the settlement of that seet at Fulncek, near Leeds. There he was principally distinguished for his indolence and melancholy; distinguished for ms indolence and measuremay; and, although poetry and fistion were strictly forbidden, he contrived to read, clandestinely, "Robinson Crusoo" and Cowper's poems. His inattention to bis studies caused him to be placed by the school authorities with a shopkeeper, from whom, in 1789, he ran away. A few months afterwards he sent a volume of poems to a London bookseller, and followed it himself to the great metropolis. The poems were declined; but the young poet obtained a struc-tion in the publisher's office. In 1791 he wrote a tale, his first prose production, for the "Bee," an Edinburgh periodical, and soon afterwards published a novel, which was declined, because the hero gave utterance occasionally to a strong expression. The young author was greatly hurt at this, for he was of a deeply religious cast of mind, and imagined he had only done that which was right in imitating Fielding and Smollett. He returned to a situation for some time, and at length entered the service of Mr. Gales, a printer and bookseller at Sheffield, who per-mitted him to write political articles for the "Shoffield Register," a paper conducted on bothled Register," "Shedield Register," a paper conducted on what were then termed revolutionary principles. A warrant being issued for the apprehension of Gales, he fled to America, and Montgomery started a paper on "paeca and reform" princi-ples, called the "Sheffield Iris," and was soon afterwards indicted for producing some doggrel verses, which had been brought to his printing-and sentenced to three mouths' imprisonment. On another occasion, for publishing an account of a riot at Sheffield, he was mod £30, and was imprisoned for six months. His subsequent career was comparatively uneventful. In 1806 he produced "The Wanderer in Switzerland," which quickly ran through three edicions, and was subsequently followed by other and better works of the same nature, the chief of which were, "The West Indies," "The World before the Flood," and "tireculand," a peem descriptive of the establishment of the Moravians in that desolate region, which seet he had again joined. In 1823 he produced "Original Hynns for Public, Private, and Social Devotion." In 1835 he resigned the editorship of the "Shefield bris;" whereupon he was entertained at a public dinner by his fellowtownsmen. His interesting "History of Mis-sionary Enterprise in the South Sens" was produced in 1830. Five years later he was offered the chair of rhetoric in the university of Edinburgh, which he declined. Sir Robert Peel. about the same time, bestowed upon him a pansion of £150. In 1836 he left the house of his old employer Gales, where he had lived during forty years, for a more convenient abode. He delivered several courses of betures up in "The British Poets," at Newcastle-on-Tyne and other places, during some years; but, in 1s11, he visited his native country on a missis wary tour. visited and anti-ventury on a miss any contribution of English Poetry but little known." B. at Irvine, Ayrshire, 1771; b. at Sheffield, 1854.

Montgoment, Rev. Robert, anopular posal

and poet, of whose boyish years nothing is known till be conducted, at an early age, a periodical publication in Bath. In 1828 he produced Lis "Omnipresence of the Deity," which attained an astonishing degree of popularity, twelve editions having been sold in as many months. Another volume of religious poems soon followed, e-at-taining "A Universal Prayer," "Death," "A Vision of Heaven," and "A Vision of Hell." A third production, entitled "Satan," was next put forth, and obtained almost as much success as its predecessors. In 1830, the religious poet resolved to devote himself to the Church, enteredat Lincoln College, Oxford, and graduated B.A. in 1833. Two years afterwards he was or-dained, and became a curate at Whittington. in Shropshire. In 1836 he went to Landon, where he officiated as minister of Percy's rect Chapel, which he quitted for the Episcopal chapel of St. Jude's at Glasgow: but, all his preaching drew large congregation in the alls preaching area mage tongs game. In latter place, so much of controversy as engendered, that he resigned the incombency in 1813 he again commenced his minusterial labours at Percy-street Chapel, which he continued to fulfil until his death. In addition to the works already quoted, he published many others, nearly all of which shared the success of his early efforts. The principal of these were, "The Messinh, a Poem in Six Books;" "Luther, or the Spirit of the Reformation;" and "Sacred Meditations and Moral Thomes," Lord Macaulay, in his essay on the Rev. Robert Montgomery, attributes the great success of his poems to unblushing puttery; but the real reason was doubt-less, that he addressed a very large class with whom poetry is usually rejected as profune, and who found in Montgomery's verse a mental food which had hitherto been denied to them. As a preacher, he is described as combining a mixture of rant and affectation; his manner was, how-ever, engaging, and he was undoubtedly a general favourite with his congregations. B. at Bath, 1807; p. at Brighton, 1855.

Montholon

Montpensier

Monracion, Charles Tristan, Count de, mon'-

to-turny, one of the most faithful adherents of Napoleon I., who, after serving for a short time in the navy, quitted it, and obtained a commission in a cavalry regiment, with which he went through the campaigns in Italy, Germany, and

Poland; rose to the grade of colonel, and greatly distinguished himself at the battle of Wagram, where he received five wounds. Appointed chamberlain to the Empeyor in 1809, he served him in that capacity until Napoleon's first abdication, when the count requested to be allowed to accompany him, but could not obtain During the Hundred Days he that honour. that honour. During the numerou Days no neted as one of Napoleon's aides-de-camp. Upon the deportation of the Emperor to St. Helena, the count accompanied him, and remained near his person until his death. He was one of the ex-emperor's executors, and to him were confided all the MSS, which had been composed at St. Helena. These he afterwards published under the title of "Memoirs towards the History of France under Nanoleon, written at St. Helena." In 15 10 he took part in Louis Napoleon's descent at Boulogue, and was sentenced to imprison-ment with his leader, B. 1779; D. 1853. Montt, Vincenzio, mon'-te, a celebrated Italian most, vincenzio, mon-te, a cerebrated atman paet, was, in his youth, secretary to Don Luigi Braschi, nephew of Pope Pius VI.; but after-wards entirely devoted himself to poetry. Desirous of rivaling Altieri, he wrote the tragodies of "Caius Graechus" and "Aristodemo, then composed several poems in imitation of Dante. He, in the first instance, ridiculed the French; but after the successes of the republic in Italy, he became one of the greatest culogists of Napoleon. He next became professor of clounches at Pavia, of belles-lettres at Milan, and, finally, historiographer of the new kingdom of Italy; but after the fall of Napoleon, he sang the praises of the Austrian empire, a versatility of opinion which caused him to lose the esteem of his countrymen. Besides the works we have of ins country inch.

or made a beautiful translation of Homer's 'Hind,' and published some polemical writings. B. 1754; B. 1828.

Montage, Blaise de, maunt-look, a celebrated French general, who rose through the different ranks in the army to that of marshal of France. His first services were in Italy; and at the battle of Pavia, in 1525, he was taken prisoner. In the wars of Piedmont he served with great reputation, and, in 1545, recovered Boulogne from the English. The city of Siena, in Tuscany, having driven out the imperial garrison, and solicited the protection of France, Monthue was appointed to command the forces sent thither in 15%. He sustained a siege of eight months against the imperial army, commanded by the Marquis de Marignano, who was obliged, after several attacks, to convert the siege into a blockade. It was not till the garrison and inhabitants had endured the utmost extremity of famine, that the place capitulated, when Montine and his troops marched out with the honours of war. He commanded in Guienne during the wars which ravaged France on account of religion, and defeated the Huguenots in several actions, but was guilty of great crucities to the vanquished. At the siege of 781

Rabastens, in 1570, he was so severely wounded in the face, as to be obliged always to wear a mask to hide his deformity. At the age of 75 he wrote the memoirs of his military life, under the title of "Commentaries;" and therein recounted, with hornibe transness, the story or his numberless acts of crucity. B. at the châtean of Montlee, Guienne, about 1503; p. 1577. Montrootsney, Matthew de, autent-no-cha-se, or nouth-mo-ren'se, a distinguished French general, who signalized himself by his valour at the buttle of Pont-a-bowlines, in 13th, and, the year following, was employed against the Albigenses, in Languedoc; for which services he received the sword of constable of France, and was made general of the army. He afterwards took several places from the English. Louis took several places from the English. Louis VIII. committed his son to the care of the constable, who, by his prudence, dissolved a league which had been formed against the queen-mother during the minority of Louis IX.

n. 1230.

IONTMORENCY, Anne de, a descendant of the preceding, displayed great military talents at an early age, and was at the battle of Marignano in 1515. In 1521 he defended the city of Meziers, and compelled the count of Nassan to raise the siege. He accompanied Francis I. to Italy, as marshal of France, and was taken prisoner, with the king, at the battle of Pavia. The important services he had rendered to the state were rewarded with the sword of constable in 1538; but, several years afterwards, he fell under the displeasure of Francis. In the reign of Henry II. he regained favour at court, and was employed in military service, but was again disgraced through the intrigues of Catherine de' Medici. Charles IX, recalled him, and he served against the Calvinists, but was taken prisoner by them at the battle of Dreux, in 1582. Having obtained his liberly the year following, he took Havre from the English. In at Chautilly, 1493; died of wounds received in battle, 1567.

MONTOGENCY, Henry, duke de, was grand-son of the preceding, and was beloved by the people of France for his bravery, generosity, and other great qualities. Having joined thaton of Orleans against Cardinal Richelieu, Montmorency took up arms in the province of Languedoc, of which he was governor. The king sent against him the marshals De la Force and Schomberg, and a battle ensued at Castelnaudary, where the duke was made prisoner, and, notwithstanding the carnest and general solicitations for his pardon, was beheaded at

Toulouse in 1632. E. at Chantilly, 1595.

Montensier, manni-pa-se-at, Anne Maria
Louisa, Duchess de, was the daughter of Gaston, duke of Orleans, brother of Louis XIII. She was generally known by the name of Made-moiseile, and embraced the cause of Condé in the civil wars. She caused the cannon of the Bastille to be fired on the French troops, and showed, on many occasions, a most imputa-ous spirit. After trying in vain to espouse several sovereign princes, among the rest Charles several severing princes, among the rest charles II, of England, she is said to have secretly married the Count do Lauzun. Mademoiselle passed her last years in devotion, and wrote her memoirs, which are very curious, and full of mediates raditive to the Court of Louis IV, and the Fronde leaders. B. at Paris, 1637; D. test 1693.

MONTPENSIER, Duke de, younger brother of Louis Philippe. (See Louis PHILIPPE.)

MONTROSE, James Graham, Marquis of, montrose', was descended from one of the oldest families in Scotland. He married young, and went abread, but returned to Scotland about 1633, and was generally considered one of the most accomplished gentlemen of his time. He was at first one of the most violent of the popular leaders, and took a principal part in the preparation of the National Covenant; but, thinking himself slighted by the Covenanters, went over to the royal side. In 1644 he was nominated by Charles I. captain-general of the forces to be raised in Scotland, and immediately commenced his attacks upon the Covenanters with various success. At the battle of Tippermuir, however, he defeated the Covenanters with immense slaughter; but, being surprised at Philiphaugh, in 1615, by General Lesly, his forces were routed, and he and a few followers only succeeded in gaining the Highlands after considerable difficulty. In 1646 he was allowed to take his departure for Norway. He went to France, and served with great distinction in France, and served wire great materials in the army of that power, and was offered the grade of lieutenant-general of the Sects in France, and other high appointments, all of which he refused. After the death of Charles I., Montrose was deputed by Charles II. to invade Scotland, and accordingly dispatched some troops to the Orkneys, joining them himself shortly afterwards; but, in the very first encounter with the Covenanters on the mainland, he was utterly routed. He escaped in the disguise of a Highland rustic; but was soon delivered up to General Lesly, and taken to Edinburgh, where he was subjected to many barbarous indignities, and sentenced to death. His demeanour throughout this crisis was dignified and self-possessed, and caused many to sympathize with him who had before regarded Simpature with min win and before regarded lim as the cruel agent of a tyrant. In 1650 he was hanged on a gibbet, after which his limbs were severed from his body, and affixed to the gates of the chief towns in Sectland. Charles II., at the Restoration, reversed the sentence, and ordered the scattered remains of the unfortunate nobleman to be collected: which was accordingly done, and they were buried with great colemnity in Edinburgh. n. in Scotland, 1612. MONTUCIA, Jean Etienne, mawn-took'-la, a French mathematician and scientific writer, was an associate of the National Institute, and a member of the Academy of Berlin. He accompanied Turgot to Cayenne, as secretary of the panied Turgot to Cayenne, as secretary of the government and royal astronomer. On his return to France, he was appointed first commissioner of public buildings. His principal works were, "Researches on the Quadrature of the Circle," "Collection of Tracts upon Inoculation," and "History of Mathematics." This last is valuable, and has been translated into English. n. at Juyus, 1725; p. 1799.

MONTYCCI, Antonio, mon'-loot-che, a learned will object the property of the property

philologist, particularly excelling as a Chinese scholar, studied at the university of Siena, descholar, studied at the university of sheats, our cotting himself to the living languages with almost incredible application. In 1785 he was appointed professor of English in the Tolomei college; and, in 1789, accompanied Mr. Wedg wood to England as Italian teacher in his family. Being in London in 1702, when preparations were making for Lord Macartney's embassy to China, Montucei took the opportunity of obtaining assistance from some Chinese youths attached to the embassy in acquiring their language, with which he was before only imper-fectly acquainted. In 1806 he went to Berlin, on the invitation of the king of Prussia but the invasion of the country by Bonaparte for sometime interrupted his plans; and, returning to Italy, he died at Siena, in 1829. B. there, 1762. He was the author of a "Chinese Dictionary," an "Italian Pocket Dictionary," and several elementary works in that language; and edited the "Poesic inedite" of Lorenzo de Medici, published at the expense of Mr. Roscoe,

Moore, Sir Jonas, a.oor, whose mathematical knowledge recommended him to Charles II., who employed him in several works and made him surveyor-general of the ordnance. He was one of the governors of Christ's Hospital, and mainly instrumental in inducing Charles to endow a school for mathematic; in that institution, for the use of which Sir Jonas compiled a "General System of Mathematics," in 2 vois,, which was published subsequent to the author's death.

B. about 1620; p. 1651.

n, about 1620; p. 1631.

Moorr, Edwar, an English poet, who wrote "Fables for the F male Sex?" "The Gamester," a tragedy "Gill 3las," a councly, and other pieces. He was bewise caller of The World, a weekly paper, for which Lords—yttleton and Chesterfield, and Horace Walpele wrote. n.

1712; p. 1757.

Moore, Dr. John, a physician and miscellaneous writer, who received his education at Glasgow, where he applied to the study of me-dicine. In 1747 he became assistant-surg on in the army in Flanders, where he remained till the general peace. After the war, he pursued his medical studies at London and Paris; at the latter place he was appointed surgeon to the household of Lord Albemarle, the English ambassador. On his return to Scotland, he became partner with Dr. Gordon, an eminent practi-tioner at Glasgow; but, in 1772, he accepted an invitation to travel with the young duke of Hamilton. After spending five years abroad, Dr. Moore settled in London, and, in 1779, published the fruits of his travels, in "A View of Society and Manners in France, Switzerland, and Germany." This work was so well received that, in 1781, he added to it two volumes, entitled, "A View of Society and Manners in Italy." In 1785 he published "Medical Sketches." His next performance was a novel of a very superior character, entitled "Zeluco," which abounds with incident, though the principal character is so atrocious as to excite the reader's horror. In 1792 he accompanied Lord Landerdale to Paris, and witnessed some of the principal scenes in the Revolution, of which he published an inte-resting account in 1765. The year following ap-peared his novel entitled "Edward," intended as a contrast to "Zeluco," but inferior to it. In 1700 he gave to the world " Mordaunt;" being sketches of life, characters, and manners in various countries. This work is neither a ro-mance, novel, nor book of travels; but it contains many lively and instructive observations.

B. at Stirling, 1730; D. at Richmond, 1802. Moore, Sir John, a brave and distinguished acober, ser John, a crave and assinguished legislish general, was son of the preceding, and entered the army in his filteenth year. His father possessing great influence in aristo-cratic circles, caused the young soldier to rise rapidity, and to gain the rauk of licutuani-colonel before he had seen any service. In however, he showed that he was possessed of great military qualities, by the part he took

Moore

in Paoli's descent upon Corsica. His next services were in the West Indies in 1796, in Ireland during the rebellion of '98, and in Holland shortly afterwards. In 1801 he commanded the greatly signalized himself, receiving a wound at the head of his men. Upon the renewal of the war in 1802, he applied to be placed in command of a camp of instruction upon the Kentish coast. His request was granted, and he successfully trained a number of light infantry regiments, which afterwards formed the celebrated light division of the duke of Wellington's army in the Peninsular war, and evinced, by their deeds, a valuable proof of the soundness of Moore's method. In 1808 he went, with an army of 10,000 men, to Sweden, to assist Gustavus Adolphus IV. in defending his kingdom against the designs of Napoleon; but, becoming involved in a dispute with that monarch, he returned to England with his troops. In August of the same year he was sent to Portugal, and was placed in command of an army of 30,000 infantry and 5000 cavalry, which was ordered to co-operate with the Spanish troops against the French in the north of the peninsula. Two months afterwards he commenced his march from Lisbon; but, on entering Spain, discovered that the whole of the Spanish forces with which he was to act had been thoroughly routed. He had sent his cavalry and artillery by another route than that which he had pursued, and a wide tract of country still lay between himself wade tract of country stin ay between finishin and a portion of his army, which had been sent to him from England under Sir David Baird, and which had landed at Corunna. Sir John Moore remanned for a time inactive at Sala-Moore remained for a time inactive at Sam-manca, tirged to advance by the British ambas-sador in Spain, but himself inclined to retract into Portugal. Suddenly discovering that the French intended to surround him, he com-menced a rapid, if not too hasty, march to Coruma. In that memorable retreat through the mountains of Galicia, in the depth of a severe winter, Sir John Moore displayed the highest qualities of a military commander. Before the battle of Corunna the British troops were, to all appearance, completely disorganized and exhausted yet, animated by the example of their heroic leader, they turned upon their advancing foes, and inflicted upon them a decisive repulse. The victory was dearly bought, for Sir John Moore fell, but in a manner worthy of the last moments of Epaminoudas, Bayard, and Wolfe. With his expiring breath he hoped, "that the people of England would be satisfied -that his country would do him justice," The student who desires to learn more of the perstudent who desires to learn more of the per-sonal history of this hero, may turn with ad-vantage to the first volume of Napier's "History of the War in the Peninsula," to Southey's "Peninsula War," and to Jones's "Account of the War in Spain and Portugal." z, 1761; z.

1809. Moore, Thomas, a celebrated poet, was the son of a small tradesman at Dublin, and after receiving some education at a school in the same city, was entered at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1794. He had already commenced rhymo-making, and had inserted two pooms in a Dublin magazine. His collegiate career was somewhat adopting the law as his profession. In 1801 he produced the "Odes of Anacreon," which he had composed while at college, and in the following year, "The Poetical Works of the late Thomas Little," a collection of lyries in imitation of Catullus. He now began to be introduced to the fashionable circle in which, throughout his after life, he sought to move. Through the influence of Lord Moira he was, in Through the influence of Lord Moira he was, in the following year, appointed to a post at Bermuda; but finding, on his arrival, that the situation was distasteful to him, he returned ulmost immediately. He pursued his homeward journey throughout the United States, and visited New York, Virginia, Boston, Niagara, and Qachee. Soon after his arrival in Engiand, he put forth his "Odes and Epistles," which being severely criticised by Jeffroy, led to the "bloodless duel" between himself and that prelicious his arrival in Engiand, and statistized by Byron in his "Digital Bards and Scotch Reviewers." (See Jeffer), at At this worlde he was much courted by the noxile At this period he was much courted by the noble and the fashionable, and was a constant guest at Holland and Lansdowne Houses. He had a sweet voice, and being a good musician, was in the habit of singing the melodies of his native land with much success at aristocratic reunions. This fact led to his engaging himself to write a series of Irish melodies, the accompaniments to which were to be adapted from Irish airs by Sir which were to be adapted from first aris y Sh John Stevenson. This task was not completed until 1834. Of a similar character were his "National Airs" and "Sacred Songs." In 1812, his friend Mr. Petry, editor of the "Morning Chroniele," negotiated on his behalf with the Messrs. Longman the sale of a quarto volume of poems, for which Moore was to receive 3000 guineas. Five years afterwards, this poem ap-peared under the title of "Lalla Rookh," and was immediately highly successful. This brilliant composition was something quite new to the public, who were captivated with its rich colouring its melody, and its oriental spirit. The "Fudge Family in Paris" was his next work, and was the result of a visit to the French and was one result of a visit to the French capital, made in company with Mr. Rogers. He soon afterwards learned that his deputy at Bernmida, "after keeping back from him the propoer receipts of his office, had made free with the proceeds of a ship and cargo deposited in his hands." For this, Doctors' Commons made a claim upon him to the amount of £0000. The most's friends profited assistance, but he heads friends profited assistance. a claim upon him to the amount of 19000. The poet's friends profiered assistance; but he honourably resolved to pay off the claim out of the carnings of his pen. The remaining years of his life may be described as an untiring pursuit of poetry, prose, and fashicnable society. As Dyron said, he dearly loved a lord, and was never so happy as when he was in the presence of the noble. The simple enumeration of his chief productions will show, however, that he did not trifle with or neglect the magnificent gifts with which nature had endowed him, gits with which nature had endowed him, During the subsequent twenty years he laboured incessantly, and gave to the world, among others, "The Loves of the Angels," a poem; "The Epicurean," a prese-poetical romance; "Fables of the Iloly Alliance," "Alemoirs of Chytain Rock," "The Summer Fetc," "The Life of Lord Edward Fitzgrevall," the "History of Ireland," and the "Life of Sheridan." Some time previously ta the very 1821 Lord Bereau time previously ta the very 1821 Lord Bereau. magazine. This configure career was somewhat of relating, and the "line of shardain." Belighting in the long of the Roman Catholic time previously to the year 1821, Lord Byron faith, he was not permitted to take honours, intrusted Moore with his manuscript autobio-About 1790 he went to London, and entered graphy, which was to be published for Moore's himself of the Middle Temple, with the view of benefit, but not until after Ryren's death. In 1821 Moore sold the MS. to Murray, and engaged to edit it for the sum of 2000 guineas. In 1824 Byron died, but Lady Byron deeming that the publication of the autobiography was calculated punication of the automography was calculated to injure the character of her husband and his furnily, offered to repay to Mr. Murray the sum he had advanced to Moore. This the poet would not accede to, but, after some altercation, Moore himself repaid the sum he had obtained from the publisher, and the MS. was burnt. Hc. however, wrote a Life of Byron for the Messrs, Longman for a like sum. As a poet, he displayed grace, pathos, tenderness, and a luxuriant imagination; his melody was tender and flowing, but it was deficient in power and nowing, but it was denement in power and naturalness. His literary merits obtained for him, in 1835, a pension of £300 per annum. The "Irish Melodics" and "Lalla Rookh" have passed through many editions, and are still exceedingly popular. During the last years of his life, Moore was engaged in completing a collected edition of his poetical works, which was published after his death. His character was vain but kindly, and many proofs of his goodness of heart appear in the "Memoirs and Correspondence of Thomas Moore," edited by Earl Russell in 1855. B. at Dublin, 1779; D. 1852.

Moore

733

MORAND, Saveur François, mo-rant, a celebrated French surgeon, who went to England in 1729 to avail himself of the instructions of Cheselden, whose esteem he acquired. On his return to his own country, he became surgeonmajor of the Guards, and director of the Academy of Surgeons. He was also made chevalier of the order of St. Michael, and admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences, and of the Royal Society of London. His chief works were,—"A Treatise on the High Operation for the Stone," "Discourse on the Necessity that a Surgeon should be learned," "Experiments and Observations on the Stone," and "Miscellaneous Works." B. at Paris, 1697; D. 1773.

MORANT, Philip, mo-rant, an English antiquary and divine, who became rector of Ald-ham, in Essex, and was appointed by the House mun, in issex, and was appointed by the House of Peers to prepare the voice of Parliament for the press. He edited several works, and wrote a "History of Colchester," the "History of Essex," and some Lives, which were inserted in the "Biographia Britannica." p. in Jersey, 1719; p. 1770.

MORDAUNT, Charles. (See Peterborouge,

Lord.) More, Sir Thomas, mor, a distinguished English statesman and writer, was the son of Sir John More, one of the judges of the King's Bench. He received his education at Oxford, and afterwards became a student of Lincoln's Inn. As soon as he came of age he obtained a seat in Parliament, where he opposed a subsidy demanded by Henry VII. for the marriage of his eldest daughter, with such cloquence that it was refused by the House. At the accession of Henry VIII., he was called to the bar, and, in 1508, appointed judge of the sheriff's court in London, which was then a considerable post. By the interest of Wolsey, he obtained the honour of knighthood and a place in the pring council. In 1521 he was made treasurer of the Exchequer, and, in 1523, chosen cocaker of the House of Commons, where he resisted a motion House of Committies, where we restore a meant to make a princeptury. The seas accounts or more a for an oppositive state when given by Enfold, in his "listory of offence to Carchant Wolsey. Sir Thomas was "Philosophy." "More was strongly under the "ade Chanceloi in 1839, and, by his indefail opinion, so common among his contemporaries, gable application in that office, there was, in a short time, not a cause left undetermined. To the high qualities of learning, wit, and liberality, he joined a stanch adherence to the Roman Catholic religion and the papal authority. This led him to deny the king's supremacy as head of the church in Eugland, for which he was sent to the Tower, tried, and con-demned to lose his head, which sentence he courageously endured. Sir Thomas More wrote several works against the heformation, and several works against the reformation, and some epistles to Erasmus and other learned men. The best of his works is a kind of political romance, composed in Latin, entitled "Utonia," wherein the author delineates what "Utopa, wherein the author denneaces want he conceives to be a perfect commonwealth, situate in an imaginary island. This work has been translated into English by Dishop Burnet, Cayley, and others. Sir Thomas had four chil-dren. His eldest daughter, Margaret, married a gentleman named Roper, who wrote the life of his father-in-law. She was an accomplished woman, and well read in the Greek and Latin languages. She wrote a treatise on the "Four Last Things," and died in 1514. Sir Thomas More's character has been much misrepre-sented by Foxe, in his "Martyrology," and by Bishop Burnet in his "History of the Reformaboth charging him with cruel persecution," tion of the Protestants while chancellor. Erasmus, however, distinctly testifies, that "whiist More was chancellor, no man was put to death for these dogmas." All his contemporaries for these dogmas.' describe him as being of a singularly amiable disposition, and unaffectedly and sincerely pious. Erasmus, who was his frequent guest, says, "With him you might imagine yourself in the Academy of Plato. But I should do injustice to his house by comparing it to the Academy of Plato, where numbers and geometrical figures, and sometimes moral virtues, were the subjects of discussion: it would be more just to call it a school and an exercise of the Christian religion. All its inhabitants, male and female, applied their leisure to liberal studies lemate, applied their leisure to norm statutes and profitable reading, although piety was their first care. No wranging, no idle word, was heard in it; every one did his duty with alacrity, and not without a temperate cheerfulness." Sir James Mackintosh gave an interesting she'tch of this great man's life in a volume entitled "Eminent British Statesmen," pub-lished in Lardner's "Cabinet Cyclopædia." B.

in Mik Street, London, 189); beheaded, 1535.

More, Anthony, Sir, a famous painter, who was successful in portraits, of which he painted several in England, in the reign of Queen Mary, on whose death he accompanied Philip II. to on whose death he accompanied Philip II. to Spain, where he lived on terms of great hiti-macy with that monarch for some time; but presuming too much on his familiarity, inearred the displeasure of the king, and had to quit the country. He then entered into the service of the duke of Aiva, by whom he was made re-ceiver-general of the revenues of West Planders. n. at Utrecht, 1519; p. 1575. Mons, Henry, an English divine, who re-ceived his education at the university of Cam-bridge where he amild in highest to the study bridge, where he applied himself to the study of the Platonists. Most of his writings were devoted to the exposition of a Christiano-Platonical philosophy. The best account of More's studies was given by Enfield, in his "History of Philosophy." "More was strongly under the time he was persuaded that the ancient cabalistic philosophy sprung from the same foun-tain, and therefore endeavoured to lay open the mystery of this philosophy by showing its agreement with the doctrines of Pythagoras and Plato, and pointing out the corruptions which had been introduced by the modern Cabalists. The Cartesian system, which sprang up at this time, was embraced by More, as, on the whole, consonant to his ideas of nature; and he took much pains to prove that it was not inconsistent with the Cabalistic doctrine. His penetrating understanding, however, discovered defects in this new system, which he

by profound crudition, an inventive genius, and a liberal spirit." More's chief works were, ""A Key to the Revefor Descartes," "The philosophical poems. He was one of the original members of the Royal Seciety, and, although offered high preferments in the church, chose rather to live a life of retirement, wherein he might devote himself to the pursuit of philosophical studies. B. 1611; D. 1687.

Mone, Hannah, an eminent English authoress who, early in life, opened a school at Bristol for the education of girls. In this occupation she was assisted by her sisters, and, in course of time, the establishment became one of the most flourishing schools in that part of England. In 1773 she produced a pastoral drama, entitled "The Search after Happiness," which meeting with a successful reception, she was encouraged to write a regular tragedy. Obtaining an introduction to Dr. Johnson and Garrick, she wrote two works for the stage; but being of a deeply religious tone of mind, she determined to forsake writing for the theatre, and retire into the country. During the remaining years of her life, she resided in Somersetshire; the profits resulting from her many productions enabling her to enjoy a literary case, and to assist in ameliorating the con-dition of the rustic population in her neigh-bourhood. It was at one time intended to commit the education of the Princess Charlotte of Wales to her charge; but, although the project fell to the ground, it was the cause of her publication entitled "Hints towards Forming the Character of a Young Princess." Her next the Character of a Young Princess. Her next effort was the popular novel, "Coelebs in Search of a Wife." Her chief works of a religious order were "Practical Piety," "Christian Mo-reals," and "Essay on the Character and Writ-ings of St. Paul." B. near Bristol, 1745; p. at Clifton, Gloucestershire, 1833.

Moreau, Jacob Nicholas, mo-ro', a French author, who was counsellor of the Court of author, who was counsellor of the Court of Alds, historiographer of France, librarian to the queen, and censor royal. He wrote several works, the chief of which were "Lessons in Morals, Politics, and Law;" "Principles of Political Morality;" and "The Duties of Prince: or, a Discourse on Justice." B. 1 that the wisdom of the Hebrews had been designer and engraver, who studied under transmitted to Pythagoras, and from him to Lebas, and became, in 1770, designer to the Plato; and, consequently, that the true prin-king, and in 1747 professor of drawing to the ciples of divine philosophy were to be found in Ecoles Centrales of Paris. His designs, nearly the writings of the Platonists; at the same all of which were engraved by these of the professor of the work of the professor of an or when were engraved by hinself, amounted to more than 2000, and he was one of the most popular illustrators of the works of Voltaire, Roussean, Mollier, &c. p. 1741; p. 1814. Monrar, Jean Victor, one of the most celebrated generals of the French

the son of an advocate, and I

the legal profession; but his ardent love of military adventure caused him to culist as a private soldier when he had attained his 18th year. His discharge was purchased, however, and for several years he studied and practised and for several years he studied and practised the law, gaining sense; but rive by his cleaquent defence of the property of the season of the property of the season of the property of the Revolution, he resolved to devote hinself to a military career; placed hinself at the head of a battalion of Breton volunteers, and, in 1792, joined the army of Dumonrica. In two years he reached the grade of general of division, and assisted Peliegra in the conquest of Holland. He was next nominated communiferinelist of the numy of the Rhine and Moselle, and in 1798 defeated the Austrians under General Warmser, and drove them across under General Wurmser, and drove them across the Rhine. While in pursuit of the Austrians in Germany, he was met by the Archduke Charles, who was at first beaten by Moreau. The Austrians, however, were soon so strongly reinforced, that Moreau was compelled to retire before overwhelming numbers. With a powerful enemy in his rear, and assailed on every side by a hostile peasantry, he forced his way through the deiles of the Black Forest, and, by his glorious retreat, gained more honour than by his previous advance. Shortly afterwards he incurred the displeasure of the Directory, from being suspected of complicity with his old friend being suspected of complicity with his old friend Pichegru in corresponding with the Bourbon princes. Upon this, he requested to be allowed to retire from the army. But his services were again sought in 1799, when he was sent to Italy, where the Franch were in a disastrous condition. At Novi, after the death of Joubert, he saved the army. Again nominated to the command-in-chief of the army of the Rhine, he crossed that river in 1800, defrated the Austrians in several engagements, drove General Kray before him as far as the Danube, gained the decisive victory of Hoenstadt, and signed the armistice of Parsdorff. At the recommencement of hostilities, he gained the celebrated victory of Hohenlinden, and advanced upon Vienna, which was only saved by the armistice of Steyer. The peace of Luneville put an end to this glorious cureer in 1801. Upon his return to Paris, the first consul pretended to receive him with great cordiality; but Moreau to receive him with great cordiality; but Moreau and Bonaparte were too eagetly pursuing the same ambitious path to escape coming into collision. Bonaparte spoke of Moreau as "the retreating general;" while the victor of Hoheninden retailated by defining his rival as a "general at ten thousand mon a day." In 1804, Moreau was accuved of being implicated in the royalist conspiracy of Pichegru and Georges Cadondal; area, although there was no evidence against him, was cond.mnod to an imprisonment of two years. Moreau requested that this ment of two years. Moreau requested that this sentence might be converted into banishment, Saint Florentin, 1717; p. 1803.

sentence might be converted into banishment, 247, Jean Michel, a celebrated French which, being accoded to, he set out for the Moreau

Morgan

United States, where he lived during several and raised an army in Languedoc; but perished years. His hatred of Napoleon caused him to accept, in 1813, a proposal made to him by the discopt, in 1813, a proposal made to him by the discopt and the prison of Montmoreory was made prisoner. By Emperor Alexander to assist the allies against Prance, Scarcely had he joined the allies against 1807; killed, 1632. before Dresden, when both his legs were crushed by a cannon-shot. He underwent the amputation of both limbs without a groun, but died after a few days of suffering. B. at Morlaix, Brittany, 1763; n. 1813. Moneau, Hégésippe, a French author, who went to Paris at an early age, with the inten-tion of attaining a brilliant position by the exercise of his poetical talents. Meeting with little encouragement, he, after several years of misery, died of consumption in one of the hospitals of the French capital. Moreau wrote a volume of poems, which was published three months before his death, entitled "Myosotis," and which evinced a style full of grace and freshness. B. 1810; D. 1838.

Moreau de la Sarthe, Jacques Louis, an eminent French writer upon medicine, who was educated for the profession of surgery, but was compelled to relinquish its practice through receiving a wound of the right hand. Thereupon he devoted himself to the theory of medical science, and produced a number of works which gained him much distinction. In addition to several valuable papers inserted in the "Journal of Medicine," he produced am "bssay upon Gangrene," "Outline of a Course of Hygiene," and a "Treatise on Vaccination." n. near Mans, 1771; n. at Paris, 1826. Moreel, "Thomas, mo-rel, a learned English divine and lexicographer, who became fellow and D.D. of King's College, Cambridge, and published valuable editions of Ainworth's Latin Dictionary and Hederic's Greek Lexicon. He was also author of "Aunotations on Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding;" assisted Hogarth in writing his "Analysis of Beauty," gained him much distinction. In addition to and selected the passages of Scripture for Handel's Oratorios. B. at Eton, 1703; D. 1784.

MORELT, James, no-rail-le, an eminent Italian librarian, who, in 1778 became keeper of the great library of St. Mark, at Venice, and retained that post until his death. He discovered a large fragment of Dion Cassius, and was the editor of many classical authors, besides producing numerous treatises on questions con-nected with the history of liferature. B. at venue, 1745; D. 1819.

Venice, 1745; D. 1819.

Morrer, Louis, mo-reer-e, a French divine and historiographer, who conceived the idea of producing a biographical and geographical dictionary, and published it in 1671. His intense application in preparing a second edition of this great undertaking, produced a disorder of which he died. This dictionary has been several times revised and augmented; among others, by Leclere and Bayle. The last edition is that of Paris, 1759, in 10 vols. B. 1649; D. 1880.

Morrs, Edward Rowe, mors, an English antiquary, who was, in 1752, chosen a fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, and projected an equitable society for insurance on lives and survivorable society for msurance on lives and survivor-ships by anutities. He was the author of the "History and Antiquities of Tunstall, in Kend," and a "Dissertation on Founders and Foun-dries." B. at Tunstall, Kent, 1730; p. 1778. Morry, Antone de Bourbon, Count de, wwi-rui, a natural son of Henry IV. of France and Jac-companies as Bould countees de Morre 1.

queline de Beuil, countess de Moret. He cspoused the cause of Gaston, duke of Orleans, member. Her first girlish efforts were directed MORETO Y CABANA, Augustin, mo-rav-to, a comic poet of the 17th century, and contemporary with Calderon, was the author of a considerable number of drumas and short poems, which were greatly successful. Several of his plays were imitated by Molière. About 1676 he abandoned poetry to embrace an evele-siastical life, and became a favourite with Philip His comedies were published at Valencia in 1676, and again in 1703. B. in Spain, about 1625 : D. about 1639, Morgar, William, mor'-yan, an eminent Welsh divine, who became, in 1595, bishop of Llandaff, whence he was translated to St. Asaph in 1601. He had a principal share in the trans-lation of the Bible into Welsh, first printed in

1558. p. 1604.

1598. D. 1903. Monacax, Sir Henry, a celebrated English buccameer, who at first served under Mansfeld, after whose death he collected a fleet of twelve ships, and attacked and extorted runsom from a town in the island of Cuba. He subsequently carried Portobello by assault, and destroyed the fort of Macaratho. In 1909 and destroyed the fort of Macarabo. In 1809 her retired to Jamaica, intending to enjoy peace-ally the fortune he had acquired; but in the following year again put himself at the head of a fleet of 37 sail, with which he ravaged the coast of Nicaragua. In 1871 he marched upon Panana with 1300 men, and took and burnite that the thirty of the coast of Nicaragua. the city. His career was checked by the signature of a peace between England and Spain. After a visit to England, he returned to the West Indies, having been knighted by Charles

West Indies, having been knighted by Charles II., and appointed governor of Janusica. B., early in the 17th century; D. in Janusica, 1883. Morrow, William, a distinguished mathe-matician, a native of Glamorganshire, was actuary to the Equitable Assurance Company, London; and remained connected with that institution 56 years. He was the author of "The Doctrine of Annuities and Assurances of Lives," "A Review of Dr. Crawford's Theory of Heat," together with various treatises connected with financial affairs. p. 1833. neeted with financial aflairs. D. 1833.

Morean, Sir Thomas Charles, an English physician of some eminence, who received the honour of knighthood in Ireland, in 1811, and in the following year, meeting with Miss Ownson, the popular Insha authores, at the residence of the marquis of Abersom, in the country of Tryrone, he married her. He shortly afterwards relinquished his medical practice, and because a reiniquissed his medical practice, and because a writer of light and sparking sketches for the "New Monthly" and other magazines. His best efforts were, "Sketches of the Philosophy of Life," "The Philosophy of Life," "The Philosophy of Life," which last was written in conjunction with Lady Morgan, When the Whigs came into office in 1831, Sir When the Whigs came into office in 1831, Sir Charles was appointed a commissioner of Irish fisheries. He was also fellow of the College of Physicians. B. in London, about 1783; D. 1843. Morgan, Sydney Owenson, Lady, a popular Irish authoress, wife of the preceding, was the daughter of a musician of some merit in Dublin, who was moreover a cultivated and intellectual man, and thus fitted to prepare the future authoress for that elegant society of which she subsequently became so eminent a to poetry; and at fourteen she produced a volume of miscellaneous verses, and afterwards a series of songs, set to Irish airs. When only sixteen, she had published two novels, which, slithough favourably spoken of at the time, produced no very important effects; but the "Wild Irish Girl," published in 1806, at once raised her to a conspicuous position in the literary world. This novel passed through seven editions, and formed an introduction for its gifted authoress into the best society. She first met Sir Charles Morgan while staving at the house of the Marquis of Abercorn, and in 1812 they were married. Her next work of import-ance was entitled "France," and was the result of three observant years spent in that country. It was a critical review of the social state of the country, rather than a book of travels, and was published in 1818. It achieved immense success, and led to a decision, on the part of the French government of the time, to refuse the Frence government of the time, to retuse the gifted authoress readmission to the country. "Florence Macarthy," her second novel, was published in England during her stay in France, and contributed in no small degree to add to the writer's fame. "The Life and Times of Salvator Rosa" was first given to the world in 1823. In the historical and philosophical disquisition, entitled "Woman and her In 1825. In the instorical and panosophical disquisition, entitled "Woman and her Master," Lady Morgan contended that her sex had been condemned to obscurity and passive obedience by man. Among many other works, she produced "The Book of the Boudotr," "The Princess," and "Dramatic Scenes from Real Life." Lady Morgan, although receiving large sums for her works, was not wealthy, and angle sums for the works, was not wealthy, and a pension of $30 a year was conferred on her during the ministry of Earl Grey. n. at Dublin, about 1786; n. 1859. (See Lady Morgan's Letters, &c., edited by W. H. Dixon, published in 1862.)

Mовенем, Raphael, mor'-jain, a celebrated Italian engraver, who studied under Volpato, whose daughter he married. In 1793 he took whose daughter he married. In 1785 he took up his residence at Florence, at the invitation of the grand-duke Ferdinand II. His masterpiece was an engraving of the "Last Supper," by was an engraving of the "Last Supper," by Leonardo da Vinci; but he is stated to have en-graved upwards of 200 plates, some of the best being reproductions of the great works of the painter Raffielle. B. at Florence, 1758; p. 1833. Mioshor, Daniel George, mor'-hof, a learned German wr'ter, who, in 1660, was chosen professor of poetry at Rostock, whence he removed lesson of both a tractor, whence he reinved to Kiel, where he discharged the same office, but afterwards became professor of history and librarian. His principal works were "Polyhistor," in which he gave a survey of universal literature down to the middle of the 18th century, treated of choice works, and of rare works upon grammar, rhetoric, poetry, mathematics, history, &c.; and the "Princeps Medicus," in which he defended, in a curious manner, the pretensions of the kings of France and England to the power of curing the scrofula or king's evil. B. 1639; D. 1691. Morice, Sir William, mor-is, an English gentleman, memorable for the share which he ad in bringing about the restoration of Charles II. He was the kinsman of General Monk, who 11. He was the similar of tremeral sone, who of relate, has produced him the place of secretary of state, the author of some other works. B. at Dijon, which he resigned in 1668. He wrote a book Icalled "The Common Right of the Lord' Supper Asserted." D. 1676.

Morras, James, mo'-ri-er, a writer of novels and Italy; and wrote numerous works, the.

mjoyed at one time great popularity. When still young, he made a tour through the East, the main incidents of which he described in his 'Travels through Persia, Armenia, Asia Minor, o Constantinople." He was appointed British envoy to the court of Persia in 1810, where he remained till 1816, and soon after his return oublished "A Second Journey through Persia," &c. During his stay in the East, he made dili-rent use of his opportunities of studying the åc. rent use of his opportunities of studying the haracter of the peuple; and the knowledge hus acquired was turned to account in his Adventures of Hajji Babo of Ispahan, "whose Adventures in England" he described in a econd series; "Zohrab, or the Hostage," 'Ayesha, or the Maid of Kars, "Aby 'Ayesha, or the Maid of Kars, "all of which the contractions and wayes of thought he manners, customs, and modes of thought ne manners, customs, and mouse of thought prevalent in the East are very happly por-trayed. B. 1730; p. 1348. Monty, Peter, mort-a, a learned French critic, the spent several years in the printing-office of Paul Manutius, at Venice, and afterwards aught Greek and Geography at Vicenza, whence ewas invited to Ferrara. Cardinal Borromeo, eing apprised of his merit, called him to tome, where he was employed on the edition of the Septuagint, on that of the Vulgate, and astly on the great edition of the Bible translated from the Greek version. He published a collection of General Councils, and other works.

collection of General Councils, and outer works.

B. at Paris, 1531; D. 1803.

Monry, Jean Baptiste, a Prench astrologer, who studied physic at Avignon, and took his doctor's degree in that faculty. His pretended skill in astrology, and the fame acquired by the casual fulfilment of some of his predictions, recommended him to the Cardinals Richelicu and Mazarin, the latter of whom procured him the place of mathematical professor in the Royal College, with a handsome pension. He wrote "Astrologia Gallica," and a curious little book against the Pre-Adamites. B. 1883; D. 1856. Morrs, Simon, a French fanatic, who, in 1647, published a strange book, in which he called himself Jesus Christ and the Second Messiah, Notwithstanding his extreme ignorance, he obtained numerous followers; but was

burnt alive at Paris, 1663.

burnt alive at Paris, 1693.

Monson, Robert, mor'-son, a physician and professor of botany at Oxford, studied in the university of Aberdeen, till interrupted by the civil wars, in which he displayed great zeal and courage on the royalist side. After the execution of Charles I, he went to France, where he took his doctor's degree, and was applicated sixtuation of the royal graphen at Blois. pointed director of the royal garden at Blois. In 1660 he returned to England, and was nomi-In 1800 ne returned to Language and regius pro-nated physician to Charles II., and regius pro-fessor of botany at Oxford. He read botanical lectures in the garden at Oxford, and wrote some interesting works on Elementary some interesting works on "Elemen Botany," and on "The History of Botany,"

Botany," and on "The History of Botany," so, at Aberdeen, 1820; n. 1683.

Monston, Claude Bartholomew, meri-so, a French anthon, who wrote "Peruviana," a secret history, with fictitions names, of Cardinal Richeley, Mary of Medics, and the duce of Orleans, first published in 1645. He was also because the secret when the secret has the secret had been the secret when the secret had been the secret when the secret had been th the author of some other works. B. at Dijon, principal of which are his "Travels," "The sent him to England to request assistance from Antiquities of Rome," the novels of "An-Queen Bitzabeth. During the wars of the thoug Reises" and "Andrew Harktnop(", and League, he acted as superintendent-general of various grammatical treatises. B. 1757: D. 1703

Morland

MORLAND, Sir Samuel, mor'-land, an English statesman, who accompanied Whitelock in his famous embassy to the queen of Sweden, and afterwards became assistant to Thurloe, Cromatterwards became assistant to function, trowil's secretary. Becoming privy to a plot for destroying Charles II., he is stated to have divulged it to that monarch, while still abroad. For this service he was created a baronet at the Restoration. He wrote a book entitled "Unim of Conscience." He was made master of mechanics to Charles II., and invented the speaking-trumpet, a fire-engine, and a capstan for heaving up anchors. B. about 1625; D. 1695.

Morland, George, a celebrated English painter, was the son of an artist in London, who employed him constantly in making drawings for sale. By this means young Morland acquired a wonderful facility of invention and rapidity of execution; but owing to the narrow and illiberal manner in which his talents were used by his father, he contracted low habits, and formed bad connexions. His pictures. and formed bad connexions. His pictures, however, soon became objects of estimation and inquiry; and the persons who administered to his intemperance profited by his weakness to get into their possession pieces of very great value. Hence he was always at work, and always poor. Many of his best pictures were painted in sponging-houses, to clear him from parrest, or in alehouses, to discharge his reckon-ing. The pictures of this skilful artist are faithful representations of rural nature and animal life. His drawings of farmyards, cattle, instantian me. In training to the scaccast, are generally very good. B. 1763; D. 1804.

MORLEY, George, mor'-le, an English prelate, who was appointed by Charles I. canon of Christchurch, and was one of the divines who assisted him at the treaty of Newport. In 1649 he went abroad, and did not return till the Restoration, when he was made dean of Christbishop or and soon afterwards Worcester, in 1662 he was translated to Win-chester, to which see he was a great bene-factor. He was a munificent prelate, and be-queathed large sums to several institutions. He published some religious treatises. B. in London, 1597; D. 1684.

MORLEY, Thomas, an old English composer, MOEDEY, Thomas, an old English composer, of whose life little is known; but Wood, in his "Athenæ Oxonienses," states that he became a gentleman of the chapel royal in 1592. He composed canzonets, madrigals, anthems, and the "Funeral Service" included in Dr. and the "Funeral Service" inclinated in Depose's collection, which was the first attempt to set to music the words of the reformed Litturgy. He was likewise the author of a "Plain and Easy Introduction to Practical Music," first published in 1597, and subsequently translated into German. D. about 1604.

MORNAY, Philip de, lerd of Plessis-Mornay, mor'nai, a celebrated Freuch nobleman, who was secretly educated in the Protestant faith by this mother; but upon the death of his father, in mother; our upon the ceant of his latter, in 1500, he openly avowed his religious opinions. In 1578 he went to the court of the king of Navarre, afterwards Henry IV., who made him a member of his council, confided to him the charge of the finances of his kingdom, and Queen Elizabeth. During the wars of the League, he acted as superintendent-general of League, he acted as supermendent-general or Navarre, and was, throughout his life, the chief of the Protestant party in France, his great learning and zeal in religious matters causing him to be regarded with deep veneration by the nim to be regarded with deep veneration by the adherents of the Reformed faith. In 1878 he published a treatise on the Church, and, in the of the Christian Religion." In 1898 he published his book on the Eucharist, which occasioned a conference between him and Cardinal Du Perron, the result of which was that Mornay Du Perron, the result of which was that Mornay obtained the appellation of the Protestant Pope. In 1607 he printed a famous book, entitled "The Mystery of Iniquity; or, the History of the Papacy." n. 1549; n. 1623.

Morny

MONINGEON, Garret Wellesley, Earl of, mor'-ning-ton, an accomplished Irish nobleman, an eminent composer, and father of the greatest English general,—the duke of Wellington. At English general,—the dute of Weinigton. At the age of 10, he played Corelli's sonatas upon the violin, which instrument gave place to the harpsichord when he had attained his 14th year. He continued the study and composition of music without relaxation throughout his life: and so highly did the University of Dublin esteem his talents, that it conferred upon him esteem his talents, that it conferred upon him the degree of doctor of music, and altarwards elected him professor of that faculty. His compositions were principally vocal: in glee music he was particularly happy. The four-voiced glees, "Hero in cool grot,"—"Gendly hear me, charming maid,"—"Come, fairest nymph," are generally acknowledged to be masterpieces of the art. By his wife, Anne, daughter of Arthur, first earl of Dungannon, ho had a large family. His sons were the Marquis of Wellesley, Lord Maryborough, the duke of Wellington, Lord Cowley, and the Rev. Gerard Wellesley. n. in the county of Meath, Ireland, about 1720; p. 1781.

about 1720; D. 1781.

MORNY, Charles Augustus Louis Joseph, Due de, mor'-ne, a modern French statesman, and one of the most devoted adherents to the second empire. After pursuing his studies with considerable success, he was appointed sub-lieutenant of the 1st regiment of lancers, and served under the duke of Orleans in several campaigns in Algiers with much distinction. About the year 1838 he quitted the army, turned his attention to commercial speculations, and published a pamphlet on the "Sugar Question." Enjoying a large fortune, he was soon enabled to place himself at the head of many important industrial enterprises, as well as to attract much notice as a projector of financial reforms. At the commencement of the revolution of 1848, he kept aloof from politics; but, on being elected to the Legislative Assembly, he rapidly proved to the Logislative Assembly, he rapidly proved himself to be one of the most energetic sup-porters of the President, Louis Napoleon, whose brother he is supposed to be. The Count de Morny was one of the few individuals of whom the President requested assistance in preparing the cosp d'état of December, and on that occasion, he displayed equal cochees and andacity. As minister of the interior, he strend or countrastiened most of the recognizesigned or countersigned most of the proclamations and decrees by which the opponents of that act were either arrested or banished. In January, 1852, he retired from office, in con-sequence of the decree promulgated for the confiscation of the property of the Orleans family.

738

He subsequently placed himself in nomination as government candidate for election to the Corps Législatif. Being returned, he took his seat, and, in 1854 succeeded M. Billault as president of that body. In the years 1856-1857, he represented the imperial dynasty of France at the court of Russia, and, while acting in that capacity, married a daughter of one of the most distinguished noblemen in that country. During many years, the Count de Morny's name was associated with every kind of speculation: railway companies, canals, mines, finance,—no form of commercial and industrial enterprise form or commercial and industrial enterprise being neglected by him. He was likewise a liberal patron of the arts; and his gallery of quintings is admitted to be one of the most choice in France. He was created Duc de Monry in 1862. n. at Paris, 1811; n. 187. Monosini, Francesco, me rose nt, a gallant MORSINI, Francesco, mo'-ro-se'-ne, a gallant upwards of 750,000 copies of works in the soldier, who, as governor of Candia, about the Chinese character. In this number were inmiddle of the 17th century, detended that island, cluded 2075 complete Bibles, 9870 New Testawith 30,000 men, against a Turkish force of four ments, and 31,000 shorier portions of the timesthat amount: but was ultimately compelled Scriptures. D. at Morpeth, Northumberland, to surrender. He subsequently, as commander of 1874; D. at Canton, 1834; near the Dardanelles, and totally defeated it. tife American, celebrated as the inventor of the 11689 he was elected doge of Venice. D. 1894. United state's system of telegraphs. In 1811 Morars, Lewis, morfie, a Welsh antiquary he went to England, and entered at the Royal and not suprement the coast of Welse in Academy of Aris, where he two very stire.

Morris, Lewis, morris, a Welsh antiquary and poet, who surveyed the coast of Wales in 1737, by order of the Admiralty board, and his work was published in 1748. Some of his poetical pieces in the Welsh language have been printed, and he left above 80 volumes of MSS. relative to Welsh antiquities. B. in the isle of Anglesey, 1702; p. in Cardiganshire, 1765.

Morris, Richard, brother of the above, was also a poet and critic in his native language, and superintended the printing of two valuable editions of the Welsh Bible. D. 1779.

Morris, Captain Charles, a fimous English song writer, whose convivial pieces were at one time in high repute. Many of them might per-time in nigh repute. Many of them might per-haps be spared, yet some are chaste in sentiment and felicitous in expression. s. 1739; D. 1892. Morans, George P., an American poet and journalist, who was, for twenty years, editor of the "New York Mirror," a journal to which some of the ablest writers in the United States contributed. He was subsequently engaged in the management of the "Home Journal," one of the most popular of the many cheap publications of that country. Mr. Morris wrote a drama entitled "Briar Cliff," which was founded upon some incidents of the American revolution; and an opera called "The Maid of Saxony." His an opera camea. The Mad of Saxony. His most important literary production was, however, a collection of Poetical Pieces and Melodies: one of his songs, "Woodman, spare that tree," was at one time as popular in England as it was in America. As a poet, he was more fervid and energetic than elegant. B. at Philadelphia, 1802.

Morrison, Rev. Robert, mor ri-son, a dis-tinguished missionary to China, who was the first to preach the Protestant doctrines in that country. He was the son of humble parents, but received a fair elementary education at a school kept by his unclo at Newcastle. Between the years 1799 and 1801 he studied Hebrev Latin, and theology, with the assistance of Presbyterian minister of the town. The same Presbyterian minister of the town. The same gentleman, in 1808, furnished him with an introduction to the committee of the Independent Theological Academy in London, and he was accordingly received into their institution. In Edward II., who nominated him his leutenans 779

the following year he offered his services to the London Missionary Society, which being ac-cented, he removed to the college of that body at Gosport. At the beginning of 1807, after having studied Chinese, he set sail for China, and, in the same year, arrived at Canton. During twenty-five years he remained in China, engaged in translating and disseminating the Holy Scriptures, having rendered into Chinese the whole of the Bible, after eight years of unrethe whole of the Bible, after eight years of unre-mitting labour; in this task he was assisted by Dr. Mine. In 1824 he visited England, and presented to George IV. a copy of the Scrip-tures in Chinese. Two years afterwards, he returned to the field of his labours, and con-tinued his noble exertions until his death. Dr. Morrison and his coadjutors printed and circulated, between the years 1810 and 1836, upwards of 750,000 copies of works in the Academy of Arts, where he, two years after-wards, gained a prize for a sculpture model. He subsequently returned to America, and pursued his profession with considerable success. It was while on board ship, in 18.2, returning to America, after a second visit to England, that the idea of his great invention first occurred to his mind. membered the experiments of Franklin with a wire four miles in length, and magneted that if the presence of electricity could be made visible in any part of this circuit, it would not be difficult to construct a system of signs by which intelligence could be instantaneously transmitted." Almost immediately after his landing in America, he commenced a after his landing in America, he commenced a construction of the commence of the commen wire four miles in length, and imagined series of experiments; but, having little time to give to the subject, it was not until four years afterwards that he succeeded in demonstrating his theory upon a wire half a mile in length. Congress at once voted him 30,000 dollars to enable him to carry out his views; and, in 1844, he saw the realization of his hopes. in the perfect working of a wire 40 miles long, which had been constructed between Washington and Baltimore. Mr. Morse's invention is the simplest of all the electric telegraphs; it requires only a single wire, and is self-recording, or self-printing. The alphabet is formed of a combination of short strokes and dots, marked by a steel pricker upon a sheet of paper, uncoiled beneath it by clockwork mechanism. More than three-fourths of the telegraphic wires in the United States are worked according to this great invention. The New York and Newfound-land Telegraphic Company nominated him their electrician, and he was also appointed professor of natural history at Yale College. In 1856 he visited England and was entertained at a public dinner by the directors of several telegraphic companies. B. at Charlestown, Massachusetts, 1791

in Ireland; but he united himself, in 1320, fly to England, for the part he took in Rizzio's with the insurgent barons, who raised the standard of revolt against the king on account of his favourites, Despensers. (See Ebwards II.) Mary; whereupon he returned to Scotland. Mortimer was taken and imprisoned in the Tower of London, but contrived to escape to affirs, and, in 1572, succeeded the earl of Mar France. Subsequently, he, with Queen Isabella, as regent, which office he resigned in 1577, his wife of Edward II., made a descent upon Engr tale having made him edious to the whole naland with a small force, which was increased by them. The government was then consided to large numbers of the English neonlewing being large numbers of the English people who joined his standard. The king was taken prisoner, and afterwards assassinated in prison; his son, Edward III., being placed upon the throne, in his 14th year. During some time, Mortimer exercised absolute power in the name of the young monarch, and put to death Kent and Lancaster, the king's uncles. Edward III. at length resolved to get rid of the cruel baron, who was arrested, and hanged near Smithfield in 1330. B. about 1257.

MORTIMER, Edmund, Earl, espoused Philippa, daughter of Lionel, second son of Edward III.—Roger, son of the preceding, was declared heir to the crown in 1885, but died in 1899, leaving an only daughter, who married Richard of York, giving to that family a claim to the throne of England. Hence arose the wars of the Red and White Roses, between the houses of York and Lancaster.

MORTIMER, John Hamilton, an English painter, received his first instructions from his uncle, who was an itinerant portrait-painter; but afterwards became a pupil of Hudson, who had been the teacher of Sir Joshua Son, who had been the teacher of 37 John as Reynolds. Mortimer obtained one of the first prizes for an historical picture from the Socior the Encouragement of Arts: his subjbeing the Conversion of the Britons. In 1779 he was appointed by his majesty a Royal Acade-mician, without any solicitation; but his intem-perate habits caused his demise shortly after-perato habits caused his demise shortly afterwards. B. in Sussex, 1741; p. 1779.

MOSETATE, Thomas, a miscellaneous English writer, who was for some time British vice coasul in the Netherlands. His principal works are, "The British Plutarch," a "Dictionary of Trade and Commerce," "The Elements of Commerce, Politics, and Finances," a "History of England," and "The Student's Pocket Dictionary," B. 1730; D. 1809.
MOSEYON, John, 2007 Jon. an English prelate

MORTON, John, mor'-ton, an English prelate and statesman, who was educated at Oxford, after which he became so eminent for his skill arter which he became so the appointed privy coun-injurisprudence as to be appointed privy coun-cillor to Henry VI. In 1478 he was made bishop of Ely, and chancellor of England by Edward IV. During the reign of Richard III. he remained out of England, but upon the accession of Henry VII. to the throne, was nominated one of the privy council, and, in 1486, obtained the archbishopric of Canterbury. Pope Alexander VI. created him cardinal in 1493. Sir ancer vi. created nim cardinal in 1493. Sir Thomas More, who was in his youth a page in Movton's household, is stated to have derived the facts of his "History of Richard III." from the cardinal archbishop. Morton was a man of the greatest ability and probity. B, at Bere, Dorestshire, 1401; D, 1500. Mornor, James Douglas, fourth Earl of, and record of Saction of vaccing the arcati-

MORTON, James Douglas, fourth Earl of, and regent of Scotland, received his education under the famous Buchanan, ato Paris, but returned to Scotland in 1542, and greatly promoted the Reformation. In 1663 he became lord high chancellor: in a few years, however, he was compelled to relinquish the office and as regent, which omee he resigned in 1077, his rule having made him odious to the whole na-tion. The government was then confided to James VI., who had attained his 12th year. Morton, however, was too ambitious to remain in retirement, and contrived to get possession of Stirling Castie, and also to obtain the charge on surring cases, and also to obtain the charge of the young king. He thus secured his former power; but his ascendancy was only of short duration, for, being charged as accessory to the murder of Damley, he was sent to the castle of Edinburgh, and afterwards to Dumbarton, then under the command of Lennox, father of Darn-ley. In 1581, he was taken to Edinburgh for ley. In 1581, he was taken to Edinburgh for trial: and though he vehemently protested his innocence of the crime with which he was charged, he was condemned to death. Although he admitted that he had been made acquainted by Bothwell with a design for murdering Darnley, he declared that he did not participate in the crime. As to making known the plot, "to whom," he said, "could I reveal it? To the queen?—she was aware of it. To Darnley? he was such a babe, that there was nothing told to him but he would reveal to her again; and the two most powerful noblemen in the king-dom, Bothwell and Huntley, were the perpetra-tors. I foreknew, and concealed the plot; but tors. I foregnew, and concealed the plot; but as to being art and part in its execution, I call God to witness I am wholly innocent." He suffered death with the utmost fortitude, being beheaded by a machine much resembling the guillotine, and called the "maiden." n. at Dalkeith, 1530; beheaded, 1581.

Dalkeith, 1830; beheaded, 1581. Mosrov, James Dongias, Earl of, a distinguished Scotch nobleman, who, at the age of 26, established a philosophical society at Edinburgh,—a scotety which has since made a considerable figure in almost every branch of knowledge. The Royal Society of London elected him their president in 1733, and, on the death of the earl of Macelsefield, he was chosen an associate in the Academy of Sciences at Paris. He evined an argent zeal for the sciences and He evinced an ardent zeal for the sciences, and was an eminent patron of merit. He was well acquainted with natural and experimental phi-acquainted with nutural and experimental phil-losophy, but more particularly devoted to astro-nomical observations. B. 1707; D. 1768. Mozrox, Thomas, an English dramatic wri-ter, who was educated for the legal profession. but whose natural bent was for the drama. Abandoning his legal studies before he had been called to the bar, he gave himself entirely to play-writing, and became the most popular dra-matist of his day. For his comely of "Own and Country" he received the sum of £9100 before the nice, was placed in whoersal. His and country he received an edia of the before the piece was placed in rehearsal. His works are, however, but poor productions to read, when it is remembered how great was their popularity: they are showy, unnatural, and scarcely ever genuinely humorous or witty; but they are never dull, and are constructed with admirable dramatic tact. A few structed with admirable dramatic tact. A few of them still keep their place on the stage, such as "Speed the Plough," "A Roland for an Oliver," "The Invincibles," "A Cure for the Heartache," "The School of Reform," &c. D. in the county of Durham, 1764; D. 1838. Moscaus and Brow, woo'-kee, 55-on, two

MOTLEY, JOHN LOTHROP.

MURAY, JOACHIM.

Napier, Admiral Sie Céarles

Names of Magnata, Lord.

Moser

Greek pastoral poets of antiquity, who were Massachusetts in 1634. The future historian contemporaries, and whose works are usually printed together in the Poeter Minores. They lived, probably, in the 3rd century B C.

Mosen, George Michael, mo'-ser, a gold-chaser and painter on enamel, who went from Switzerland to London at an early age, became celebrated for his artistic productions, and painted on a watch-case, for George III., portraits of the Prince of Wales and the Bishop of Osnaburg. He was appointed keeper of the Royal Academy of Arts, being the first who held the office. Sir Joshua Reynolds states that he was unrivalled as a gold-chaser, and that his know-ledge in every branch of painting and sculpture was immense. B. in Switzerland, 1704; D. 1783—His daughter Mary was a distinguished flower-painter, and was elected R.A. D. 1819.

Moses, Micosti, mo'-ses, a Spanish rabbi of the 14th century, who published, at Venice, a folio volume entitled "The Great Book of Pre-cepts," which is explanatory of the Hebrew laws.

MOSHEIM, John Lorenz von, mos'-hine, a learned German divine and historian, who became professor of divinity at Helmstedt, and was afterwards chancellor of the university of Göttingen. He translated Cudworth's "Intel-Gottan System of the Universe" into Latin, with learned notes; but his greatest work is the "Eclesiastical History," written in Latin, of which the best English translation is that of Dr. Murdoch, published in the United States, 1832, and enriched by valuable annotations. also wrote, among many other works, nine volumes on "The Morals of Holy Scripture," в. at Lubeck, 1694; р. 1755.

Mossor, neary, mos'sop, a distinguished tragicactor, the son of a dergyman, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin; and made his first apat Timby College, Dubdin; and made his his tap-pearance on the stage at Dublin as Zanga, in the "Revenge;" but soon removed to London, where, next to Garrick and Henderson, he was esteemed the first tragedian of his time. In 1761 he became manager of one of the Dublin theatres; but the speculation ruined him, and he died in penury at Chelsea in 1773; B. 1720.

pennry at Chelsea in 1773; B. 1790.

Mortherwell, William, muth'e-wel, poet and journalist, when a youth obtained a situation in the sheriff clerk's office at Puisley, where he continued for many years. In 1837 he published an interesting and pleasing collection of balluds, entitled "Ministelsy, Ancient and Moderns," and was afterwards Ancient and Modern; and was afterwards successively editor of the "Paisley Magazine," "Paisley Advertiser," and the "Glasgow Courier." In 1833 was published a collected edition of his own poems, some of which mossess a nathes and an intensity of policy and the contraction of the possess a pathos and an intensity of feeling seldom equalled. These qualities are strikingly exhibited in his "Jeanie Morrison," and "My exhibited in his "Jeanne Morrison," and "My D. 1688.

held is like to rend, Willie," an address by a Morrier, John, mof'le, a dramatic writer, dying girl to her lover; while his success in imitating the old mystic ballad is well exemplified in the "Ethit Lang of Sillerwood," "Hollowed Libert the Grim," and other pieces. Some years that his mountent to his memory was he obtained a place in the excise office, but was erected by subscription in the necropolis of his "obliged to resign it in 1720. He then had resulting dividences and the subscription in the necropolis of his "obliged to resign it in 1720. He then had resulting dividences and the subscription in the necropolis of his "obliged to resign it in 1720.

native city, Glasgow. B. 1798; D. 1835. Motley, John Lothrop, mot'-le, a modern American historian, whose family emigrated to New England about the middle of the last century. His Christian names are derived from a maternal ancestor, the Rev. John Lothrop, who was one of the Pilgrim Fathers, and settled in Mottley was sent to Harvard University in 1827, at which time he had attained his 13th year. Leaving that establishment four years afterwards, he spent two or three years at the universities of Göttingen and Berlin. A course of continental travel, which embraced Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, and England, succeeded. During the years 1841-2, he acted as secretary of the American legation at St. Petersburg; after his return to his native country, he devoted him-elf to study and to literary pursuits, the fruits of which were a number of articles contributed to which were a number of articles contributed to the "North American Review," and other pe-riodicals. He likewise produced some works of fection. Conceiving the idea of composing a history of the great struggle in which the provinces of the Netherlands threw off the Spanish yoke, he again visited Europe, settled with his family at Dresden, in the first instance, and subsequently resided, during three or four years, in Germany and the Netherlands. The first instalment of this great undertaking was given to the world in 1856, under the title of "The Rico of the Detail No. 1856. The Rise of the Dutch Republic, a History. This work was brought out simultaneously in London and New York. It passed through several editions, both in England and America, and was reproduced at Amsterdam and at Leipzig. M. Guizot translated it into the French language; and there was, besides, a French version of it published at Brussels. A German and a Dutch translation were also made. In Eugland, the book has attained a large circulation, for there are few passages of history re-lating to other nations that are so interesting to an Englishman as the struggle of the Dutch states for civil liberty, and a release in full from the domination of the Pope and the terrors of the Inquisition. The first half of the second portion of this work was published in London at the close of the year 1860, and, like its predecessor, attracted to itself a very wide-spread popularity. The title of this last is "History of the United Netherlands," and is instory of the United Netherlands, and combraces a period beginning with the death of William the Silent and ending with the murder of Henry III. of France. As a writer, Mr. Motley is clear, forcible, and picturesque. In 1869, he succeeded Mr. Reverdy Johnson as ambassador to Great Britain. B. at Dorchester, Massachusetts, 1814. Motte, Antoine Houdar de la. MOTTE.)

MOTTEVILLE, Frances Bertaut de, mot-veel, a French lady, who was attendant on Anne of Austria, whose Memoirs she wrote. Her work is valuable for its information relative to the private life of the queen, and for its anecdotes of the Fronde. B. in Normandy, about 1621; р. 1689.

course to his pen for gaining a livelihood, and wrote five aramatic pleces; also the "Life of the Czar Peter the Great," and the "History of Catharine of Russia," but the work of his which obtained by far the greatest popularity, is the well-known collection of facetiæ, called "Joe Miller's Jests," which he compiled, though the authorship was attributed to another person. в. 1692: р. 1750.

Moulin

MOULEN, Peter du, moo'-lä, a French Pro-testant divine, who, after studying at Leyden, be-came minister at Charenton. In 1615 he visited England, and James I, gave him a prebend in the cathedral of Canterbury. He afterwards went to Sedam, where he was appointed profes-sor of divinity, and was regarded as the chief minister of the Protestant faith in France. minister of the Protestant faith in France. Among other works, he composed the "Inhe-tomy of Arminianism," in Lotin; "The Capuchin, or the History of the Monks;" "The Nowalty of Popery;" and "A Defence of the Reformed Churches." a. 1588; n. 1688. MOULIN, Peter du, son of the preceding, was chaplain to Charles II., and prebendary of Carbury. He works a "Defence of the Protestant Religion," and several other theological works in France 1600, n. at Control and Control and works. B. in France, 1600; D. at Canterbury,

MOULIN, Louis du, brother of the preceding, became a violent Independent, and wrote several works against the established Church of England. B. 1603; D. 1633.

Mountes, John Joseph, moo'-ne-ai, a distinguished member of the States-general in 1789, was bred to the legal profession; and was suc-cessively advocate of the Parliament of Gronoble and judge-royal. While a member of the Na-tional Assembly, he exerted all his talents and influence to promote the establishment in France of a limited monarchy; but finding his efforts vain, retired first to Grenoble, his native place, and afterwards to Genera, where he published "Recherches sur les Causes qui out empéché les Français de devenir Libres." He subsequently Francais de devenir Libres." He subsequently visited England, but resided chiefly in Switzer-land, Italy, or Germany, till 1801, when he re-turned to France, and, in 1804, was nominated a councillor of state. B. 1758; p. 1806. MOUNTRORT, William, mont. fort, an English dermatic witter, and also are excellent consis-

MOURPROFE, William, mont-fort, an English dramatic writer, and also an excellent conde actor; to whom, being one of the handsomest men on the boards, the pats of the lowers were usually allotted. While performing and of these parts, he capitized the affections of Mrs. Bracegirdle, then greatly admired for ber personal charms. This lady had rejected the addresses of a Captain Hill, who, in compare with Lord Mehra weekely Moureful. the addresses of a Captain Hill, who, in com-pany with Lord Mohun, waylaid Mountfort one night, in the winter of 1699, as he was returning from the theater to his lodgings, and, before he could draw his sword, ran him through the body, and Killed him on the spot. Hill made his escape to the continent, and Lord Mohun was tried by his peers for the murder, but was seculited for want of evidence. The duke of Hamilton eventually killed Lord Mohun in a duel in Hyde Park. Mountfort was the author of five plays, and other pieces. B. 1659.

MOURAD BEY, mool-rad, a famous Maneluke destruction of Ali Bey, in 1773, obtained the government of Cairo in conjunction with Ibrahim Bey, which, notwithstanding some seventher with the Truthin accounts with the Truthin accounts which him hey, which, nouvinstanding some severe contests with the Turkish government, which trice to dispossess them, they contrived to keep! When Bonaparte invaded Egypt, Mound op-posed the French with much vigour; but was obliged to referate to Upper Egypt. He subse-quently entered into a treaty with General organity entered into a treaty with General Kleber, and accepted the title of prince of As-souan and Jirgch, under the protection of France. D. of the plague, in 1804.

Mozart

MONNE, Henry, moise, a Scotch gentleman, who was page to King James I., and one of the gentlemen of his privy-chamber. He wrote a diary of what passed at court in his time, which was printed in 1753. B. 1573; D. 1630.

MOZART, John Chrysostom Wolfgang Gottlieb. mo-zart', a celebrated German musical composer, was first taught music by his father, who was sub-director of the chapel at Salzburg: and his proficiency was so great, that when a child of six years he played before the emperor Francis I., who called him "the little sorecrer." In the following year the youthful prodigy went with his father upon a European tour. They visited Paris, where the child played upon the organ before the whole French court : there he also gave concerts, and published his two first works, before he had completed his eighth year. In 1764 he went to London, where he exhibited his talents before the royal family, and passed through the ordeal in a most triumphant man-So much interest did he excite in England. ner. So much interest did ne exerte in England, that the Hon. Daines Barrington wrote a description of his extraordinary performances, which was read before the Royal Society, and published in its "Transactions." Before leaving London, in 1765, Moyart composed, and dedicated to the queen, six sonatas. After accurate Monacou, in 1769, aloyate composed, and dedicated to the queen, six sonatas. After visiting the Hague, and going a second time to Paris, Mozart and his father returned to Salzburg in 1768, in which year he wrote a complete opera, by desire of the Emperor Joseph II. At 14 he became director of the archibishop of Salzburg's concerts. He shortly arthready with the state of the same director of the archibishop of Salzburg's concerts. He shortly arthready with the same has a state of the same and the same and the same archibishop of Salzburg's concerts. afterwards visited Rome, where the pope bestowed upon him the order of the Golden Spur. In 1779 he took up his residence in Vienna, and in the following year, was captivated by the charms of Mdlle. Constance Weber, an amiable lady and celebrated singer. He made a proposal of marriage to her, which was declined by he family of the lady, on the ground that his reputation was not sufficiently established, Upon this, Mozart composed his "Idomenco," and to Mdlle. Weber was assigned the principal part in the opera. It was received with enthusiasm, and the hand of the lady upon whom his affections were fixed rewarded the composer's affections were axed rewarded the composer's efforts. In 1786 he produced his famous "Nozze di Figaro," and, in the following year, his chef-d'œuvre—"Don Giovanni," which latter was coldly received by the Viennesc; Mozart declared, however, that he had written the opera to please himself and his friends. "Die Zauberfolia (the magic flute) was given to the world in 1791, and, in the same year, "La Clemenza di Tito" was first sung, during the coronation festival of Leopold II. Considerable space would be required for the bare enumeration of this great musician's masses, vocal pieces, symphonics, quintets, quartets, &c. His sublime "Requiem" was written on his deathbed. Nature, so bountiful of her intellectual gifts, had denied to Mozart physical strength: he small and weak in body, and with a delicate constitution. "It has been said of Mozart," writes one of his biographers, "that his knowledge was bounded by his art, and that, detached from this, he was little better than a nonentity; but his acquirements were far greater than is generally supposed; in proof of which we have the best authority for saying, that once, at a court masquerade given at Vienna, Mozart appeared as a physician, and wrote prescriptions in Latin, French, Italian, and German, Assuming this to be true, he could not have been a very ignorant man, nor always a dull one, out of his profession: but still stronger evidence in favour of his understanding may be derived from his works. That he who in his operas adapted his music with such felicity to the different persons of the drama—who represented the passions so accurately—who coloured so the passions so accurately—who conducts to faithfully—whose music is so expressive that, without the aid of words, it is almost sufficient to render the scene intelligible;—that such a man should not have been endowed with a high order of intellect, is hard to be believed; but that his understanding should have been below mediocrity, is incredible." B. at Salzburg, 1756;

D. at Vienna, 1792.

Mudge, John, mudj, an English physician, and an excellent mechanic, who wrote a treatise "On the Catarrhous Cough," and improved the

on the quarranus cough, and improved the construction of reflecting telescopes. D. 1793.

MUDGE, Thomas, brother of the preceding, was an excellent watchmaker, and one of the best mechanicians of his day. He made great improvements in chronometers, and received a grant of £3000 from the government for his services. In 1789 he gave an account of his labours in a work entitled, "Description, with Plates, of the Time-keeper invented by Mr.
Thomas Mudge." B. at Exeter 1716; D. 1794.
Mudge, William, nephew of the last-mentioned, rose to the rank of major-general in the uoned, rose to the rank of major-general in the army; and superintended the execution of the grand trigonometrical survey of England and Wales, and wrote an account of the operations, B. 1763; D. 1821.

MUDIS, Robert, author of numerous works in natural history, and others of an entertaining and instructive character, was, in 1802, appointed Capilin professor, and teachers of flowing in the Gaelic professor and teacher of drawing in the the content of the subsequently filled other situations of a like nature; but ultimately turned his attention exclusively to authorship, and commenced his career with a novel, entitled "Glenfurgus." He then for a while sought employment as a reporter on the London newspapose, and his literary efforts were henceforth innecasing. Independently of his contributions to periodicals, upwards of 80 volumes from his pen were in rapid succession brought before the public. Of these we can only mention a few — "Modern Athens" (a description of Edinburghi, "Babylon the Great" (a description of London); "The British Naturalist;" "The Feathered Tribes of the British Islands;" "Conversations in Moral Philosophy;" "The Elements: the Heavens, the Beath, the Air, the Sea; "Popular Mathematics;" "Man, in his Physical Structure, Intellectual Faculties, &c," "The Seasons;" "History of Hampshire and the Channel Islands;" "Domesticated Animals;" (Gleanings of Nature;" China and its Resources," &c. B. in Forfarshire, 1777; p. 1542. papers, and his literary efforts were henceforth of Nature; Onla and its resources, &c. B. in Forfarshire, 1777; D. 1842.

Muggleron, Lodowicke, mug'-gel-ton, an English tailor and fanatic, of the 17th century, who wrote several books full of absurdity and blasphemy, which were burnt by the hangman. and the author pilloried. He nevertheless ob-tained some followers, and founded the sect termed Muggletonians. This sect is not quite extinct at the present day. D. 1697.

MULDER, G. J., mool-der, a modern Dutch chemist, famous for his discovery of the nature

istry of Vegetable and Animal Physiology. thus states the consequences of the discovery: -"That this protein formed the basis of a large group of animal substances—the albuminbus group of animal stostances—the albumin-bus group, comprising fibrin, albumen, casein, the crystalline lens of the eye, the hair, horn, &c. That in these substances, the protein was combined with oxygen, sulphur, or phosphorus, or with two of these bodies, or with all three; and that the proportions of these several elements determined the special qualities of each compound of the albuminous group. That the sap and leaves, but especially the seeds of plants, contained protein in combination with sulphur and phosphorus, as it is found in the animal body, and that the gluten of wheat, the legumin of the bean, and the nitrogenous substances generally, which are found in the seeds of plants, were compounds of this kind. That these substances were formed by the plant out of the food drawn by its several parts from the air and from the soil. That it produced them for the purpose of diminishing the digestive labour, so to speak, of the animal; of supplying it with food fitted directly to form and nourish its muscular and albuminous parts, and that the animal received its whole supply of the raw animal received its whole supply of the raw material out of which those parts were to be built up, from the vegetable food on which it lived." Mulder occupied the chair of chemistry in the university of Utrecht. MULGBAYA, Constantine John Phipps, Lord, mull-pais, an English navigator, entered the navy at an early age, and became post-captain in 1765. At the general election in 1768, he was returned as member for Lincoln.

he was returned as member for Lincoln, and took an active part in Parliament on several took an active part in ranament on several popular questions, particularly those on libels and the Westminster election, on the latter of which he wrote a pamphlet, entitled "A Letter from a Member of Parliament to one of his constituents, on the late proceedings in the House of Commons." In 1773 he went towards the North Pole on a voyage of discovery, with two ships, one commanded by himself, and the other by Captain Lutwidge. Of this voyage, Lord Mulgrave published a narrative in 4to. His lordship was a good navigator and mathema-tician. B. 1746; D. 1792.

MÜLLER, Gerard Frederick, me(r)?-ler, a German historian and traveller, who went to Russia in early life, as a teacher of history and geo-graphy. Having gained the favour of the empress Catharine, he became historiographer, member of the Academy of St. Petersburg, and conservator of the Russian archives. He was servator of the Massian archives. He was charged with several scientific expeditions, and accompanied Gmelin, in 1733-43, to Siberia. He was the author of "Memoirs towards the History of Russia," and "Travels and Discoveries in Russia." B. 1705; D. in Russia, 1783. Mülling, Other Frederick, a Danish naturalist, and one of the most original observers of the 18th anglum 4 After freveilling in various com-

18th century. After travelling in various countries as tutor to a Danish nobleman, he returned tries as tutor to a Danish nobleman, hereturned to Copenhagen in 1767, and married a lady of considerable property, whereupon he devoted his life to scientific pursuits. He was appointed by Frederick V. of Denmark to continue the publication of the "Flora" of his native country, and in 1799 commenced a corresponding work on the Zoology of Denmark, but only fived to complete two parts. Mailler also inside researches relative to the minute animals, and applicable ground the price of the property of the prop of the substance to which he applied the term to complete two parts. Miller also made "protein." Professor Johnston, in his preface researches relative to the minute animals, and to the English translation of Mulder's "Chepublished several treatises thereon, which Cawler 743 declared entitled their author to a "place in the first rank of those naturalists who have enriched science with original observations." B. at Copenhagen, 1730; D. 1784.

Müller, John, a Swiss historian, who was professor of Greek at Schaff hausen, and, in 1786 became librarian and councillor of state to the elector of Mainz. In 1800 he received the ap-pointment of first keeper of the imperial library at Vienna. In 1806, after the battle of Jena, Müller saw Napoleon at Berlin, and seemed to have been overcome by the attentions paid to him by the emperor. In 1807 he received from his new patron the post of secretary of state for the new kingdom of Westphalia, and in the following new Kingdom of westpinnia, and in the total way year became director of public instruction, zeal-ously discharging these duties until his death, which soon followed. His chief works were "Histoire Universelle," "History of the Swiss Confederation," an invaluable book, which was written in German, but of which there is an admirable French translation by Professor Mou-admirable Prench translation by Professor Mon-nard, of Lansaume, published at Genera. A complete edition of Maller's works was issued at Tubingen, in 27 vols. 1819. n. at Schaff-huusen, Switzerland, 1782; n. at Cassel, 1809. Müller, Charles Ottfred, a learned Ger-man writer, and one of the greatest scholars-of modern times, after competing his educa-tion at the university of Berlin, became pro-fessor of ancient languages at Breslau in 1817. He conceived the idea of writing a history of the Hellenit races and cities, of which they have been appeared in 1820. About the same time the beau-peared in 1820. About the same time the beauvolume, "Orenomenos and the Minyans," ap-peared in 1820. About the same time he became professor of archeology, or ancient art, at 63t-tingen, whereupon he applied himself to a searching investigation of the principles of antique art, and visited Dresden, France, and England in furtherance of the same design. The nature of his subsequent studies will be seen by the enumeration of a few of his great seen by the enumeration of a tew of his great works.—"Manual of the History of Ancient Art," a "History of Greek Literature" (this was written for the Sodiety for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, and was left unfinished at the author's death); "The Dorinas," which was a history of the religion, manners, and politics of one of the Greek rose; "The Educacia;" and an edition of the "Bumenidee" of Æschylus. As three Silator, 1970... at Phres Silator, 1970... B. at Brieg, Silesia, 1797; D. in Greece, 1841. Müller, John, an eminent modern German physiologist, who took his degree of doctor in medicine at the university of Bonn in 1823. In 1830 he became professor of physiology and and the detame processor of paysology and anatomy at the same place, exchanging to Berlin three years afterwards. In 1833 he published his great work, "The Paysology of Man," which was soon afterwards translated into Prench and English, and is still perhaps, the best casting work on physiology. His later wittings, embracing every subject in compara-writings, embracing every subject in comparative anatomy and physiology, have been chiefly published in his own journal, devoted to physiology, &c. B. at Coblentz, 1801; D. 1858.

MULLER, Maximilian (ordinarily abbreviated in the control of the

Sanscritand other moint introduces from which of the Duces science. And negly, that a very he published numerous translations, particule led him to discover where his true strength larly devoting himself to the clucidation of lay, and quickly enabled him to find subjects in Brahminical literature. In 1848, Mr. Müller the suburbs of London which he would forward to England, and was shortly afterwards merely have passed over as unworthy of his engaged by the East India Company to publish, notice. In 1898 he exhibited at the Royal 75.44 at their expense, his edition of the "Rig-Veda," and for that purpose settled at Oxford, where the first volume appeared in 1849. In 1854 he was entered Taylorian professor at Oxford. having for some time previously discharged the duties of the chair as deputy professor; and was at the same time invested with the full degree of M.A. by decree of convocation. In 1856 he became curator of the Bodleian library; was elected Fellow of All Souls College in 1858; and in 1860 was an unsuccessful candidate for the chair of Sanscrit, vacant by the death of Pro-fessor Wilson. Mr. Müller's publications from ressor wison. Mr. Muller's publications from Eastern literature are very numerous, and gained for him the reputation of being one of the most accurate and profound oriental scholars of the day. He also contributed various papers of great value to the "Edinburgh Review" and other periodicals. B. at Dessau, in Anhalt-Dessau, 1823.

MULLER, John. (See REGIOMONTANUS.) MULLER, William John, mool-ler, an English artist, of German descent, who made several long artist, of German descent, who made several long tours in Greece, Egypt, and Turkey, and painted a number of remarkable pictures, illustrative of Oriental life and senercy. In 1845 he was overstaken by a severe illness, the result of the great mental labour he had undergone, and which was increased by the bad treatment he had received at the hands of the Royal Academical of the Royal Aca was increased by the bad treatment in han received at the hands of the Royal Academicians, all his fine pictures having been placed so far from the spectator's eye that they could not be seen. Subsequently to his death, his works were eagerly sought after, and commanded high prices. A collection of his setches realized $2380 at a sale by auction, His best paintings were, "Turkish Merchants with Camels," "Athens from the road to Marathon," "Sketch of an Egyptian Slave-market," In 1841 he produced a finely-illustrated work, "The Sphym," and "Faryer in the Descrt," In 1841 he produced a finely-illustrated work, a madern bight have been supported by the produced a finely-illustrated work, Musoca, Miss Dinah Maria, mat-lock, a madern begish authoress, who, at the age of 23, made a highly successful appearance as a novelist, by the production of her well-known fiction, entitled, "The Cglivies." In 1850 she published "Glive," a romance; and, in the following year, a picture of middle-class Scottish life, called "The Head of the Family," "Agatha's Husband" succeeded, and was in turn followed by a collection of short fictions, entitled lowed by a collection of short fictions, entitled "Avilion, and other Tales." Among the best of her latest efforts stands "John Halliax, Gentleman," a charming piece of writing, in which Miss Mulock's fine imaginative powers and agreeable style appear in their most matured form. B. at Stoke-upon-Trent, 1826.

NUTREAD, William, mul-red, a distinguished modern painter, who evinced a taste for art in his earliest youth, and was accordingly sent, at the age of 15, to study at the Royal Academy. After some ineffectual attempts at the classic and high historic branches MULTER, Maximilian (ordinarily abbreviated of his art he classec and night nistoric branches Multers, Maximilian (ordinarily abbreviated of his art, he fortunately acted upon the advice into Max), a learned orientalist, received his given to students by Sir Joshua Roynolds, and education in Germany and France, and soon proceeded to make a diligent investigation of made himself known by his mastery of the methods pursued by the greatest masters Sauscrit and other Indian languages, from which of the Dutch school. This happy turn of study he published numerous translations, particu-

Mumming

Academy a "Carpenter's Shop and Kitchen," and the "Music Lesson." Other paintings of a similar character followed; and in 1815, his style was fixed and his fame established, by the production, among other works, of "Idle Boys." which, moreover, secured his election as an associate of the Royal Academy. In the following year he exhibited "The Fight Interrupted," and year ne exhibited "the Fight interrupted," and became R.A. From this period down to the year 1863, Mulready continued to produce works of the very lighest excellence, all, from first to last, characterized by the same soberness of effect, the same breadth and simplicity of treateffect, the same breath and simplicity or treatment, the same truth of drawing and mellowness of colour. The best of these are, "The Wolf and the Lamb," "The Convalescent," "The Last In," "The Seven Ages of Man," "Choosing the Wedding Gowo," and "Crossing the Ford." Fortunately, through the liberation of the Control of rality of Mr. Sheepshanks and other gentlemen. these treasures of art have become national property. They may be seen at the South Kensington Museum, where they form a portion of the "British Collection." B. at Ennis, of the Brisis Concerns. B. at Linuis, Ireland, 1786; p. 1883. Mummius, Lucius, mum-mi-us, a Roman consul, who, for his victories over the Acheans, was called Achaicus. He destroyed Corinth, Thebes, and Chaleis, and sent the treasures of art these cities contained to Rome; but was so ignorant of the value of the works of the most generated artists of Greece found at Corinth, that he is stated to have told those who con-veyed them to Rome, that if they lost or injured them, they should make others in their MUNCH, Peter Andrew, moonch, a Norwegian antiquary and philologist, who received his early education under his father, at Skien, and eary equication under his father, at Skien, and afterwards passed to the university of Christiana, where, in 1834, he underwent his examination in jurisprudence. The bent of his genius was, however, towards history and philology; and on his obtaining the appointment of professor of history at the university of Christiana, he devoted himself to an elacidation of the ancient history and languages of Norway and the North. He paid visits to England, Scotland, and Bome, to trace out the vestiges of the ancient Norsemen, either in books or in the ancient Norsemen, either in books or in the customs of the people who are descended from those old soctovers. Professor Munch wrote extensively, his most important works being "Historical and Geographical Description of the Kingdom of Norway during the Middla Ages," and "History of the Norwegian People." In the translated edition of the "Transactions" of the Northern Antiquaria Society, many articles by bim are to be found of these the most interesting to Panish vendors. of these, the most interesting to English readers is, perhaps, that entitled "Geographical Elucidations of the Scottish and Irish Local Names carrons or the scottesh and Irish Local Names occurring in the Sagas." He also composed, for the use of schools, a "History of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark;" and collected a series of entertaining stories from Norwegian history. B. at Christiana, 1810; D. 1863.

MUNOH, Andrew, a modern Norwegian poet and cousin of the preceding, who became, in 1830, an amanuensis in the university library of 1830, an amanuensis in the university hour. Christiana. His poems are very popular with his countrymen: of these he has published twe collections, entitled, respectively, "Poems, Ol collections, entitled, respectively, "Poems, Ol and New," and "New Poems," There is als a drama by him, founded on the subject 745

Munnich

lomon de Caus, a lunatic who was imprisoned the Bicetre in 1641, and from whom, it has been stated by some French authors, the maruis of Worcester derived his notions of the als 6: Worcester cerved his notions of the rimchiel of the steam engine. B. 1811.

Mincellaures, Aduphus, Baron, mu(r)n-boul-en, a Hanovernan statesman, who was, uring 37 years, privy councillor to the electors of that kingdom. He had a principal share in ounding the university of Göttingen, in which eat of learning he held the office of curator, and with the machine of the contract of the council of the machine of the council of the cou eat of nearming me near one once of curator, and tablished professorships of political science, istory, and geography. The Royal Society of ciences of Göttingen was also much indebted his liberality. B, at Hanover, 1883; D, 1770. Minchemorality. Jerome Charles Frederick of Geometric Minchemoral Profession Service, who on, a German officer in the Russian service, who on, a derman omeer in the Russian service, who evered in several campaigns against the Turks, ras a passionate lover of horses and hounds; if which, and of his adventures among the turks, he told the most extravagant stories, ill his fancy so completely got the better of its memory, that he really believed his most xtravagant fictions, and felt very much of the substantial for a dark time averaged on the substantial for a dark time averaged on the substantial for a dark time averaged on the substantial for the substantia ended if any doubt was expressed on the subect. Having become acquainted with Burger it Pyrmont, and related these waking dreams o him, the poet published them in 1787, with is own improvements, under the title of Wunderbare Abentheuer und Reisen des Herrn von Munchhausen." The wit and humour of the work gave it great success, and it was translated into several foreign languages. D. 1797.

MUNDAY, Anthony, mun'dai, a dramatic poet of the 16th century, who was the author if the "City Pageants," and enlarged Stowe's "Survey of London." p. 1633.

MUNDEN, Joseph Shepherd, mun'-den, a famous comic actor, who, from 1790 to 1813, delighted the audiences of Covent Garden with his inimitable representations; from 1813 to 1824, when he retired from the stage, his services were transferred to Drury Lane. His humour was exuberant and racy; and though often verging on caricature, he could melt the heart by touches of true pathos, as readily as he could stir it into mirth by the exquisite drollery of his marvellously flexible countenance. B. 1758; D. 1832.

38. 1765; D. 1852.

MUKHO PARK (See PARK, Mungo.)

MUKHOEN, Christopher Barchard, count de,

MUKHOEN, Christopher Barchard, cervice of Russia, who at first distinguished himself as no officer of engineers, under Prince Engene.

Peter the Great invited him to klussia, where Peter the Greaf invited him to Russia, where he constructed the Ladoga canal. After terminating this great enterprise, he was loaded with honours, and created field-marshal and privy councilior. At the head of the Russian troops, he defeated the Poles and Turks in 1737, and made himself master of Perekop, Otchakof, and Choczim. He subsequently became prime minister; in which cupacity he came into collision with Biren, who had been prophild respect in accordance with the will came into consion with brea, who has some appointed regent, in accordance with the will of Anna Ivanovna, the late empress, whose favourite he had been, (See Biren.) Marshal favourite he had been. (See BIREN.) Marshal Munnich was at first successful over his rival, and Biren was banished to Siberia; but, upon the accession of the empress Elizabeth, Munnich was in turn sent into exile, in 1742, and remained in Siberia during twenty years. He was recalled by Peter III., upon his accession, and appeared at court in the sheepskin dress which he used to wear in Siberia. The emperor which he used 50 wear in Siberia. In emperor restored him to his former rank, and he enjoyed the favour of Peter and Catharine until his death. B. in Oldenburg, 1883; D. 1767.

Munszes, Schastian, mun-ster, a learned German divine, who at first was a Franciscan monk, but afterwards embraced the Reformed monk, but afterwards embraced the Reformed religion, and was nominated Hebrew protessor at the university of Basel. Munster was called a Hebrew Grammar and Dictionary, and published a Cosmography, in folio, and a Latin version of the Old Testament, with other learned works. a. at Inglesheim, 1489; p. of the plague, at Basel, 1562.

Muran, or Aurentum (Kr. Aurentum) MURAD, OF AMURATH. (See AMURATH.) MURAT, JOSCHIM, moo'-ra, a celebrated French marshal, and king of Naples, was the son of an innkeeper at Cahors. His father intended him for the church, and succeeded in getting him for the church, and succeeded in getting film admitted to the college of Cahors; but young Murat's disposition was ill-suited to the eccle-siastical profession. An amour was the cause of his quitting the college; after which he en-listed in a regiment of chasseurs, from which he was dismissed for insubordination. Returning to his father's house, he occupied himself with the management of the horses belonging to the inu. The outburst of the Revolution gave to his impetuous and restless spirit an opportu-nity for action; and he became one of the most energetic partisans of liberty and equality. He had again entered a cavalry regiment, and during the Reign of Terror rapidly rose to the grade of colonel. In 1795 he rendered good the grade of conear. In 1755 he rendered good service to Bonaparte, which the future em-peror rewarded by placing Murat upon his staff when he set out for the Italian campaign of the same year. The fortunes of Bonaparte and Murat were henceforth closely allied. He was confidential aide-de-camp to his patron in Egypt; and, having signalized himself on every Egypi; and, naving signanized number of every, was soon nominated general of division. On the Islah Brumarie 6th Nov. 1799), he commanded the sirty grenadiers who dispersed the Council of Five thundred. For this service Napoleon appointed him commandant of the consultration of the line in marriage. After the battle of Marengo, line in marriage. After the battle of Marengo, in which he commanded the cavalry with distinguished bravery, he was created governor of the Cisalpine republic, and, afterwards, governor of Paris. When Napoleon became emperor, he bestowed the field-marshal's bâton upon Murat, and created him prince, with the title of grand-duke of Berg and Cleves. "The landsome swordsman," as he was termed, went through the German campaign of 1905 with more than his accustomed brilliancy of with more than his accustomed brilliancy of deed. In the invasion of Spain, in 1808, he commanded the French army, and was ambi-tious of gaining the throne which Charles IV. had vacated for himself; but Napoleon pre-ferred to place his brother Joseph upon the Spanish throne, at the same time bestowing the crown of Naples upon Murat. In 1808 he was proclaimed king of the Two Sicilies, as Naples and Sicily are often called. He reigned in peace until 1812, his rule being characterized by mildness and liberality. In the latter year he headed the cavalry of the grand army which invaded Russia, and in the advance performed his customary feats of personal valour; and, during the disastrous retreat, he commanded in chief from Smolensko to Wilna. After the battle of Leipsic, he hurried back to his kingdom, and having broken with Napoleon, by whom he imagined himself to have been slighted, entered into negotiations with the allies. The congress of Vionna, however, not recognising his kingly title, he declared in favour of Napoleon immediately after learning that the emperor had returned from the isle of Elba. Calling upon the Italians to fight for their national independence, he marched into Upper Italy, where he encountered the Austrians at Tolentino, in 1815, but met with a signal defeat, and lost at once his army and his throne. reat, and note at once his army and his throne.

Subsequently, he attempted to regain the latter, and landed with a few followers upon the coast of Calabria; but, being captured, was brought before a Neapolitan military commission, which basely condemned him to be shot. As a military commander, Murat was mediocre; but his tary commander, agrae was incuous; see me impetious bravery, his love of daring, and his uniform success in battle, would seem to entitle him to the praise which Napoleon bestowed upon him when he called his favourite "the best cavalry officer in Europe." B. at Cahors, in Perigord, 1767; shot, 1815.

Murat, Caroline Maria Bonaparte, wife of the

MURLAY, Garoline Maria Bonaparto, wife of the preceding. Gee Bonaparto, Garoline.)

MURLAYOUX, Luigi Antonio, moo'-a-to'-se, ea celebrated Italian historian, who has been termed "the father of the history of the Middle Ages." After completing his education at Modenn, he entered into holy orders, and was invited, at the age of 23, to Milan, by Count Charles Borromeo, who appointed him librarian of the Ambrosian callese. "Therenton Milan." of the Ambrosian college. Thereupon Mura-tori commenced the study of the Italian middleage records, and subsequently published his "Rerum Italicarum Scriptores," in twenty-eight volumes; wherein he gave every chronicle of the medieval period, accompanying them with learned and valuable commentaries. His "Antiquitates Italica" was first produced in 1742; and of this valuable contribution to history the author himself wrote, "I have treated first of the kings, dukes, marquises, counts, and other magistrates of the Italian kingdom; after which I have investigated the various forms of the I have investigated the various forms of the political government, and also the manners of the private citizens, the freedom and franchise of some classes, and the scrittinde of others; the laws, the judicial forms, the military stem; the arts, sciences, and education; stem; the progress of trade and industry; and other matters of social and civil history. Muntroit was a member of the Royal Society of London, and of several other learned bodies; but he was exposed to the calumnies and persecutions of some bigots of his church, who accused him of holding heretical opinions, and even denounced him to Pope Benedict XIV. That liberal pontiff, however, wrote to the historian, that "those passages in his works which were not found acceptable to Rome, did not touch either the dogma or the discipline of the Church; but that had they been written by any other person, the Roman Congregation of the Index would have forbidden them, which, however, they had not done in the case of Muratori's works, because it was well known that he, the pope, shared in the universal esteem in which his merit was held." The whole of the historian's minor works were collected and published, in 19 volumes, in 1787. Besides the above-mentioned productions, he wrote a learned treatise upon Italian Poetry, and an enlightened devotional work, wherein he combated much of the superstition and bigotry of the Roman Catholic church. B. at bigotry of the Koman Catholic church. B. at Vignola, Modena, 1672; p. at Modena, 1750. Muncarsox, Sir Roderick Impey, mur'-shis, a distinguished modern geologist, director-general of the Geological Survey of the United Kingdom, and director of the Metropolitan School of Science applied to Mining and the Arts. After receiving a portion of his educa-tion at the Durham grammar-school, he entered the military college of Marlow in 1805, and left it two years subsequently, upon receiving a commission in the 36th regiment. He served at the battle of Vimiera, and shared the dangers and the glory of the retreat made by Sir John Moore upon Corunna. In 1815 he married, and quitted the military profession. Becoming acquainted with Sir Humphry Davy, he was urged by that great chemist to devote his leisure to scientific pursuits. Acting upon this advice, he proceeded pursuits. Acting upon time advice, in protection to study the science of geology, and shortly afterwards explored the Highlands, Yorkshire, and other parts of the kingdom, in company with Professor Sedgwick. In 1828 he accompanied Mr. (afterwards Sir Charles) Lyell in a geological tour among the extinct volcanoes at Auvergne. After exploring the chain of the Eastern Alps, he published a memoir upon the subject, accompanied with a geological map, in 1829. He subsequently returned to the study of the geological formations of Great Britain, and succeeded in discovering the whole series of Silurian rocks in the sea-cliffs watcher Series of Milford Haven. The term "Silurian system" was first used by him, in consequence of the vast deposits of which it is constituted being most posits of which it is constituted being most fully displayed in those parts of England and Wales once inhabited by a tribe of Britons to whom the Romans applied the name "Silures." With this great discovery Sir Roderick Mur-chison's name has ever since been identified and he has put forth his views thereupon in an important work, entitled "The Silurian System." important work, entitled "The Suurian System." In the years 1835 and 1839 he explored the Rhenish provinces; and, in 1840, in company with M. de Verncuil, a French geologist, he set out for Russia, with the intention of investiout for Russia, with the intention of Investi-gating the goodpical formations of that country, hitherto very little known. The result of his several expectations was published in 1845, in a magnificent volume, entitled "Geology of Russia and the Ural Mountains," in the production of which he was assisted by M. de Verneull and the Count Von Keyserling. Shortly after the publication of this book he was knighted by her publication of this book he was knighted by her majesty Queen Victoria, and was created a member of the order of St. Stamislaus by the emperor Nicholas. About the same time th Royal Society awarded him its Copley modal for his editors in establishing the "Silurian System". He wrote extensively upon the subjects of his observations and explorations, and . large number of important contributions by his appeared in the "Transactions" and "Journals' of the learned societies of Great Britain. In 185 he produce "Siluria; the History of the oldes known Rocks containing Organic Remains, with a Brief Sketch of the Distribution of Gold over the Earth." Sir Roderick Murchison likewis declared that gold should be found in the Aus trailan Alps, and urged the government to organize an expedition to test the truth of his views. This appeal met with no official re-sponse; but his theories were rapidly confirme grough the actual discovery of the precious setal by private individuals. He was M.A. of lambridge and Dublin, D.C.L. of Oxford, trustee of the British Museum, and member of almost il the scientific bodies of Europe. B. in Rosshire, 1792.

MURE, Sir William, mure, a Scotch poet, nose works mostly remain in manuscript. ome of them, however, appeared in a volume attitled "Ancient Ballads and Songs," published in 1827. In the civil war, he tock the sopular side, served as captain in the Ayrshire egiment, and was wounded at Marston Moor, egiment, and was wounded at Marston Moor, at Rowallan Ayr, 1864; 1. 1687.

MURB, William, of Caldwell, an eminent holar and critic, was educated at Westminster and the University of Edinburgh, and studied anbequently in Germany. He represented Renfrewshire in Parliament from 1846 to 1855, nd was Lord Rector of the University of Glas ow during the years 1847 and 1848. His chief work, "A Critical History of the Language and iterature of Ancient Greece," was incomplete t his death; but the several portions of it, on he epic and lyric poets, and the historians, may se considered as separate works. In the first wo volumes, devoted to an examination of the 'Iliad' and 'Odyssey' of Homer, he endeavours o prove the essential unity of both these poems, ogether with the identity of their authorship; md it is admitted he successfully refuted the heory which regarded the epics of Homer as collections of national songs composed by diferent men, and possibly at different times.

B. 1799; D. 1860.

Murer, Marc Antoine François, moó-raí, a learned French critic, who, at the age of 18, read lectures upon Cicero and Terence in the college of Auch, whence he proceeded to Paris, and taught the classics and civil law with great reputation. His sarcastic and vivacious characreputation. His surcastic and viracious charuc-ter, however, procured him many enemies, and, being accussed of heresy and depraved habits, he was imprisoned; but, obtaining his release, he repaired to Toulouse, where fresh churges were brought against him. To avoid punishment, he fled to Italy. At Rome he was well received, was ordained a priest, and was presented to several nich benefices. He taught philosophy, theology, and civil law in the latter city, and enjoyed the esteem of Popes Pins V. and Grevy VIII—His works consist of valuable ontheology, and civil law in the latter city, and enjoyed the esteem of Popes Pins V, and Gregory XIII. His works consist of valuable annotations upon the Latin classics, "Poemata," and "Orations." His commentainer upon Plato's "Republic," and upon Sallust, Clercy-Clerin, e. and "Indiges, 126, and upon Sallust, Clercy-Cleint, a near Indiges, 126, and other latest and the latest and lates reading to his patron the productions of contemporary authors, that the desire to achieve a temporary authors, that the desire to admire a name in literature was first awakened in his breast. He began by writing verse, and at-tacked the poet Barthelemy in a satirical poem. This next work was a volume of poetry, entitled •Via Dolorosa," for which he was unsuccessful in obtaining a publisher. He then lived that strange, iraquiar, and somewhat romantic mode of life called by himself and other French. novelists the "Bohemian." Fired with literary ambition, but painfully uncertain as to where he should procure a dinner, the young enthusiast mixed in the society of a number of young painters, musicians, and poets,—the strange bond of impecuniosity uniting them all. Champ floury became his friend during this time, an with him, Murger wrote a number of small pieces for the Luxembourg theatre. After producing several poems and novels with more or ducing several poems and novels with more or less success, he, in 1848, gare to the public the celebrated "Scenes of Bohemian Life," which fixed his fame. This fine rectical of the adventures of his early days opened to him the pages of the "Revue des Deux Mondes," and to that fournal he afterwards contributed several of his best works. M. Murger was less successful as adramatist and poet, the particular charm of his style depending not upon invention and imagination, but on the truth and reality of his pictures of life. B. in Paris, 1822; p. 1890. MURILLO, Bartlolmeo Stefano, moo-reel-yo, Murillo, Bartlolmeo Stefano, moo-reel-yo, Bartlolmeo Stefano, moo-reel-yo,

THE DICTIONARY

Murillo

MURILLO, Bartolomeo Stefano, moo-reel-yo, a celebrated Spanish painter, studied under his uncle Juan del Castillo, at Soville, whence, in 1643, he proceded to Madrid, and obtained instruction from the celebrated Velasquez. In 1645 he returned to Seville, where he rapidly 1848 he returned to Seville, where he rapidly rose to the highest distinction, and painted several historical works for the king of Spain. In lis own country, his fine chiefly rests upon his nunerous altar-pieces; but in England, where his works are highly prized, his simple works, such as "The Spanish Peasant Boy," in the National Gallery, are most highly prized. His death was the result of an accident he met with while working upon a scaffolding in the Capuchin convent at Cadiz, at his painting entitled the "Marriage of St. Catherine." B. at

Scrille, 1813; D. at the same place, 1892.
MURFHY, Arthur, mer-fe, a dramatic and miscellaneous writer, who, after receiving some education at the college at 5t. Omer, in France, at the age of 18 returned to Ireland, and was placed in the counting-house of a merchant who was his relation; but not liking that occupation, he went to London, and, having a great pation, he went to London, and, having a great inclination to the stage, made an effort in the character of Othello, but without success. He then commenced a literary career, and produced "The Orphan of China," a tragedy, which was well received. He also established a weekly paper, called "The Gray's Im Journal," and two others in defence of government, cuttled the "Test" and the "Auditor." Having studied the law, he was called to the bar by the Societz of Lincolvie. Un, but wave by ing studied the aw, he was caused to the Society of Lincoln's Inn, but never had much practice. His plays of the "Grecian Daughter," "All in the Wrong," "The Way to Keep Him," and "The Citizen," had great Acop Him, and The Chizen, had great success, and produced the author wealth and fame. Mr. Murphy also acquired considerable reputation by his "Lives" of Fielding and Johnson, and, above all, by his translation of Tacitas. He was a commissioner of bankrupts, and, for 116 Wes a commissioner of paracteries, and, not the last two years of his life, had a pension of $2000 a year. His last literary performance was the "Life of Garrick," which is by no means equal to his former works. Mr. Murphy was the intimate friend of Dr. Johnson, Burke, Carlot, Parket and other swinching in B. in History of the Mahometan Empire in Spain." The volume entitled "Arabian Antiquities" contained 97 fine plates, among which were contained 27 me plates, among which were several depicting the Alhambra. B. in Ireland, about 1760; D. 1816. MURPHY, Robert, a modern mathematician, was the son of a poor shoemaker of Mallow, in Ireland. In his 11th year, his thigh-bone was fractured by his being run over by a cart, accident was the cause of his being confined to his bed during twelve months. Among other papers, an old Cork almanac, containing some papers, an old Cork almanac, containing some mathematical problems, was given him wherewith to employ his mind. This led him to ask for a copy of build, and a work upon algebra, both of which he mastered unadded, and before he had attained his 18th year. He next forwarded answers to the mathematical problems inserted in the newspapers by a gentleman at Cork. The latter sought out the lad, and succeeded in interesting some gentlemen in his behalf. He was received into a classical school in his native town, and subsequently went to the university of Cambridge, where, in 1829, he took his B.A. degree, and afterwards became fellow and dean of his college. Having fallen into dissipated habits, he was compelled to leave the university in 1832. After spending some time in Ireland, he went to London in 1836, and commenced as a mathematical teacher and writer. Two years later, he was appointed examiner in mathematics and natural philosophy at the University of London. To the Cambridge "Philosophical Transactions" he contributed many papers on mathematics, and wrote a trea-tise on the "Theory of Algebraical Equations." He likewise furnished the earlier parts of the "Penny Cyclopædia," with articles on natural philosophy. B. at Mallow, Ireland, 1806; D. in London, 1843.

MUBRAY, or MORAY, James Stuart, Earl of, mur-rai, was a natural son of James V., king of Scotland, by Margaret, daughter of Lord Erskine of Mar. He went with his sister. Mary queen of Scots, to France, in 1548, and was among queen ot scots, to France, in 1548, and was amone, the retinue when she was married to the dau-phin of France; but after his return to his native country, he soon began to play an important part in the councils of the party of the Reformation. He was subsequently deputs to repair to France and invite his sister to Scot-law to 1550 and invite his sister to Scotland. In 1561 he returned to Edinburgh, and upon the queen's arrival, a few weeks after-wards, he was appointed by her prime minister. For his services in that office, Mary created him earl of Mar; but a rival claimant to the title earl of mar; but a five camman to the date having appeared in Lord Erskine, the minister received the earldom of Murray in its stead. Together with John Knox and queen Elizabeth, he was opposed to the queen's marriage with Darnley; but though he became estranged from his sister, he took no active part in the murder against her. In 1570, however, while riding through the streets of Linlithgow, he was shot by James Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh, in reveuge of a personal injury committed by him years before. B., it is supposed, about 1533.

MURRAY, Hugh, a voluminous and successful writer on geography and kindred subjects, at an early age became a clerk in the excise office in Edinburgh; where his official duties leaving him considerable leisure, he cultivated a taste for literature with rare and indefatigable ardour. In the early part of his career he edited the "Scots' Magazine," contributed to the "Edinburgh Gazetteen," and published successively "Discoveries and Travels in Africa, Asia, and America." At a later period of his life he con-tributed 15 volumes to the "Edinburgh Cabinet throuse 15 volumes to the "Edinburgh Cabines Library," on subjects connected with his favourite study; but the work on which his reputation mainly rests, is his "Encyclopedia of Geography," a stupendous monument of reading, Industry, and research. 2, in the manse of North Berwick, 1779; n. 1846.

MURRARY, JOHN, a physician, who attained to

MURRAY, John, a Daysician, who attained to a distinguish pre-eminence as a lecturer on natural philosophy, chemistry, materia medica, and pharmacy, at Edinburgh, where he had been educated. His write "Elements of Materia Medica and Pharmacy," and "System of Materia Medica and Pharmacy," on 1850.

MURRAY, Lindley, an American grammarian, who at first acted as clerk to his father, a merchant at New York, but was subsequently placed with a private tutor, to acquire some classical knowledge. He next applied himself to the study of the law, and, in his 21st year was called to the bar: but upon the breaking out of the dispute between Great Britain and America, he entered upon a commercial career. Having acquired some property, he retired from business, and bought an estate near New York ness, and bought an estate near New York but the summers of his native country proving too relaxing for his frame, he resolved to settle in England; and accordingly crossed the Atlantic, and took up his residence near York, where he lived till his death. His Grammar of the English Language," Key, and Exercises, were composed in England, and in a condition of such bodily infirmity, that he could take no exercise, except in a carriage. During the latter years of his life, he was entirely confined to his chamber. Besides the three works already named he prosides the three works already named, he pro-duced "The English Reader," "Lecteur Franduced "The English Reader," "Lecteur Fran-cais," and a small work "On the Duty and Benefit of a Daily Perusal of the Holy Scrip-tures." The large sums obtained by him for his educational works were entirely devoted to charitable purposes. B. in Pennsylvania, 1745 D. near York, 1826.

n. near York, 1826. Murray, Sir George, a gallant British general, governor of the Royal Military College at Woolvieh, &c., was educated at the high schoo and university of Edinburgh, entered the arm in 1789, and gained great distinction in almost every quarter of the globe for his military achievements, and more especially for the skill and ability with which he discharged in the Peninsular war the duties of quartermaster general. In 1812 he was appointed to the government of the Canadas; but on hearing that Namolean had escaped from Elba. Obtained in Napoleon had escaped from Elba, obtained hir release from that office, and joined the British army in France. On his return to England he was appointed governor of Edinburgh Castle; vas appointed governor of Edmourgh Castle; id in 1819 the governorship of the Royal filitary College was conferred upon him. In 823 he became lieutenant-general of the ordance, was soon after elected M.P. for Perthhire, and in 1828 took office as secretary of tate for the colonies. In Sir R. Peel's admidistration of 1834-5 he filled the office of mastereneral of the ordnance; but lost his seat for erthshire. At the Westminster election in 837 he opposed and was defeated by Sir De acy Evans and Mr. Leader. When the Whites acy Evans and alt., Leader. When the Whitzs seigned in 1921, Sir George again received the ppointment of master-general. Sir George urray is likewise known to the world in a hic-ury capacity, as the editor of "Mariborough's ispatches." B. in Perthshire, 1772; D. 1846. Al UBBAY, William, a distinguished actor and theatrical manager, made his first appearance, in his 19th year, at Covent Garden, under the mspices of Mr. Kemble. He shortly afterwards ettled in Edinburgh, where he remained 42 years as actor and lessee of the Theatres Royal years a actor and issee of the theaters man and Adelphi, and, during that period, besides his professional fame, he enjoyed the universal respect of the citizens, and the friendship of Scott, Allan, Wilson, Jeffrey, and the other eading literati of Edinburgh. Mr. Murray was most versatile actor; and could take success-Index versame actor; and count ras successions while a very wide range of characters. He was in the habit of delivering addresses at the beginning and close of the theatrical season, which were masterpieces of wit and humour. в. 1791: р. 1852.

Murray, John, an eminent English publisher, ...ho was at first in partnership, as medical bookseller, with Mr. Highley, but afterwards devoted his attention to a much more extensive line of business. A man of considerable tact, he sought and made the acquaintance of the best writers of his day, and contrived to maintain a long course of business transactions with them by the exercise of well-timed liberality. them by the exercise of well-timed liberality. His first great undertaking was the establishment of the "Quarterly Review," in 1849. He published a few of Sir Walter Scotts, and all Lord Byron's works. His name was also to be found on the title-page of works by Campbel, Moore, Caming, Hallam, Croker, Isaae Disraeli, Mosnington Irving, Southey, Lockhart, Crabbe, and Bishop Heber. Several of his publishing ventures were particularly fortunate; such as the "Domestic Cookery," of which upwards of 30,000 copies have been sold. The 'Family' and "Colonial" Libraries were also valundle and successful seculations, B. 1778; p. 1843.

and successful speculations. B. 1778; D. 1543.

MURRAY, William, Earl of Mansfield. (See Mansfield, Earl of).

MUSA, Antonius, mu'-sa, a Greek physician, who cured Augustus of a dangerous illness by who cated augusts of a cangerous intess by bathing. He was the first who advised the use of the cold bath. The Romans creeted a statuc in his honour. Two tracts, "De Herbâ Bota-nică," and "De tuendâ Valetudine," are attributed to him.

Musa, Ibn-Nosseyr, a famous Arab conqueror, who, in 707, was nominated governor of Mauritania, and who quickly reduced the whole of the tribes inhabiting the northern shores of Africa. In 710 he landed in Spain with a small army, and, after some successes, returned to Africa laden with spoil. In the following year he dispatched his subordinate, Tarik, into Spain. The latter defeated and killed Roderick, tho Gothic king, and pushed his victorious arms as far as the rich city of Toledo, which he plun-dered. Musa, unwilling to allow so much glory and wealth to fall to the share of his lieutenant, put himself at the head of 18,000 men, with whom he landed at Algesiras in 712. He rapidly re-duced Seville, Beja, Merida, and marched upon Toledo, where he met Tarik, whom he caused to be beaten and thrown into prison. Tarik was, however, subsequently restored to his command by the caliph Al-Walid; whereupon he overran Spain in an easterly direction. Musa, on the other hand, pursued a northerly course, and took Salamanca and other considerable The two Arab generals quickly reduced cities. the whole of Spain, and were summoned to Syria by the caliph Al-Walid. Tarik obeyed instantly; but it was not until a second mes-senger had been despatched to Musa that he turned eastward. He arrived in Syria at the beginning of 715, accompanied by thousands of captives, among whom were four hundred of the Spanish nobility, and with a long train of the Spanish nobility, and with a long train of the Spanish nobility, and with a long train of camels laden with spoil. The caliph received him coldly; and upon his death, shortly after-wards, Suleyman, his successor, cast Musa into prison, and fined him 200,000 pieces of gold. One of his sons was also put to death, and his head brought to Musa by Suleyman himself, who asked him if he knew it; upon which the afflicted parent replied, "Cursed be he who has slain a better man than himself." Musa died in poverty, 717; B. 640.

MUSEUS, mu-se'-us, an ancient Greek poet, who is stated to have lived in the mystic ages of Greece, and to have been an Athenian. All his works are lost; but some quotations from them, given by Plato, and others, were inserted by Henry Estienne, or Stephens, in his "Philosophi-cal Poetry of the Ancients."—There was another of the same name, who wrote a poem called "Hero and Leander." He is supposed to have flourished in the 5th century of the Christian era. Muszus, John Charles Augustus, a German

MULEAUS, JOHN CHARGES AUGUSTUS, a GETTMEN writer, who studied theology at the University, with the intention of entering into holy orders. Relinquishing theology for general literature, he, in 1760, published a parody on Richardson's novel, entitled "Grandy on Richardson's novel, entit dison the Second," the success of which urged him to make renewed efforts as an author. It was not however, until after an interval of eighteen years that he gave to the public his "Physiognomical Travels," a satire upon Lavater. In the interim he had supported himself by teaching at the gymnasium of Weimar. His fame was secured by this last In the interim he had supported weimar. his lame was secured by this lab production; and he thereupon proceeded to collect and write his "Volksmärchen der Deutschen," or "Popular Legends of Germany," which were a series of charming narratives gathered from the peasantry, and dressed up in a simple and beautiful style. His other works were a collection of novelettes and tales for children, and a number of satirical sketches entitled "Freund Heins Erscheinungen," or "Death's Advent," in which Musæus treated of the many human undertakings cut short by the summons of that inevitable visitor. Some of his posthumous sketches were collected by his physician and antiquary, who, in 1684, was chosen secretary to the Royal Society. He edited "Geta Britannicus," which is the life of Geta, by Capitolinus, and a number of medical works. B. 1657; D. at Exeter, 1721.

Mussonenesca, Peter van, moosi-saene(r)k, an eminent Dutch natural philosopher and mathematician, who, with Gravesande, first introduced the Newtonian philosophy into Holland. He became professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at his native place; and was a member of the Royal Society of London and of the Academy of Sciences at Paris. His "Course of Natural and Experimental Philosophy" is a valuable work, and has been translated into English by Colson. He also wrote, in Latin, treatises on the Magnet, Capillary Attraction, Cohesion, and Meteorology. B. at Leyden, 1692; D. at the same place, 1761.

B. at Leggen, 1022, D. at the same place, 1701.

Mussay, Alfred de, mood-sai, an eminent modern French poot, playwright, and novelist, After completing his education at the college of Henry IV, where his fellow-pupil and intimate friend was the duke of Orleans, son of intimate friend was the duke of Oricans, son of Louis Philippe, he essayed the most diverse studies. The law, medicine, finance, painting, were in turn engaged in, in turn abandoned. In 1830 he put forth a small volume of poetry, entitled "Tales of Spain and Italy." The sucentitled "Tales of Spain and Italy." The suc-cess which the work obtained was quite un-deserved—in a moral point of view, at loust; but this early favour encouraged its author to proceed, and to achieve better things. A celebrity at 23, the young poet made a jour-ney to Italy with George Sand, under the mane of confidential secretary. Retween the years 1836-40, he produced several works, more releas characterized burn affectation of Byronic or less characterized by an affectation of Byronic misanthropy and disgust of things mundane. Two or three collections of poems and a num-ber of plays succeeded, the best of which last, however, were not adapted for the stage. At the revolution of 1848, he lost his post of librarian to the ministry of the luterior, but re-gained it after the establishment of the empire, with the additional appointment of reader to the empress. During his last years he gave himself up to play and even grosser pleasures. His last volume of verse was published in 1850. and showed a premature decay of the author's powers: he was nevertheless elected a member of the French Academy in 1852. At his death, he left some poems and a drama uncompleted.

Mustapha I., mus-ta-fa, sultan of Turkey, succeeded his brother Ahmed I. in 1617; in the Janissaries, and thrown into prison. He was afterwards released and replaced upon the throne, but again deposed by the Janissaries, and deposed by the Janissaries, and strangled in 1623.

and strangled in 1923.

MUSTAPEA II., son of Mahomet IV., succeeded Ahmed II., his unole, in 1895. He defeated the Austrians at Temnewar, and made war, with success, against the Venetians, Poles, and Russians. Fortene at length turning against him, he was forced to make peace. He was deposed by his subjects, and died in 1703.

MUSTAPEA III., the son of Ahmed III., ascended the throne in 1757. He was a weak prince, and, by trusting to his favourites, greatly exhausted the public treasury. His prother Abdul Ahmed succeeded him. p. 1774.

Als postnumous sketches were consected by mis pupil Augustus von Kotzebue, and-published in 1791, with the title, "Some Traits of the Life of prince, and, by trusting to his favourites, the good Museus." Musses were no less with the ground the great of the Life of prince, and, by trusting to his favourites, and acquivating as a writer than kindly and generous as a man. p. at Jena, 1735, p. 1737. Museum 1878. Museum 18

Baïraktar, pasha of Rudshuk, collected an army and marched upon Constantinople, demanding that the deposed Selim should be given up to hin; but Selim had been already strangled, and his dead body was brought to Baïraktar, who thereupon deposed Mustapha IV., and placed his brother Mahmoud upon the throne (see Mahmoud II.) by whom Mustapha was put to death in 1808.

Musurus, Constantine, musu-rus, a Turkish diplomatist, the representative of an ancient Cretan family of high rank. After serving his country in various diplomatic missions to Athens and Vienna, he was sent as ambassador to London in 1855, and since that time has continued to represent Turkey at the court of

St. James's. n. at Constantinople, 1807.
MTTIUS, Calius, mu'-shi-us, first named Cordus, and afterwards Scevola, an illustrious Roman, who distinguished himself when Porsenna besieged Rome, 507 B.C. Mutius entered the camp of Porsenna to assassinate him, and, by mistake, stabled one of his attendants. Being seized and brought before Porsenna, he said that he was one of 300 who had engaged, by oath, to slay him; and added, "This hand, which has missed its purpose, ought to suffer."
On saying this, he thrust it into the coals which were burning on the altar, and suffered it to be consumed. Porsenna, struck with this intrepolity, made peace with the Romans. The name of Scavola, or left-handed, was given as a mark of distinction to Mutius and his family.

MYLNE, Robert, milm, an eminent architect and civil engineer, who built old Blackfriars Bridge, taken down 1864, and erected Sir Christopher Wren's monument in St. Paul's Cathedral, to which establishment he acted as surura, to which establishmen he acted as surveyor. B. at Edinburgh, 1734; D. 1811.

Myrox, mi-ron, a celebrated sculptor of ancient Greece, whose praises were frequently sung by both the Greek and Roman poets. He sung by both the Greek and Roman pures. Are excelled in earving animals. He was the modeller of the Discobolus or Quoit-thrower, an ancient marble copy of which is in the British Museum. He flourished in the 5th century s.c.

MYTENS, Daniel, mi-tens, a Dutch painter, who went to England, and became the best portrait-painter at the court of James I. He popurar painter pas me court of sames 1. Prince Rupert, and the dwarf, Sir Jeffrey Hudson. When Vandyck became popular, Mytens retired to the Hague. E. in Holland, 1590; D. about 1680.

Nabis, nai'-bis, tyrant of Sparta, whom Philip, king of Macedon, appointed governor of Argos He was guilty of the greatest cruelties, and had a statue, carved to resemble his wife, which, by a scattle, carved to resemble his wife, which, by springs, would embrace any one that touched it, and then pierce the victim through the bod, with spikes. This machine Nabis devised as with spikes. This machine Nabia devised as-means of extorting money from his people; and when any one refused, he threatened to intro-duce him to his wife. He was slain no. 1920. NABONASSA, aci-bo-nidi-ser, king of Babylon He is celebrated by the famous epoch which bears his name, and which commenced in the year 747 no. He is supposed to be the same with Baladam, the father of Merodach, men-tioned is Scripture. Relegand between 748 and tioned in Scripture. Reigned between 748 and bylon, united with Astyages against Assyria, which empire they conquered, and having divided it between them, founded two kingdoms, that of the Medes under Astyages, and that of the Chaldeans under Nabopolassar, B.C. 621-05.

NABOPOLASSAB, na'-bo-po-las'-1 w, king of Ba-

NADIR SHAM, ma'dir-she, called also Tamasp ouli Khan, king of Persia, and a famous onqueror, was son of a maker of sheepskin oats, who belonged to the race of Afshar, a furkish tribe, which had attached itself to the king of Persia. Nadir, after he had become great, was fond of alluding to his mean origin; and when one of his sons, who was about to marry a princess of the royal family of Delhi, marry a princess of the royal family of Dellin, rea requested to name his ancestors for seven generations, Nadir replied, "Tell them that you he grandson of the sword, and so on, till they are a descent of sevent, instead of seven enerations." From his earliest youth ha disand the state of t escape, returned to his harvecodinity, and sub-sequently entered the service of the governor of Khorassan, who appointed him to command an army sent against the Tartars. Nadir gained a complete victory with an inferior force, and took the Tartar general prisoner. The governor at irst treated him with great distinction; but becoming jealous of his aspiring spirit, refixed him a grade in the army he had promised him, and when Nadir complained of this breach of faith, caused him to be bastinadeed. Exaperated at this dishonourable treatment, Nadir became the leader of a band of robbers. perame the leader of a cand of robbers. With this troop he rose to great power. In 1727 he joined Tamasp, son of the monarch of Persia, who had been pushed from the throne by the Affghan conquerors of Persia. His first act was to kill Futteh Ali, the commander of the Persian forces; after which he took the supreme command. In the same year, he drove the Afghans out of Mushed. After several great victories, he took Ispahan, and put to death Ashraft, the Affighan king. He next took the name of Tamasp Kouli, or "the slave of Tamasp," and was also emobled with the title of Khan. He was likewise granted the four inest provinces of the kinedom. But this did not to kill Futteh Ali, the commander of the Perprovinces of the kingdom. But this did not satisfy his ambitious nature, and upon the first opportunity he deposed Tamasp, whose son, an infant eight months old, he proclaimed king, at the same time constituting himself regent. In 1735, he gained the battle of Erivan, in which the Turks lost 50,000 men. The infant monarch died in the same year; upon which Nadir called a great council of the kingdom, at which more than a hundred thousand persons are said to have attended, by whom he was acknowledged king. With the view of destroying the Afighans sing. With the view of destroying the Aughans as an independent power, he invaded the province of Candahar, and in 1738 the city of that name fell into his power. In the following set me marched into Hindostan, and after defeating the Mogul troops, entered Delhi, where he so-quited immense riches. After his return to Persia, he turned his arms against the king of Bakhara who are accomplished to what! Notice Bokhara who was compelled to submit. Nadir next marched Mong both banks of the Oxus, as far as the Caspian, which territory he conquered, and put its monarch to death in 1740. He had thus secured peace for Persia, whose dominions were extended in every direction. But his last years were characterised by cruel tyranny, which mental artist, who received instructions from excited universal hatred against him; and at Raffaelle, and decorated the Vatican with groups excited universal hatred against him; and at length a conspiracy of some of the highest officers of his court was formed, and he was omeers of his court was formed, and he was assassinated in 1747. B. in Khorassan, 1888.

Nevius, Oneius, ne'-vi-us, a Latin poet, who served in the first Punic war, upon which he wrote an epie poem. He likewise produced several comedies, one of which was so displassical comedies, one of which was so displassical comedies, one of which was so displassical to the company of the co ing to Metellus, the consul, that he expelled him from Rome. Nævius retired to Utica, where he died about 204 B.C. Some fragments of his are extant.

Nævius, a famous augur in the reign of Tar-guin, of whom it is related, that, in order to convince the king and the Romans of his supernatural power, he cut a stone with a razor, and thus turned the ridicule of the populace into admiration. Cicero, however, who had himself been an augur, treats this miraculous event as a mere fistion. NABL, Johann August, nal, an eminent Prussian sculptor, who executed the colossal statue t the tanagrave Frederick, which stands in 'rederick's Square, Berlin. In 1755 he was appointed professor of the Academy of Arts at Cassel. B. at Berlin, 1710; D. at Cassel, 1781.

NARHIMOV, Nicolnevitch, rak-ke-mof, a Russian poet, who received his education at the university of Moscow; after which he entered university of Moscow; after which he entered the army, but soon quitted it, and devoted him-self to literature. Possessed of considerable wealth, he retired to his estates, where he occupied himself with the composition of his "Fables" and a large number of prose satirical pieces. His satire in verse, entitled "The peaking Monkey," was written in derision of the French subsequently to the invasion of Russia by Napoleon I. This production is pronounced to be not inferior to the writings of

Voltaire. B. at Kharkov, 1782; D. 1814. Naldi, Sebastiano, nal-de, a famous Italian buffo singer, who went to London early in the nineteenth century, and obtained great éclat. He was accidentally killed at Paris in 1819, by the explosion of an apparatus which had been invented for cooking by steam. This person, who possessed a marvellous power of facial contortion, has been consigned to immortality by

Byron, in the line-

"Watch each distortion of a Naldi's face," which occurs in the "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers."

Nalson, John, nall-son, an English divine, who, after having gone through the usual course of a university education at Cambridge, obtained on a investing contaction at camprings, obtained the living of Doddington, and a prebend in Ely cathedral. He was the author of "An Imperial Collection of the Affairs of State, from the Scotch Rebellion to the Murder of Charles the First," and also wrote an account of the trial of that monarch. B. 1638; D. 1688.

NANI, John Baptist, nd.-ne, a Venetian historian, who in 1641 was admitted to the College of Senators, and sent ambassador to France. He returned to Venice in 1648, having obtained from Louis XIII. considerable succours for carrying on the war against the Turks. In 1654he was sent as ambassador to Germany, where he rendered great services to the republic. He continued to serve his country en many great occasions, and was appointed procurator of St. Mark.

of birds, plants, fruits, &c. B. 1487; D. 1564.

Nantruil, Robert, nan'te(τ)-c, a celebrated

French miniature-painter and engraver, who drew the portrait of Louis XIV., in crayons, with such elegance, that the king appointed him designer and engraver to his cabinet. His engrav-signer and engraver or ins calonier. This engrav-ings of portraits are highly valued. B. at Rheims, 1630; D. at Paris, 1678. Napier, John, Baron, of Merchiston, na-peer', a celebrated Scotch mathematician, who, towards the close of the 16th century, discovered the method of superseding long and laborious arithmetical operations by the invention of his logarithmic tables, which, says Laplace, in his "Systême du Monde," "by reducing to a few days the labour of many months, doubles, as it were, the life of an astronomer, besides freeing him from the errors and disgust inseparable from long calculations." The principles of this great invention were detailed by Napier in two works, published in the years 1614 and 1619. Besides other works, he wrote a curious pamphlet, entitled "Secret Inventions profitable and necessary in these Days for the Delence of the Island," the original of which is kept in the archbishop of Canterbury's library at Lambeth. B. at Merchiston Castle, near Edunburgh, 1550; D. at the same place, 1617. Napier, William John, Lord, a British naval officer, entered the service at the age of 16, and was a midshipman on board the Defiance at the battle of Trafalgar. In 1833 he was appointed superintendent of the interests of the British nation in China, and arrived at Macao in July, 1834. Obstacles were placed in the way of his mission by the governor of Canton, who was desirous of obtaining delay until he could communicate with Pekin; but Lord Napier was not inclined to delay the superintendence of those interests which he had been appointed to proteet, and sailed up the Canton river, and arrived at the Canton factory in his boat on July 24. The next morning the governor issued orders that he should return to Macao, which were replied to by a positive refusal: commercial transactions between the British and Chinese merchants were prohibited by the governor; on which Lord Napier sent the Imogovernor; our when hord rapper sent the Imagene and Andromache frigates up the Bogue river, which were fired at by the forts, and the Chinese forts were demolished by the ships' guns. This was on the 17th of Soptember; and the ships, owing to calms, being obliged to anchor for several days, Lord Napier became seriously indisposed on the 14th, and the men-of-war were ordered to "move out of the river," in order to avoid further interruption to com-merce, and Lord Napier returned to Macao, where, on the 11th of October, 1834, he expired. - at Kinsale, 1787.

Napier, Sir Charles John, a modern British admiral, who, in 1799, at the age of 13, entered the navy, and served in the North Sea on board the Martin sloop of war. In the following year he went to the Mediterranean station, where he took part in several minor actions, and had his thigh broken by a shot during an engagement between the Recruit brig and a French corvette. In 1809 he displayed signal bravery at the taking of Martinique, being the first to scale the walls. For this and some subsequent services he was John, nan-ne, a celebrated orna- volunteer on laud in Spain. In 1811 he stormed

MOZART, WOLFGANG GOTTLIEB.

NASH, RICHARD (called Beau Nash).

NAPOLEON I

NAPOLEON III

expedition, which sailed for the East in 1798. He took Alexandria, gained over Mourad Bey the battle of the Pyramids, and, although the fleet had been destroyed by Nelson at Aboukir, neet had been destroyed by Nelson at Adonkir, the French were soon masters of Egypt. Sud-denly quitting his army, he set sail for France, and, after narrowly missing capture by the English cruisers, appeared unexpoctedly at Paris at the end of the year 1799, at a time when the administration of the Directory had grown irksome to the nation. Bonaparte at grown insome to the hation. Bonaparte at ground insome became the head of a very powerful party, and, aided by Siéyès, his brother Lucien, and General Leeler, he overthrew the Directory on the famous 18th Brumaire, year 8 of the Rebuille (9th Nov. 1789), caused himself to be named first consul, having for his colleagues Cambacérès and Lebrun, also dignified by the title of consul, but mere tools to his ambition. In 1800 he placed himself at the head of the army of Italy, crossed the Alps, and gained the battle of Marengo. General Moreau having about the same time beaten the Austrians at Hohenlinden, the peace of Luneville was signed with Austria in 1801, and in the following year the treaty of Amiens with England concluded the second war of the French Revolution. In the same year Bonaparte was proclaimed consul for life: in 1804 he became emperor of the French. Pope Pius VII. went to Paris to assist at his coronation, but Napoleon placed the crown upon coronation, but Napoleon placed the crown upon his own head, and also crowned his consert Josephne. Six months later he creeted the Casalpune Republic into a kingdom, and crowned himself king of Italy at Milan. About this time he committed an act which forms one of the foules blots upon his memory. Some time previously, his life had been threatened by a plot, in which the Bourbon princes were implicated. Resolved to make an example of one of them he caused the vome due of the vome due to the cause of the vome due of the caused the vome due of the cause of the vome due of the cause of the vome due to the cause of the vome due to the cause of the vome due to the vome due to the cause of the vome due to the cause of the vome due to the vome of them, he caused the young duc d'Enghien to be seized, and after a disgraceful mockery of a rial, the innocent prince was shot at Vincennes.

Napoleon gloried in this odious act. "I had never personally offended these Bourbons," he never personally offended these Mouroons," he wrote; "a great nation had chosen me to govern it, almost all Europe had sanctioned its choice. My blood, after all, was not ditchwater, and it was time to place it on a par with theirs." In 1805, the destruction of the combined French and Spanish fleets by Nelson, and Trailagar completely overtured his long-cherished scheme for the invasion of England. In the same year, England, Russia, and Austria entered into a new coalition against France, and the battle of Austrilitz was fought, and termi-nated so successfully for France, that a large accession of territory was gained, and what she already possessed was confirmed to her by the treaty of Presburg. In 1806 he placed his bro-ther Joseph upon the throne of Naples, Louither Joseph upon the throne of Naples, Loun becoming king of Holland: the victory of Jeni was obtained towards the close of the sam year. Russia was next attacked, and the cm peror Alexander was compelled to sign the peace of Tilst. Jerome Bonaparte was the placed upon the throne of Westphalia. In 180 Napoleon made his unprincipled invasion (Spain, sending Murat and 80,000 men thittee Charles IV. Aug his family writer! to Peace Charles IV. Aug his family wri Spain, sending three and so, occurred to French territory, where they virtually became prisoner of Napoleon, who placed his brother Josep upon the throne of Spain, and gave Naples t Murat. But Spain resisted the French invader and the defeat and capitulation of Dupont laylen, and Junot at Cinfra, were the com-nencement of the declining fortunes of the self-created emperor. Notwithstanding the greatest efforts of Soult, Massena, and Snehet, pain, backed by the brilliant genius of Wel-ington and his fine army, repulsed the French. ington and his fine army, repulsed the French.

His struggle cost France, in five years (1808818), more than 400,000 men. Meanwhile, osephine, having given no heir to the empire, as divorced by Napoleon, in 1808, and Maria oulas, daughtier of his old enemy the emperor Austria, became empress of the French. The uit of this union was a son, who, at his birth, was styled king of Rome. (See Marousor II.)
bout this time, Fouché, Bernadotte, and sergal others, heard to withdray from him. Deceall others, began to withdraw from him; Pope ins VII., who had been stripped of his temoral dominions, excommunicated him; finally, e prohibitive system of continental commerce, hich he had organized with the view of ruining England, produced, instead, universal poverty and misery throughout France. Having drained rance of her treasure, he next planued a foridable invasion of Russia, which was destined rob his country of the flower of her youth and manhood. In 1812 he assembled the largest my that was ever led by a European general, id at the head of 500,000 men, passed into ussia, whose army he defeated in several enagements. In September he entered Moscow, hich had been previously evacuated and almost otally consumed. After spending a month here, in expectation of overtures of peace from st. Petersburg, the frost and snow of a Russian wintercompelled him to commence a precipitate etreat. Harassed by innumerable foes, the rench army, deprived of everything, perished etreat. the snow, or found a grave in the ley waters of the Beresina. Hastily returning to France, the emperor succeeded in creating another rmy, and opened the campaign in Germany, with the victories of Lutzen, Bautzen, and Dresden; but Russia, Prussia, Austria, and Sweden were now in arms against him; and at reipsic, where, in three days, the French lost upwards of 50,000 men, his power received a death-stroke. The allies entered France, and death-stroke. The alms entered France, min Mapoleon, finding his army disorganized, and most of his ministers and generals disaffected towards him, abdicated the throne of France, at Fontainelbeau, on the 4th of April, 1814. The Bourbons were re-established in France, The Sourbons were re-established in France, Appleon accepting the island of Elba as his retreat. In less than a year he again appeared in France, and by the time he had reached the capital, the whole army had declared for himmediately, the coalition that had detriroued him was renewed; but Napoleon, at the head of his haven and archivaction transit to the three coals of the had a compared to the state of num was renewed; our Napoleon, at the head of his brave and enthusiastic troops, took the initiative, and defeated the Prussians at Ligny, on the 16th of June; but upon the 18th he suffered defeat at the hands of Wellington, on the memorable field of Waterloo. Four days afterwards, he abdicated in favour of his son. wards, no addicated in layour of ins Son. His new reign lasted for, and is generally styled, the Hundred Days. 'He set out for Rochefort, with the intention, it is stated, of escaping to America; but not being able to evade the Eng-lish cruisers, he surrendered to Captain Mait-land of the Relaxanday and delimed the besland, of the Bellerophon, and claimed the hos-pitality of England. The English cabinet, blanky of England. The England context, however, declared him to be the prisoner of the allies, and he was dispatched to the island prison of St. Helena. For nearly six years did this extraordinary man pine in bondage, the bitterness of which was augmented by the petty tyranny of Sir Hudson Lowe, the gover-nor of the place. The opinions held relative to Napoleon are as numerous and conflicting as his many biographers. A work like the present, however, is not the place for drawing in-ferences and philosophising: we have only to deal with facts; and must refer those who wish to know the estimates that have been made of this extraordinary man's character to the many works upon the subject. For a philosophic but sternly adverse view of Napoleon's nature, the writings of Emerson may be consulted; for panegyries, the reader may turn to almost any Franch writer on the subject. At St. Helen he dictated his Memoirs, which were afterwards published with many interpolations, as the "Memoirs of Las Gasas," and again as the "Memoirs edited by Count Montholon." He died and was interred at St. Helena, in 1821, but his remains were brought to France, on board of a ship of war, by Prince de Joinville, in 1840. They now rest under the dome of the Invalides, at Paris, in the midst of the ashes of many who were his commanious in victory. 8. writings of Emerson may be consulted; for Invalues, at Paris, in the industry of the abuse of many who were his companions in victory, B. at Ajaccio, Corsica, 1768. Napoleon II., Francis Charles Joseph Na-poleon, duke of Reichstadt, was the son of Napoleon I, and Maria Louisa, and at his birth was styled king of Rome. After the abdication of his father, an attempt was made to proclaim him emperor, but it was soon abandoned. When the allies entered Paris, his mother fled with him to her father's court. He was brought up by his grandfather Francis, emperor of Austria, by whom he was created duke of Reichstade in 1818, and appointed colonel of a regi-ment of cavalry. This young prince, who was apparently born to such a brilliant destiny, died shortly after he had attained his twenty-first birthday, of consumption. There were ugly ru-mours current, that his grandfather deliberately planned his destruction, and employed the gay duke of Salerno to entice him into every form of dissipation, by which his strength was undermined, and his premature death brought about.

B. at Paris, 1811, D. 1832.

NAPOLEON III., Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, emperor of the French, was the third son of Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, king of Holland, and of Hortense Beauharnais, daughter Holland, and of Hortense Beauharnais, daughter of the empress Josephine. Queen Hortense's three sons were decreed to be successors to the French throne in the event of the death of the king of Home. (See the preceding.) The eldest, Napoleon Charles, who was brought up by hap poleon, died in 1807; the second, Napoleon Lawis, died in his brother's arms at Forli, in 1801. In the history of modern times, there are few examples of men who have passed through greater changes of life than the survivor of the queen of Holland's sons, "Born in a palace," says one of his latest biographers, "for a while the heir-presumptive of the greatest monarch in Europe, he was afterwards thrown headlong from that high estate, and condemned, in obscurity and exile, to associate with the sons of tradesmen and farmers; to be to-day the companion of cardinals, popes, and kings, and to sleep to-morrow on a heap of stones in the street, in the disguise of a livery servant; to be hidden during eight days, in a burning fever, in hateful form of despotism: to have his brother die in his arms; to wander about in sickness, hunger, and dejection; to take refuge in common taverns; to tread the soil of France as an outlaw, at the peril of his life; to organize re-peated insurrections; to be in prison: to lie in peated insurrections; to be in prison; to he in a dungeon; to write treatises on Pauperism and the Sugar Question; to mingle with the haughty nobles of England at a tournament; to be the president of a republic; to take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded him to make himself emperor: to be the ally, on terms of equality. of the strongest government in Europe; and, in conjunction with Great Britain, to subdue the armies of Russia, and to compel the czar to sue for peace in that capital which, forty-two years before, on that selfsame day, he had en-tered as a conqueror." After the fall of Napoleon I., Queen Hortense went into exile with her two sons, residing in succession at Geneva, at Aix in Savoy, in the duchy of Baden, in Bavaria, and finally repairing to the château of Arenenberg, on the banks of Lake Con-tance, where she resided until her death. There Queen Hortense, or duchess of St. Leu, as she was now called, employed herself with the education of cauce, employed nersest with the studention to her sons. Louis Napoleon displayed the greatest eagerness for study, and distinguished himself by his ardent pursuit of all knowledge bearing upon military matters. After Louis Philippe assemded the throne, Louis Napoleon and his brother asked to be allowed to return to France, but were refused. The brothers next took part one were retused. The proviners next took part in a revolution in Italy; but, their party being defeated by the papal troops, they became fugitives, the elder dying of fever at Forli, and Louis Napoleon only escaping the Austrians by assuming the disguise of a footman. He reached Cannes in safety, and subsequently entered Paris with his mother, who asked permission to re-main there a short time, as her son was ill. The king refusing to accede to this request, Hortense and her son repaired to London. In a short time they returned to Switzerland. Until the year 1836, he occupied himself with military studies, and with composing political and milisearces, and with composing pointed and min-tary treatises; but, in the last-named year, considering that he had only to present himself to the French soldiery in order to shake their allegiance towards Louis Philippe, he went to Strasburg, where, after an absurd attempt at carrying out his project, he was made prisoner, and placed in a dungeon of the garrison. Louis Philippe regarded the affair with contempt, and shipped off the pretender to the United States. He remained but a short time in America, for, hearing that his mother was dangerously ill, he repaired to Arenenberg, in defiance of the French government. The duchess of St. Leu died two months after his arrival. The French government demanded of Switzerland the extradition of the refugee; and, to prevent a war, Louis Napoleon quitted the country for England in 1837 In London he lived the life of a fa-shionable lounger, and wrote his "Napoleonie Ideas," but, in 1840, he resolved to make another attempt at subverting the government of Louis Philippe. A steamer was hired, a number of rminpe. A steamer was nred, a number of disaffected Frenchmen were collected, and Louis Napoleon, provided with a tame eagle, and a carved and gilded effey of the same emblem of imperialism, steamed from Margate and landed at Boulogne. He presented himself to the offiintended during eight caps, in a our mig rever, in imperiment, and a state of the olds of the midst of Austrian troops, who were assegn at Boulogne. He presented himself to the olds to take his life; to fight as a common soldier cers, displayed his wooden earle, and set free and a rebed, in the hope of overthrowing a the living litel; but the soldiers would not listen to the representative of Napoleonism, the In 1862, an expedition was sent to Mexico, and eagle refused to soar aloft, and perched upon the in 1864, Maximilian of Austria was made emtop of the Napoleon column. The baffled conperor of that country, but Napoleon III. withspirators next attempted to regain their steamer, Louis himself being captured, after shooting a French soldier who had tried to oppose his retreat. For this absurd affair he was arraigned before the Chamber of Peers, found guilty of high treason, condemned to perpetual imprisonment, and conducted to the castle of Ham, whence he contrived to effect his escape in the disguise of a workman, in 1846. He reached London in safety, and continued to reside there till 1848, at which time the Republic permitted his return to France with the other members of the Bonaparte family. Subsequently, along with Larmar-tine, Cavaignac, and Ledru Rollin, he put himself in nomination for election as president of the rein hommanon for election as pressure of the re-public, and was voted to that office by an over-whelming majority. At the close of the year 1351, he destroyed the last vestige of French liberty, by the celebrated cost of êtat, and con-trived to secure his re-election, not for four, but for ten years. He was now emperor of France in all things but the name, and this latter title was given to him, after an appeal to universal suffrage, in December, 1852. In the following year he married Eugénie, countess de Teba, who bore him a son. He became the ally of England in the struggle against Russia, which ter-minated with the fall of Sebastopol and the treaty of Paris in 1856. In the same year he paid a visit to Queen Victoria in London. Two attempts against his life were made; the first by Pianori in 1855, and the second by Felice Orsini, Fierri, and others, at the beginning of 1858. Upon this latter occasion, Napoleon III. demanded of the British government that the English laws affecting political exiles should be altered. This attempt at dictation and interaftered. This attempt at dictation and inter-ference created a strong feeling against the French emperor, which was heightened by the insults of several colonels of the French army. The Palmerston administration, by appearing disposed to yield, became highly unpopular, and was compelled to quit office. The emperor formed an alliance offensive and defensive with the king of Sardinia; and, at the beginning of the year 1839, Napoleon treated the Austrian ambassador with marked coolness, which clearly foreshadowed what was speedily to occur. Francis Joseph declared war against the king of Sardinia and his French ally. French army crossed the Alps into Italy, and the emperor, leaving the empress as regent during his absence, hastened to put himself at its head. The Austrians lost battle after battle, till at length they were compelled to evacuate Lombardy. Terms of peace were concluded even more suddenly than war had been declared. At Villafranca the two emperors met: Lom-bardy was given up to France, and by France bordy was given in to France, and by France ceded to Sardinia: Austria remaining in possession of Venetia and the celebrated Quadrilateral. The reward of these services was the cession of Savoy and Nice to France—a transaction which called forth much severe animadaction which called forth much severe animadaction which called forth much severe animadaction. version, as did also Napoleon's persistence iu version, as the also response to maintain the keeping a French army in Rome to maintain the pope's temporal power. The emperor having declared himself an adherent of the principles of received management addressed the principles of free trade, Mr. Cobben was charged by the British government to effect between France and Eng-land a treaty of commerce, which was according concluded, and came fully into operation in 186 757 peror of that country, but Napoleon III. with-drew his troops in 1867, and Maximilian was taken by the Mexican liberals, and shot. In 1866, the French troops which had occupied Rome since 1819 were withdrawn, in virtue of a treaty with the Italian government. B. at Paris, 1809.

Napoleon

MARBONNE, Lara Louis, Count de, nar-bon', a French officer, who was minister of war under Louis XVI., and a lieutenant of France at the outbreak of the Revolution. He endeavoured to defend the constitutional monarchy, was outlawed in 1792 by the Mountain Party, and was saved from the guillotine by the exertions of Madame de Staël and Dr. Bollman (by whom Lafayette was afterwards rescued from the clutches of the sanguinary Jacobins), and retired to England and then to Switzerland. After the ascendancy of Bonaparte, Count de Narbonne returned to France, was employed in a military capacity by Napoleon, who held him in high esteem, appointed him one of his aides-decamp, and had him near his person in nearly ail the wars down to the Russian campaign of 1812. In 1813 he was appointed ambassador to Vienna, where he died at the close of the same year, B. 1755.

NARBOROUGH, Sir John, nar'-bur-o, an Eng-lish naval commander, who served with dis-tinction in the first Dutch war, and was present at the desperate naval engagement between the English fleet and the Dutch under De Ruyter and Van Tromp, in 1666. Three years after wards, he went out on a voyage of discovery to the South Seas, and explored the Strait of Maseellau. In 1672 he again fought against the Dutch at the battle of Solebay, and was for his bravery knighted, and created rear-admiral. In the following year he compelled the Bey of Tripoli to give up all British captives, and to pay 80,000 dollars for the injuries British shipping had received at the hands of Tripoline pirates. He cannonaded the city of Algiers in 1677, and captured five Algerian frigates. In 1670 he became commissioner of the navy, 1670 which post he held during the reigns of Charles II. and James II. B. in Norfolk, early in the 17th century; D. about 1688.

NARDI, Jacopo, nar'-de, an Italian historian, who wrote the history of the republic of Florence, which forms a continuation to the work of Machiavelli. He likewise acted as ambassador from Florence to Venice in 1527. B. at Florence, 1476; p. about the middle of the 16th century. NARES, James, nairs, doctor of music, was one of the children in the royal chapel, and one of the centeren in the royal enaper, and studied under Dr. Pepusch, after which he be-came organist of York cathedral. In 1755 he succeeded Dr. Green as organist and composer to the king; and was created doctor of music at Cambridge. In 1757 he was appointed master Cambridge. of the choristers of his majesty's chanel. Dr. Nares published, besides his compositions of sacred music, several books of instructions, and "The Royal Pastoral," a dramatic ode. B. 1715; D. 1783.

NARES, Robert, son of the preceding, was a learned theologian and critic. He studied at Westminster School and Christ-church College, Oxford; was successively rector of Sharn-ford, Leicestershire, preacher of Lincoln's Inn, assistant librarian of the British Museum, Mares Wash church principles. He also, besides his contriclurch principles. He also, besides his contributions to this periodical, wrote the following works: "A Chronological View of the Probhecies relating to the Christian Church;" Elbaments of Ortheepy," "A Glossary of Words, Phrasss, &c., in the Works of English Authors in the time of Elizabeth, &c. p. 1829.

NARS, Edward, nephew of Dr. James Nares, and son of Sir George Nares, a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, was educated at Westminster School and Christ-church, Orford, where, in 1788, he was elected at fellow of Merton College. He took orders in 1789, and was appointed by his college to the cure of St. Peter's in the East, London, In 1797, hemarried Peter's in the East, London. In 1797, he married a daughter of George, fourth duke of Mari-borough, when he resigned his fellowship; and in 1798 was presented to the rectory of Biddenden in Kent, became Bampton lecturer in 1805. and in 1814 professor of modern history at Oxford. He was the author of a variety of works on religious subjects, such as "An Attempt to show how far the Philosophical Notion of a Plurality of Worlds is consistent with the Language of Scripture;" "A View of the Evi-dences of Christianity," being his Bampton lec-tures; several series of Sermons, &c.; and in other walks of literature, a novel entitled, "Thinks I to Myself;" "Memoirs of the Life and Administration of Lord Burghley." "Elements of General History," &c. B. 1702; D. 1841.

NARSES, nar'-sees, king of Persia, succeeded his father Varennes in 296. He conquered Mesopotamia and Armenia. Maximianus Galerius being sent against him by Diocletian, was repulsed; but afterwards defeated the Persians, whom he laid under tribute. p. 303.

NARSES, a Persian cunuch, who became one of the greatest generals of his time, commanded of the greates generals of the same, commanded the Roman army against the Goths, whom he defeated in battle in 552, their king, Totila, being slain. As exarch of Italy, he governed with wisdom and discretion, and established order throughout the country. D. at Rome, at a very advanced age, 568.

NARVAEZ, Pamphila de, nar-va-aith, a native of Valladolid, in Spain, who went to America of valuadond, in Spain, who went to America soon after its discovery, and was appointed commander of the expedition against Cortes by Diego de Volsaquez, governor of Cuba. He sailed, in 1528, with 400 men, intending to establish a colony in Florida; discovered the bay of Ponsacola; and, having maruhed into the country, was never heard of more.

NARVARZ, Don Ramon, duke of Valencia, a modern Spanish marshal and statesman, who, after the return of Ferdinand VII., entered the army as cadet of the Walloon Guards. In 1822, army as cadet of the Walloon Guards. In 1822, when the royal party attempted to destroy the constitutional régime, he ranged himself upon the liberal side, and, by his gallantry, contributed to suppress the émente. Shortly aftenwards, while serving against the guerillas of Catalonia, he was severely wounded, upon which he retired to his native city, and lived in retirement during ten years. In 1835 he attained the grade of brigadier, under Esparteno. Charact for surges the national conference of the servine statement upone to the statement of the servine statement was engaged during several years in improving constitutional "égime, he ranged himself upon the street architecture of the metropolis, chiefly the liberal side, and, by his gallantry, contri-t the west end of the town. The terraces in buted to suppress the énsute. Shortly aftern the Regent's Park, Buckingham Palace (since wards, while serving against the guerillas of already, Carlton House Torrace, and the imcatalonia, he was severely wouwded, upon provements in the garden of 8t. James's Park, which he retired to his rative ety, and lived in vertice of his subsequent works in retirement during ten years. In 1835 he at- London. That whimsteal piece of architecture tained the grade of brigadic, under Espartero. known as the Pavilion, at Brighton, was also Charged to pursue the notorious Carlist general from his designs. B. in London, 1752; D. at Gomez, L'io had hitherto beffied all attempts at prebendary of Lincoln, archdeacon of Stafford, capture, Narvaez came up with him near Arcos, canon of Lichfield, and rector of Allhallows, and completely routed him. This was the London. In conjunction with Mr. Beloe, Dr. turning point of his fortunes, and he became Narcas established the "British Critic," as it is one of the most popular men in Spain. He now rary review devoted to the support of high abandoned the constitutional party, became a devoted where the constitutional party, became a abandoned the constitutional party, became a royalist, and aspired to a rivalry with Espar-tero. In 1844 he was nominated president of the council, and was created duke of Valencia, but his ministry was overthrown in 1846. In the Paris, but was recalled after an absence of six months to take the place once more of president of the council, which post he retained, with the exception of one brief interval, till 1951. It was exception of one brief interval, thi 1851. It was not until September, 1863, that Narvaez again came into power, but his tenure of office was but brief, O'Donnell succeeding him in 1865, to give place once more to his rival in 1866. From this time Narraez retained office until his death on May 28, 1868, just six months after the decease of O'Donnell. B. in Andalusia, 1800.

NASH, Thomas, näsh, an early English dra-matist and satirist, was educated at St. John's matist and satirist, was concated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and afterwards resided in London. He was the author of three dramas, still extant, his principal performance being his "Pierce Penniless," which was published in 1599. He was more famous, however, for his sourrilous pamphlets against Gabriel Harvey and a puritan divine named Penry, who wrote under the cognomen of "Martin Marprelate."

B. about 1564; D. 1601.

NASE, Richard, commonly known as "Beau Nash," received his education at Carmarthen, whence he was sent to Jesus College, Oxford where he remained but a short time. He afterwards obtained an ensign's commission, but soon left the army, and entered at the Middle Temple, but never followed the law as a pro-fession. A love of pleasure and gaming drew him, in 1704, to Bath, which place of amuse-ment became, through his tact and good management, a centre of fashionable resort. He was chosen master of the ceremonies, and was so much esteemed as to be called King of Bath; but commonly he was termed, from the peculiarity and foppery of his dress, Beau Nash. Though much given to gambling, he was very liberal and research and r liberal, and numerous instances are recorded of his benevolence; and to his efforts, combined with those of two other gentlemen, the foundation of Bath Hospital is due. B. at Swansea, Glamorganshire, 1674; D. at Bath, 1761.

NASH, John, an eminent English architect, who studied under Sir Robert Taylor, and about 1792 established himself in London, He soon acquired a high position, and was employed to design mansions for the nobility, both in Eng-land and Ireland. In 1812 he designed plans for the new Marylebone, afterwards Regent's Park, and for Regent-street. In 1820 he improved the Opera-house, and designed the Haymarket Theatre. As surveyor to the Crown estates, he was engaged during several years in improving

NASMYTH, Alexander, nai-smithe, a Scotch landscape-painter, who repaired to London at an early age, and became pupil of Allan Ramsay. He subsequently studied at Rome; after which he went to Edinburgh, and established himself there as a portrait-painter. Ultimately, he abandoned portrait for landscape-painting, and produced some of the best works in that class of which the British school can boast. He had, likewise, a considerable share in suggesting the architectural improvements that were made in Edinburgh. His portrait of Robert Burns is stated to be the only authentic likeness of the poet. в. at Edinburgh, 1758; в. 1840. Nasмутн, Peter, a Scotch landscape-painter, son of the preceding, who repaired to London son of the preceding, who repaired to London in his 20th year, and soon became popular enough to gain the title of the English Hobbinia. All his pictures were painted with the left hand, he having early in life lost the use of Nisht through an accident. B. 1786; D. 1831.

Nishtth, James, a practical engineer, and inventor of the steam hammer, steam piledriver, and other great mechanical contrivances, was brother of the preceding, and from his earliest youth displayed a love for any kind of mechanical employment. After studying at the High School and university of Edinburgh, where he rendered great assistance to the pro-fessors by his skill as a mechanical draughtsman and practical mechanic, he, in 1820, set out for London, where he succeeded in obtaining employment in the engineering firm of Maudsley and Co. He remained there until 1832, at which time he returned to Edinburgh, and during two years worked incessantly in the construction of tools and machinery, with the intention of establishing himself in business, In 1834 he took a floor in an old cotton-mill at Manchester, and soon obtained so many orders for machinery, that his shop became too small for his operations. He then removed to Patricroft, near Manchester, and in a few years, so rapidly had his business increased, was in a position to build the well-known Bridgewater foundry, from which establishment emanated those fine mechanical inventions which have made the name of Nasmyth familiar wherever modern mechanism is required. In 1856 he retired from business, having resolved to devote his remaining years to artistic and scientific pursuits. B. at Edinburgh, 1808.

NASSAU, Adolphus of. (See ADOLPHUS,

Nassau, Adolp Count of Nassau.

NASSAU, Maurice of. (See Maurice of Nassau.) NASSAU, William of. (See ORANGE, William of.) NASSAU, William of. (See William III. of England.)

NATRAN, Isaac, or Mordecai, nät-than, a rabbi, was the first who compiled a Hebrew Concordance, which he began in 1438 and finished in 1448. It was printed at Venice in 1523, and afterwards at Bale in 1632. Isaac, or Mordecai, na'-than, a

NAUDE Or NAUDEUS, Gabriel, no-dai, NAUDE OR NAUDEUS, Gabriel, no-dal, peror, having ordered a number of prisoners to learned Prench writer, who after studying at the beheaded, burbarously included Navarre with Paris, went to Padua, where he took his the rest; but the governor, as is asserted by degrees in physic. He next became libraries some, possessim more humanity, passed him to Cartinal de Barpin at Rome, and, on his death, was patronized Cardinal Barbier and the was strangled in that citadel.

NAYIER, James, nai'-ler, an enthusiast, who, in the propose a caldiarith a Parliamentary straw. made librarian to Cardinal Mazarin, who con-ferred on him several benefices. Christina, ferred on him several benefices. Christina, which he quitted in 1649, and in 1681 became a queen of Sweden, invited him to her court, but disciple of George Fox, the Quaker. In 1869

he soon returned. Naude's principal works are, "An Apology for Great Men who have been accused of Magie," "Advice for Forming a Library," "Addition to the Life of Louis XI.." "Bibliographia Politica," and a commentary upon the Rosierucians. B. at Paris, 1600; D.

at Abbeville, 1653.

NAVARETE, Domingo Fernandez, nav'-ar-ait, a learned Spanish triar, w' o went as missionary to the Philippine Islands in 1617. He afterwards set out for China, where he laboured during many years, but was at last imprisoned by the Chinese authorities. He contrived, however, to effect his escape to Macao, after which ever, to ence his escape to anacto, after which he returned to Europe. He was employed to preach against the Jesuits before the pope. His "History of the Moral and Political Condition of China" was published at Madrid, at the end of the 17th century; but the latter volumes of the work were suppressed by the volumes of the work were suppressed by the Inquisition. The first volume has since be-come a scarce book. B. about 1610; D. 1659. Navarete, Juan Hernandez (called El Mudo, from being deaf and dumb from his infancy), a celebrated Spanish painter, who was surnamed the Titian of Spain. In 1568 he was appointed painter to the king ; but having introduced a cat and a dog into some of his religious pic-tures, Philip caused him to enter into a contract never to employ such accessories again. B. at Logrono, Custile, 1524; D. at Mudrid, 1577.

NAVARRE, Peter of, na-var, a famous Spanish soldier-seaman in the 16th century, was a Biscayan of low extraction. He commenced his career as a sailor, after which he became a menial servant in the family of the cardinal of He next took service among the racon. Florentine troops; but subsequently returned Florentine troops; jut subsequently returned no hoard ship, where he displayed great skill and courage. The reputation he acquired recommended him to Gonsalvo de Corlova, who was engaged in the war of Naples. To the taking of that city Neuarre principally contributed, by the construction of a mine. The emits of the construction of a mine. The emits of the construction of a mine. peror recompensed him for this service by reating him count of Alvito, in that kingdom, and henceforth he styled himself Count Pedro de Navarre. Being appointed to the command of a naval expedition against the Moors, he took Oran, Tripoli, and other places. On his return to Italy, he served in the army, and was taken prisoner by the French at the battle of Ravenna, in 1512. After remaining in France two years, in hopes of being ransomed, he en-tered into the French service, and signalized tereo mo the remon service, and signalized himself on several occasions; but being sent to the succour of Genoa, in 1522, he was taken prisoner by the imperialists, and conducted to Xaples, where he was confincd in the castle of L'Gluf. After the treaty of Madrid, he regained L'Gut. After the treaty of Madrid, he regained his libert, and, in 1828, served under Lautree at the siege of Naples; but, in the unfortunate retreat of that general at Aversa, he was again entured, and sent a second time to L'Gut. The Prince of Orange, by command of the emperor, having ordered a number of prisoners to be beheaded, burbarously included Navarre with the convergence as is sessated by

NAYLER, James, nai'-ler, an enthusiast, who, in 1641, became a soldier in the Parliamentary army, mitted great extravagances at Exeter, which bringing him into trouble with the Parliament, bringing nim into trouble with the Parliament, he was ordered to be whipped, to be branded in the forehead, and to have his tongue boxed through with a red-hot iron. This sentence was carried out at London and Bristol, after which Nayler was committed to Bridewell in the former city, where he remained till 1660, and did not long survive his liberation. D. 1616.

Neele

NEAD, Daniel, neele, an English Nonconformist divine. After receiving his education at Merchant Taylors school, he went to Utrecht an auternami rayjors senooi, ne went to utreent and Leyden. In 1760 he was chosen pastor of an Independent congregation in Aldersgate Street, and afterwards in Jewin Street. Ho wrote, "A History of New England," "A History of the Puritans," and some sermons. His "History of the Puritans," is a faithful and esteemed work, and has been laid under contribution by other serve bischolm of the actual contribution is of the actual contribution by other serve bischolm of the actual contribution is of the actual contribution and the actual contribution in the actual contribution and the actual contribution actual contribution and the actual contribution actual contribution actual contribution and the actual contribution actu bution by almost every historian of the civil war and commonwealth. B. 1678; D. 1743.

NEANDER, Christopher Frederick, nai-an'dair, a German sacred poet, who, after complet-ing his studies at the university of Halle, acted for a short time as tutor in a family, but was in 1750 appointed pastor of a small country congregation, whence he removed to a more lucrative charge at Gränzhof. In 1784 he was appointed clerical superintendent of the duchies of Courland and Semgallen; but continued to reside at Granzhof, where he supported a widowed sister and her family. His songs are esteemed as among the best specimens of devotional poetry in the German language. B. at Ekau, Courland, 1724; D. 1803.

NEANDER, John Augustus William, an eminent German historian, who was born of Jewish parents, but, while pursuing his studies at the Johanneum College at Hamburg, became a con-vert to the Christian faith, and assumed the name of Neauder, signifying, in Greek, "a new He subsequently studied at the universities of Halle, Göttingen, and Heidelberg. His great attainments led to his being appointed professor of theology at the last-named estab-lishment, and in 1812 he was chosen to fill the fishment, and in 1812 he was chosen to fill the chair of theology in the university of Derlin, where he remained until his death. In the same year he published "The Emperor Julian and his Times," which established his reputation as a theological historian. His greatest work, entitled "Universal History of the Christian Religion and Church," was given to the world between the years 1825-1845, and was comprised in two volumes. In 1835 he produced a relutation of Strauss "Dife of Jesus," in a work entitled "The Life of Jesus in its Historical Relations." Both the works above mentioned, as well as soone smaller ones, have mentioned, as well as some smaller ones, have been translated into English. B. at Göttingen, 1789; D. 1850.

Nearchus, ne-ar'-kus, one of the captains of Alexander the Great, who ordered him to lead the fleet he had built upon the Hydaspes to the Persian Gulf. Nearchus wrote an account of this voyage, the original of which is lost; but this voyage, the original of which is lost; but Arrian, Strabo, and Pliny have preserved a great portion of it: Arrian's extract is, however, the fullest and most correct. Subsequently to the death of Alexander, Nearchus, became governor of Lycia and Pamphylia. Flourished in the fourth century B.C.

NECKER, Judgues, nek-er, a celebrated French financier, who went to Paris at an early age, 760

he began to pretend to be inspired, and com- obtained employment in a banking-house, in which he rose to a partnership, and, in thirteen years, having made a number of successful speculations, retired from business with a large fortune. He commenced his political career by becoming a member of the Council career by Hundred at Geneva. He was afterwards ap-pointed minister of the republic of Geneva at Paris, where, by degrees, he rose to the highest employments. In 1765 he was appointed syndic of the French East India Company; in 1775 director of the royal treasury; and was twice director-general of the finances of France. But the Revolution, which all his efforts were unable to check, obliged him to retire to Switzerland. Necker wrote three volumes on the finances of France, a book on the influence of religious opinions, and other works. He married the daughter of a Protestant clergyman, a lady of considerable literary ability and great benevolence of heart, who had in early life captivated the historian Gibbon, by whom he had a daughter, Madame de Stael Holstein, the wife of the Swedish ambassador; and who afterwards became celebrated by the name of Madame de Stael. B. at Geneva, 1732; D. 1804.

NEEDHAM, Marchmont, need'-ham, an English writer, who, during the civil war, distinguished himself by his political pamphlets, first against the Parliament, and afterwards against the King; so that, at the Restoration, he obtained his pardon with difficulty. E. 1620; p. 1678. NEEDHAM, John Tuberville, a learned English naturalist, who was educated at Douay, where he entered into orders as a Roman Catholic he entered into orders as a noman cannot divine. His superiors appointed him professor of philosophy in the English college at Li-bon. He afterwards became travelling tutor to a nobleman; and, on his return, settled in nobleman; and, on his return, settled in London, where he was chosen fellow of the Royal Society. He wrote observations inserted in Buffon's "Natural History;" also, "New Enquiries upon Microscopical Discoveries," the "Generation of Organic Bodies," and "Obsertions on Spallanzani's Microscopical Dis-coveries." B.in London, 1713; D. at Brussels, 1781. NEEF, or NEEFS, Peter the Elder, neef, was a manter of Antwerp, celebrated for his profound mastery of perspective, which was so great that he could exhibit in the small space of a cabinet picture the most vast and magnificent Gothic edifice, so as to induce a belief in the reality and immensity of the space the building represented. All the accessories he touched in with marvellous skill, and to relieve the monotony of vellous skill, and to relieve the monozony of uniform lines and tints, he introduced a variety of objects to diversify the scene; and by a judicious management of chiaroscuro, gave a lively effect to what, in most hands, would have had a tame and unmeaning air. He was, however, unsuccessful with figures, which were sometimes executed for him by the elder Teniers and other distinguished artists, a circumstance which adds to the value of his pictures. B. at Antwerp, 1570; D. 1651.—His son, Peter Neef the Younger, painted similar subjects to his father, but in a much inferior style.

MERLE, Henry, neel, a poet and miscella-neous writer, the son of an engraver in the Strand, London, was brought up to the pro-fession of an attorney, which he followed with credit and reputation during his brief career. He was a man of an amiable and mild disposition, and of strong literary tastes, the results of which were a volume of "Poems," "Romance of History," "Dramatic Scenes," and "Literary Remains." His intense application to intellectual labour induced a fit of insanity, and the committed suicide Feb. 7, 1823. n. 1799.

NELEDINSKY-MELEPEKY, Yuri, sele-edins/fe

me-letz'-ke, a celebrated Russian ballad-writer, who at first served in the army, and fought against the Turks during the campaigns which took place between the years 1770 and 1774. He was afterwards attached to the mission dispatched to Constantinople, and was selected by the emperor Paul, in 1797, to accompany him in his journey to White Russia. In 1809 the Czar bestowed upon him the order of St. Alexander Nevski, having previously rewarded his services by the grant of an estate, with several hundred serfs, together with the order of St. Anne. As a song-writer, he was graceful and charming to an extent far beyond anything that had hitherto been attained by the authors of his country. In his writings, the utmost simplicity was com-bined with tenderness and warmth of feeling. B. 1751; D. 1829. Nelson, Robert, nel'-son, a pious and learned writer, received his education at St. Paul's School, and at Trinity College, Cambridge. He was strongly attached to James II., and continued to communicate with the nonjurors till the death of Bishop Lloyd, when he returned to the established church. He lived on terms of intimacy with Archbishop Tillotson, and was the zealous promoter of all works of charity. une zeanous promoter of all works of charity. He was the author of many popular books; among which are, "The Practice of True Devotion," "A Companion to the Festivals and Festis of the Church of England," "The Whole Duty of a Christian," "The Great Duty of Prequenting the Christian Sacrifice," &c. "1656; D. 1714.

1656; D. 1714.

NELSON, Samuel, one of the most ardent of the "Irish patriots" in 1790; and who edited the "Northern Star," which exercised great influence. On the rebellion being put down in 1796, he was sent to prison, where he remained till set at liberty by French interference, at the treaty of Amiens in 1802. He then retired to America, where it is believed he died of the plague. B. 1759.

Nelson, Horatio, Viscount, the greatest of British admirals, was the fourth son of the Rev. Mr. Nelson, rector of Burnham Thorpe, in Norfolk. He received his education at the school of North Walsham; but at the age of 12 years was taken to sea by his maternal uncle, Captain Suckling, of the Raisonnable man-of-war. Soon afterwards, the ship was put out of commission, and young Nelson went on board a West Indiaman. Southey, speaking of this step taken by Nelson, says, "He returned a good practical seaman, but with a hatred of the king's service, and a saying then common among sailors, 'ait the most honour, forward the better man.'" To remove this objection, he was again placed with his uncle, who had obtained the command of the Triumph. In 1773, a voyage was undertaken for the discovery of a north-west passage, under the command of Commodore Phipps and Captain Lutwidge. The young seaman entered on board the ship commanded by the latter, and distinguished himself in that perilous voyage by his skill, courage, and promptitude. Soon after his return, he was as second of the Lowestoffe frigate, in which he ernised against the Americans. In 1779 he obtained the rank of post-captain, and was ap-pointed to the command of the Hinckinbroke, with which he sailed to the West Indies, and while there essentially contributed to the taking of Fort San Juan, in the Gulf of Mexico. His health having given way, he returned home, and after going through a course of Bath waters, was again employed in the Albemarle, and was subsequently appointed to the Boreas, having under his orders the duke of Clarence, afterwards William IV, who was captain of the Pegasus. While thus engaged, he marked the Pegasis. While thus engaged, he marifed the daughter of William Woodward, Esq., judge of he island of Nevis, and the widow of Dr. Nesit, a physician of that island, by whom he never had any issue. On the breaking out of the war with France, he was nominated to the Agamemnon, of 64 gaus, on board of which he sailed to the Mediterranean, and was present with Lord Hood before Toulon. He also engaged and captured the Cu-Ira at the siege of Bastia, where he served in the batteries with a body of seamen, as he afterwards did at Calvi; and while employed before that place he lost an eye. He was so active on that station, that his name became dreaded throughout the Mediterranean. Under Admiral Hotham he was in the action with the French fleet. March 15, 1795. In 1796 he was appointed commodore on board he Minerca, in which frigate he captured Lo Sabine, a 40-gun ship; but was compelled to aban-don the prize upon the approach of the Spanish fleet. He immediately steered with the intelligence to Sir John Jervis, off Cape St. Vincent. He had scarcely communicated the news, and shifted his flag on board the Captain, of 74 guns, when the enemy hove in sight. A close action ensued, which terminated in a complete victory on the side of the British, who were inferior in numbers. On this occasion, Commodore Nelson attacked the Santissima Trinidada, of 136 guns, and afterwards boarded and took the San Nicolas, of 80 guns; whence he proceeded in the same manner to the San Josef, of 112 guns, both of which surrendered to him. For his share in this glorious victory, the commodore was ho-noured with the order of the Bath, and having soon afterwards hoisted his flag as rear-admiral of the Blue, he was appointed to command the in-shore squadron at the blockade of Cadiz. He there made a bold but unsuccessful attempt to bombard the city, heading his men himself. The next exploit in which he was engaged was an attempt to take possession of Teneriffe, which design also failed, with the loss of Captain Bowen, of the Terpsichore. In this expedition, Admiral Nelson lost his right aym by a cannonshot, and was carried off to the boat by his stepson, Captain Nesbit, on his back. He now returned to England for the recovery of his health, and received the grant of a pension of £1000 a year. The memorial which he was required to present upon this occasion stated that he had been four times in action with the enemy's fleets (in three with boats, upon cutting-out expeditions); had assisted at the taking of had assisted in capturing seven sail of the line, six frigates, four corvettes, and cleven privateers; had taken fifty merchant-vessels; had and promptitude. Soon meet his column he had appointed to the Scalorer, in which he sailed to been in action a hundred and twenty times in the Late Indies. He passed his examination for loss his right eye and arm, besides receiving literanart in 1777, and received his commission other severe wounds. The brave admiral, however, and not rong remain mactive; he rejoined Earl St. Vincent, who, on receiving intelligence of the sailing of Bonaparte from Toulon, de-tached Sir Horatio Nelson with a squadron in pursuit of him. After exploring the coast of Italy, this indefatigable commander steered for Alexandria, where, to his great mortification, not a French ship was to be seen. He then sailed to Sicily, and having taken in fresh supplies and obtained more correct information, returned to Alexandria, which he descried August 1, 1793, at noon. The enemy, consisting of one first-rate, three second-rates, nine seventyfours, and four frigates, were discovered in Aboukir Bay, lying at anchor in line of battle, supported by strong batteries on an island, and strengthened by gun-boats. Notwithstanding this formidable appearance, the british admiral made the signal for battle, and, by a masterly and bold mancauve, gave directions for part of his fleet to steer inside the enemy, who were was hot and bloody : several of the French ships was not and broady severa of the French ships were soon dismasted, and at last the admirps ship, L'Orient, of 120 guns, took fire, and blew up. The firing, however, continued; but, by the dam of day, only two sail of the line were discovered with their colours flying, all the rest having struck: these two cut their cables and stood out to sea. On the British admiral honours were deservedly poured: he was created Baron Nelson of the Nile, received the thanks of Parliament, together with the captains engaged, and was granted a pension of £3000 per annum. The king of Naples created him duke of Bronto. and gave him an estate. Soon after this he sailed for Sicily, and thence to Naples, where he quelled a rebellion, and restored the king. Having performed these and other important services, Lord Nelson returned to England, and was received with enthusiastic joy. A confederacy of the northern powers having alarmed the government, he was employed to dissolve it. A fleet was fitted out, the command of which was given to Admiral Sir Hyde Parker, Lord Nelson being appointed second in command. On their arrival off the Cattegat, and being refused a passage, Lord Nelson offered to conduct an attack on the Danish force, which was stationed to oppose an entrance. This being accepted, he shifted his flag to the Elephant, and passed the Sound with little loss. On the 2nd of April the action commenced, at 10 o'clock, and, after a sharp conflict, seventeen sail of the Danes were sunk, burnt, or taken, A negotiation was then entered into between Nelson and the crown prince, in consequence of which the admiral went ashore, and an armis-tice was settled. He next obtained from the Swedish government an order for taking off the embargo on English ships in the Baltie. Having accomplished these great objects, he returned to England, and was created a viscount. In 1801 he bombarded the enemy's flotilla which had been collected at Boulogne to assist in Napoleon's projected invasion of England. After experiencing some loss, Nelson withdrew, without producing any material effect upon the without promeing any material energ upon age enemy. Peace having been suddenly concluded, Nelson retired to his seat at Mertan, in Surrey; but, hostilities recommending, he sailed for the Mediterranean, and in March, 1803, took the command of that station on board the Victory.

Notwithstanding all his vigilance, the French

erer, did not long remain inactive; he rejoined that of Spain, which had for that purpose Earl St. Vincent, who, on receiving intelligence emerged from Cadiz; on learning which, Nelson of the sailing of Bonaparte from Toulon, dependent of the West Indies with a greatly tached Sir Horatio Nelson with a squadron in inferior force. The combined fleets, however, struck with terror, returned without effecting anything, and, after a partial action with Sir Robert Calder, off Ferrol, re-entered Cadiz. Admiral Nelson returned to England; but soon set sail to join his fleet off Cadiz. The French under Admiral Villeneuve, and the Spaniards under Gravina, ventured out with a number of troops on board, October 19, 1805, and on the 21st, about noon, an action began off Cape Trafalgar. The combined French and Spanish fleets consisted of 33 sail of the line and 7 frigates: the English squadron mustered 27 sail of the line and 4 frigates. It was while bearing ime and 4 frigates. It was while hearing down upon the enemy that Nelson hoisted his celebrated signal, "England expects every man to do his duty." Lord Nelson ordered his ship, the Victory, to be carried alongside his old antagonist, the Santissima Trinidada, where he was exposed to a severe fire of musketry; and not having taken the precaution to cover his coat, which was decorated with his star and other badges of distinction, he became an object of aim to the riflemen placed purposely in the tops of the Bucentuur, which lay on his quarter. During the heat of the action, a bullet from one of these wounded him just below the shoulder, of which he died in about three hours. After the fall of Lord Nelson, the command devolved on Admiral Collingwood, by whose bravery and skill the victory was completed. Eighteen French and Spanish ships were taken; eleven escaped into Cadiz, six of which were reduced escaped into Gaozi, six of which were reduced to mere wreeks; four French line-of-battle ships which hauled off in the action, were afterwards taken by Sir Richard Strachan. "The death of Nelson," says Souther, "was felt in England as public calamity; yeth cannot be said to have fallen prematurely, whose work was done, nor mostly hat his learnest which did a control of the control with did act." ought be to be lamented, who died so full of honours and at the height of human fame." His brother, the Rev. William Nelson, was created an earl, with a grant of 4,6000 per annum. Lord Nelson's sisters were voted each £10,000, with £100,000 for the purchase of an estate. The remains of Lord Nelson were inestate. terred in St. Paul's Cathedral, January 9, 1806. B. in Norfolk, 1758.

NEMESIANUS, Marcus Aurelius Olympius, neme'-si-ai-nus, a Latin poet, who is supposed to have perished in the proscriptions that disgraced the commencement of the reign of Diocletian. He wrote a poem on hunting and four eclogues: these were included in the collection edited by Stern in 1832. Flourished during the latter half of the 3rd century.

NEMESTUS, ne-me'-si-us, bishop of Emesa, in Syria, and a learned philosopher. He wrote a work entitled "The Nature of Man," from some passages in which it has been asserted that he was acquainted with the circulation of the blood. The work is certainly a very remarkable one, and is fully commented upon by Sprengel, in his "History of Medicine," and also by Freind and Haller. An English translation of it was made by George Wither, London, 1636. Flourished

NEMOURS, Dukes of, ne-moor. Nemours is an old French title of nobility, derived from the town of that name. A branch of the Armagnae family first bore the title. The last of that line, fleet escaped from Toulon, and was joined by Louis d'Armagnac, duke of Nemours, was killed while fichting against the S₁... at the battle of Cerignola, in Apulia, 1503. Gaston de Foix next bore the title. The duchy was subsequently granted by Francis I, to his uncle, Philip of Savoy. The last male descendant in this line was Philip, dute of Nemours.

Nemours

NENDURS, Mary de Longuerille, Duchess of, was the daughter of the dute de Longuerille, and the wife of the last-named dute de Memours.

Her "Memories of the Cart of Erman during the

Her "Memoirs of the Court of France during the Minority of Louis XIV." are written with spirit and fidelity. B. 1625; p. 1707. NEMOURS, Louis Charles Philippe Raphael,

Duke of, second and eldest surviving son of the Date of, second and enders surviving son of the late Louis Philippe, king of the French. In 1831 he was elected king of the Belgians; but, by the advice of his father, refused the dignity. In 1836 he went to Algeria, as adjutant-general of the French army, and commanded a brigade of infantry at the siege of Constantine. In 1840 he espoused Victoria Augusta Antoinette, duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and, in the following year, signalized himself in the decisive campaign against Abd-el-Kader. During the revolution of 1848, he accompanied his brother's widow, the duchess of Orleans, to the Chamber of Deputies. After the year 1848 he principally resided at Claremont. B. at Paris, 1814.

NENNIUS, a British historian, and abbot of Bangor in the 7th century, who when the monks of his house were massacred, fled for refuge to Chester. He composed a work en-titled "Historia Britonum," which is printed in "Bohn's Antiquarian Library."

NEOPTOLEMUS, ne-op-tol'-e-mus, king of Epi-

rus. (See PYRRHUS.)

NEOPTOLEMUS usurped the throne of Epirus MEGPTOLEMUS usurped the among of Espates during the minority of Pyrrhus the Great, but was subsequently put to death by that king after he recovered his kingdom.

NEOFFOLEMYS, a relation of Alexander the Great, was the first to scale the walls of Gaza, when that city was taken by Alexander, after whose death he received Armenia as his province, and made war against Eumenes. He was supported by Craterus; but an engagement with Eumenes proved fatal to his cause. Cra-terus was killed and Neoptolemus mortally wounded by Eumenes, B.O. 321.

NEPOS, Cornelius, ne-pos, a Latin historian in the reign of Augustus, whose patronage he enjoyed. Of all his works there remains only his "Lives of Illustrious Greek Generals." This work contains short biographies of twenty Greek and two Carthaginian generals; the best sketches being those of Alcibiades, Epaminondas, and Pomponius Atticus. He appears to have also written the lives of the Roman generals; but the work has been lost.

NEPOS, Flavius Julius, emperor of the West, was a native of Dalmatia, and having married a nicce of Lee I., that monarch gave him the Western empire. Nepos marched to Rome to Western empire. Nepos marched to Rome to secure his throne, after which he fixed the sea of government at Ravenna, but was obliged to quit that city by his general, Orestes. He then retirred to Dalmatia, where he was assassing the by two officers of his court, in 480. NER, act. "re, Phillip of, founder of the congregation of the order of the Orndory in Italy, which was sanctioned by Pop Gregory XIII. 1875, and soon afterwards found members in 1876, and soon afterwards found members in 28 man and after countries. Their members in 28 man and 28 m

France and other countries. Their engagements were to relieve poorstrangers and pilgrims, at the to administer to the sick, and to visit prisoners. B. at Florence, 1515; D. 1595.

Nesselrode

NERI, Pompeio, an eminent Italian political economist. He became professor of law at Pisa, and was employed in state affairs by the duke Loraine and the empress Maria Theresa. He founded the Academy of Botany at Florence. He founced the Academy of Botany at Florence He wrote "Observations on the Ancient and Present State of the Tuscan Nobility," on the "Imposts of Milan," on the "Legal Value of Com, and the difficulty of fising and maintaining the same." n. at Florence, 1707; n. 1776. NERO, Claudius Cessar, ae-70, sixth Roman emperor, was the son of Cains Domitins by Astrophysic Academy of the Romanuse Mental Company of the Comments of the State of Agripping, daughter of Germanicus. He was adopted by Claudius in A.D. 50, and four years after succeeded him on the throne. The commencement of his reign was characterized by justice and clemency. He was liberal, affable, polished, complaisant, and his heart seemed to possess every excellent quality. But all this was mere exterior, and a mask, which hid the most depraved mind that ever disgraced a human being. He soon laid aside his artificial virtues, released himself from the control of his mother, whom he caused to be assassinated, and vindicated the unnatural act to the senate on a pretence that Agrippina had plotted against him. Many of the courtiers shared the same fate, and Rome was deluged with the blood of her best citi-Rome was deluged with the blood of her best etti-cens. Nero plunged himself as deepin debauchery as in cruelly. He turned actor, pretended to excel in music, and even appeared as a compe-titor in wrestling at the Olympic games, where, though he was defeated, the assessors and spectators, out of flattery, adjudged him the victor.

After putting to death his wife Octavia, he sacrificed his tutor Seneca, Lucan the poet, Petronius, and many other eminent persons. He also commenced a dreadful persecution of the Christians, and is stated by Suctonius and Dion to have caused Rome to be set on fire in several places, and during the conflagration to have beheld the scene from a high tower, where he amused himself by singing to his lyre. It is certain that he attributed the fire to the Chriscertain that he attributed the fire to the Chris-tians, numbers of whom were torn to pieces by dogs, and burned during the night in the gardens of his palace. His cruelties, extrava-gance, and debauchery, at length roused the public reschment. Piso formed a conspiracy against the tyrant, but it was discovered and defeated. That of Galba, however, proved more successful, and Nero, being abundaned by his flatterers, was, at his own request, put to death by one of the officers of his court. B. at Antium, is Lettum 4, 32 c. p. 1, 85

by other allegates of the court is a kindled, in Latitum, a.D. 37; D. a.D. 88.

NERYA, Marcus Coccius, ner'va, thirteenth Roman emperor, succeeded Domitian, a.D. 96.
He became the favourite of the Romans by his mildness and generosity, but would not allow any statues to be erected to his honour. At the close of life, his soldiers mutinied against him; on which occasion he behaved with calmness

a short career in the army, he became attached to the diplomatic service, and was employed in Nessir-Khan

a minor capacity at Berlin, the Hague, and other places. In 1807 he went to Paris as ambassador from Russia; and on the accession of Alexander I., was appointed his secretary. In 1814 he accompanied Alexander to Paris, where he signed the famous treaty of the Quadruple alliance. He also acted as the plenipo-tentiary of Russia at the congress of Vienna, and went with his master to the congresses of Aix-la-Chapelle, Troppan, Laybach, and Verona During the subsequent half-century, he continued to serve the successive sovereigns of Russia as minister of foreign affairs. B. at Lisbon, 1780.

NESSIR KHAN, nes'-sir-kan, sovereign of Beloochistan, who accompanied Nadir Shah into India and signalized himself there by his bravery and wisdom. He dethroned and killed his brother Hadji Mohammed, khan of the Beloochees, who had rendered himself odious to his subjects, re-established order in the country, encouraged trade and commerce, and caused himself to become so powerful as to proclaim their to be-come so powerful as to proclaim the indepen-dence of his kingdom, which he extended by many conquests. D. 1795. NESTOR, Res'-tor, the father of Russian history, was a monk at Kiev. His principal work is a was a mone as elev. His principal work is a Chronicle, which dates from the year 862 to 1116, and is the source of the history of the Sclaves. It was published at St. Petersburg in 1767, by order of Peter the Great. Flourished at the close of the 11th and beginning of the 12th centuries.

NESTORIUS, nes-tor'-i-us, a bishop of Constantinople in the early part of the 5th century, under Theodosius II. He was a native of Syria, and was deposed from his bishopric for denying the doctrine of the Incarnation, or the two natures of Christ. His-opinions spread widely over the East, and still have followers there.

Neuhors, Theodore von, noo'-hof, called at one time "King of Corsica," was the son o Anthony, Baron von Neuhoff, who, marrying the daughter of a merchant, thereby incurred the displeasure of his relations, and was obliged to emigrate to France, where he entered the army. Theodore was for some time in the suite of the Baron von Gortz, the Swedish minister; but, when that statesman was executed at Stockholm, he entered the Spanish service, and rose to the rank of colonel. He soon afterwards married one of the queen's maids of honour, by whom he had a son, who became known in England as Colonel Frederick. After deserting his wife, whose jewels he carried off, Theodore von Neahoff went to Sweden, Holland, Italy, France, and England, travelling under different names and titles. In 1736 he engaged with several Corsican leaders, who promised to hail him king of Corsica, on the condition that he should procure aid for the islanders in their struggle against Genoa. Theodore thereupon set out for Tunis, whose Bey he induced to give him ten cannons, 4000 Bey he induced to give nim ten cannons, 2000 muskets, munitions of war, food, and 10,000 gold sequins. Thus provided, he set out from Tunis with a suite of sixteen persons, and landed upon the east coast of Corsica. Shortly afterwards, the Corsicans elected him their quitted the island to seek succour, which he declared had been promised him, but first ap-pointed deputies to manage affairs during his absence. He next travelled in Italy, France, and Holland. At Amsterdam he was imprisoned for debt, but found means to procure his release, as well as to fit out a frigate and three merchant vessels, with which he set sail for Corsica in 1733. The Genoese and French were now, however, almost masters of the island, and the "king" was afraid to disembark. Four years afterwards he again went to Corsica, but could not succeed in obtaining recognition from his former subjects. He subsequently repaired to London, where he was reduced to poverty, and became a prisoner in the King's Bench for debt. In 1756 Horace Walpole procured his release, Theodore registering his kingdom of Corsica for the benefit of his creditors. He died in

Nevile

for his tombstone, which was set up in St. Ann's. Soho. B. at Metz, about 1696. NEUKIBCH, Benjamin, noi'-keersh, a German lon's "Telemachus," and produced several other works. B. in Silesia, 1665; D. at Anspach, 1729

London in a state bordering upon destitution,

Horace Walpole wrote a singular epitaph

NEUKOMM, the Chevalier Sigismund, not'-kom, a modern German musical composer, was a relative of, and received his first instruction in music from, Michael Haydn, clder brother of the composer of "The Creation." After acquiring a high reputation in Germany and France, he visited England in 1829, and produced there his greatest works, the oratorios "David" and "Mount Sinai." His song of "The Sea" was at one time the most popular song of the day. In 1853, the Society for the Revival of Sacred Music in Scotland published "Twenty Psalms" composed by him, which are classed amongst the most simple and beautiful classed amongst the most supple and relative productions of their kind in existence. In 1851 he acted as one of the jury at the Great Exhi-bition. B. at Salzburg, 1778; D. 1858.

NEVERS, Philip Julien Mancini Mazarin, Duke de, ne-cair', was the nephew of the Cardinal Mazarin. He distinguished hinself as the atron of Pradon against Racine, which preluced sharp controversies among the wits. The duke wrote some somets on that occasion, and other poems of little merit. B. at Rome, and other poens of inten merit. B. at Roine, 1641; p. at Paris, 1707.

NEVILE, or NEYLE, Alexander, nev'-il, a poet, supposed to have been educated at Cumbridge, was one of the learned men whom Arcibridge, was one of the bishop Parker kept in his family, and to whom bishop Parker kepe in his fainity, and to whom he was secretary, in which office Parker's successor, Grindal, continued him, and to these prelates Nevile dedicated his Latin narrative of the Norfolk insurrection under Kett, which was accompanied by an account of Norwich, and a list of the Saxon and British kings, In 1587 he published the Cambridge verses on the death of Sir Philip Sidney, and projected a translation of Livy, which he did not execute. In his six-In his sixor lavy, which he did not execute. In his six-teenth year he paraphrased the "Œdipus" very successfully, and wrote a work entitled "Apo-'ogia ad Wallie procers," B. 1544; D. 1614.

NEVILE, or NEVIL, Thomas, dean of Canterbury, was an eminent benefactor to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he expended £5000 atterwards, the Corsteans elected him their Nevilla, or Nevill, Thomas, dean of Canter-king, and, during several months, he exercised bury, was an eminent benefactor to Trinity regal power, created an order of Knighthood, College, Cambridge, where he expended £5500 and put three persons to death. The state of in rebuilding the fine quadrangle which bears Genoa, however, declared him and his followers the name of Nevile's court. He was elected a traitors, and, in a short time, the Corsicans fellow of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, in 1570, grow the of their monarch. He thereupon was senior proctor of the university in 1680, became master of Magdalen College in 1582, elected fellow of Oriel College, and subsequently prebend of Ely and rector of Doddington-cum-Marsh in 1587, vice-chancellor of Cambridge in 1588, dean of Peterborough in 1590, master of Trinity College in 1593, and dean of Canterbury in 1597. He was concerned in various controversies of the period, and was sent by Arch-bishop Whitgift to Scotland to assure James of the loyalty and affection of the clergy. Beor the loyalty and anection of the ciergy. Be-sides his beneficence to Trinity College, he was also a liberal patron of Eastbridge hospital, Can-terbury; and in the cathedral of that city he was buried in what has since been called Nevil's chapel. B. at Canterbury; D. 1615.

NEWCASTLE, Duchess of, (See CAVENDISH.

Margaret.)

NEWCASTLE, Henry Polham Figures Pelham Clinton, Duke of, nu-kas'-el, a British states-man, eldest son of the fourth duke of Newcastle, who, after completing his education at the University of Oxford, was elected (as Lord Lincoln) representative of the southern division of Nottinghamshire in 1832. In 1831 he became a lord of the Treasury, and retained the appointment until April of the succeeding Between the years 1841 and 1846 he acted as chief commissioner of Woods and Forests, which post he vacated to assume the functions of chief secretary for Ireland. He lost his seat in the last-named year for supporting Sir Robert Peel in the repeal of the corn laws, was, however, returned shortly afterwards by the Falkirk burghs, and remained in the House of Commons until 1851, at which time he sucreeded to the dukedom of Newcastle, upon the death of his father. He became secretary of state for the Colonies in 1852, in the Aberdeen administration. Upon the separation of the War business from that of the Colonies, with which it had hitherto been joined, the duke accepted the duties of the former department: accepted the duties of the former department; but the mismanagement of the army during the first winter in the Crimea, led to his incurring much odium, before which he was compelled to resign office. Lord Panmure, his successor, stated, however, that the after and more successful armognametric amounting and more successful arrangements emanating from the War-office were inaugurated by the from the War-once were management of the duke himself. In 1859 he was appointed secretary for the Colonies, and in 1860 accompanied the Prince of Wales in his travels in Canada and in the United States, acquiring, by his judicious and affable bearing, great esby his judicious and analose bearing, great es-teem, both in Canada and in the United States. B. in London, 1811; D. 1864. NEWCOME, William, nw-kom, a learned English divine, who became successively bishop of Ossory and Waterford, and archbishop of Armagh. He published "The Harmony of the Gospels," "Letter to Dr. Priestley on the Duration of Our Lord's Ministry," "Observations on Our Lord's Conduct," an improved version of the twelve Minor Prophets, another of Ezekiel, "Review of the Chief Difficulties in the Gospel History relating to Our Lord's Resurrection, and other important works. D. 1729; D. 1800.

Newcomen, Thomas, nut-ko-men, a lock-smith of Dartmouth, who, about 1695, invented the engine which is called after his name, and which was the first in which; steam was employed as a motive power. That engine was perfected by Watt. (See Witt.)

NEWMAN, Rev. John Henry, D.D., nu'-man, a

NEWMAN, Eer. John Henry, D.D., nu'-man, a upon the respiration, temperature, and the modern English divine, who was educated at structure of the blood-globules in insects are of the University of Oxford, where, in 1822, he was the highest value, n. in Kent, 1802 D., 1854.

became vice-principal of Alban Hall. In 1833 he assumed a leading position in what was then termed the "Oxford movement;" and, in conjunction with Mesrs, Pusey, Keble, and others, commenced the publication of the "Tracts for the Times," which so affected the theological world, and in which an attempt was made to recede from the principles of the English Reformation, and to approach the doctrines of the Roman Catholic church. The last and 90th number was written by Dr. Newman himself: and, after its publication, the bishop of Oxford was called upon to put an end to the series. In 1845, Dr. Newman entered the communion of the Roman Catholic church. He has written many theological and other works, his last book of importance being his autobiography, "Apologia pro Vita Sua," 1864. B. 1801.
NEWMAN, Francis William, a modern English

writer, brother of the preceding, like whom he seceded from the Church of England, but upon seceded from the courted of Engands out apont totally opposite principles. It would be difficult to exactly define the peculiar theological views of Mr. Newman; but, by certain individuals, the term "sceptical" has been applied to them. After completing his education at Worcester College, Oxford, he was chosen fellow of Balliol in 1826, but resigned the office in 1830. During the three succeeding years, he travelled in the East, and, in 1834, became classical tutor in Bristol College, which he vacated in 1840, to assume the professorship of classics at Manchester New College. In 1846 he was nominated professor of the Latin language and literature in University College, London. As a philologist, he ranks as a highly accomplished and acute be ranks as a lighly accomplished and acute writer. In this department of knowledge, his most important works have been "A Gramma of the Berber Language," "The Odes of Hornec, translated into unrhymed metre," and the "lilad" of Homer. His peculiar and theelogical opinions have been expressed in his "Lectures on Political Economy," "The Crimes of the House of Hapsburg against its own Liege Subjects," "The Soul; its Sorrows and its Aspirations," "Phases of Faith," and a "History of the Hebrew Monarchy, from the Adtory of the Hebrew Monarchy, from the Ad-ministration of Samuel to the Babylonish Captivity." He likewise contributed a number of political and other articles to the Eclectic, Prospective, and Westminster reviews. Some elementary works also emanated from his pen; such as "Difficulties of Elementary Geo-metry," "An Introduction to Roman History," B. in London, 1805.

NEWPORT, George, nu'-port, a modern English comparative anatomist and physiologist, whose comparative announce and physiologist, whose earliest efforts at acquiring scientific knowledgo were made under the most disadvantageous cir-cumstances. He was at length enabled to become apprentice to a surgeon at Sandwich, in Kent, and subsequently concluded his medical education at the University of London. At a later period he produced a number of valuable memoirs, chiefly upon the insect tribes, which were read before the Royal Society, and pub-lished in the "Philosophical Transactions." In 1814 he was elected president of the Entomological Society; was twice awarded the medal of the Royal Society; and was fellow of the Linnean and Royal Societies. His researches

Newton, Thomas, au'-ton, an English divine of light and colours, which was followed by his and physician, was educated first at Oxford account of a new telescope invented by him, and and afterwards at Cambridge. He taught a other interesting papers. The second telescope school at Macclesfield, and practised physic; after which he obtained the living of Ilford, in atter which he origined the fiving of more, in Essex. He wrote "The History of the Sarzeens," "Approved Medicines and Cordial Receipts," "Directions for the Health of Magistrates and Students," "Herbal of the Bible," &c.

B. in Cheshire, 1543; D. 1607.

NEWTON, Sir Isaac, nut-ton, the greatest of English philosophers, was descended from an ancient family in Lincolnshire. Losing his father in his childhood, his care devolved on his mother, who gave him an excellent educahis mother, who gave him an excellent education, though she marned a second time. In 1654 he was sent to the Gruntham school, where, sayaBrewster, in his "Life" of the philosopher, he made little progress, until one day "the boy who was above him having given him a severe kick in the stomach, from which he suffered great pain, he laboured incessantly till he got above him in the school; and from that time continued to rise until he was the head boy." At the cree of 2 he promyad for Timity College. the age of 18 he removed to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he had the learned Mr. (afterwater Dr. J ISBUE DATION OF HIS EUROP. Under that able mathematician, Newton made rapid progress. After going through Euclid's Elements, the most difficult problems in which means, the most dimens problems in which were very easy and familiar to him, he pro-eeded to the study of Descartes' Geometry, with Oughtred's Clavis, and Kepler's Optics, on all of which he made marginal notes as he went along; and this always continued to be his method of study. It was in this early course that he invented the method of series and fluxions which he afterwards brought to perfection, though his claim to the discovery was unjustly contested by Leibnitz, who obtained a knowledge of it in 1676 from the author himself. At the age of 22, Mr. Newton took his degree of bachelor of arts; and, about the same time, applied himself to the grinding of optic-glasses for telescopes; and, having procured a glass prism in order to try the phenomena of colours lately discovered by Grimaldi, the result of his obserdiscovered by Grandini, the result of ins observations was his new theory of light and colours. On the breaking out of the plague in 1605, he retired to Woolsthorpe, his native place, where, seeluded from conversation and books, his active and penetrating mind conceived that hint which gave rise to his celebrated system of the universe. He was sitting alone in his garden, when some apples falling from a tree led his thoughts to the subject of gravity; and reflec-ing on the power of that principle, he began to consider that, as it is not diminished at the remotest distance from the centre of the earth, it may be extended as far as the moon, and to all the planetary bodies. This subject he after-wards resumed on the occasion of the great comet in 1680; and in 1687 the important prin-ciple which forms the foundation of the Newtonian philosophy was first published, under the title of "Philosophia Naturalis Principia Ma-thematica." On the author's return to the University in 1667, he was chosen fellow of his college, and took his degree of master of arts Two years afterwards he succeeded Dr. Barrow in the mathematical professorship, on which occasion he read a course of optical lectures in Latin. These he had not finished in 1671, when other interesting papers. The second telescope made "with his own hands" is still preserved in the library of the Royal Society. When the pri-vileges of the University of Cambridge were attacked by James II., Newton was appointed to appear as one of her delegates in the High Commission court, where he pleaded with so much ability that the king thought proper to stop his proceedings. He was next chosen to represent his University in Parliament, in which he sat till it was dissolved in 1689. In 1695 he was made warden of the Mint, and afterwards master of that office; which place he held with the greatest honour till his death. On his the greatest monour till ms death. On his last promotion, he nominated Mr. Whiston to fill his chair at Cambridge, with all the profits of the place, and resigned it entirely to him in 1703. The same year he was chosen president of the Royal Society, which office he retained during twenty-five years. He was also a member of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, having been chosen in 1699. In 1704 he published his been closen in 1659. In 1705 he published his treatise on the "Reflections, Refractions, Inflec-tions, and Colours of Light," which was after-wards translated into several languages, and went through many editions. The next year, Queen Anne conferred on him the honour of knighthood. In the succeeding reign he was very often at court, and the Princess of Wales, afterwards Queen Caroline, frequently conversed with him on philosophical subjects. 1718 he communicated to her royal highness the outlines of his treatise on Ancient Chronology, with which she was so pleased, that she never with which she was so pleased, that she never would part with it. A surreptitious copy of it was, however, obtained and carried to France by the Abbé Conti, who translated and printed it, with observations. On this, Sir Isaac published a paper on the subject in the "Philosophical Transactions," and the work at length in English, in 4to. After enjoying an uncommon share of health, owing to his activity and into state of mean, owns to us acress man temperance, till he was foursore years old, this great man began to be afflicted with a discorder of the bladder. The last twenty days of his life were attended with much pain; yet, amidst the severest agonics, he never expressed the slightest impatience. After his death, his body lay in state in the Jerusalem Chamber, and was interred in Westminster Abbey, the lord chancellor, the dukes of Montrose and Roxburgh, and three earls, bearing the pall. A stately monument was erected over his remains, at the entrance of the choir. Sir Isaac was of middling stature, and his countenance was pleasing and venerable. He was of a very meek disposition, and a great lover of peace: to his other great qualities, he added a serious and devout reverence of religion. His favourite study was the Bible, the prophecies of which he illustrated by his researches. He conformed to the Church of England, but lived in friendship with good men of all communions, and was an enemy to every kind of persecution. Sir Isaac had a great abhorence of infidelity, and never failed to reprove those who made free with revelation in his presence; of which the following is an instance. The learned Dr. Halley was sceptically inclined, and sometimes took the liberty of sporting with the Scriptures. On one such occasion, Sir Isaac said to him, "Dr. Halley, I he was chosen fellow of the Royal Society, to am always glad to hear you when you speak which learned body he communicated his theory about astronomy, or other parts of mathematics, because that is a subject which you have studied, and well understand; but you should not talk of Christianity, for you have not studied it: I have, and know you know nothing of the matter." Sir Isaac was never married, and, per-haps, had never time to think of it, being constantly immersed in the profoundest studies, and not being willing to have them broken by domestic concerns. Dr. Pemberton states of him, "that neither his age nor his universal reputation had rendered him stiff in opinion or in any degree clated;" and, shortly before his death, the great philosopher spoke of his sublime efforts in the following humble manner:—"I know not what I may appear to the world; but, to myself, I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore, and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble, or a prettier shell, than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me.' Upon the mantelpiece of the room in which Newton was born, at Woolsthorpe, is placed a marble tablet commemorative of the fact, beneath which are Pope's lines:

NEWTON, SIR ISAAC,

"Nature and nature's laws lay hid in night; God said, 'Let Newton be!' and all was light." An English translation of the "Principia" was made by Motte, and published in 1729. For a full account of the philosopher's works, see Sir David Brewster's "Memoirs of the Life, Writings, and Discoveries of Sir Isaac Newton, Writings, and Discoveries of Sri Island awton, published in 1855. B. at Woolsthorpe, near Grantham, 1642; p. at Kensington, 1727.

NEWTON, Charles Thomas, was appointed vice-consul at Mitylene in 1852, and in 1856 discovered the site of the magnificent mausoleum or tomb erected at Halicarnassus by Artemisia to the memory of her husband, Mausolus. After sending a fine collection of sculptures to the British Museum, he was appointed, in 1861, keeper of the Greek and Roman Antiquities in that place. B. 1816.

NEWTON, Thomas, an eminent English prelate, whose education was commenced at Westminster school; whence he was elected to Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he was chosen fellow. After entering into orders, he became curate of After entering into orders, he became cutate of St. George's, Hanover Square. In 1749 he published an edition of Milton's "Paradise Lost," with notes selected from various authors, and many of his own. He also prefixed a curious many of his own. He also precised a currous and well-written life of the author. In 1756 he was appointed chaplain in ordinary to the king; and about 1762 became bishop of Bristol. His chief work is his "Dissertations on the Prophecies." After his death, were published his Miscellaneous Works, with his Memoirs, written by himself. B. in Staffordshire, 1704; D. 1782.

Nawton, John, an episcopal elergyman of Calvinistic principles, was originally bred to the sea under his father, who was master of a merchant vessel. He afterwards engaged in a mercaant vessel. He atterwards engaged in the Guinea trade, and led a very irregular life for some years; but at last grew both serious and studious. By great diligence and applica-tion he acquired a knowledge of the Latin and Greek languages; and in 1764 was ordained to the curacy of Olney, in Buckinghamshire, where he became intimately acquainted with Cowper, ne became intimately acquainted with Cowper, the poet, conjointly with whom he produced the oliney Hymms." In 1779, Mr. Newton obtained the rectory of St. Mary Woolnoth, London, which he held till his death. He was the author of several works, among which may be numbered a "Review of Ecclesiastical History,"

"Cardiphonia, or the Utterance of the Heart," "The Messiah, a Series of Discourses," в. 1725; р. 1807

NEWTON, Gilbert Stuart, a modern English painter and Royal Academician, whose works are full of the grace and freshness of Watteau, but have an energy and expressiveness entirely his own. In 1826 he produced "The Lovers' Quarrel," which at once brought him reputa-tion. In the following vern he natured "The Prince of Spain's Visit to Catalina." for which the duke of Bedford paid him 509 guines. In 1833, his last picture, "Abclard," was exhibited in the Royal Academy, and in the same year he became insane. After remaining in that un-happy condition for about two years, he re-covered his reason, but died four days afterwards. covered his reason, but died four days afterwards. His best works were, "The Vicar of Wakefold restoring his Daughter to her Mother," "Shylock and Jessica," "Abelard sitting, in Study," and "Captain Macheath," B. at Halifax, Nova Scotia, 1794; p. at Chelsea, 1835.

NEY. Michael, nai, prince of the Moskowa, duke of Elchingen, and marshal of France, was one of the bravest and most distinguished one of the bravest and most ustrilly instead of Napoleon's lieutenants. In his thirteenth rear he was placed with a notary; but this occupation being little in accordance with his adventurous and energetic disposition, he, in 1787, enlisted in a regiment of hussers. His courage and activity were so conspicuous, that in seven years he rose to a captainer, Attracting the notice of General Kieber, by whom he was surnamed "the Indefatigable," he was created adjutant-general. In 1796 he displayed signal valour at the battles of Altenkirchen, Montabour, and Dierdorf, at which last he was taken prisoner. Upon being exchanged, he was appointed to the army of the Rhine; while serving with which, he, with only a handful of cavalry, took 2000 prisoners, and made himself master of the town of Würzburg. For that gallant affair he was named general of brigade; and, throughout the campaign, his brilliant courage was only eclipsed by his humane treatment of the French emigrants who fell into his hands, and whom he contrived to fell into his hands, and whom he continued to put beyond the power of the Directory, who sought their lives. Under General Moreau, he fought at Worms, Frankenthal, Mannheim, and Iller; and to his unyielding bravery was due in great part the victory achieved at Hohenlinden. After the peace of Luneville, he went to Paris, where Napoleon gave him a cordial reception, and, in order to attach him to his cause, brought about a marriage between him and Mademoiselle Augnié, the friend of Hortense Beauharnais. Ney went to Switzerland i. 1803 as minister plenipotentiary of the French cepublic. Upon his return, he was nominated to the command of the army ercomped near Boulogne, and raised to the dignity of rushal of France. In 1805 he commanded the eighth corps of the In 1800 he commanded the eighth corp of the army in Germany, and stormed the wage of Elchingen, where the Austrians lost 1 silled and wounded, and 2000 prisoners. It was in commemoration of this brilliant deed that Nati poleon, who was witness of it, subsequently created Ney duke of Elchingen. He signalized himself still further in the subsequent Prussian campaign. He caused Erfurt to capitalate; took Magdeburg, with 23,000 prisoners and 600 prices of artillery. At Deppen he destroyed a Prussian corps, cut off the retreat of the Russians at Königsberg, and defeated the left wing of the enemy at Friedland. In Spain he was placed in 1820, with the production of "The Runic under Massean; and it was to his persevering Sword; or, the First Knight." In 1827 he skill that the capture of Cudad-Rodrigo and visited Liaty, and, upon his return, published Almeida was due. Although he greatly assisted Massena in his retreat from the lines of Torrevelras, the latter and himself became engaged in serious disputes, which led to the recall of Ney. When the grand army set out for nussia, in 1812, Ney was placed in command of the third corps. In that disastrous expedition. he is stated to have urged Napoleon to winter at Smolensko; but, although his counsel re-mained unheeded by the emperor, he won from him the surname "Bravest of the Brave," by this intrepidity upon every occasion. During the terrible retreat that ensued, Ney performed prodigies of valour. General Dumas relates, prodigies of valour. General Dumas relates, that one morning at Ganbinnen, a man in a dark cloak, long beard, and wenther-beaten face, entered his room. "I am at last here" said the stranger; "General Dumas, do you recognise me?" General Dumas, do you recognise me?" General Dumas replied that he did not. "I am the rear-guard of the grand army," continued the stranger; "I have fived the last musket-shot on the bridge of Kowney.

New thought of our army; into the I have thrown the last of our arms into the Niemen, and have come here through the woods. l am Marshal Ney!" When Napoleon's star had begun to decline, Ney's courage and ability remained as brilliant as before. He was at Bautzen, Lutzen, and Dresden, helping in all to bring victory to the French standard; but at Danne witz he was defeated by Bernadotte. The emperor, however, displayed no resentment towards his brave general when he heard of the disaster. Upon the abdication of Napoleon, in 1814, Ney re-tired to his country seat, from which he was sumtired to his country seat, from which he was sum-moned to Paris to assume the command of the cighth military division. When he had reached Paris, he learned for the first time that he was called upon to oppose his old master, who had returned from Elba, and was adrancing to-wards the capital. Unfortunately for himself, he undertook to oppose Napoleon, but gave way before the astute mind of his ancient chief. Instead of capturing, he went over to Napoleon, and his example was followed by almost his whole army. At Waterloo he displayed astowhole army. At waterioo he displayed asto-nishing bravery, five horses were shot under him; but on foot, his dress torn with balls, he headed the columns of the Guard, and urged them to the charge. All was unavailing, however, and, in the retreat, he was one of the last to quit the disastrous field. After the fall of the emperor, he repaired to Paris, where he was soon afterwards proscribed as a traitor to France. Fouché provided him with a passport, by means of which he was enabled to gain the by means of which he was channed to gain the frontiers in safely; but, unhappily, turning back for some slight cause, he was arrested, brought to trial, and condemned to death. The garden of the Luxembourg was chosen for the place of execution, and there the brave soldier calmly met his death; -there, "he who had fought five hundred battles for France-not nan rought new intured battles for France—not one against but, was shot as traitor." E. at Surre-Louis, Loraine, 1769; shot, 1815.

NICANDER, at hearder, a Greek poet, physician, and grammarian, who was a roluminous writer; but only two of his works have come down to us. He is supposed to have been born about the contract of the con about 135 B.c.

NICANDER, Charles Augustus, a modern Swedish peet, who commenced his literary career in 1820, with the production of The Runic Sword; or, the First Knight." In 1827 he visited Italy, and, upon his return, published "Recollections of the South," a prose work, but interspersed with some poems of great heauty and pathos. B. at Stregnäs, 1799; D. 1839.

NICCOLINI, John Baptist, nek-o-le'-ne, a modern Italian poet, was the son of humble parents resident in Florence, but, in spite of poverty, he received an education which enabled him, at the age of twenty-two, to become librarian and professor of History and Mythology at the Academy of Arts. On the grand ducal restoration, he was so highly in favour that Ferdinand III. gave him the appointment of librarian in his own palace; but Niccolini soon returned to his old functions at the Academy, which afforded him greater independence. His literary atten-tion was given almost wholly to dramatic poetry: and in one of his first tragedies, "Na-buco," the personalities of Napoleon I., Pius VII., Letitia, Maria Louisa, and other great characters of the time, were embodied in the dramatis personæ, the emperor himself appearing through the poetical guise of the king of Babylon. The first edition of Niccolini's tragedies appeared at Florence in 1831, and in 1847 M. Le Monnier published his complete works, with the omission of two dramas, "Arnoldo di Brescia" and "Philippo Strozzi," which were rather too daring to be represented or even printed in Tuscany. Niccolini also wrote several lyric poems which were highly popular, and lyric poems when were many popular, and among them a poem in three cantos, entitled "La Pieta," which celebrates the institution of the fraternity of the Misericordia, and their pious works during the plague and inundation which visited Leghorn early in the nineteenth century The range of antique themes taken up in rapid succession by Niccolini at the opening of his career, was abandoned in later years for a modern and romantic class of subjects. His prose dern and romantic class of suggests. This prose works consist of philological treatises and academical discourses. Niccolini was an enthu-siastic advocate of civil and religious liberty; and it was a severe attack of illness alone which prevented him, in 1847, from taking an active part in the political movements of that epoch. B. 1785; p. 1861.

NICEPHORUS I., emperor of Constantinople, ni-sef'-or-us, was at first chancellor of the empire, but usurped the throne, in 802, from the empress Trene, whom he banished to the sile of Mitylene.

The beginning of his reign was marked by wisdom and elemency; but afterwards he committed such cruelities, that his subjects revolted, and proclaimed Bardanes, surnamed the Turk, emperor. Bardanes was defeated, however, and sent to a monastery, where he was deprived of his eyes. The Bulgarians having invaded the empire, and ravaged Thrace, Nicephorus marched against them; but was vanquished and slain, NICEPHORUS II. (Phocas), a nobleman of Constantinople, whose character was so popular, that he was raised to the Imperial throne in 963. He married the widow of his predecessor, Romanus II., and drove the Saracens out of a great part of Asia. He was assassinated by John Zimisees and other conspirators, in 969.

NICEPTORUS III. was invested with the purple by the army, which he commanded, in '078. He was deprived of this dignity in 1081, y his general, Alexis Comnenus, who sent him to a convent, where he died shortly after.

NICEROORS, Callistus, a Greek historian, who camong other works, produced an "Ecclesiastical History," in twenty-three books, the date of which commences with the year 610. This work was translated into French by Du Duc, and again into Latin by Lange, in the Trith century. Flourished in the 14th century. NICERON, Jean Pierre, nit-e-runn, an eminent French biographer entered the religious order of the Barnabites, and became a NICKBON, Jean Pierre, nist-e-rusung, an eminent Frene biographer entered the religious order of the Barnabites, and became a celebrated preacher. He was also successively professor of philosophy and theology, and internat no his society. His works are "Memoirs of Men illustrious in the Republic of Letters, with an Account of their Works," a translation of Dr. Hancock's treatise on the "Virtues of Common Water," "The Conversion of England to Christianity." p. 1635;

NICETAS, Acominatus, ni-se'-tās, a Byzantine historian, who wrote the "Annals of the Byzantine Empire," in twenty-one books. He was employed in various posts at the court of Constantinople, until the year 1204, when he retired to Nicea, where he died, 1216.

NICHOLIS I, Pope, air de-olar, was elected in succession to Benedict III., in 858. He excommunicated Photius, patriarch of Constantinople, whose schism led to the separation of the Roman and Byzantine churches. D. 887.

NICHOLIS II. was a native of Burgundy, archibishop of Florence, who succeeded Stephen IV. as pope in 1038. He was opposed by a rival, who styled hunself Benedict X; just being disavowed by the council of Sutri, Benedict was obliged to forego his claim to the papal chair. This pope assembled a council at Home, and caused a decree to be passed which was very important in the subsequent elections to the tiara. He was succeeded by Alexander II. D. 1061.

NICHOLLS III. was of a noble Italian family, and elected pope in succession to John XXI, in 1277. He obtained from the emperor Radolph of Hapsburg large grants of Italian territory; among the rest, the exarchate of Ravenna, the dispatched a number of missions to heathen countries, and deprived Charles of Anjou, king of Naples, of the dientity of a senator of Rome. His successor was Martin IV. p. 1280.

NICHOLLS IV. was a native of Ascoll, and was elected to the proof of the countries.

NTORGLES IV, was a native of Ascoli, and was elected to the papal chair upon the death of Honorius IV, in 1288. He excommunicated James of Araçon and his followers in the island of Sicily, and advanced the claims of Charles II, of Anjon to that kingdom. He likewise endear voured to excite a new crusade, but without success. This disaspointment hastened his death, which took place in 1892.

N'EROLAS V., cardinal bishop of Bologna, became pope after Eugenius Iv., in 1447. He restored peace to the Romish and Western churches, and caused the sovereigns and states of Italy to forget their feuds, He collected books and manuscripts, and ordered translations to be made of the Greek classics. The Vatian library was also founded by him, and he embellished Rome with numerous fine edifices. p. 1457.

Nicorolas I., emperor of Russia, was the third son of the emperor Paul, by his second wife, Sophic Dorothea, daughter of Frederick Eugene, duke of Würtemberg. His father having been assassinated while Nicholas was only in his fifth year, his education devolved upon his mother, who caused him to be most carefully instructed in letters, the sciences, and the arts. He was taught to speak the French and German languages with as much fluency as his native Russian; while in the theory of the art of war, for the study of which he evinced great aptitude from his earliest years, his progress was rapid and brilliant. He ascended the throne of Russia in 1825, after the death of his eldest brother Alexander, who had no issue, eldest brother Alexander, who had no issue, Constantine, the next brother, was the legiti-mate heir; but he had renounced his claim two years previously. Before becoming em-peror, Nicholas had, however, to repress a for-midable insurrection, comprising powerful members of the military and nobility. During that critical period, Nicholas displayed a fear-less and energetic character, which rapidly awed the insurrectionists, many of whom were shot down or subsequently executed, or banished shot down or subsequently executed, or banished to Siberia. Shortly after his coronation, he sent his troops against the shah of Persia, whose army was defeated in several engagements by Marshal Paskiewitch. The shah was compelled to sign the treaty of Tourkmanchai, by which the provinces of Erivan and Nakschiran were ceded to Russia, an indemnity of about three millions sterling in eash being of about three finnions stering in cash sense also exacted from him. Nicholas joined with England and France in aiding the Greeks to achieve their independence, and the Russian fleet co-operated with those of the two firstnamed powers in annihilating the Turkish named powers in aninhilating the Turnsia flottlla at Navarino. In 1929 war broke out between Russia and Turkey; upon which General Diebitsch optimed the forriess of Silistin, routed the Turkish army at Shunla, crossed the Bulken, and appeared before Adrianople. In 1828 the treaty of Adrianople was concluded, which gave to Russia, besides large tracts of territory in Asia, the right to trade in all parts of Turkey and upon the Danube, and the free passage of the Dardanelles. In virtue of this concession, Nicholas likewise became the protector of the Danubian Principalities. In 1830 he displayed considerable hostility towards the revolution that had brought about a change of dynasty in France; and in the same year an insurrection burst forth in Poland, which was not repressed until after a terrible struggle of ten months. The brave but unsuccessful Poles were treated with the utmost rigour; many were sent to Siberia or the army of the Cauwere sent to should or the army of the Cau-casus; the universities were suppressed, the libraries and other great establishments were transferred to St. Petersburg; and finally, in 1832, the kingdom of Poland became extinct. In 1839 a formal declaration of war was made against the Circassians, with whom the Russians had long been engaged in a desultory warfare. This struggle was vigorously maintained by the emperor throughout his whole life, but it remained for his successor Alexander to thoroughly subdue the brave moun-taineers. Nicholas visited England for the second time in 1844, and was cordially received second time in 1993, and was cordainly received by her Majesty Queen Victoria. During the Hungarian insurrection of 1849, the troops of Nicholas enabled Austria to triumph over her revoked subjects, and to complete the subjuga-tion of Hungary. In 1853 he dispatched Prince Menschikoff to Constantinople, to exact from the Porte a treaty whereby Russia might be permitted to interfere in the internal affairm of Turkey, and secure to herself the prerequive

THE DICTIONARY

Nicolas

of protecting the Greek subjects of the Ottoman empire. The result of Prince Menschikoff's mission is well known: Russia occupied the Danubian principalities as "a material guathe Danubian principalities as "a material gua-rantee;" the fleet of Nicholas destroyed the Turkish vessels at Sinope; and France and England declared war against the czar, in-vaded the Crimea, where the Russian arms were subjected to defeat at the Alma, at Inkermann, and at Sebastopol; all the forts upon the southern side of which were captured and destroyed. This last event, however, was subsequent to the death of the emperor, who succumbed to a mortal malady, whilst busily succumbed to a mortal malady, whilst busily successful the allies. The emperor Nicholas was a man of prodigious industry; his energetic character enabled him to assume the position of defender of order and legitimacy throughout the conti-nent of Europe. Order and legitimacy signified to him, however, a total repression of national liberty. With respect to his own country, he was professedly despotic. "Despotism," he observed, "is the very essence of my government." The great object of his public life was to realize the ambitious projects of Peter I, and for ealize the ambitious projects of rever 1. and catharine II.—the possession by Russia of Constantinople, and of the territories of the sultan. F. at 85. Petersburg, 1796; n. 1855.

NYGROL, J. P., LL.D., sik-ol., professor of an attonomy in the University of Glasgow, was the son of a bookseler in Montrose, and Mr.

Nichol's first venture in life was as schoolmaster of Dun in the neighbourhood of that town, when he was only sixteen years of age. He afterwards studied for the church, and was duly atterwards studied for the church, and was only licensed as a preacher. Literature and science, however, soon diverted him into a course more suitable to his faculties. Among other literary undertakings, Mr. Nichol for some time edited the "Pife Herald," to adapther of the proprietor of which, Mr. Robert Tullis, he was married. of which, Mr. Kooer Thins, he was married. After obtaining his professorship from Lord Melbourne's ministry, he distinguished himself by his various popular works on astronomy, "The Architecture of the Heavens," "The Planet Neythme," Ac.; and by his lectures on the same class of studiets, he was the first to make the public familiar with what is called the "Nebular Hypothesis,"

NICHOLLS, William, nik-ols, an English divine of much learning and piety, was educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, after which he became fellow of Merton College, and took his degree of D.D. in 1695; at which time he was rector of Selsey, in 1835; at which the lie with rector of Selsey, in Sussex. Dr. Nicholls published several valuable works: the principal of which were, "A Conference with a Theist," "A Defence of the Church of England," and
"A Commentary on the Book of Common Prayer." B. 1664; p. 1712.

Nichols, John, a learned antiquarian writer, who early in life was placed in the office of Wil-liam Bowyer, "the last of the learned printers." He was afterwards manager and partner in that printing-office; and at Bowyer's death, in 1777, the establishment fell into his hands. Nichols was author, or editor and printer, of a very large number of learned works. The most im-cortant of these were, "Biographical and Lite."

F.S.A.," Tistory of Processions of Queen Elizabeth," and "Illustrarrocessions of Queen Enzageth," and "Hustra-tions of the Manners and Expenses of Ancient Times." From the year 1778 until his death, he conducted the "Gentleman's Magazine."

na conducted the "Gentleman's magazine." B. at Islington, 1745; p. 1826.

Nichols, John Gough, a modern English antiquarian, was grandson of the preceding, His first important work was produced in 1829, with the title, "Fac-Similes of Autographs, with Biographical Memoirs of Royal, Noble, Learned, and Remarkable Persons." His later Learned, and Remarkable Persons. "His later productions included, among others, "The Chronicle of Queen Jane," a translation from Ersamus's "Phyrimage to St. Mary of Walsingham," and "The Chronicle of the Grey Frians of London." During many years be was a the head of the "Gentleman's Magazine," but vacated the post in 1856. Subsequently, however, he contributed to the pages of that periodical "The autobiography of Sylvanus Urban, Esq.," which contained much interesting matter relative to the early writers and affairs of that magazine. B. in London, 1808.

NIGIAS, nish'-i-as, an Athenian commander and statesman, who, by his merit, rose to the highest offices in his country. He signalized himself in the war of the Peloponnesus, which he had the honour of concluding. Afterwards he was appointed to command, with Eurymedon and Demosthenes, against Sicily. These three generals laid siege to Syracuse for two years; but, finding it impregnable, they were about to retire, when they were attacked by the Syra-cusans, and Nicias and Demosthenes, with a greas part of their troops, made prisoners. Nicias was put to death by the Syracusans, 413 B.C.

NICIAS, physician to Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, who made an offer to Fabricius, the Roman consul, of poisoning his master for a sum of money, B.C. 280. Fabricius disdained the proposal, and acquainted Pyrrhus with his treachery. Thereupon Pyrrhus with his crea-exclaimed, "This is that Fabricius whom it is harder to turn aside from justice and honour than to divert the sun from its course." Nicias is said to have been put to death, and his skin used for covering the seat of a chair.

used for covering the seat of a chair.

NICLES, a celebrated Greeian painter, who was contemporary with Apelles. His greates; picture was that which illustrated the passage in Homer's "Odyssey" where Ulysses invokes the shades of the departed. Potlemy I, kny of Egypt, offered Nicias sixty talents (about 215,000) for the picture: but the painter preferred to present it to his native city of Athens,
One of his pictures was taken to Rome by Augustus, in whose temple it was afterwards fixed. He is likewise stated to have painted some of the statues of Praxiteles. Flourished about the end of the 4th century n.c.

some of the statues or Printitions. Flourished about the end of the 4th contury n.c.

NICOLAI, Christopher Frederick, sikt-o-lai, a learned German bookseller, who taught himself Greek, Latin, and English, and, in the 18th century, established several critical journals at Berlin. The most important of his separate when the product of the separate when t Berlin. The most important of his separate works are "Anecdotes of Frederick the Great;"
"Essay on the Templars," and "Remarks on the History of the Rosicrucians and Freemasons," B. at Berlin, 1733; p. 1811.
NICOLAS, Sir Harris, mik'-o-las, an English antiquarian writer, whose early years were spent in the English navy. At the conclusion of the great war with France, he devoted himself to the study of the law, and was called to the bar Nicole Niebuhr in 1825. As a lawyer, he was almost entirely preceding, was deposed in the first year of his employed in perrage cases before the House of reign, by Mitrindates VI.; but was afterwards Lords. His works were both numerous and restored by the Romans. In SS p.c. he, en-Lords. His works were both numerous and important; the principal of them being "The History of the hattle of Agincourt," a "Life of Chaucer," appended to Pickering's cilifor of the poet's writings; "The Dispatches and Letters of Lord Nelson," and two volumes of a "History of the British Navy," which were all that he completed before his death, In 183 he was created a Imight of the Hanorcrian Guelwich Order, a 'to Communi 1500 a. h 1815.

phic Order. B. in Cornwall, 1799; D. 1849.
NICOLE, Pierre, nik-ol, an eminent French writer, who, in 1839, became a member of the Society of Port Royal, where he taught youth with great reputation, and assisted Arnauld in many of his works. In 1679 he quitted France. many of his works. In 1609 he quitted France, on account of the persecution against the Jansenists; but, some time after, obtained leave to return to Paris. In his latter years he espoused the cause of Dossuet against the Quietists, and was engaged in other controversies. He was the chief author of the celbrated work known as the "Foet Royal Logic." He also translated several valuable works from the Latin; and his moral essays are esteemed; as is also his "Treatise on Preserving Peace in Society." His other works are chiefly polemical.

Be at Chartres, 1625: D. 1695.

NICOLL, Robert, nik-ol, a Scotch poet, the son of parents in humble circumstances, and whose efforts at self-education were pursued under the most disadvantageous circumstances. under the most disadvantageous circumstances. At the age of 21 he produced a small volume of poems, which became exceedingly popular, and passed through several cilitions. He shortly afterwards obtained the post of editor of the "Leads Times" which, under his control, was more than tripled in its circulation. His prose writings consisted, for the most part, of political articles contributed to the before-mentioned print, and were marked by strongly liberal sen-timents and a clear energetic style. His health, which had always been frail, and was probably shattered by his youthful studies, gare way after he had been engaged upon his editorial duties about a year; and he removed to Edinburgh, where he died almost as soon as he had reached where he died almost as soon as he had reached manhood z. in Perthshine, 1814; p. 1827. M. COOSSON, William, nikt-ok-ova, a learned English prelate, born at Orton, in Cumberland, was educated at Queen's College, Oxford, became, successively, bishop of Carlisle, Derry, and archbishop of Cashel. He published "The English, Scotch, and Irish Historical Library," the "Leges Marchiarum, or Border Laws," and several other works. He also distinguished himself by the zeal and ability with which he entered into the Bangorian controversy. B. 1865; p. 1727.

NYOMEDIS J., Int. of "decess kink of Bithwila."

NICOMEDES I., nik-om'-e-dees, king of Bithynia, succeeded his father, Ziphætes, B.C. 278. In the following year he sought the assistance of the Gauls against his brother Zibotes, who disputed the throne with him. His barbarian auxiliaries subsequently turned against him, and overran Asia Minor. p. about 250 B.C.

NICOMEDES II., succeeded Prusias II., 149
B.O. During his long reign, he remained the ally of the Romans, and assisted the latter against Aristonicus, king of Pergamus, 131 B.C. The last years of his reign were spent in con-tending against Mithridates VI., king of Pontus. D. 91 B.C.

gaged with the Romans in attacking Mithri-dates, whose general defeated him in Paphlagonia; whereupon he fled to Italy, where he remained till the conclusion of the war, B.C. St. Dying without issue, he left his crown to the Romans, 74 B.C.

NICOT, Jean, né-ko, a French courtier and writer, who was sent by Francis II. as ambassador to Portugal, whence he brought the plant named tobacco, which, in France, has been called Nicotians, out of compliment to the importer. He wrote a work upon Navigation, and, in 1606, published "The Treasury of the French Language," which is stated to be the first French dictionary known. n. at Nines, 1530; n. at Paris, 1600.

Niebuhr, Carsten, né-boor, a celebrated Danish traveller, whose parents died while he was very young. In consequence of this occur-rence, he remained until his 21st year in an almost uneducated condition, gaining his subalmost uneducated condition, gaining his sub-sistence as an agricultural labourer. In 1754, however, he zeafously devoted himself to the study of geometry, with the view of gaining the post of land-surveyor in his native district. He alterwards passed to the university of Gottingen; but his pecuniary resources becom-Gottingen; but his pecuniary resources becoming exhausted, he enlisted in the Hanoverian engineers, which he quitted in 1757, on being appointed to a scientific expedition about to be dispatched by the king of Denmart to Arabia. Niebuhr requested to be allowed to increase his scientific qualifications by eighteen months' study; and, when the expedition set out, joined souny; and, when the expectation secolar, finds it as mathematician and geographer. After travelling in Arabia, Bombay, Persia, and Asia Minor, Niebuhr returned to Copenhagen in 1767, having been absent six years. His four companions had died in the East; but Niebuhr succeeded in bringing home a collection of notes and sketches, which were subsequently edited, engraved, and printed at the expense of the engraved, and primed at the expense of the Danish government, and have been used by every historian of Arabia, from Gibbon until the present day. The most important of these classical works were, "Description of Arabia," "Travels in Arabia," and "Political and Militers State of the Turbish Remain". "His coast tary State of the Turkish Empire." His great services to science were recognised by his rovernment, who appointed him to a civil post in Veriment, and created him councillor of state. Holstein, and created him councillor of state. Further, when he became incapacitated from discharging the duties of his office through blindness, the Danish government would not accept his resignation, but appointed an assistant to carry on his labours until the end of his life. B, in Holstein, 1733; D. 1815.

Nebuhr, Barthold George, a celebrated Danish historian, was son of the preceding.

After concluding a brilliant academical career, he became private secretary to the Danish minister of finance in 1798; but his studious minister of finance in 1708; but his studious and retiring disposition being ill suited for administrative functions, he exchanged the post for that of assistant-secretary to the Royal Library of Copenhagen. After spending about two years in Edinburgh, London, and Holstein, he returned to Copenhagen in 1800. Niebulir was next imited to Berlin, where he arrived shortly before the battle of Jena. Upon the establishment of the University of Berlin, he was amonited therein lecturer on Roman NICOMEDES III, son and successor of the was appointed therein lecturer on Roman 771

Niepce Wiel.

history; and the discourses which he delivered has always stood remarkably high. n. in while fulfilling this office formed the germs of France, 1802. while raining this office formed the germs of the great work upon which his fame rests. The War of Liberation, as it was termed in Germany, called Niebuhr from his studious life; and, during the years 1813-14, he was employed at the head-quarters of the allied army. In 1816 he was sent from Berlin as ambassador to Rome, whence he requested to be recalled in 1522. After spending some time at Naples, he returned to Berlin, but shortly afterwards repaired to Bonn, where he gave lectures upon Roman antiquities and other subjects, in the newly-founded university. After superintending the publication of the works of the Byzantine historians, he occupied himself with the enlargement and completion of his "Roman History." The first volume of this new edition was given to the world in 1827; but, a fire having destroyed all Niebuhr's manuscripts, the publication of the second was delayed until 1830. This great work inaugurated a new and more rational mode of dealing with the misty legends of early tradition; and, although Niebuhr therein displayed a scepticism and a distrust of mystical authorities, he did more than any other man to evolve a truthful and sound basis whereon to erect a rational history sound basis whereon to erect a rational history of Rome. The "Roman History" has been translated into English by Archdeacon Hare, Elishop Thirlwall, and Dr. Schmitz. Many of Niebuhr's shorter treatises are to be found in the "Classical Journal," the "Philological Museum," &c. In addition to the before-mentioned works, Niebuhr produced "Lectures on the History of Rome," which has been translated into English by Dr. L. Schmitz. z. at Copenhagen, 1776; p. 1831.

NIEL, Adolphe, neel, a modern general and marshal of France, in 1821 became student of the Polytechnic School, which h quitted to study engineering at Metz. He rose but slowly through the subordinate grades of the army. In 1827 he was lieutenant of en-gineers; in 1835 he became a captain, and won his promotion as chef-de-batallon for his bravery upon the field of Constantine, two years afterwards. He was made colonel in 1846, and with that rank took part in the expedition to Rome in 1849, as head of the staff of engineers. While at Rome he was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general, and was shortly afterwards charged with the mission of carrying the keys of the city to the pope at Gaeta. Upon his return to Paris, he became a member of the superior committee of engineering and fortifieations, and was appointed director of the enentions, and was appointed acreeor of the em-gineering department in the ministry of war. In 1833 he rose to be general of division, and in that capacity commanded the French en-gineers in the Baltic, and took part in the siege of Bomarsund. Subsequently he com-manded the accinears in the Crimes basing. manded the engineers in the Crimea, having been dispatched thither in 1855, by which time he had attained the distinction of aide-de-camp to the emperor. After the assault and taking of the Malakhoff, he was decorated with the grand cross of the Legion of Honour. In 1859 he was sent on a mission to the court of Victor Emmanuel at Turin, and to make the official demand of the Princess Clothilde's hand

NIRLD, James, neeld, a philanthropist, was a goldsmith in St. James's Street, London, where he made an ample fortune, a large portion of which, as well as much of his time, he devoted which, is wen as much of his time, he devoted to the alleviation of the sufferings of prisoners confined in the public gools, which he was in the habit of visiting all over the country, in order to ascertain the condition of the inmates, and relieve their necessities. He founded the society for the Relief and Discharge of Prisoners Society for the Meter and Section 2 of Trisoniers Confined for Small Debts; the reports of which he prepared, besides contributing papers to the "Gentleman's Magazine" on the same subject. B. in Cheshire, 1744; p. 1814.

B. in Chesnire, 1744; D. 1814.
Niemcenvez, Julian Ursin, neem'-tse-vitch, a distinguished Polish poet, historian, and patriot. In 1788, after having travelled in France, Italy, and England, he entered the Polish diet as deputy for Livonia. He subsequently drew up the Polish constitution, which was warmly commended by Fox. In 1794 he served as aide-de-camp to Kosciusko, during the Polish insurrection of that year, and was taken prisoner at the disastrous battle of Modeonies. Macieowicz. He was kept in confinement at St. Petersburg until 1796, after which he emi-Freetrodig dama 1780, atter with the dis-grated to America, passing on his way through London, where he was cordially received. When Napoleon created the grand-duchy of Warsaw, in 1806, Niemcewicz was appointed secretary of state; and this and other high offices he continued to hold until the outbreak of the Polish insurrection of 1830. Shortly afterwards he went to London, to request the aid of the English government; but, Russia having taken the capital of Poland in his absence, he was precluded from returning to his native country. He subsequently repaired to Paris, where the last days of this illustrious patriot and author were spent. trous parriet and author were spent. He chief works were, a collection of spirit-stirring poems, a number of dramas, the "History of the Reign of Sigismund III. of Poland," translations from Pope, Dryden, Byron, and Wordsworth, and a narrative of his captivity in St. Petersburg. n. at Skoki, Lithuania, 1757; p. at Paris, 1841.

NIEP E DE SAINT VICTOR, Claude François, s'-aips, a modern French photographic chemist, and the discoverer of the process of obtaining images on glass. He was the nephew of that M. Niepce who was the friend and fellow-worker of Mepce who was the friend and renow worker or M. Daguerre: was educated for the military profession, and was acting as lieutenant of dragoons in 1842, when an accident turned his thoughts towards the science of chemistry. Having stained his uniform with some drops of lemon-juice, he undertook a series of chemical experiments for the purpose of restoring the lost colour, and at length succeeded by employing ammonia. Shortly afterwards, the minister of war ordered that the collars and cuffs of thirteen cavalry regiments should be changed in colour. This change had been estimated to cost six francs the suit; but Nicpee suggested a plan which would cost only half a franc. His proposal was accepted, and the government was saved an expenditure of government was saved an expenditure of 100,000 francs. For this service he received a eward of 500 francs. Three years afterwards, he obtained an exchange into the municipal To Prince Napoleon. Shortly recreases he eward of 500 frames. Three years afterwards, participated in the operations of the French he obtained an exchange into the municipal army in Italy, and was created a marshal of guard of Paris, which step gave him the means France. His reputation as a scientific officer of prosecuting his scientific studies in the 772

Niepperg

Nitocris

canital barrack in which he lodged was destroyed, and with it the whole of his scientific apparatus and collections. Notwithstanding, he contrived to collections. Notwithstanding, he contrived to conclude his experiments, and present to the Academy his second memoir upon photography on glass, in the same year. Besides his first great discovery, he made researches upon pro-ducing photographic images in colours, and photographically engraved steel plates. In 1855 he published a collection of his scattered 1855 he published a collection of his scattered memoirs, with the title "Photographic Researches," and another entitled "Treatise upon Engraving upon Steel and Glass." In 1850 Mapoleon III. appointed him commandant of the Louvre, for the purpose of enabling him to prosecute more perfectly his photographic researches. B. in France, 1805.

NIEPPERG, Adam Albert, Count von, nee-pairs, a general and chamberlain of the Austrian empire. In 1812 he acade as minister.

trian empire. In 1812 he acted as minister-plenipotentiary at Stockholm; upon which occasion he succeeded in inducing Bernadotte to casion he succeeded in inducing Bernadotte to take part in the coalition against Napoleon. In 1814 he signed, at Naples, with Murat, a treaty of alliance with Austria. When the empress Maria Louisa quitted France, Count von Niep-perg became her confidential adviser, and de-fended her interests at the congress of Vienna. He next contributed towards the overthrow of Murat and read come time in Evenue as of Murat, and passed some time in France as com-mandant of the department of Gard. He subsequently repaired to Parma, where he was secretly married to Maria Louisa. His administration of his wife's duchy was characterized by ability and energy: several important re-forms, both political and military, likewise emanated from him. B. at Salzburg, 1771; D. at Parma, 1828.
NIGER. Cajus Pescennius, ni'-jer, a celebrated

Roman general, who, when the empire was sold to Didius Julianus by the Prætorian guards, in 193, refused to acknowledge the new emperor. 100, runsed to acknowledge the new emperor. Niger commanded in Syria, and was chosen emperor by all the provinces of the East; but Soptimits Severus, who was at the head of the Roman legions in Pannonia, set up a tival claim, and, marching upon Rome, dethroned Didus. Severus next sent troops against Niger, whose army was twice defeated, and himself abandoned by his followers. He attempted to effect his escape; but was overtaken and slain, 194.

NIGHTINGALE, Joseph, ni'-tin-gail, a dissent-MIGHTH GALE, JOSEPH, Hi'-In-gail, & GISSENT-ing minister of very considerable talent, who settled in London, became an author, and left the Methodist connexion for Unitarianism. Among his writings are, "A Portnatiure of Catholicism," "A Portnatiure of Methodism," several volumes of the "Beautics of England and Wales," "English Topography," and "Ser-several volumes of the "Beauties of England and Wales," "English Topography," and "Sermons." B. in Lancashire, 1775; D. 1824.

NICHENICALE, Miss Florence, an English philanthropic lady, was the daughter of William Edward Nightingale, of Lea Hurst, Derbyshire, and roceived her education under her parents direction. In addition to the ordinary accomplishments of an English lady, she acquired as competent knowledge of the modern languages. competent knowledge of the industrial magnetical for in life, her serious and earnest mind turned towards missions of charity with a natural instinct. After examining the schools and hospitals in the neighbourhood of her father's estate, and, at a later period, extending her observations by visiting the schools, workhouses, and hospitals of the metropolis 773

During the revolution of 1848, the and the large provincial towns, she, in 1849, entered the Kaisersworth hospital at Düsseldorf entered the Kaisersworth hospital at Disseldorf, as voluntary nurse, and, after visiting similar stablishments in other parts of Germany, eturned to London, and founded the Sanaorium for English invalid ladies, in Typer Harley Street. The sickness and distress of the British army in the Crimea induced Mr. the British army in the trimes induced as-sidney Herbert, then minister of war, to request Miss Nightingale to go thither as superinten-dant of a stoff of voluntary nurses. With a dent of a staff of voluntary nurses. With a noble devotedness, she immediately complied. her estimable example being followed by forty-two other nurses, many of whom were ladies of rank and fortune. From November, 1954, until the re-embarkation of the army in 1556, did Miss Nightingale minister to the wounded and the sick, her zeal never abating except on one occasion, when she was herself laid upon a sick bed by an attack of hospital fever. Upon her over by an attack of nospital lever. Upon her return to England, in the latter year, the whole English nation, from the queen to the peasant, acknowledged her devoted assistinty. A testi-monial fund, amounting to £50,000, was sub-serned, which, at Miss Nightingale's request, was devoted to the institution of an hospital for the training of nurses. She wrote several excellent works; the last of which was, "Notes on Nursing, what it is, and what it is not." B. in Floence, 1820.

NIKON, ni'-kon, patriarch of Russia, was the son of a peasant, but by his religious zeal and son or a peasant, out by mis religious zeal and learning obtained the favour of the car Alexis Michaelovitch. Nikon introduced into the Russian church the method of chanting, and called a council for restoring the sacred text according to the ancient versions. A new colling of the Russian ancient versions. tion of the Bible was accordingly published at Moscow, under the direction of the patriarch. the composed a chronicle of Russian affairs to the year 1630. Through the intrigues of his enemies, he was afterwards banished. B. near Nishnei-Novgorod, 1605; p. at Jaroslav, 1681. Nilbus, ni-le-us, a son of Codrus, who conducted a colony of Ionians to Asia, where he built Ephesus, Miletus, Priene, Colophon, Lebedos, &c.

NILUS, ni'-lus, a king of Thebes, who gave his name to the river which flows through the middle of Egypt, and falls into the Mediterranean Sea.

NINUS, ni-nus, king of Assyria, and a celebrated conqueror, who, about 2089 n.c., succeeded Belus, his father, as king of Babylou and Nineveh. He entered into an alliance with and Nimeren. He entered into an audate with the Arabs, subjugating Egypt and Bactria. He became enamoured of Seniramis, the wife of one of his generals, and married her after her husband's death. Semiramis was supposed to have subsequently poisoned Ninus, who reigned during 52 years, and enlarged Ninereh, to which during 50 years, and enlarged Nineveh, to which city he gave his name.

Nires II, or Nirsvas, son of the preceding and Semiranis, who profited by his youth to assume the regency. According to some, she subsequently voluntarily addicated, while others state that she was put to death by Nirus. His reign is remarkable for its luxury and extravagance. His successors imitated the example of six yoluntannesses; and your little fewerher in same. It is successors and very little further is known of the Assyrian monarchs until the age of Sardanapales. His reign is placed between the years 1965 and 1927 B.c.

NITOCRIS, ni-to'-krue, a celebrated queen of Babylon, who built a bridge across the Euphrates, of reservoirs for the superfluous water of the river. Nivernois, Louis Julius Mancini Mazarini, Duke de, né-vair-nwoi, a French diplomatist, was successively ambassador at Rome, Berlin, and London, in which latter city he negotiated the London, in wh ch latter city he negotiated the pace of 1783. He produced several poetical imitations of Virgil, Horace, Tbullus, Ovid, Artiset, and Milton. He also wrote "Letters on the Use of the Mind," "Dialogues of the Dead," "Befections on the Genius of Horace, Bolleau, and Rousseau," "Fables in Verse, "Dramas," &c. He was imprisoned by the republicans in 1793, and died in 1798. n. 1716.

NOLILIES, Adrien Maurice, Duka of zuc-ali.

NOAILLES, Adrien Maurice, Duke of, no'-ail, a celebrated French general, came of a noble family, and evinced, early in life, eminent talents for the military profession. He served with his father in Callonia, and afterwards under Vendôme, both in Spain and Flanders. In 1708 he commanded in Roussillon, and gained several advantages over the enemy. In 1710 he made himself master of Gerona, one of the most im-portant places in Catalonia, for which Philip V. created him a grandee of Spain, and Louis XIV. made him a duke and peer of France. In the succeeding reign he was appointed president of the council of finances; but when Dubois ob-tained the ascendancy in the ministry, Noailles was exiled. On the death of that minister he was recalled, and restored to his posts. In the year 1734 he commanded at the siege of Philipsburg, and obliged the Germans to abandon Worms. He afterwards served with great reputation in Italy. B. 1678; D. 1766.

NOATLLES, Louis Antoine de, uncle of the preceding, devoted himself to the ecclesiastical profession, and, in 1676, was nominated bishop of Cahors; whence he was removed to Châlons, and, lastly, to the see of Paris, in 1695. He made excellent rules for the conduct of his dergy, but his peace was disturbed by the Jesuits, in consequence of the approbation which he gave to Quesnel's "Reflections on the New Testament." In 1700 he was honoured In 1700 he was honoured with the dignity of cardinal. He subsequently lost the favour of Louis XIV, through the influence of Father Tellier, the Jesuit. Pope Clement XI. was also set against the arch-bishop, and issued his famous bull of Unigenitus in condemnation of Quesnel's book, which the latter had sanctioned. The cardinal was exiled; but, after the death of Louis, Tellier was banished in his turn, and the archbishop recalled. B. 1651; D. 1729.

recalled. n. 1651; n. 1729.

NORLE, Mark, ao'-bel, a clergyman of the Church of Engiand, and rector of Barming, in Kent, was the author of "Memoirs of the Profectorate House of Cromwell," "Memoirs of the Illustrious House of Medici, with Genealogical Tables," "The Livres of the English Recticles," a "History of the College of Arms," and a supplementary continuation of "Granda and a supplementary continuation of "Granda" also wrote several papers in the "Archeologica," and was F.S.A. of London and Edinburgh. 1827.

of Besancon, under whose care he received a careful and complete education. He early a careful and complete education. He early ition from the king of Sardinia, who appointed displayed a love for natural history, and, at the latter processor of physiology in the university age of 18, published a treaties on Entomology, of that city; but he was recalled in 1744, to In 1800 he went to Paris, where he quickly be- give lessons to the dauphin of France. In

in the middle of the city, and dug a number came celebrated by his fine romances and noems: but incurred the displeasure of the first consul. in consequence of producing a satirical noem entitled "La Napoléonne," in which he defended liberty. For this, he was sent back to his na-tive place, and there kept under police inspective place, and there kept under police inspec-tion. In this condition of forced exclusion from society, he occupied himself with the composition of his "Critical Examination of the Dictionaries of the French Language;" in which work he displayed the utmost acuteness which work is displayed the utmost acuteness and learning. He next commenced a series of journeys over France, in order to escape the watchful annoyances of the police. His mode of life during this period is detailed in his "Painter of Salzburg." He subsequently repaired to Dôle, and commenced the delivery of a series of lectures on French literature, which gained the greatest success. At a later period he obtained, through the influence of Fouché, the post of librarian at Laybach, in Illyria; but the restoration of the Bourbons enabled him to again take up his residence at Paris, where he found employment as a contributor to the "Journal des Débats." In 1818 he produced "Jean Sbogar," and, in the following year, "Therese Hubert," two charming romances. In 1824 he received the important appointment of librarian to the arsenal; and in 1833 became a member of the French Academy, Charles Nodier exercised his talents upon the most diverse subjects: fiction, history, poetry, criticism, biography, philology,—all were touched upon and enriched by his witings. He contributed articles to the "Biographie He contributed articles to the "Biographie Universelle," and originated the "Grand Dictionnaire Historique." His most attractive works of a lighter order were "Recollections of my Youth," "The Last Banquet of the of my Youth," "The Last Banquet of the Girondins," and his last and finest novel, "Francesco Colonna." In all his works, he wrote in the chastest style, and his plots and sentiments were of a similar purity. During the last years of his life, his society was sought by Victor Hugo, Lamartine, and the most distinguished French authors. B. at Besancon. 1780; D. at Paris, 1844. Nollekens, Joseph Francis, nol'-le-kens, an eminent painter, was born at Antwerp, but went emmens painter, was sorn at antwerp, but went young to England. He studied under Tillo-mans, and afterwards copied Watteau and Paolo Pannini. He painted landscapes, figures, conver-sation pieces, and particularly the amusements of children. He was much employed by Lord Cobham, at Stowe, and by the earl of Tilney, n. 1708; n. 1748,—His son Joseph was an admi-mathle anyther, and studied values Scherockler. rable sculptor, and studied under Scheemakers. He executed several capital works. B. in London, 1737; p. 1823.

NOLLET, Jean Antoine, nov-lai, a French divine and philosophical writer, who studied at Beauvais and Paris. In 1734 he visited London, and was chosen a member of the Royal Society. On his return to Paris, he commenced a course of lectures in experimental philosophy, to which he added illustrations of chemistry, and was F.S. of London and Edilburgh, and was F.S. of London and Edilburgh.

1827.

NODIER, Charles, no-de-ai, a celebrated French author, was the son of the mayor of Desanson, under whose care hy received the same time he went to Turin, on an invita-

Normanby

1758 he was nominated first professor of experimental philosophy in the college of Navare: country. These he executed with great filelity, and was also appointed philosophical tuttor to and his "Travels," with plates, was splendidly the royal family. His "Lectures in Experimental Philosophy", was the best treatise on the elected a member of the Royal Society of Logsubject which had till then appeared. Besides these, he wrote some excellent works on Elec-tricity, the "Art of making Experiments," and several papers in the Memoirs of the Academy.

No. 1700; D. 1770.

No. 1700; D. 1700.

No. as an officer of the Austrian army, in Hungary and Galicia; but, in 1839, joined the British army as ensign in the 4th Foot, whence he was transferred to the 15th Hussars, then stationed in Madras. His soldier-like qualities attracted the notice of Sir H. Pottinger, who appointed him an extra aide-de-camp; and he availed himself of his stay in India to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the Eastern military systems. In 1852 he returned to Europe; trasystems. In 1852 he returned to Europe; travelled in Russia, and, on the breaking out of the Crimean war, was selected to proceed to Turkey, to make arrangements for the reception of the caralry, and the purchase of horses. When the army landed in the Crimea, he was placed on the staff of the quartermaster general; and was killed at Balaklava, Oct. 25, 1854, in the memorable light cavalry charge, almost immediately after delivering Lord Rag-lan's written order to Lord Lucan, of which he had been the bearer. B. 1817. Captain Nolan was the author of a work on the "Organization, Drill, and Manœuvres of Cavalry Corps."

NONDY, monitor, so that your solutions of Carary corps."

NONDY, monitor, as Greek poet, who wrote an account of his embassy to Ethiopia and "Dionysiaca;" a paraphrase, in Greek verse, of the gospel of St. John; and a collection of Histories or Rebles. Navage and active of the control of th the gospel of St. John; and a collection of Histories or Pables. Nomus was a native of Panopolis, in Egypt, and flourished at the be-ginning of the 6th century. Norders, George, nord-beirg, chaplain to Charles XII. of Sweden, whom he accompanied in all his campaigns. Subsequently to the death of that monarch, he was appointed by Queen Ulrica Eleanors to with his history, which was completed, and published at Stock-Queen Unras Elektrora to write in likoti's, which was completed, and published at Stockholm in 1740. This work is wanting in the lightness and point of Voltaries well-known biography; but having been composed from the best materials, it is a work of authority, and has the additional advantage of being written by a man who was present at the extloner.

written by a man who was present at the actions he narrates. Noroberg spent his lastFeenra as a pastor at Stockholm. B. 1877; D. 1744.

Nondry, John, nor-dea, an old English writer, who received his education at Oxford, and wrote some strangs books in divinity, with very whimsical titles, as "The Sinful Mark Solace." Antithesis, or Contrariety between the Wicked and Godly set forth in a pair of Glores fit for every Man to wear," So. He was also the author of the "Surveyor's Dialogues." "Thornith of Marks Life", a meen. "England." also the author of the "Surveyor's Dialogue,"
"Labyrinth of Man's Life," a poem, "England, or a Guide for Travellers," and, "Topographieal Descriptions of Middlesex, Hertfordshire, and Cornwall." D. about 1625.

NORDEN, Frederick Lewis, a Danish traveller, who, after serving in the navy of his country, and travelling in the East, entered as a volunteer in the English fleet under Sir John Norris, in the Mediterranean. The king of Denmark sent him to Egypt, to make drawings and don, he presented to that learned body his drawings of ruins and colossal statues at Thebes. B. in Holstein, 1708; p. 1742.

Theoes. B. in Holstein, 1705; D. 1742.

NORFOLK, mory fole, an ancient and illustrious English house, descended from the royal family of Plantagenet, through Thomas Plantagenet of Brotherton, earl of Norfolk, second son of Edward I., and earl-marshal of England. The herices of the Norfolk family, Margaret, eldest daughter of Thomas de Mowbray, duke of Norfolk having accounced at the compensagenes. daugnter of Inomas de Mowbray, duke of Nor-folk, having sepoused, at the commencement of the 15th century, Robert Howard, the title of duke of Norfolk passed to the latter, and was transmitted by him to his descendants. The living head of this family takes precedence as premier duke and cari-marshal of England, and premier duke and earl-marshal of England, and follows immediately after the princes of the blood royal. The most remarkable of this house were:-

Norfolk, Roger Bigod, Earl of, and earlmarshal of England, ambassador of the king and barons of England, in 1245, to the general council at Lyons, where he combated the pretensions of the pope to the title of sovereign of England.

He died in 1270, without issue.

NORFOLK, Thomas Howard, fourth Duke of, was eldest son of the earl of Surrey. During was eldest son of the earl of Surrey. During many years, he was one of the confidential advisers of Queen Ellizabeth, by whom he was charged, in 1868, to hold an interview with Mary Queen of Soots, who had just taken refuge in England. Norfolk was, however, subsequently brought to brial, upon the charge of having conceived the project of liberating and naving conceived the project of neerating and marrying the unfortunate Scottlish queen. He was condemned to death, 1572. n. about 1536. Noxis, Henry, not-ris, a celebrated Italian cardinal, who was educated at Verona, by his father, a native of Ireland. He afterwards en-tered the monastic order of St. Augustine, and acquired great reputation for learning and piety. In 1673 he published the "History of Pelagianism," which gave offence to several persons, who accused him to the pope as being here-tically inclined; but Clement X. so little re-garded the charge, that he made Noris under-librarian of the Vatican. In 1695 he was librarian of the vancan. In 1000 ne was created a cardinal. His works were published at Verona, in 1729-41, in 5 vols. folio. B. at Verona, 1631; D. at Rome, 1704. NORMAN-EHRENKELS, Charles Froderic Lebrecht, Count de, nor man ai ren-fels, an emi-nent military officer, who, after attaining the rank of colonel in the Austrian service, became attached to the army of Napoleon, and commanded the light cavalry of the emperor's guard during the Russian campaign of 1812-18.

After the battle of Leipsic, he refused to fight against the French, and retired to Saxony. In 1822, when the Greek revolution broke out, he proceeded along with a number of German officers to Greece, and was appointed to the command of the fort of Navarino. He subsequently organized a battalion of Philhellenes at Corintin. of anise at the tention of the tention of contributed to gaining the victory of Cambolti, and was severely wounded at Peta. B. at Stuttgart, 1784; D. at Missolonghi, 1822.

NORMANBY, Constantine Henry Phipps, first Marquis of, nor-man-be, was aldest son of the first Earl of Mulgrave; and, after concluding his academical career at Cambridge entered the House of Commons as member for Scarborough, in 1818. He took his seat among the liberals, and supported the Roman Catholic claims and Parliamentary reform. In 1831 he succeeded to the peerage, and soon afterwards succeeded to the peerage, and soon anterwares went out as governor to Jamaica, where hi distinguished himself by his philanthropic efforts in carrying out the slave emancipatior act. In 1835 he was appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland. In 1839 he was for a short time of Ireland. In 1839 ne was for a snort time serctary for the Colonies, for the Home depart-ment subsequently, and in 1841 went to the French capital as ambassador from the English court. He continued to perform the duties o that office until 1852. In 1856 he published: narrative of the events of 1848, in a work en titled "A Year of Revolutions;" and subse quently made himself notorious by advocating in Parliament the cause of the pope and the dethroned princes of Italy. B. 1797; D. 1863.

Norris, John, nor-ris, an eminent divin and Platonist, was educated at Winchester School, and at Exeter College, Oxford; and bescano, and at exeter conege, Oxiora; and ob-came rector of Bemerton, near Salisbury. He ranks as one of the most eminent of the English Platonists, and was a good man, though a visionary. Among his works are, "The mortality of the Soul." B. 1667; D. 1711.

of the Ideal, or Intelligible World," and "Philosophical Discourse concerning the Natural Immortality of the Soul." B. 1657; D. 1711.

Nozars, Str. John, a gallant naval officer, wh served his country nearly sixty years, commencing in 1689, and terminating, with his life, in 1749. The frequent accidents and misforunce which befel the ships and squadrons under his command, and which could not be warded off by human prudence or sagacity, procure him the appellation of "Foul-weather Jack: yet in the duties of his profession no man could be more assiduous; and so well did he second the exertions of his friend Sir Cloudesley Shovel in the Mediterranean, that the queen knighted and otherwise handsomely rewarded him.

NORTH, Sir Thomas, north, knight, was the first translator into English of the "Lives" of Plutarch, but of whose own life no particulars are known. The translation of Plutarch was published in 1579; but North had previously given to the world two other works-1. "The Diall of Princes; compiled by the Rev. Father in God, Don Anthony of Guevara, and Englyshed out of the Frenche; right necessary and pleasaunt to all gentlemen and others which are lovers of vertue," which first appeared in 1557, and was reprinted in 1568 and 1592 .-- 2. "The Morall Philosophie of Doni, drawne out of the auncient Vitters; a work first compiled in the Indian Tongue, afterwards reduced into divers other Languages, and now lastly Englyshed out of the Italian," published in 1570. North's translation of Platurch is professedly taken from Amyok's French version, but, curious enough, is often inaccurate where Amyot is correct. The Lives of Epaminondas, Philip of Macedon, Octavius Cæsar, and some others, are added to those in Plutarch. Lived in the time of Queen Elizabeth.

NORTH, Francis, Lord Guildford, keeper of the great seal in the reigns of Charles II. and James II., was the second son of Dudley, Lord North, and educated at St. John's College, North, and caucated at St. John's College, Cambridge, whence he removed to the Middle Temple. After being solicitor and attorney, general, he was made chief justice of the King's Bench, and in 1682 was appointed lork keeper, with the title of Lord Guildford. Or him, Lord Campbell says; "He had as much law as he could contain; but he was incapable law as no could contain; but he was incapable of taking an enlarged and commanding view of any subject." He wrote "An Index of Verbs Neuter," printed with Lily's Grammar; "A Paper on the Gravitation of Fluids in the Paper on the Gravitation of Finds in the Bladders of Fishes," printed in the "Philoso-phical Transactions;" "A Philosophical Essay on Music;" several Concertos, &c. B. 1637;

D. 1885.
North, Sir Dudley, brother of the preceding, in his youth resided at Smyrna and Con-stantinople, and after his return to England published some interesting works upon the life, institutions, and languages of the East, Of the Turkish tongue, he observed, "That for scolding and railing it was more apt than any other language." He was subsequently knighted, became sheriff and alderman, and was appointed a commissioner of the Treasury towards the end of the reign of Charles II. At the Revolu-tion he lost this post, and retired into private life. B. 1641; p. 1691.

NORTH, Roger, an English biographer, the sixth son of Dudley, Lord North, and was educated for the profession of the law. He wrote a work against Kennet's "Complete Hisbut the work by which he is best known is a series of biographies of his brothers, including the lives of the two preceding. He is stated by some to have been attorney-general under James II. B. about 1650; D. 1733. NORTH, Frederic, Earl of Guildford, a statesman, better known as Lord North, who, in 1769, succeeded Mr. Townshend as chancellor of the Exchequer: and in 1770 was made first lord of the Treasury, in which office he continued till the close of the American war. For his sup-posed deference to the wishes of George III. in prolonging that struggle, he became exceedingly unpopular, but it is now known that he wished to make peace long before the termination of the contest. He was a man of uniformly good temper, a fair orator, and in his private life was thoroughly amiable. Before his death, he became blind. n. 1732; n. 1732. NORTHEROOKE, LORI. (See BARING, SIF F. T.) NORTHEOTE, James, north-kote, an English artist and writer on art, who repaired to London in his 25th year to study painting under Sir Joshua Reynolds. He subsequently commenced as a painter of portraits, and was on the high road to fame and fortune, when his ambitious mind led him to abandon that line of t, and to visit Italy for the purpose of study-After spending five years in that artistic land, he Arter spending live years in that artistic land, the eturned to London, and soon became extensively imployed by Boydell and others to make drawngs for the "Shakspeare Gallery," a series of rints illustrative of the writings of the poet. During the subsequent half-century, he lived almost solitary in his studie in Argyle Street, London, where he produced several fine and convenied when the produced several fine and convenied when the produced several fine and the convenied when the produced several fine and the ery excellent works of art, and also occupied imself with literary composition. In 1813 he ublished "Memoirs of Sir Joshua Reynolds, with an Analysis of his Discourses." In his an annual pension from the town during many 82nd year he gave to the public his "One years. In 1855 he published his prophecies, Hundred Fables, Original and Selected," which which, though very obscure and absurd, gained were embellished with a number of excellent the author a considerable reputation. These word embelished with a number of excessive woodcuts, engraved after his designs. His "Life of Titian" subsequently followed; but this work is said to have been written by Haz-litt from his notes and conversations. Two of his best paintings were "The Murder of the Princes in the Tower," and "Hubert and Arthur." Northeote was never married, but had an affectionate companion in a maiden sister. p. at Plymouth, 1746; p. 1831.

Northcote Nott

NORTHCOTE, Sir Stafford Henry, took a firstclass in classics at Oxford, and was subsequently class in classics at Oxford, and was subsequently called to the bar in 1847. He was returned for Dudley in 1855, and sat for Stamford from 1888 to 1866, and for North Devon from May, 1866, to the present time. He was president of the Board of Trade under Lord Derby in June, 1866, and secretary of state for India in March, 1867, which office heretained until the fall of the Disraeli ministry in 1868. 2.

1818.

Noeron, Thomas, nor'-ton, an English writer of the 16th century, a native of Bedfordshire, who assisted Thomas Sackville in his tragedy of "Ferrex and Porrex."

D. 1584. Norton, Hon. Caroline Elizabeth Sarah, a modern English poetess, was one of the three daughters of Thomas Sheridan, son of the celebrated Richard Brinsley Sheridan. Her father dying while she was still very young, her care dying while see was still very young, act care high edevated upon her mother, who gave her a high education. At the age of inteteen she became the wife of the Hon. George Chapple Norton, the barrister and police-magistrate, a union which proved an unlappy one. In 1828 she commenced her career of authorability by publishing anonymously the "Sorrows of Robuston and the commenced where the career of authorability by the state of the commenced here career of authorability and the state of the commenced where the care of publishing anonymously the "Sorrows of Ro-saile," a tale, and other poems. In the follow-ing year she achieved the greatest success as a poetess, with the production of her "Undying One," and other poems, which the "Quarterly Reriew" declared to be worthy of Lord Byron. The "Child of the Islands." "Aunt Carry's Bal-lads for Children," and "Start of Dunleath," a novel, were her subsequent works. In 1856 her warm sympathies with the social wrongs of her warm sympathies with the social wrongs of her sex found expression in a work entitled "Eng-lish Laws for Women in the 19th Century." This work was privately printed; but a very large circulation was obtained for a later effort of the same character, which was named "A Letter to the Queen on Lord Chancellor Crantenter to the Queen on Lord Chandenor Cran-worth's Marriage and Divorce Bill." In 1862, she published a poem entitled "The Lady of Garaye," which met with considerable public favour. B. 1808.

Nonwood, Richard, nor'-wood, an English mathematician, who in 1635 measured an arc of the meridian between London and York. of the meridian between London and rork. Nothing authentic is known of his personal history. His most important works were, "Fortification, or Millitary Architecture," "The Seaman's Practice," "Trigonometry, or the Doctrine of Triangles," and "Application of the Doctrine of Triangles,"

NOSTRADAMUS, Michael, nos-tra-dai'-mus, a notorious French astrologer and physician, who his doctor's degree. Having rendered some possible judge of Indian warfare—pronoueed eminent service to the inhabitants of alt when in a manner the most emphatic his unqualified the city was visited by the plague, he received admiration of General Nott. The Crown, of 7777

were followed by several others, the whole making one volume folio, in barbarous verse. Nostradamus was honoured with marks of distinction by persons of the highest rank, par-ticularly Charles IX., king of France. B. at St. Rémy, 1503; D. 1566.

Norr, John, M.D., not, an elegant poet and ori-ental scholar, who, after studying surgery at Dirmingham, visited Paris for further instruction, and subsequently went out to China as surgeon in an East Indiaman. In 1788 he graduated in medicine, and soon after attended the duchess of Devonshire to the Continent, in quality of family physician; in 1793 he returned to Engfamily physician; in 1793 he returned to Eng-land, and settled at Clifton, where he continued to reside till his death. Among his numerous writings are, "Alonzo, a poetic Tale," "Poems from the Italian of Petrareh," the "Cynthia" of Propertius; some elegant translations of the dass of Hafiz; an edition of "Catullus," with the Italia text rendered into English verse, and classical notes; "The Odes of Horace;" a translation of the "Basia" of Johannes Secu-ley. "Sample, offer a Greak Romance" by transiation of the "Basia of Johannes Securi-dus; "Sappho, after a Greek Romance," &c. He also published some professional works, viz. "A Chemical Dissertation on the Springs of Pisa and Asciano," "A Vosological Companion to the London Pharmacopoeia," &c. B. 1751; p. 1826.

NOTT, Major-General Sir William, one of the heroes in the late Affghan war, was the son of an extensive mail-contractor and proprietor of the Ivy-bush hotel at Carmarthen. He went out to India as a cadet in 1800; but although his talents and gallantry were well known, he was unpatronized, and no event occurring to was unparronized, and no event occurring to accelerate his progress, he only obtained a ma-jority after a service of twenty-six years. His health at that time being seriously affected, he returned on leave of absence to England, visited his native place, and there purchased an inte-resting seat called "Job's Well," where he re-sided a few years. The failure of the Calcutta bank, in which he had invested the greater part of his savings, having rendered it necessary for him to resume his active duties as a soldier, he, when fifty years of age, returned to India to enter upon a fresh career. A recent writer on Indian affairs thus speaks of General Nott:—"To relate 'the moving accidents by flood and field'through which this gallant officer led the troops under his command, would be to write a volume, for which the materials are alike interesting and which the materials are alike interesting and abundant. By an exercise of skill, judgment, and valour, not often equalled, and probably mere surpassed, he extricated our army from difficulties by which they were surrounded in Afighanistan, and succeeded in conveying them, and several captives whom he released, across the frontier, bringing them with perfect safety, and without any loss of honour, within the limits of her majesty's dominions. The victories which he achieved in Candahar closed the Asphan war, and distinct the craftifule of the tories which he achieved in Candahar closed the Afighan war, and elicited the gratitude of the whole empire; even the duke of Wellington departed from that peculiar severity of task which marked his generally sparing eulogium, and with a feavour unusual to him, he—the best possible induced the program of the contraction.

course, lost no time in conferring on him the tration of affairs, and, soon after, was made highest military distinction—that of a knight president of the council; but, in 1716, he was dishighest military distinction-that of a knight grand cross of the Bath; neither was Parliament slow to give expression to the national sentiment." It is said that when General Nott was proceeding to the resone of the prisoners in the hands of Akbar Khan, among whom was the heroic Lady Sale, wife of the gallant Sir Robert Sale, Akbar ordered that lady to write to Sir William, forbidding his further approach, upon which she despatched the laconic but ex-pressive mandate, "Advance, Nott." The ge-neral understood the equivoque; went forward, and delivered the lady and her companions. The Afighan war concluded, Sir William returned to England, the hardships of a military life and the insalubrity of an Indian climate rendering repose necessary for the restoration of his shattered health; but he had not long regained his native town when the unfavourable symptoms increased, and he died on the 1st of

January, 1845. B. 1782. Nortingham, Heneage Finch, Earl of, not. NORTINGHAM, Heneage Finch, Earl of, sub-ing-ham, an eminent English lawyer and statesman, who, after completing his education at the university of Cofford, was entered of the Middle Temple, and was subsequently called to the bar. He became solitor-general under Charles II., at the Restoration, and took a pro-minent part in the prosecution of the regi-ciales, an account of which he published in 1860, in a cortious work, entitled "An Exact and Impartial Account of the Indictment, Arraign-ment, Trial and Indigment (theoretine to law) ment, Trial, and Judgment (according to law) of Twenty-nine Regicides." In the following year he was chosen to represent the university of Oxford in Parliament, and was created a baronet. In 1667 he had a principal share in impeaching the earl of Clarendon, and was, three years later, appointed attorney-general. In 1673 he received the great seal of England as lord-keeper: in 1675 he became lord chancellor of England. At the trial of Viscount Stafford, in 1680, he presided as lord high steward, and delivered judgment against that nobleman in a speech of great eloquence. In the following year he was created earl of Nottingham. Beyear he was created earl of Nottingiann. Be-sides the work above mentioned, be published several others, the chief of which were "An Argament on the Claim of the Crown to Pardon on Impeachment," "Speech at the Sentence of William, Viscount Stafford," and "Reports of Casss in the High Court of Chancery," Dry-den, in his "Absalom and Achitophel," alludes to the one of Nottinchers under the to the earl of Nottingham under the name of Amri :-

To whom the double blessing does belong, With Moses' inspiration, Aaron's tongue." The earl's reputation is that of a sound lawyer and upright judge. B. 1621; D. 1682.

and upright judge. E. 1821; 5. 1882; North throne, and strenuously supported the contention in favour of the regency. However, William offered him the post of ford chancellor, which he declined; but he was, for a short time, uncle. After valuly attempting to recover Dasceretary of state. On the death of Queen Anne, maseus from his uncle, he retired to Samosata, he was one of the lords justices for the adminis- where he died. n, 1170; n. 1224.

missed, on account of a speech which he made in the behalf of the Scottish lords condemned for high treason. In 1729 he became earl of Winchelsea, on the death of John, fifth earl, in virtue of his descent from Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas Hencage, and wife of Sir Moyle Finch, his great-grandfather. He was an able speaker and a man of learning, as was an able speaker and a man of learning, as appears from his reply to Whiston on the Trinity, for which he received the thanks of the University of Oxford and of the Bishop and clergy of London. D. 1730. NOTINGHAM, Charles Howard, Earl of. (See Noting Ghan, Charles, Lord Howard.)

Nove, Francis de la, noo, surnamed the Arm of Iron, a celebrated French soldier, who distinguished himself in the wars of Italy, and, upon his return to France, espoused the cause of the Huguenots, then in arms against the Catholics. He took Orleans in 1567, and two years afterwards, signalized himself at the battle of Jarnac: subsequently to which he made himself master of Fontenoy; on which occasion he lost his left arm. He had another made of iron; whence his surname. He was at the siege of Rochelle, and, in 1578, entered the service of the States-general in the Low Countries, where he took Count Egmont prisoner; but was himself taken in 1580, and did not regain his liberty till five years afterwards. In the time of the League he served on the royal side, and was killed by a musket-shot at the siege of Lamballe. He was the author of a "Discourse, Panatogane, rie was the ductor of a "Discottise, Political and Military," which was first printed in 1587. B. in Bristany, 1581; killed, 1591.

NOULEHLM, noor-ji-haw', wife of Jehanghir, the Mogul emperor, was the daughter of a Tartar general, and became sultama in 1611.

According to the first headers, and the state of the stat After the death of her husband, she retired to the palace of Lahore. Her tomb is accounted one of the most beautiful edifices in the city. To Nourjehan has been attributed the disco-

To Normana has been attributed in the discovery of the essence of roses. B. 1885; D. 1845, Nour-Eddin of Mannoud, noor-ed-din or moor-ed-deen', sultan of Egypt, was the son of Amad-eddin Zonghi. When his father was Amadeddin Zengin. When its latter was slain by his own enunchs at the siege of Jabbar, in 1146, Nour-eddin and his brother Seiff-eddin divided his possessions between them. The former obtained the sovereignty of Aleppo, and, by his prudence, became one of the most power-ful princes of the East. He distinguished himself against the Christians in the time of the soil against the Christanis in the time of the crusades; he defeated Jocelyn de Courtenay, count of Edessa, and Raymond, prince of An-tioch, whose head was sent as a trophy to the callph of Bagdad; after which he made himself master of Egypt. To the qualities of a great master of Egypt. To the qualities of a great warrior he added the virtues of a liberal prince: he patronized the arts and sciences, founded cities and establishments of learning, hospitals, caravanserais, and mosques. To him has been ascribed the first employment of pigeons to carry messages. B. 1117; D. at Damascus, 1173. NOUR-EDDINALI, was the eldest of the seventeen sons of the celebrated Salah-eddin (the Saladin of Christian writers). At his father's death, Damascus, Southern Syria, and Palestine fell to his share; but he was soon afterwards deprived of his kingdom by his brother and

NOUR-EDDIN ABSLAN SHAH, prince of Moossool and Mesopotamia, succeeded his father in 1193. He was a just and liberal monarch, and, in a great degree, restored the declining power of his dynasty. p. 1210. NOUE-EDDIN ALI, second sultan of the Tartar Mamelukes in Egypt, ascended the throne upon the assassination of his father Ibek, in 1257. He reigned only two years, being deposed by the emir Kotuz, in 1259.

NOVALIS, Frederick von Hardenberg, usually NOVALUS, Prederics von Hardenberg, usually called non-di-is, a celebrated German writer, was the son of Baron von Hardenberg, and was sent in 1790 to the university of Jena; after which he passed to that of Leipsic, in 1792. About the year 1797 he published his "Hymns to Night;" and between that time and the year 1801, when his premature death took place, he produced a number of works displaying a boundless imagination and a love of the mystical and supernatural such as is not to be equalled in any other writer. In 1800 he gave to the world his wild and grotesque romance entitled "Heinrich von Ofterdingen." A complete collection of his writings was made by his friends Tieck and Frederick Schlegel. B. at Mansfeld, 1772; p. 1801.

NOVATIAN, no-vai'-shi-an, a pagan philosopher, who embraced Christianity, was admitted to holy orders, and became the first anti-pope. to holy orders, and became the instant-pope. Being of an ambitions character, he contrived to get himself ordained bishop, which was done in an irregular manner in Italy. He then en-deavoured to get possession of the see of Roma, after the death of Pope Gornelius, but was op-posed by Lucius. Novatian promulgated the doctrine, that it was sinful to admit persons who had once lapsed into idolatry to communion; a practice then universal in the Church. This produced a schism, in which Novatian had many partisans, who called themselves Catharites, or pure. By others, however, they were named Novatians. To the above error they added many others, particularly those of the Mon-tanists. There are several works by Novatian extant, an English edition of which was published by Jackson at London in 1728. Lived in the 3rd century of the Christian era.
Novikoff, Nicholas Ivanovitch, nov'-i-kof, a

Russian gentleman, who devoted his life to the production of standard editions of the authors of his country. He has been called the "Frank-lin of Russia." The first circulating library in Moscow was established by him; and, among other important works, he produced a 'Library of Old Russian Authors,' in 30 vols. B, 1744;

D. 1919.

NOWELL, Alexander, now-el, an English divine, was installed prebendary of Westminster in 1851, and in the first Parliament of Queen Mary was returned for Looe, in Cornwall; but the election was declared void on account of his being a dignitary of the church. Soon after this he went to Strasburg, where he remained till the accession of Elizabeth, when he returned; and in 1560 was made dean of St. Paul's. He was prolocutor of the convocation in which the articles of religion were settled; and he published his "Greater" and "Lesser" Catechisms, in Latin, the latter being an abridgment of the former. He is also supposed to have written the chief part of the Church Catechism. Besides founding a free grammar school at Mid-dleton, he endowed thirteen fellowships in Brasenose College. B. about 1507; D. 1602.

Nov. William, noi, an eminent English lawver, who, at the beginning of the reign of Charles I., sat in parliament, and opposed the court; but, being made attorney-general in 1631, he gave his adherence to the most unpopular measures. his proposing. He wrote a "Treatise of the Grounds and Maxims of the Laws of England," the "Complete Lawyer," and other works. D. in Cornwall about 1577; D. 1634.

NUGENT. Thomas, nu'-jent, a native of Ircand, but settled in London, where he occupied land, but settled in London, where he occupied himself in writing and compiling a variety of abblications, among which are, "A French and English Dictionary," which has been often reprinted; "Travels through Germany;" "Observations on Italy and its Inhabitants;" "The Tour of Europe;" "Condilace' Essay on the Origin of Human Knowledge;" "Henault's History of France," &c. n. 1772.

Nueswr, Robert Craggs, Earl of, a nobleman Travetaic lack but the scanfid from the Nursents.

of poetical celebrity, descended from the Nurents of Carlanstown, Westmeath, was chosen M.P. for Mawes, Cornwall, in 1741; was appointed omptroller of the household of Frederick Prince of Wales in 1747; became a lord of the reasury in 1754; one of the vice-treasurers of reland in 1759; and a lord of trade in 1768. He was created baron Nugent and viscount Clare in 1767, and earl Nugent in 1776. His econd wife was Anne, sister of secretary Crapge by whom he obtained a large fortune. He had originally been a Roman Catholic, but became a Protestant, and wrote an admirable ode on his conversion, which, although full of excellent reasoning, did not permanently convince the author, for he died a member of the church he had exposed so severely. Indeed, as Horace Walpole says, he was of a somewhat unstable character, and "one of those men of parts whose dawn was the brightest moment of a long life; and who, though possessed of different talents, employed them in depreciating his own fame, and in dethem in depreciating his own fame, and in de-stroying all opinion of his judgment, except in raising himself to honours." His poems were published anonymously by Dodsley in 1739; he also published "Verses to the Queen," and Fatth," a poem. D. 1738. Nura Powhruts, nu!-ma pom-pil!-i-us, ac-cording to tradition, second king of Rome. Ho is said to have introduced among his subjects religious festivals and a code of laws. Supposed to have lived in the 8th and 7th centuries D.C., reigning from 715 to 672.

reiceing from 715 to 672.

NYMENICA, and "e-n-us, a Greek Christian philosopher of the 2nd century, was a native of Apamea, in Syria, and followed the opinions of Pythagoras and Plato; but he charged the latter philosopher with having stolen, without acknowledgment, from the works of the Jewish legislator, and therefore called him "the Gresk Moses." Fragments of Namenius are extant. Nurse, Fernan de Gruzan, noof-natih, a knight and commander of the order of Santiago, it has 18th eachtery was form at Veilardigo.

in the 16th century, was born at Valladolid, studied at Bologna, and on his return home was appointed Greek professor at the university of Alcala, by its founder, Cardinal Ximenes, who also employed him on his celebrated Polyglott. and employed infinitely and the scientification of the was also appointed Greek professor. His writings chiefly consist of annotations on the works of Seneca, Pliny, and other classic authors. B. about 1470; D. 1553.

NYB, Philip, ni, a nonconformist divine, who in 1620 became curate of St. Michael's, Cornhill. Becoming a puritan, he went to Holland, and did not return till the civil wars, when he was chosen a member of the assembly of divines. He was a zealous champion of the Solemn He was a zeaious champion of the Solemin League and Covenant: he wrote several sermons and tracts. Butler thus whimsically alludes to this person in his "Hudibras,"—"Philip Nye's thanksgiving beard." B. about 1596; D. 1672.

NYSTEN, Peter Hubert, nis'-ten, an eminent French physician and writer on medicine, who was charged with several important underwas charged with several important undertakings by the government of his country, and was appointed physician to the hospital for children. His most important works were "New Detionary of Medicine, Surgery, and Botany," and "Experiments upon the Muscular Organs of Mankind and upon those of Warmblooded Animals." B. 1771; D. 1818.

NYPEL. (See NEYLE.)

OATES, Titus, cats, notorious as the originator of the Popish Plot, was the son of a ribbon-weaver, who afterwards became successively an anabapitst minister and a clergyman of the Church of England, was educated at Merchant Taylors school, and at Cambridge. Having taken orders, Titus became chaplain to the duke of Norfolk, who also gave him a small living: of Norfolk, who also gave him a small living: he next was appointed chaplain of a king's ship, from which he was expelled with disgrace, and then became a Roman Catholic, lived some time at the college of St. Omer, and joined the Jesuits, by whom, however, he was soon dis-missed. He then returned to London, and rejoined the church; but, not meeting with the preferment he desired, embarked in the trade of political calumniator in which he was so marvellously successful. In September, 1678, he began his disclosures concerning the socalled Popish Plot, by making a statement to Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, a magistrate, which he afterwards repeated before the Privy Council and the House of Commons, to the effect, "That the pope felt himself entitled to the possession of England and Ireland on account of the heresy of the people and prince, and he accordingly assumed the sovereignty of these kingdoms; that power to govern them had been delegated to the society of Jesuits, who, through their general, had issued commissions, appointing various persons whom they could trust to the chief offices of state, both civil and military." All the dignities of the church he alleged to be newly appropriated, many of them to Spaniards and other foreigners; that persons had been hired to shoot the king, and that Sir George Wakeham, the queen's physician, had engaged to poison his majesty, the queen herself being privy to the design. He further alleged that a rising of the Roman Catholics was to take place in various parts of the country, and that every means would be adopted for the extirpa-tion of the Protestants. This statement was confirmed by two persons, named Tongue and Bedloe, and upon it several Jesuits, and men Bediloc, and upon it several sessions, and men of distinction, suffered death or imprisonment, among them being Lord Stafferd, who was executed. The system of denouncing persons of position being profitable, was continued for a considerable time. Oates obtained a pension of £1200 a year, and a residence at Whitehall which he continued to enjoy till the death of Charles II. On the accession of James II., however, matters changed. Oates was tried for perjury, convicted, the whole story he had concocted being exposed, and he was condemned to be imprisoned for life, and to be whipped, to be imprisoned for ine, and to be whipped, and stand in the pillory four times; but from William III. he managed to obtain a pension of £400 a year. Under Outes's name there were published "A Narrative of the Popish Plot." The Merchandize of the Whore of Rome." and "Eikon Basilike; or, a Picture of the late King James." a nabout 1619; p. 1795.

King James." B. about 1619; D. 1705.

Oberlin, Jeremiah James, o'-bair-lin, a learned writer in German and French, who, in learned where in German and Frenen, who, in 1763, was appointed librarian at Strasburg, and afterwards became professor of logic and me-taphysics in the university of that city. He wrote a number of curious and learned works; such as "Dissertation upon the Troubadours of Alsace," "Essays on the Dialects of Lorraine," also several valuable elementary manuals in German, and produced good editions of Morace, Tacitus, and other classic authors. B. at Strasburg, 1735; B. at the same city, 1806.

OBERLIN, John Frederick, a celebrated plilanthropist, who, after completing his studies

at the university of Strasburg, entered into orders as a Lutheran divine. In 1767 he became pastor of Waldbach, in the Ban-de-la-Roche, then a sterile district, lying on the west slope of a range of mountains to the east of the Vosges. He found the inhabitants of that dis-Vosges. The round the immediates of the district in a condition bordering upon barbarism; but succeeded in causing them to make a road to Strasburg, to build a bridge across the river Bruche, at Rothau; to plant fruit-trees, and to convert large tracts of pasturage into arable land. He also built school-houses, where reading, writing, arithmetic, and the principles of agriculture were taught; and, at his own expense, printed books and an almanae for the use of the people. Straw-plaiting, knitting, dyeing, and other employments were organized by him. During fifty-nine years he laboured at these noble schemes, creating industry and happiness where he had found ignorance and barbarism. He received the decoration of the Legion of Honour from Louis XVIII., aud, in 1818, was voted the gold medal of the Royal and Central Agricultural Society of Paris. After his death, the inhabitants followed the remains of their "dear father" to the grave; and all the Protestant, and several of the Roman Catholic elergy of the district, joined in the funeral procession. B. at Strasburg, 1710; D. 1826.

OBSEQUENS, Julius, ob'se-quens, a Latin author, who wrote a work entitled "De Prodigiis," which contained a record of all the wonderful events which took place from the foundation of Rome to the time of Augustus. The following is an example of the contents:-"It rained milk on the Gracostasis. At Croton, To rained min of the denecestasts. At Croton, a flock of sheep, with a dog and three shepherds, were killed by lighthing. At Saurun, a call with two heads was born. There was an uproposing in the city, owing to Gracebus proposing his laws." A portion of the book was lost, but was supplied, in an infutation of the author's manner, by Lycostenes, in the 16th century.

Obsequents is supposed to have lived about the commencement of the 4th century.

Ocam, or Ocknam, William, ok'-am, an English scholastic divine of the 14th century, was the disciple of Duns Scotus, and obtained was the disciple of Duns Scotus, and obtained the name of the "Invincible Doctor." Occam was a member of the order of Cordeliers, the general of which, Michael de Cezena, ap-Occam pointed him to write against Pope John XXII., who excommunicated both; but Occam was protected by the king of France. After being protected by the king of France. After being absolved, he fell a second time under the displeasure of the papal see, and was fortunate enough to find another protector in the emperor of Germany. Fabricius, in his "Bibliotheca Latina," gives a list of Occam's writings. D. at Manich, 1347.

Odenatus

Munich, 13w.

Ogariz, or Ocarizz, Don Joseph, o-kar'-eth, Chevalier d', a Spanish diplomatist, who distinguished himself by his attempts to prevent the execution of Louis XVI. In 1788 he was sent to Paris as consul-general; and in 1792 was chargé-d'affaires. He addressed two letters to the National Convention, offering the mediation of his sovereign to engage Prussia and Austria to terminate the war with France, on condition of the suspension of judgment against the king. He afterwards occupied other diplo-matic situations, and died on his way to Constantinople, in 1805.

OCELIUS, o-set-las, a Greek philosopher, of the school of Pythagoras, called, on account of his birthplace, Lucanus. He wrote a book on kings and kingdoms, of which only some frag-ments remain; but his work "On the Nature of the Universe" is extant, and was translated into English by Thomas Taylor, in 1831. The date of his existence is unascertained.

OCHTERLONY, Sir David, bart., ok'-ter-lo-ne, an officer in the East India Company's service, at the age of 18 went to India as a cadet, and at the age of 16 went to india as a cate, and rose to the rank of major-general, which he attained in 1814. In the Nepaulese war he distinguished himself by a series of skilful and successful operations, and was rewarded with the order of the Bath, the dignity of baronet, and a pension of £1000 per annum. B. at and a pension of £1000 per annum. B. at Doston, Massachusetts, 1758; p. 1825.

OKLEY, Simon, ok-le, a learned English divine, was educated at Queen's College, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B.D., and where, in 1711, he was chosen professor of Arabic. His most important works were, "The Arabic. His most important works were, "The History of the present Jews throughout the World," "Introduction to the Study of the Oriental Languages," and "The History of the Stracens." B. at Eveter, 1678; p. 1720. O'CONNELL, Daniel, o-kowi-sel, called in his day "the Liberator of Treland" and the "Great Agitator," was the son of a small landed proprietor in Ireland, by whom he was sent to France to be educated for the Roman Catholic wisethoul. After residing at hath St Unser's priesthood. After residing at both St. Omer's and Douay, he, at the outburst of the French Revolution, fled from St. Omer's, and reached the shores of England in safety. In 1794 he commenced the study of the law, and four years afterwards was called to the bar. His first public speech was against the proposed union of the Irish and English legislatures, and was delivered at Dublin, in which city he obtained a fair amount of legal practice. But, about the year 1803, he began to take a leading part in year 1803, he began to take a leading part in who made war against Sapor, king of Persia, urging the claims of the Catholics upon the with great success. The emperor Gallienus attention of the English legislature. An account of his abours was furnished by limbel, and conferred the title of Augusta on his wife, in a letter to Lord Shaftesbury. "For more Zenobia. Odd-datus was assessinated, with his than twenty years before the passing of the son Herodian, by Meonius, a relation, on whom Emancipacion Bill, the burden of the cause was they had conferred many favours, A.D. 267.

thrown upon me. I had to arrange the meetings, to prepare resolutions, to furnish replies to the correspondence, to rouse the torpid, to animate the lukewarm, to control the violent and inflammatory, to avoid the shoals and breakers of the law." In 1828 he was elected to represent the county of Clare in Parliament, but was not allowed to take his seat, in consequence of the civil disabilities under which he. s a Roman Catholic, laboured. The passing of the Emancipation Bill, however, enabled him to enter the House of Commons in the followto enter the House of Commons in the follow-ing year. From this period until the year 1843 he laboured incessantly at the great movement he had inaugurated, and which was called by himself "the Repeal of the Union." In the ast-named year, however, he was convicted of sedition, sentenced to pay a fine of £2000, and to be imprisoned for a year. An appeal to the House of Lords subsequently led to the reversal of this judgment; but, from that time, his power to excite the political sympathies of his sountrymen appeared greatly to decline. Ex-hausted by his long labours, he went to Italy, in 1847, to recruit his shattered health, but an 1847, to recruit his shattered health, but expired at Genoa, on his way to Rome. B. in Kerry, Ireland, 1775; D. 1847.
O'CONNOR, o-kon'-nor, the name of a dynasty of Irish kings who reigned in Connaught before the conquest of Ireland by the English. The most remarkable of the name was Torlogh O'Connor, who sought to gain power over the whole island, but found a formidable rival in Murtogh O'Brien. Roderick O'Connor reigned about 1171, when Henry II. of England invaded the country. He protested against that act; but Pope Adrian IV. conceded to the English king the possession of his territory.

O'CONNOR, Charles, a learned Catholic divine and antiquary, who was many years librarian to the duke of Buckingham at Stowe. He wrote "Columbanus's Letters," a "Narrative of the most Interesting Events in Modern Irish History," and made a collection of ancient Irish chronicles. D. 1823.

OCTAVIA, obetai vi-a, daughter of Caius Octavius, and sister to Augustus, was first married to Claudius Marcellus, by whom she had two children, before his death, which happened a little after the war of Persia. She then married Antony, to whom she behaved with the greatest respect. His conduct, however, was so base as greatly to inflame the people against him. But the loss of her son, Marcellus, an accomplished youth, gave her the deepest concern. D. 10 B.C.

OCTAVIA, daughter of Claudius and Messalina, was betrothed to Lucius Silanus; but that marriage was broken off by the intrigues of Agrippina, and Octavia married Nero, who afterwards divorced her, and, at the instigation of Poppæa, sent her to a small island, where she was put to death, at the age of 20 years, in 62.

OCTAVIUS, a name common to many eminent Romans, but of celebrity inferior to Octavius Cæsar, afterwards Augustus, second Roman emperor. (Sec Augustus.)

ODENATUS, od'-e-nai'-tus, king of Palmyra, who made war against Sapor, king of Persia,

Odescelchi

Oehlenschlager

ODESCALCHI, Marco Antonio, o'-dais-kal'-ke, an Italian philanthropist, cousin of Pope Innocent XI., who offered him high preferments in the church, but Odescalchi preferred devoting his life and his ample fortune to works of benevolence. He converted his palace at Rome into an hospital for the reception of the needy out-casts of all nations and creeds without distinc-He fitted up 1000 beds, and fed and clothed all who stood in need of such assist-Whenever he met with a person who apance. Whenever ne mer with a person who ap-peared forlorm and in poverty, he would stop, question him, and convey him to his mansion. He left the whole of his property for the suppose of the hospital he had founded. D. 1670.— Thomas Odescalchi, a relative of the above, was also an eminent philanthropist, and founded the school of St. Michael de Ripegrande, for the education of poor children, which he liberally endowed. D. 1692.

ODENABRE, Josephus Dionysius, o-de-vair, one of the most distinguished historical painters of modern times, was brought up in the college of the Augustines, at Bruges, and was designed for mercantile pursuits, but evincing a decided predilection for art, was placed in the Bruges Academy, where he obtained the first prize for Academy, where he obtained the first price of drawing, in 1796. He subsequently went to Paris, studied under David, and other French masters, obtained the grand prize for painting of the French Academy, in 1804, for a picture of the death of Phoelon, and was presented to the emperor. He then resided for eight years in Rome, and sent a picture of the "Coro-nation of Charlemagne" to the French Acanation of Charlemagne" to the French Academy, which was much admired. In 1814 he established himself at Brussels, and there painted his pictures of the "Peace of Urecht," and "the Battle of Waterloo, at the moment the Prince of Orange was wounded," for the king of the Netherlands, by whom he had been accounted to the Netherlands, by whom he had been constituted to the Netherlands, by whom he had been the constituted with the Netherlands which was the constituted to the Netherlands by whom he had been constituted with the Netherlands, by whom he had been the Netherlands by the Netherlands between the Netherlands by the Netherl king of the Netherlands, by whom he had been appointed court painter. A variety of other works followed, among which are, "Bramante introducing Raffaelle to Pope Julius II."
"Triumph of Cimabue," "The Battle of Nieaport," "The Establishment of the Fower of the House of Orange," "David in his Studio,"
"The Inauguration of the King at Brussels in 1815," &c. besides several Scripture pieces for churches in the Netherlands. B. at Bruges, 1773. p. 1820.

Odington, Walter, od'-ing-ton, called Walter of Evesham, was a monk of that monastery in Worcestershire, and lived in the reign of Henry III. He was an astronomer, mathematician, and musician; on each of which subjects he wrote treatises. "De Motibus Planetarum et wrote treatises. De alotious Planetarum et de Mutation et Aëris," is attributed to him; and Dr. Burney observes of his treatise entitled "Of the Speculation of Music," which is preserved in the library of Benet College, Cambridge, "that if all other musical tracts, from the time of Boethius to Franco and John Cotton were lost, with this MS. our knowledge would not be much diminished."

ODOACER, o-do'-a-ser, a celebrated Gothic chieftain, who originally served among the barbarian auxiliaries which the emperors of the West had employed to protect Italy. He cevolted against the emperor Augustulus, whom Zenobia then assumed the government, under the fittle of queen of the East.

Augustus. He allotted to his Gothie followers a third of the conquered territories; but nevertheless governed Italy with the greatest modetheless governed realy with the greatest mode-ration. In 489, Theodoric, king of the Ostro-goths, marched from the Danube, and in seve-ral battles defeated Odoacer, who was compelled to shut himself up in Ravenna, where he held out for more than two years. In 493 he surrendered to Theodoric, who promised to spare his life, but slew him at a banquet shortly afterwards.

O'Donnell, Leopold, o-don'-nel, Duke of Tetuan, a modern Spanish marshal and statesman, who early entered the military service, and reached the grade of colonel in his 25th year. Upon the death of Ferdinand VII., in 1832, he espoused the cause of Maria-Christina, and was a faithful adherent to her fortunes until her forced abdication of the regency in 1836, when he took refuge in France. In the meanwhile, he had been created general and count of Lucena. After the fall of Espartere, count of Lucena. After the fall of Espartero, in 1843, General O'Donnell was enabled to return to Spain, and was soon afterwards sent to Cuba, as captain-general; in which capacity he Cuba, as captain-general; in which capacity he acquired a very large fortune, and was, it is said, far from hostile to the slave-trade. After his return to Spain, he was appointed director-general of infantry. Being implicated in a conspiracy at the beginning of the year 1854, he was compelled to sceretch himself; but soon afterwards left his retreat, and put himself at the head of the insurrection, which resulted in the head of the insurrection, which resulted in a change of ministry. Espartero being commanded to compose a new one, in which O'Donnell held the department of war. After being eolipsed during some time by Narvaza, he at length succeeded in effecting his rival's overthrow, and returned to power in 1858. In the following year he was appointed commander-in-chief of the Spanish forces sent against Morocco, that the command he was another specifically the control of the spanish forces sent against Morocco. In that command he was successful; he caused the enemy to capitulate, and to cede to Spain some territory, as well as to pay a large sum.

some territory, as well as to pay a large sum. Upon his return to Spain, he was created duke of Tetuan. 2. 1805; p. Nov. 5, 1867.

ECOLAMPADIUS, John, e-ko-lam-pai'-di-us, a celebrated German divine, who, in 1522, became professor of divinity and principal preacher at Bâle, where he exposed the abuses of the Romish church, and exhorted the Swiss to embrace the principles of the Reformation; but, in 1525, he joined with Zwingli against Luther in the dispute relative to the sacrament, and wrote a learned treatise on the subject. Mosheim calls him one of the most learned men of his century, and it was owing to his exertions that the Reformation took root in Switzerland. B. at Weinsberg, Franconia, 1482; p. 1531.

ORCUMENTUS, e-ku-mc'-ni-us, an ancient Greek commentator upon the Scriptures, was bishop of Trica, in Thessaly, in the 10th century.

OBBLENSCHLAGER, Adam Gottlob, c (r)'-len-hlai-ger, the greatest Scandinavian poet, whose ather was German and his mother Danish, His father rose to be steward of the king of Denmark's palace at Fredericksburg, where the early youth of the future poet was spent. He was educated for a mercantile career, and at the age of 16 was placed in a counting-house; but being seized with a desire to appear on the stage, he obtained an engagement in the theatre Noted against the emperor augustums with the select at Ravenna and put into prison, of Coprenhagen. He soon quitted this pursuit, O'Cocarr then preclaimed himself king o'I Kaly, however, and devoted himself to the law, which but rejected the imperial titles of Cessar and, was in turn descreted for literature. In 1601 he witnessed the attack made by Lord Nelson upon sion. Passing through various distinguished the Danish fleet. "That contest," he after positions, he at length attained the office of wards wrote, "inspired the Danes with a faste prime minister of Denmark; but in that capafor poetry, as the battles of Marathon and Salamis did the Greeks, and the destruction of the Spanish armada the English in the time of Elizabeth." In the following year he produced Spanish armman the engigin in the time of Elizabeth." In the following year he produced a small volume of poems, which instantly brought him fame. His next work was a play, entitled "Aladdin," which was founded upon the celebrated story in the "Arabian Nights," and which placed him at the head of the poets and which pieces min as one near or the poets of his country. In 1805 he was granted a travelling stipend by the government; whereupon he went to Germany, and while in that country composed some of his best works, in the native language of his father. He witnessed the battles of Auerstadt and Jena before leaving Germany, immediately after which he repaired to Paris, where he wrote his finest work, the tragedy of "Palnatoke." He next visited tragedy of "Palnatoke," He next visited Rome, where he wrote his "Correggio," and became the friend of Thorwaldsen. In 1810 he returned to his native country, and received a cordial reception at the hands of the king and queen of Denmark. Shortly afterwards he married, and during the succeeding five years continued to produce plays, but inferior to those he had already composed. In 1816 he again went to Germany and France, but re-turned after an absence of twelve months. Eleven years subsequently he lost his father, who, he writes, " was vain of his son; but, like a sensible father, he never allowed me to see it; only sometimes I detected the feeling when he had been reading my poems." In the same year he went to Sweden, where he was received with enthusiasm and was crowned with a laurel wreath. He paid a third visit to Paris in 1844, invited to court by Louis Philippe, and there met king Leopold, who requested him to come to Brussels. When he had attained his 70th birthday, a grand fete was held in his ho-nour, but in the beginning of the following year he breathed his last. Like Thorwaldsen, Ochlenschläger was honoured with a public funeral, at which the nobility and all the most distinguished persons in Copenhagen attended. One of his fellow-countrymen writes of the poet,—"Small as Denmark is, it must be counted among the great powers of the world of art and poetry, since it has a sculptor to show like Thorwaldsen, whom only the great masters of antiquity can be considered to rival; and a poet like Oehlenschläger, who can worthily take the fourth seat by the side of the three heroes of poetry, Shak-speare, Byron, and Göthe." Besides poems, operas, and comedies, he wrote twenty-four tragedies, nineteen of which are founded upon Scandinavian subjects. He also translated one play of Shakspeare's—the "Midsummer Night's Dream," and one of Otway's—"The Orphan," into Danish. The poet left behind his Autobiography, in the pages of which he evinces a high admiration for his own talents: but those best acquainted with his works state that this was grounded upon sterling merit. Some of his prounted upon sterning inerth. Some of mis poetical works have been translated into Eng-lish by Theodore Martin. B. at Vesterbro, Copenhagen, 1779; D. at Copenhagen, 1850. Ornsten, Anders Sandöe, er stea, a modern

OF BIOGRAPHY.

Oursted

Danish statesman, who received his education Daniel Statesman, who received his education at the University of Copenhagen, and afterwards applied himself to the study of jurisprudence, which he subsequently adopted as his profes-783

positions, he at length attained the office of prime minister of Denmark; but in that capacity displayed a strong tendency towards reactionary measures, which excited so much ill-feeling in the kingdom, that he was driven from power in 1855. The members of the Oersted ministry were next impeached, and brought to trial before the supreme tribunal, but were in the end acquitted. In his retirement, the for-mer minister occupied himself with composing a history of his own career, which was published in 1856, and contained important matter towards the history of modern Denmark. n. in the island of Langeland, 1778; p. 1860.

OEESTED, Anders Sandöe, a modern Danish traveller, and nephew of the preceding, who travelled in the West Indies and South America. He published some works on natural history, and contributed to the Journal of the Royal Geographical Society of London an account of Seographical society of contain an account of a survey made for a canal through the river Sapea to the port of Salinos, or Bolenos, in Costa Rica. B. at Rudkjöbing, 1816. Orbesten, Hans Christian, a celebrated Danish bilosopher, who originated the science of lectro-magnetism, which paved the way for the invention of the electric telegraph. He was mother of the minister with whom he studied at the university of Copenhagen. In 1800 he became doctor of philosophy in that institution. After spending two years in Holland and France After spending covyeas in monato and rance, he returned to Copenhagen, and there composed a treatise upon the identity of the forces of magnetism, electricity, and galvanism, which relationship had until then been only surmised. He proved that "there is always a magnetic circulation round the electric conductor, and that the electric current, in accordance with a that the electric current, in accordance with a certain law, always exercises determined and similar impressions on the direction of the magnetic needle, even when it does not pass through, but near the needle." The Royal Society of London presented him with its Copley medal, and the French Institute granted Copiey medal, and the French Institute granted him 3000 francs for this demonstration. In 1809 he published his "Manual of Mechanical Bysics," in which several chemical discoveries were announced. The years 1822-23 were passed by him in France and Bagland. In 1846 he was present at a meeting of the British Association at Southampton. Like our own Founday, he was particularly happy in his delivery of contents a benefit of the Southampton. occasional lectures to non-scientific people; and a collection of his discourses was translated into English, and published under the title of "The Soul in Nature." He was likewise a regular contributor to newspapers and magazines, and sought, on every occasion, to popularize the facts of natural science in his country. He was tute, knight of the Legion of Honour, and of the Prussian order which rewards the distinguished in arts and sciences. B. at Rudkjöbing, 1777; D. near Copenhagen, 1851.

Office of Jaking of Mercia, succeeded Ethelbald in 755. He murdered Ethelbert, panenau m 755. He murdered Ethelbert, this of the East Angles, and took possession of his kingdom. To make atonement for his guilt, he gave the ignith of his goods to the Church, made a journey to Rome, instituted the tax called Peter-pence, and built the monastery at St. Albants. D, 764.

Offenbach

ford, as teacher to his children. That nobleman appointed him deputy master of the revels at Dublin, where Ogilby erected a theatre. Upon the outbreak of the Irish rebellion, he returned to England, and settled in Cambridge, where he to England, and settled in Cambridge, where he applied himself to the study of the learned languages. He was appointed, in 1661, to conduct the ceremonies at the king's coronation, and of which he published a pompous account in folio, with plates. Ogilby translated Virgil and Homer into English verse; and published a magnificent Bible, with prints, for which he was remunerated by the House of Lords. He was appointed geographical printer to the king. The other works of this industrious writer were an account of Japan, an Atlas, the Fables of Æsop, in verse, and a "Book of Roads." This last went through numerous editions; but was afterwards superseded by Patterson. B. near Edinburgh, 1800; D. 1876. OGH.VIE, John, o'gil-se, a pious Scotch divine and poet, received his education at the university and poet, received his education at the university of Aberdeen; and was for more than half a century minister of Midmar in Aberdeenshire, Among his works are, "Pittannia," an epic peem, "Philosophical and Critical Observations on Composition," "An Examination of the Evidence of Prophecy," and "Sermons." B. 1733

D. 1814.

OGLEPHORPE, James Edward, o'gil-thorp, an English general, who entered the army as ensign in 1710. He afterwards served under Prince Engene, to whom he became secretary and aide-de-camp. In 1732 he went to America, where he helped to found the colony of Georgia, and erected the town of Sayannah. He again visited that country, and made an unsuccessful visites that country, and made an unsuccessive attempt upon Augustine, in Florida, belonging to the Spaniards. For this he was tried, on his return to England, and acquitted. In 1745, he was promoted to the rank of major-general, and was sent to the north against the rebels, but did not overtake them: for which he was again brought to a court-martial, and honourably acquitted. B. in London, about 1688; D. 1785.

acquitted. B. in London, about 1888; D. 1783.

UHALIOARI, Sylveste, -And-ro-m, an Irisa antiquary, was brought up and practised as a surgeon, and wrote several medical treatises. In 1772 he published an "introduction to the Study of the History and Antiquities of Ireland," which was followed by a "General History of Ireland," B. 1728; D. 1807.

O'Hara, Kane, o-ha-m, an Irish dramatist, who had much unusical isste and a felicitous

UHRA, Rane, o-ka-ra, an Irisa ramanis, who had much musical taste, and a felicitous talent for adapting verses to old airs. His chief productions are "Midas," which was extremely well received, and is still a favourite; "The Golden Pipin," "The Two Missers," "April Day," and "Tom Thumb," n. 1789.

OJEDA, Alphonso, o-hai'-da, a Spanish navi-gator, who accompanied Columbus in his second expedition, and commanded the flotilla sent out

French musical composer, who made himself to the New World. After experiencing a great famous for his light and sparkling "musical before the New World. After experiencing a great famous for his light and sparkling "musical before the New World. After experiencing a great famous for his light and sparkling "musical before the reference of the foreign for the profession of painting, but who, takes charming little trifies are,—"Lee Boux destined for the profession of painting, but who, Avenujes," "Une Nuit Blanche," "La Belle having written a play which was placed upon Helène," "La Grande Duchesse de Gerolstein," the stage at Dublin when he was only 18, abanam "Robinson Crusoc." B. in France, 1822. doned the studio for the thectare. He remained minous writer, was originally a damcing-master, and employed in the family of the earl of Strafford, as teacher to his enlithen. That nobleman rest of his life, antirely devoting himself to the rest of his life, entirely devoting himself to the rest or his fire, enturely devoting failinstil to the composition of plays. Among the best of these productions may be mentioned, "Wild Oats," The Highland Reel," and "The Agreeable Surprise." Towards the close of his life he published "Recollections of the Life of John O'Keeffs," but had ceased to write for the stage, because the control of the stage, the control of the stage of Oken, Lawrence, o'-ken, an eminent Swiss naturalist, who studied medicine and natural history at 6öttingen, and was afterwards professor of medicine in the universities of Jena and Zurich. The aim of all his writings might be summarily said to be an attempt at applying the principles of transendental philosophy to the facts of natural history. He produced his first work in 1802, with the title, "Elements of Natural Philosophy, the Theory of the Senses, and the Classification of Animals founded thereon." Oken was the first to suggest, in his work on generation, published in 1805, that all animals are built up of vesicles or cells. His remarkable essay "On the Signification of the Bones of the Skull," attracted little attention at the time of its publication, but was nevertheless the forerunner of the investigations of tess the foretainer of the interstigations of Carus, Geoffroy St. Hilaire, and Professor Owen upon the laws of homology in the vertebrate skeleton. In 1847, his work called "Elements of Physio-Philosophy" was translated into English; and although, like the other efforts of this writer, it is beyond the grasp of the gene-ral reader, it would seem to be of the deepest importance to the man of science. B. at Offen-

berg, 1779; b. at Zurich, 1851.
OKTAI, ok-tai, grand khan of the Mongol Tartars, was third son and successor of Genghis Khan. He overran the north of China and Armenia; made himself master of Moscow, of Poland, and of Hungary; and for a time threat-ened the whole of the Christian world. His chief minister was the sage Yo-lin-tchou-tsaï, who ruled with justice, but vainly attempted to subdue the ferocity of the Mongols. Oktai

D. 1241.

OLAUS I. (or III.,) o'-la-us, king of Denmark, perished in 814, in combat with the Franks.
OLAUS II. (or IV.,) king of Denmark, succeeded his brother, Canute IV., in 1086. A terrible famine desolated the kingdom during his reign. D. 1095.

OLAUS I., king of Norway, ascended the throne in 994. He introduced Christianity in Norway, Iceland, and Greenland. Having been defeated by the kings of Sweden and Denmark, in 1000, he threw himself into the sea.

OLAUS II., king of Norway, energetically pro-pagated Christianity throughout his dominions; but was driven from his throne by Canute in 1030. Two years afterwards, he was killed by the people of Drontheim.

mmanded the flotilla sent out OLIVS III., surnamed the Pacific, reigned, in 201, in 1499, and which led to conjunction with his brother Magnus II., from 1000 until 1008, and singly for nine years after- discourses, and edited the works of Wickliffe.

Olans

OLAUS IV., son of Magnus III., reigned, in conjunction with his two brothers, between the years 1103 and 1116.

OLAUS V., son of Haco VIII., succeeded to the Oblas V., son of fract v III., succeeded to the through of Denmark in 1876, and to that of Nor-way in 1830. After his death, in 1887, his mother, Margaret, daughter of Waldemar III., united the three kingdoms of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway under one crown.

OLAUS MAGNUS, a Swedish author of the 16th century, who held the office of archdeacon in the Swedish church until the principles of the Reformation began to spread in the country; upon which he retired to Rome, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was the author of a work upon the antiquities of the North of Europe, which was published at Rome in

B. about 1500; D. at Rome, about

1555. 1570

OLAVIDES, Paul Anthony Joseph, Count de, o-la-ve'-dais, a celebrated Spanish statesman, who became secretary to the Count de Aranda, whom he accompanied in his embassy to whom he accompanied in his enbassy to France. On his return to Spain, Charles III. created him count, and appointed him superin-tendent-general of Seville. He afterwards un-dertook the great work of fertilizing the Sierra Morena, or Black Mountains, a desert region barren to the very summit; but, by his perse-verance, aided by the exertions of a colony of Computer, which he accountered to settle by Germans, which he encouraged to settle in the place, he succeeded in his task. Notwithstanding the benefits which this worthy man had rendered his country, he was accused of heresy by the Inquisition, was disgraced, and thrown into prison. He escaped to France, where he wrote a book entitled "The Triumph of the Gospel," which was the means of procuring his recall to his native land. B. at Lima, 1725; D. in Andalusia, 1803.

OLBERS, Henry William Matthias, ol'-bairs, an eminent German astronomer, who was educated for the profession of medicine, in the exercise of which, combined with astronomical pursuits, his whole life was passed. He discovered two planets,—Pallas in 1802, and Vesta in 1807. In 1815 he discovered a comet, and subsequently wrote a treatise on the probability that a comet may come into collision with the earth. Among other useful works of his was a proposal to revise the nomenclature of the stars, and a reformation of the constellations. Dr. Olbers was fellow of the Royal Society of London, corre-sponding member of several learned societies of Europe, and knight of the Prussian orders of the Red Eagle and Danebrog. B. near Bremen.

1758; p. at Bremen, 1840.

JUNES, D. at Bremen, 1830.

OLDLOAFFUS, Sir Join, Lord Cobham, old'-kasok the first martyr and first author among the English noblity. In the relign of Henry IV., he commanded the English army in France, where he compelled the duke of Orleans to raise the siege of Paris. He was an adherent of Wickliffe's doctrines, which he propagated with such zeal, that, in the reign of Henry V., he was such teat, that, in the reigh of heavy v., he was sent to the Tower, whence he made his escape, but was taken in Wales. Being conveyed to London, he was condemned to be hanged and burnt; which sentence was executed with circumstances of peculiar barbarity, in St. Giles's Fields, London, in 1417. He wrote "Twelve Conclusions, addressed to the Parliament of England," a number of religious tracts and Years 1857-8-9." His latest work was entitled;

Oliphant

DIDITIED, Ann, old'-feeld, a celebrated English actress. Sir John Vanbrugh recommended her to Mr. Rich, patentee of the King's theatre, by whom she was engaged. Her abilities were of the highest order, and her person extremely of the ingress ofter, and is person to the ingress of the person pleasing. Her remains were interred in Westminster Abbey. B. in London, 1683; D. 1730.

OLDHAM, John, ole-dam, an English poot, who shortly after taking a D.A. degree at Oxford, became usher in the free school at Croydon. Some of his poems being read by the him the appointment of tutor to the grandsons of Sir Edward Thurlow, and afterwards to a son of Dr. Lower. He subsequently resided with the earl of Kingston. His works were printed in Bell's annotated edition of the English poets.

D. at Shipton, Gloucestershire, 1653; D. 1683. Oldmixon, John, old'-mix-on, an English pulitical writer and historian. He was a violent opponent of the Stuart family, in the reign of Queen Anne, and attacked the best writers of gave him a conspicuous place in the "Dun-ciad." He became collector of the customs at Bridgewater. He wrote "A History of England during the Reigns of the Heast of Stnart," and some other works. p. 1673; p. in London, 1742.

OLDYS, William, ol'-dis, an historical and blographical writer, was the natural son of Dr. Oldys, chancellor of Lincoln and advocate of the court of Admiralty. Of the early life and edu-cation of the son little is known; but he is said to have squandered the patrimony which had been left him. He afterwards became keeper of Lord Oxford's library, of which he formed the catalogue when that collection was sold by Osestalogue when that collection was sold by Os-borne, the bookseller. He was also employed to superintend the publication of the Harlician Miscellany. The only public post he ever had was that of Norroy king-at-arms. His prin-eipal works are, "Life of Sir Walter Rieleigh," some articles in the "General Historical Dis-tionary," those in the "Biographia Dritamica" signed "G?" "The British Librarian," "Life of Richard Carew the Antiquary," a translation of Canden's "Britannia," and a number of trea-tises upon medical and bibliographical subjects. D. 1087; p. 1701.

OLIPHARY, Lawrence, of:-frant. a modern

OLIPHANT, Lawrence, oli-i-fiint, a modern English writer and traveller, who was educated in England, but went out while very young to Ceylon, where his father was chief justice. He afterwards visited Nepaul with Jung Bahadoor, and, upon his return, published his observa-tions, in a work entitled "A Journey to Kat-mandu." He next studied law at Edinburgh and at Lincoln's Inn, and was called to the bar. In 1852 he went to Russia, and, among other In 1932 he were to raising and, among other provinces of that country, visited the Crimea. In the following year he produced an account of his wanderings, in a work entitled "The Russian Shores of the Black Sea." His next occupation was as private secretary to the earl of Eigin, whom he accompanied to Canada; and when the earl was appointed lord high com-missioner to China, Mr. Oliphant again acted in his former capacity. Towards the close of the year 1860 he gave to the public an account of his observations in China and Japan, in his "Narrative of the Earl of Elgin's Mission in the Patriots and Filibusters; or, Incidents of Political and Exploratory Travel." B. 1832.

OLIVARES, Gaspar Guzman, Count de, o-li-

va'-rais, an eminent Spanish statesman, who, during twenty-two years, administered the affairs of the kingdom under the feeble Philip IV. He first became prime minister in the room of the Duke de Uceda, and began his political career by several useful measures; but his haughty conduct at length occasioned a revolt in Catalonia, and the separation of Portugal from Spain. Olivares was disgraced, and died of chagrin at Toro, 1645. B. at Rome, about 1587.

OLIVER OF MALMESEURY, of i-ver, a Benedictine monk of the 11th century, chiefly memorable as the first Englishman who attempted to travel through the aerial regions. He is said to have been well skilled in mechanics; but in attempting to fly from a lofty tower, with wings of his own construction fastened to his hands and feet, he fell, and broke both his legs.

ont reet, ne ren, and broad both ins regs.

OLIVER, Isaac, an English painter in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He painted historical pieces, but chiefly miniatures in a style of exquisite beauty. B. 1556; D. 1617.

quisite Deauty. 9, 1856; D. 1817.
OLIVER, Peter, eldest son of the preceding, was an historical and miniature painter, and even surpassed his father. Nineteen of his historical paintings were in the collections of Charles I. and James II. Some of these are still kept in Kensington Palace. B. 1801; D. about 1664.

OLIVER, George, D.D., a catholic divine and ecclesiastical historian, was educated at Sedg-ley Park and Stonyhurst College, and in 1807 was appointed superintendent of the Roman Catholic mission at Exeter, where he resided for fifty-five years, universally esteemed and respected. He paid great attention to the history and antiquities of the district, and wrote "Historical Collections relating to the Monasteries of Devon" "History of Exeter," "Moteries of Deron." "History of Exeten," "Mo-nasticon Diocesis Exoniensis," "Lives of the Bishops, and History of the Cathedral of Exeter," and "Cit'll History of Exeter," the last of which he left in MS. B. 1781; D. 1861. Outrer, Joseph Thoulier d', ob-e-ai, a learned Fronch ertic, who studied under his uncle, a Jesuit, and acquired a great knowledge of the learned alanguages. In 1740 he published an excellent edition of the works of Giero, in a voils with notes. Besides the above he pro-

9 vols., with notes. Besides the above, he pro-9 vois., with notes. Besides the above, he pro-fueed a French translation of Cicero's treatise on the "Nature of the Gods," a translation of some of the ortains of Demosthenes and Cicero, a "History of the French Academy," of which he was a member, and some other works.

which he was a member, and some other works.

B. near Salins, 1682 p. at Paris, 1768.

OLIVERAN, Pierre Robert, o-lo-va-tit, a Trench reformer, and the first to translate the Scriptures directly from the Hebrew and Greck into French. It is said by some writers that Calvin revised the whole work, which was published at Nouthaltein 1535, and is called the Bible of the Sword, from the emblem adopted by the printer. Oliveran was banished from Geneva, and went to Rome, where he died in 1539 as is supposed of noison. It near the in 1539, as is supposed of poison. B. near the in 1809, as is supposed to provide the first feeling of the 18th century.

OLIVETRA, Francis Xavier de, of twait raft a Portuguese knight, who became a convert to the Protestant faith; and in order to enjoy his opinions unmolested, went to England in 1748. He published "Memoirs" of his travels, "Fa-miliar Letters," "A Pathetic Discourse to his Countrymen on the Earthquake at Lisbon in 1756," "The Chevalier d'Oliveyra burnt in 1756," Effigy as an Heretic, why and wherefore?" &c.; and left at his death a great number of MSS. including "Oliveriana, or Memoirs, Historical and Literary," 27 vols. 4to. B. 1702; D. 1783.

OLIVIER, Claude Matthew, o-liv-'i-ai, advocate of the Parliament of Aix, was one of the founders of the academy of Marseilles, and distinguished himself by his cloquence. His works are,—"History of Philip of Macedon, Father of Alexander the Great," "Memoir on the Succour given to the Romans by the People of Marseilles, in the Second Punic War and in that of the Gauls," and several historical dissertations of less importance. B. 1701; D. 1736.

OLIVIER, Guillaume Antoine, a French entomologist, who was in 1792 sent upon a mission to Persia, and returned at the end of six years with a rich collection of specimens of natural which a refer content of specimens of intural history. He became a member of the French Institute in 1800, and published, among other works, "Dictionary of the Natural History of Insects," in which he was assisted by Latreille and Godard. n. 1756; p. 1814.

and Goddrid. B. 1766; 5. 1814.

Outsides, olimispica, daughter of Neoptolemus, king of Epirus, was the wife of Philip, king of Macedon, and mother of Alexander the Great. She was repudiated by Philip about 336. B.o. Olympia, in revenge, is presumed have instigated the murder of Philip. After the death of Alexander, she soized the government of Macedonia and not to lead the nursive of the of Macedonia, and put to death a number of the leading personages of the kingdom; but Cas-sander at length besieged her in Pydna, and obliged her to surrender. Cassander promised to spare her life, but she was soon afterwards killed by the relatives of those whom she had put to death. D. 315 B.c.

OMAR I., o'-mar, second caliph of the Mussulmans after Abu Bekr, made himself master of Syria, and, in 637, besieged and took Jerusalem, after a defence of several months. iom, after a defence of several months. In the following year he invaded Persia, and led a powerful army into Egypt, the conquest of which country was completed by the taking of Alexandria in 640. Upon that occasion Omar ordered the famous library founded in that city by Ptolemy Philadelphus to be burnt; for, said he, "if the books of the Greeks agree with the book of God (the Koran), they are superfluous, and need not be preserved; and if they disagree, they are pernicious, and ought to be de-stroyed." The manuscripts were thereupon given stroyed. The manuscripts were the return of the city for fuel. This inflexible Mussulman conqueror is said to have taken 36,000 cities or castles, destroyed 4000 temples or churches, and founded or endowed 1400 mosques. He instituted the era of the Hejira, or Flight of Mohammed, from which the Mussulmans compute their years. It commenced with the 16th of July, 622 A.D. His memory is held in the highest veneration by the Sunnite, or orthodox Mohammedans; but the Shiites, or partisans of Ali, regard him as a usurper. Omar was assassinated by a Persian slave, 641.

OMAR II., the eighth caliph of the Ommiades, was great-grandson of the preceding, and suc-ceeded Solyman in 717. He laid siege to Constantinople, but was forced to raise it, on account of a violent storm, which destroyed a great part of his fleet. Poisoned, 720. OMAR, Ben Afttas, a Mohammedan monarch of Estremadura and Portugal, succeeded his brother in 1092. He assisted the Mussulman king of Toledo against Alphonso VII., but was defeated by the latter. In 1086 he, with other Moorish monarchs, sought the aid of the sultan of Marocco, who joined his troops with the Mohammedans, and fought a sanguinary battle with Alphonso near Badajoz. The Africans sub-sequently turned against Omar, who was assassinated by them in 1090.

OMER PASHA.

ORANGE, WILLIAM, PRINCE OF.

ORMOND, MARQUIS OF.

O'MEARA, Barry Edward, o-meer'-a, the confidential medical attendant of the emperor Napoleon in his last days, and author of "A Voice from St. Helena," was originally a surgeon in the British navy, and happened to be on board the Bellerophon in that capacity, on the 7th of August, 1815, when Napoleon went on board. Napoleon having observed Dr. O'Meara's skill in attending to some of the crew, and his know-ledge of Italian, made overtures to him, on being transferred to the Northumberland, to accompany him to St. Helena as surgeon, his own not being able to go with him. Having obtained Admiral Keith's permission, Dr. O'Meara assented, and remained with the ex-emperor till July, 1818, when he was recalled and deprived of his rank. He was latterly an active partisan of Daniel O'Connell. B. in Ireland about 1778; D. 1836.

OMER OF OMAR PASHA, o'-mer, a modern Turkish commander, whose former name was Michael Lattas. He, being a native of Austrian Croatia, served at first as cadet in an Aus-trian regiment, from which he became as-sistant surveyor of roads and bridges in his native district. About his twenty-eighth year he suddenly left the Austrian service, and went into the Turkish province of Bosnia, where he embraced the Mohammedan faith, adopted the name of Omer, and obtained employment as tutor in the family of a Turkish merchant. Subsequently visiting Constantinople with his pupils, he became master in the new military school. In a short time he attracted the notice of Khosroo Pasha, the minister of war, who attached him to his staff, and afterwards be-stowed upon him the hand of his ward, a rich heiress. After serving in the Danubian Princi-palities, and as aide-de-camp to General Chrzanowski, Khosroo Pasha obtained for him the appointment of writing-master to Abd-ul-Medjid, the late sultan. In 1839 he served with the Turkish army sent against Ibrahim Pasha, and, three years later, was appointed military commandant of a district in Syria. When the Russians passed into Wallachia, in 1848, to act against the insurgent Hungarians, Omer Pasha went to the same place as commander of a Turkish army of observation. His next services were against the disaffected beys of Bosnia, whom he reduced to submission to the authority of the sultan. At the commencement of the year 1853, he marched at the head of 20,000 men against the mountaineers of Montenegro, who were almost completely subjugated by him. In 1853 he was appointed to the command-in-chief of the Turkish army in Bulgaria. Prince Gortschakoff, in command of a powerful Russian army, was upon the opposite bank of the Danube; and against him Omer Pasha executed a series of strategic manœuvres, which completely baffled the skill of the former general. At Calafat, Oltonitza, and Citate, the pasha repulsed the Russians; and finally, at Silistria, he in-flicted on them so heavy a defeat that they were compelled to evacuate the Dambian Principalities. In 1855 he went to the Crimes, having a Turkish and Egyptian army under his com-mand, but remained inactive until he was sent into Georgia,—Teflis, the capital of which, he threatened; but the surrender of Kars forced him to beat a retreat to Redoubt Kaleh. 1862 he was again employed against the Mon-tenegrins, and, in 1867, he was sent to Candia to put down the revolt in that island. B. at

Vlaski, Austrian Croatia, 1801.

Viaski, Austrian Canala, 1901.

Ornalate, Michael Jurgen, on-da'-obe, spring from a Tamul family of high rath at Arcot, was, like his father, physician to the king of Tanjore, who sent him to Ceylon, at the request of the first Dutch governor of the island, to cure his wife of a dangerous ailment. His success made the governor his friend, and procured him a medical appointment at Colombo where he settled. He was afterwards converted to Christianity, and became the founder of a Ceylonese family, many of whose members have become distinguished in the learned pro-nave become dissignment in the learned professions. B. at Aroot; D. 1714.

ONDARTH Peter Philip Jurgen Quint, A.L.M., Ph.D., I.U.D., the fifth in descent from the preceding, is unparalleled as being the only native of the East who figures in the history of Europe. Though a native of Ceylon, he was sent to Holland, of which Ceylon was then a dependency, to be educated for the ministry; but the condition of the country induced him to take an active part in politics, and he became an eminent patriotic reformer,—the Hampden of Holland—defending her liberties with his tongue, pen, and sword. The revolution of 1787 drove him into exile, but that of 1795 1/8/ Grove him into exile, but that of 1/39 restored him to render important services to his country by land and sea. In 1811, Napoleon I. made him a member of the Imperial Council of Prizes. Returning to Holland in 1814, under the auspices of William I., he was named a member of the High Court of Justice of the Netherlands, India, where he died 1818. B. at Ceylon, 1758.—A brief memoir of Dr. Quint Ondaatje will be found in the "Leisure Hour" for March, 1867.

OPIR, John, o'-pe, an eminent English painter, who was the son of a poor carpenter in Cornwho was the son of a poor carpenter in Corn-wall. His talents for design were evheed at an early age, but were discouraged by his father, who intended thin for his own trade. Despite every obstacle, the lad continued to im-prove himself in drawing, and soon attracted great notice in his native district, in conso-quence of his spirited likenesses of the people who sat to him for their portraits. Dr. John. Wolcot, or "Peter Pindar," as he is known in literature, hearing of young Opie's skill, took him into his service, and afterwards, provided him with the means of repairing to London. In 1781 Wolcot obtained an introduction for his protege to Sir Joshua Reynolds, who tendered the self-taught artist some valuable advice. Through Wolco's management, the Cornish lad became a favourite with the fashionable world of the metropolis, and crowds of wealthy sitters came to his studio. Opie's style, however, was more vigorous and truthful than. ever, was more vigorous and in time his popu-graceful and flattering, and in time his popu-larity as a fashionable portrait-painter declined. Meanwhile he had entered into a matrimonial alliance with the daughter of a rich pawnbroker; but the match proving an unhappy one, a divorce was obtained. His second wife, Miss Alderson, was a lady of refinement and intellect, and it was to her judicious advice that the painter's subsequent improvement both as an artist and as a member of polite society was owing. Although he did not abandon portraitowing. Although ne did not admitted portraiting, opic now devoted much of his time to historical subjects. His best works in the latter walk of art were "The Murder of James I. of Scotland," "The Death of David Rizzio," "Juliet in the Garden," and "Hubert and Ar-Late in life Opic had qualified himself thur." sufficiently, in a literary sense, to aspire to the appointment of professor of painting to the Royal appointment of professor of painting of the top-appointment of professor of painting of the top-mately obtained; but his death occurring soon afterwards, he only found time to deliver four lectures, which were published, and are still considered valuable to the student of art. His remains were honoured by being placed near the tomb of Sir Joshua Reynolds in St. Paul's cathedral. B. at Truro, Cornwall, 1761; D. 1807.

Onie Orange

OPIE, Mrs. Amelia, an English novelist, and wife of the preceding. The daughter of a physician in easy circumstances, carefully educated, handsome, and with considerable musical acquirements, she was the distinguished member of a very refined social circle when she became acquainted with Mr. Opic. After her marriage with the artist, in 1798, she made her first appearance as an author, by producing a moral tale entitled "Father and Daughter." In 1802 she published a sweet and graceful volume of sale phoisance a sweet that graceful volume pooms, and two years later gave to the public her novel of "Adelaide Mowbray." Her "Simple Trales" were her next production, and after her lusband's death she wrote "The Warrior's Return, and other Poems," "Tales of the Heart," and "Valentine's Eve." In 1825 she became a member of the Society of Friends, and subsequently visited France, Belgium, and Switzerland, giving her travelling impressions in "Tait's Magazine" and elsewhere. B. at Norwich, 1769; p. at the same city, 1853.

Optrz, Martin, o'.piz., the father of modern German poetry, distinguished himself by his poems in Latin and German. His chief works were a poem upon the campaigns of Ladislaus IV. against Russia; a version, in German, of the Psalms; and "Consolation in the Disasters of War." n. at Bunzlau, Silesia, 1597; n. at Dantzig, 1639.

Oppian, op-pi-an, a Greek poet and grammarian, who wrote three pnems on hawking, hunting, and fishing, ontitled "Ixeutica," "Cynegetica," and "Halieutica," which are extant. A portion of Oppian's works was translated into English by Mawer, 1736. Flourished probably towards the close of the 2nd century.

ORANGE, William I., Prince of, or'-anj, surnamed William the Silent succeeded at the age of eleven years to the family possessions and titles in Luxembourg, Brabant, Flanders. Holland, and to the French principality of Orange, in Provence; whence the most celebrated title of the family was derived. His father had em-braced the doctrines of the Reformation, and he was at first educated in the same principles; he was at first concated in the same principles; but, at an early age, the emperor Charles V. summoned him to his court, and had him brought up in the Roman Catholic faith. "At fitcen," says Mr. Motley, in his "History of the Rise of the Dutch Republic," "William was the intimate—almost confidential, friend of the emperor, who prided himself, wore all other gifts, on his power of reading and of using men. The youth was so constant an attendant upon his imperial chief, that, even when interviews with the highest personages, and upon the gravest affairs, were taking place, Charles would never suffer him to be considered superfluous or intrusive. There seemed to be no seerets which the emperor held too high for the comprehension or discretion of his page." emperor appointed his discreet favourite to the highest posts, as he advanced in years: the command-in-chief of the army upon the French frontier, a post eagerly sought after by many distinguished generals, was given to William of Orange when he had attained his 21st year. Orange when he mad antaned his threne to his when Charles V. abdicated his threne to his son Philip II., he leaned upon William's shoulder; and to him, also, the retiring monarch intrusted the mission of delivering the imperial crown to his brother Ferdinand, at Augsburg. With the gloomy Philip, however, William was soon to become an object of suspicion and halred. At the peace of Cateau-Cambresis, in 1559, William was one of the Spanish hostages sent to the court of France: and, while hunting with Henry II. in the forest of Vincennes, the French monarch revealed to him the scheme which had been recently formed by Philip and himself, to "extirpate Protestantism by a general extirpation of Protestants," The prince, says Mr. Motley, "although horror-struck and indignant at the royal revelations, held his peace and kept his countenance. The king was not aware that, in opening this delicate negotiation to Alva's colleague and Philip's plenipotentiary, he had given a warning of inestimable value to the man who had been born to resist the machinations of Philip and of Alva. William of Orange earned the surname of the Silent, from the manner in which he received these communications of Henry, without revealing to the monarch, by word or look, the enormous blunder he had committed." Henceforth, William resolved to thwart the designs of Philip, by means of secret intrigues with the leaders of the Protestant party in the Netherlands. During the feeble administration of Margaret of Parma, William, as stadtholder of Holland, Zealand. and Utreeht, and as member of the Flemish council of state, was secretly but indefatigably employed in undermining the tyrannical schemes of the Spanish bigot; but, upon the nomination of the sanguinary Alva to the government of the Netherlands, the prince, to avoid the tra-gical fate of his fellow-nobles, Counts Egmont great rate of his fenow-homes, counts regiment and Horn, retired from the Netherlands to his estate of Nassau. In 1508 the wrongs of the people whom he loved awoke the prince into fierce action. He left his retreat, and became the champion of the cause of liberty and Protestantism in the Netherlands. In the ensuing struggles, notwithstanding that his raw and ill-disciplined levies of French and German Protestants were often beaten in the field by the veteran Spanish infantry, then the hest soldiers in the world, the statesman hip of the prince counterbalanced every disaster, enabled him to achieve a victory over his foes, and finally led to the famous Union of Utrecht, in 1576, by which seven Protestant provinces— Holland, Zealand, Utrecht, Friesland, Groningen, Overyssel, and Guelderland-became the nucleus and the lasting basis of the Dutch republic. The Spanish monarch thereupon set a price upon the head of William of Orange. This temptation, combined with fauntical zeal, produced several attempts upon his life, from the first of which (that of John Jaureguy, in 1582) he escaped with a wound: the fatal shot was, however, dealt to him two years after-wards, by one Balthazar Gerard, a Burgundiau. The tragic incident is thus narrated by Motley, in his excellent history :- "The prince came from the during-room, and began leisurely to ascend. He had only reached the second stair, when a man emerged from the sunken arch, and, standing within a foot or two of him, dis-charged a pistol full at his heart. Three balls entered his body, one of which, passing quite through him, struck with violence against the wall beyond. The prince exclaimed in French, wan ocyond. The prince exclaimed in French, as he felt the wound, 'Oh my God, have mercy upon my soul! Oh my God, have mercy upon this poor people.'" The historian concludes his account of the life and labours of the prince as follows:-"He went through life, bearing the load of a people's sorrows upon his shoulders. with a smiling face. Their name was the last word upon his lips, save the simple affirmation with which the soldier, who had been battling for the right all his lifetime, commended his soul, in dying, 'to his great captain, Christ.' The people were grateful and affectionate, for they trusted the character of their 'father William: and not all the clouds which calumny could collect ever dimmed, to their eyes, the radiance of that lofty mind, to which they were accustomed, in their darkest calamities, to look for light. As long as he lived, he was the guiding star of a brave nation; and when he died, the little children cried in the streets." Thus, in his " History of the Rise of the Dutch Itepublic," Motley writes of one of the noblest men that ever lived, - William left three sons, two of whom, Maurice and Frederick Henry, became, in succession, stadtholders of the United Provinces. (See MAURICE OF NASsau.) William, Prince of Orange, was born at Dellemburg, in Nassau, 1533; assassinated at Delit, 1584.

ONDERICUS VITALIS, or-der'-i-cus vi-ta'-lis, an old Norman-English chronicler, was the son of a Frenchman who came to England with William the Conqueror, and was born in England, but sent, at the age of 10 years, to be educated in Normandy, where he subsequently gave himself up to a life of study, and only visited his native country once. In 1107 he was ordained a priest. His work, which is entitled "The Ecclesiastical History of England and Normandy," commences with the birth of Christ, and is brought down to the year 1141. The first two books are of little value: but of the third, in which he treats of the lives of the first Norman kings of England, M. Guizot says, "No work contains so much and such valuable information on the history of the 11th and 12th centuries; on the political state, both civil and religious, of society in the west of Europe; and on the manners of the times, whether feudal, monastic, or popular." B. near Shrewsbury, 1075; D. about 1142.

O'lbelly, Alexander, Count, o-rt-le, a native of Ireland, who entered the Spanish army, where he obtained the favour of Charles III. and was raised to the highest military rank for his services. n. 1735; n. 1794. This is the person referred to by Byron in "Don Juan," when he makes Julia say—

"General Count O'Reilly,

Who took Algiers, declares I used him vilely." O'RELLY, Andrew, Count, a general of portant works were "Floments of Chemistry, cavalry in the Austrian service, was a native of Ireland. He was a brave and skilful officer, and filled in succession all the military grades in the Austrian army, with the exception of that of field-marshal. At the battle of Austerlitz the remnant of the Austrian army was preserved from destruction by his courage and skill; and when, in 1809, he held the post of governor of Vienua, the difficult task of making an honourable capitulation with the French emperor devolved upon him. B. 1740; D. 1832.

ORELLANA, Francis, o-rail-ya'-na, a Spaniard, who was the first to traverse the continent of South America. In 1521 he accompanied Pizarro to Peru; but, learning that gold, silver, and spices were to be found beyond the mountains east of Quito, he joined an expedition formed by Gonzales, brother of Pizarro, and set forth in the direction indicated. After expereincing great fatigue, the Spaniards reached Zumaco, and then explored the Napo for 200 leagues. Orellana, with a few followers, was next sent forward with provisions in a boat; upon which, instead of returning to Gonzales, he pursued his course down the river; and, after encountering the main stream, continued his navigation of it for upwards of 1000 leagues, until he reached the sea. After he returned to Spain, he gave such marvellous accounts of the countries he had passed through, and of the women dwelling upon the banks of the river (whence the name Amazon was given to it), that he obtained numerous followers, and set forth upon a second expedition, but died at the mouth of the Amazon, 1549.

ORFFYREUS, ORFHYREUS, Ernest Bessler, surnamed, or-fi-re-us, was in turn soldier in the service of Austria, quack doctor, mechanician, seeker of treasures, and councillor of commerce at Cassel. In 1719 he proclaimed that he had discovered the perpetual motion, and exhibited at different places in Suxony a machine which he declared successfully solved the problem. But upon the unfavourable report of the philosopher Gravesande, he destroyed his piece of mechanism. He next turned his attention to religion. and endeavoured to found an establishment to be called Gottesburg, "City of God," where Christians, Turks, and Jews were to live in peace and amity. He wrote a treatise entitled peace and amity. He wrote a treatise entitled "Perpetual Motion Solved," and another upon the union of all religious sects. B. in Alsace, 1680; D. at Furstenburg, 1745.

OBSILA, Matthew, or fe-la, a distinguished French physician and toxicologist, was the son of an opulent merchant, and was himself destined for a commercial career; but having been shipwrecked in his 15th year, he resolved to devote himself to the study of medicine. 1807, so highly had he distinguished himself in the science of chemistry, that he was sent, at the expense of the Spanish government, to com-plete his studies at Paris. The war which ensued between France and Spain prevented his return to the latter country, and he settled at Paris, where, in 1811, he became a French ctizen by letters of naturalization. In 1813 he published his "Treatise on Poisons," which placed him among the best French chemists, and led to his election as member of the Accdeny of Medicine, and correspondent of the Institute. In 1819 he became professor of me-dical jurisprudence; and in 1831 he was elected dean of the faculty of medicine. His most imOrford Orleans applied to Medicine and the Arts," "Treatise three times originated in the younger son of on Legal Medicine," in four volumes, which is the king, and has given two monarchs to the greatest work on medical jurisprudence France. extant, and "Lectures upon Legal Medicine, He likewise wrote, in conjunction with M. Leseur, a work "On the Appearances presented by Dead Bodies after Exhumation, Drowning, Suf-focation in Cesspools, or by Gases." Orfila may be said to have founded the science of toxicology: in medical jurisprudence he was, while living, the most profound professor in Europe.

nvmg, are most prousant processor in Europe.

j. in the island of Minorca, 1787; p. 1853.

Orford, Earl of. (See Walfold, Horace.)

Ortorn, or-i-jr, a Platonic philosopher, who was the disciple and friend of Porphyry. He wrote a panegyric on the emperor Gallienus.

the devil.

ORIGEN, a father of the Church, on the Church. From his earliest youth he devoted himself to the study of the Scriptures, and, by his exhortations, his father was encouraged to endure martyrdom. Origen taught grammar for his own supportand that of his mother and brothers. In his 18th year, Demetrius, bishop of Alexandria, appointed him catechist of his church. His auterities were very great, and when only I? he was with difficulty restrained from offering himself for martyrdom, to become qualified for the kingdom of heaven. From Alexandria he went to Rome, where he began his famous "Hexapla," or the Bible in different languages. At the command of his bishop, he returned to Alexandria, and was ordained. Soon after this he began his "Commentarics on the acter this he organ his Commentaries on the Scriptures;" but Demetrius, who was envious of his reputation, persecuted him with violence, and in a council, assembled in 231, it was decreed that Origen should desist from preaching, and quit the city. Upon this, he went to Casarea, where he was well received by the bishop, and permitted to preach, which gave additional offence to his persecutors, who excommunicated him. Though he was thus treated at home, he met with the greatest respect wherever he went. He was consulted in several episcopal synods; but in the persecution under Decius, in 250, he was thrown into prison, and put to the toture. On his release, he applied himself to his ministerial labours and to writing. His most valuable works were editions of the Hebrew text and Greek version of the Old Testament, and "Stro-mata" and "Principia," wherein he commented upon the doctrines of Christianity, and illustrated them by a reference to the opinions of philosophers. Jerome styles Origen "a man of immortal genius, who understood logic, geo-metry, arithmetic, music, grammar, rhetoric, and all the sects of the philosophers; so that he was resorted to by many students of secular literature, whom he received chiefly that he might em' the opportunity of instructing them in the faith of Christ." The allegorical mode employed by Origen in interpreting the Holy Scriptures led, however, to violent contro-versies in the 4th century; but many of his errors are said to be owing to heretical interpo-lations of his writings. The best edition of his works is that of De la Rue, Paris, 1733. B. in Egypt, about 186 A.D.; D., probably at Tyre, Egypt, ab iANS, Louis, first duke of, was the second son of Charles V., and was assassinated at Paris by his cousin John, duke of Burgundy, in 1407.

ORLEANS, Charles, second duke of, was eldest son of the preceding, during whose lifetime he bore the title of duke of Angouleme. In 1415 he was made prisoner at the battle of Agincourt, and remained in England during twentyfive years. Upon his return to France, he undertook the conquest of the duchy of Milan. to which he conceived himself entitled in right of his mother, Valentina Visconti. He was, Wrote a panegyric of the empetor contents to the money, the many recommendation of the formation of the first and mover, unsuccessful in this enterprise, era.—There was an Egyptian of this name, but not good the move of the money of the move of t в. 1391; р. 1465.

ORLEANS, Louis, third duke of. (See Louis XII. of France.)

XII. of France.)
ORLEARS, Jean Baptiste Gaston, first and only duke of the second branch of, was the ounger son of Henry IV. and brother of Louis XIII. He passed his life in intrigues and conspiracies, and formed several plots for the assassination of Cardinal Richeling, but beely saved himself by denouncing, at different times, his accomplices, the duke of Montmorenei, the marquis of Cinq-Mars, and François de Thou, son of the celebrated historian. After the deaths of Louis XIII. and Richelieu, he was restored to favour at court, but became involved in the Fronde commotions, wherein he blayed a despicable and vacillating part, until ac was banished to Blois, where he spent the remainder of his life. He left no male issue; but his daughter, Mademoiselle de Montpensier, signalized herself during the Fronde insurrection against Mazarin. (See Montpensier.

Surrection against Mazzarin. (New MONTPERNIER, Mademoissielle) n. 1603; n. 1060.

OBLEANS, Philip, first duke of the third and existing branch of the house of, was the younger son of Louis XIII, and Anne for Austria. Upon the death of his uncle Gaston, he inherited the title of duke of Orleans, and obtained the duely of Montpensier at the death of Mademoisselle Montpensier at the death of Mademoisselle Montpensier in 1600 Vite Stray for Death with the 1600 1693. His first wife, Henrictta of England, was married to him in 1661; and by that princess he had two daughters, one of whom became wife of Charles II. of Spain, and the other the queen of Victor Amadeus II., of Sayoy. He is stated to have cultivated letters with some succourage during several of the campaigns of his brother Louis XIV. B. 1640; D. 1701.

brother Louis XIV. n. 1610; p. 1701.

Orleans, Philip, second duke of, was son of the preceding, by his second marriage. He is known in French history as the Regent Orleans, and is declared by Voltaire "to be famed for his courage, his wit, and his pleasures. He was born for society even more than for public affairs, and was one of the most anniable men that ever existed." The general vertilet of history is, notwithstanding, that the Regent Orleans was an unbounded possonal and publical seasons. leans was an unbounded personal and political profigate. He was certainly endowed with brilliant talents, but his mind was early tainted by the debasing lessons of his preceptor, the inflamous Cardinal Dubois. (See Dynons.) He distinguished himself in command of the French ORLEANS, House of, or leans (Fr. or lat-aung), armies in Spain and Italy. In 1715 he was no a branch of the royal family of France. It has minated regent, and during his administration

Orleans Orloff

dition. B. 1674; D. 1723.

ORLEANS, Louis, third duke of, was son of the preceding. In his youth he led a dissipated life; but, upon his marriage with a princess of Baden, to whom he was devotedly attached, he batter, to which he was devoted attached, he renounced his former course. At the death of this princess, which occurred prematurely, in 1726, he retired from the world, and devoted himself to works of piety, and to the study of religion and science. In 1730 he entered the abbey of St. Généviève, where he practised extreme austerity, and performed numerous acts of humility and charity. He understood the Hebrey, Greek, and Latin languages, and was versed in ecclesiastical and civil history, botany, geography, and the fine arts. He translated the Psalms from the original, and wrote para-phrases upon several books of the Old Testament, a literal translation of St. Paul's epistles, ment, a literal translation of St. 1 and St. 1. and other works. B. 1703; D. 1752.

Obleans, Louis Philippe, fourth duke of, was son of the preceding. He took part in the was son of the preceding. He took part in the campaigns of 1742-4, and fught at the bittles of Dettingen and Fontenoy. Like his father, he was a learned and benevolent prince. In 1756 he contributed to the introduction of inoculation into France, and is stated to have distributed as much as £1000 per annum in charity. B. 1725; D. 1785.

ORLEANS, Louis Philippe Joseph, fifth duke Orleans, Louis Philippe Joseph, fitth duke of surnamed Philippe kgalité, was the only son of the preceding. During the lifetime of his father he was known by the title of duke of Chartres. In 1778 he served on board the fleet commanded by Count d'Orvilliers; but in the action with Admiral Keppel, off Cape Ushant, he went down into the hold, and would not come up till the engagement was over. For his cowardice, he became an object of contempt with the French court. His conduct afterwards was extremely dissipated; and he joined the revolutionary party against the court, for which he was exiled. On the death of his father, he took the title of duke of Orleans. In the beginning of the Revolution, he dasplayed the greatest hatred to his royal rela-tions, and became a member of the National Assembly. He also assumed the title of Citizen Egalité, and voted for the death of Louis XVI.: but, some time afterwards, was abandoned by his partisans, seized at Marseilles, whence he was removed to Paris, where he was condemued by the revolutionary tribunal to suffer death; which sentence was executed in 1793. r. at Paris, 1747.

ORLEANS, Louis Philippe, sixth duke of. (See LOUIS PHILIPPE, king of the French.)

ORLEANS, Ferdinand Philip, seventh duke of, on the second of Louis Philippe, king of the French, was sent, in his fifth year, to the College of Henry IV., where he was distinguished by his intelligence and his amiability of disposition. In 1825 he was appointed colonel of hussars, and was serving with the French army when the revolution of 1830 burst forth. He immediately repaired to the capital with his regiment, and was received with enthusiasm. When his father received the crown, he was sent into the provinces to obtain the recog-nition of the new order of government. In 1835 he went to Algiers, where he signalized

France became bankrupt and miserable. The himself by his bravery and skill. The organi-wild schemes of Law brought ruin upon zaiton of the celebrated chasseurs de Vincennes thousands of families (see Law), and the was due to him. He unhappily met his death country was reduced to the most abject con- by a fall from his carriage. Affable, generous, was due to him. He unhappily met his death by a fall from his carriage. Affable, generous, brave, a friend of liberal ideas, protector of the arts-the death of this prince was regarded throughout France as a great calamity. His two sons (by the Princess Helen of Mecklen-burg-Schwerin), the Count de Paris and the Duke de Chartres, resided in England for some years after the revolution of 1848. B. at Palermo, 1810; killed, 1842.

ORLEANS, the Bastard of. (See Dunois.) ORLEANS, Marie, Princess of, daughter of Louis Philippe, ex-king of the French, from her carliest years evinced a remarkable love of the fine arts, and more especially of sculpwhich she cultivated with a zeal and assiduty that soon gave her a prominent place among the most distinguished artists of her time. Her statue of Joan of Arc, in the museum of Versailles, was finished before she had reached her twentieth year; and besides this she produced numerous bas-reliefs, busts, and statuettes, of rare beauty and excellence. In

Peter the Great was himself engaged in de-eapitating the archers, who in turn came for-ward, knelt down, and placed their heads upon a beam. When Ivan came up, a head was still lemaining upon the beam. "If this is my place," said he, "it ought to be clear;" and thereupon he kicked away the head. Peter, struck with this coolness, spared his life, and appointed him to an infantry regiment; after which he became an officer and a noble. The most celebrated of his descendants were:

Obloff, Gregory, Count, served at first in the army; but attracting the attention of the grand-duchess Catharine, he became her favourite. In 1762 he was engaged in the con-spiracy which brought about the assassination of Peter III., and the accession of his wife to the throne as the empress Catharine II. that time honours were showered upon him by the empress, the father of whose child he was. Orloff, however, desired to become the husband, and to share the throne of Catharine. At length, growing tired of his tyrannical sway, the empress banished him to his sent at Gatchina, but created him prince. After living in oriental splendour for several years, he died at St. Petersburg a lunatic in 1783. B. 1734.

ORLOFF, Alexis, Count, brother of the pre-ceding, was a soldier in the Russian guard when his brother became the favourite of Catharine. In 1762 he was one of the murderers of Paul III.; after which Catharine created him an admiral, and showered honours upon him. In 1770 he held the command in chief at the battle of Tchesme, having under his orders the English officers Elphinstone, Greig, and Dugdale, and in that occasion destroyed the Turkish fleet. At a later period, while travelling in Italy, he met the Princess Tarakanova, daughter of the empress Elizabeth, at Leghorn. The princess, a girl of 16, was entired on board Orloff's frigate by means of a pretended marriage, after which she was sent a prisoner to Russia. Catharine. fearing that she might, at some future period set up a claim to the Russian throne, kept her ever afterwards in confinement. When his brother had been supplanted by Potemkin, Alexis Orloff retired to his palace at Moscow, whence he was summoned in 1796, by the emperor Paul, to act as pall-bearer to the remains of Peter III., whose body had been exhumed, in order that it might be honoured with a magnificent public funeral. Orloff is stated to have belrayed great emotion upon that occasion, perhaps expecting to be sent to execution by the son of his victim. He escaped, however, and immediately left St. Petersburg for a tour in Germany; nor did he return until Paul had himself met a violent death. B. in 1707, B. in 1808.—There were other brothers of Ivan. The eldest was surnamed by Catharine "The Philosopher," and lived a retired life; he died 1791. Viadimir was president of the Academy of Sciences of St. Petersburg, and died 1832. Feodor served in the army, and signalized himself in the war against Turkey in 1770; D. 1796. This last left four children, who, although illegitimate, were allowed to take the family name, and to inherit the vast estates of their relatives. Two of these have become celebrated.

ORLOFF, Michael, served in the Russian army against Napoleon, and went to Paris in 1814 with the allied armies. Towards the close of Alexander's reign, he incurred the emperor's displeasure, and was sent to command the army of the south. He was deeply implicated in the but escaped further punishment through the influence of his brother Alexis, who had become the favourite of the new emperor, Nicholas, (See Nicholas.) From that period till his death, he lived in retirement. B. 1785; D. 1841.
Orloff, Alexis, a Russian diplomatist and statesman, brother of the preceding, entered the military service, and shared in the cempalems against Napoleon; but his great power and popularity dates from the year 1825, when Nicholas had been proclaimed emperor, and when the troops revolted against the new ruler. On that occasion, Orloff led his regiment against the mutineers, and was the chief instrument in deciding the events of that critical period in layour of Nicholas, who, throughout his life, retained the deepest sense of the ser-vices Orloff had rendered him. Nicholas created him a count, adjutant-general, and gave him the command of a division of cavalry. After signalizing himself in the Turkish campaign of 1828, he signed the treaty of Adrianople, and was sent ambassador extraordinary to Constanrinople. Two years afterwards, he was dispatched by Nicholas to inspect the operations of Marshal Diebitsch against the insurgent Poles. Very soon after his arrival, both the marshal and the grand-dake Constantine died suddenly, and for a long time subsequently the name of Orloff was held in odium with the Russians, as the suspected author of their deaths; but the suspicion has now become rejected as baseless and absurd. In 1833 he signed the treaty of Unkiar-Skelessi with Turkey, death, recommended him to his successor as his personal and tried friend. He represented Russia in the congress of Paris in 1850; and subsequently acted as chief of the grand council of the empire. D. 1787; D. 1861.

ORLOFF, Gregory Vladimiromitz, a Russian nobleman, distinguished by his attachment to literature and the sciences, whose chief works are "Mémoires Historiques, Politiques, et Littéraires sur le Royaume de Naples," 5 vols.;
"Histoire des Arts en Italie," 1: 1773; p. 1826.

ORME, Robert, orm, an English historian, who was the son of a surgeon of the Bombay army, received his education at Harrow school after which he went to India as a writer in the service of the East India Company. He returned to England in 1752, with Captain, afterwards Lord Clive, with whom he lived many years on terms of intimacy. In 1755 he went to Madras as fourth member of the council. He also held the office of commissary-general; but in 1759 returned to England with a small fortune. Soon afterwards he commenced writing the "History of the Military Transactions of the British Nation in India," the first volume of which appeared in 1763, the second in 1775. The Court of Directors appointed him historiagrapher to the Company, at a salary of £360 per amam. He completed his History in 3 vols.; and also published "Historical Fragments of the Mogul Empire during the reign of Amanca zebe."

be." B. in Bombay, 1728; B. 1801. Ormond, James Butler, Duke of, or'-mond, a celebrated Irish nobleman, who was descended from an ancient family of Timperary, which had retained the hereditary dignity of emphearer to retained the nerentary alguly of capacities the English sovereigns from the beginning of the 13th century. Upon the outbreak of the Irish rebellion in 1640, he was appointed to command the royal troops, at the head of which he defeated the rebels at Dublin, Drogheda, Kilrush, and Ross. During the struggle between Charles I. and the Parliamentarious, Ormond. who had been previously nominated lord-hentenant of Ireland, held that country for the king; but after Charles had been taken prisoner, he resigned the command, and repaired to London, when he had an interview with the captive monarch at Hampton Court.

went to France; but at the invitation of the Roman Catholies, returned to Ireland, and for some time endeavoured to oversome the Parliamentary forces in that country. In 1650, however, he was compelled by Cromwell to evacuate the island; upon which he again retired to France. After rendering a number of important services to Charles II, while in exile, he accompanied that monarch to England at the Restoration. During the reigns of Charles II, and James II., he was twice: unmated victory of Ireland, and twice lost the post through court intrigue. In 1670, the notorious Colonel Blood, instigated, it is said, by Ormond's bitter enemy, the duke of Buckingham, waylaid and dragged him from his coach, with the intention of conreying him to Tyburn, and there hanging him. This inflamous project was, however, trus-trated by the rescue of the duke. (See Broom Colonel.) The earl of Ossory, the brave son of the duke, afterwards addressed Backinghan in which gave to Russia the key of the Darland 1985, the duke, afterwards addressed Buckinsham in In 1814 he accompanied Micholas, to London; the king's presence:—"My bord of Buckingham, and, upon the outbreak of the war between 1 know well that you are at the bottom of this Russia and the Western powers, was sent to Russia and the Western powers, and the surface of the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers and the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are to be a well-based on the Russia and the Western powers are the best powers and the Russia and the Western powers are the based on the Russia and the Western powers are the based on the Russia and Russi

Ormond

the hand of a rufflen, or by the more secret way of poison, I shall not be at a loss to know the first author of fir. I shall consider you as the assassin: I shall treat you as such, and wherever I meet you I shall pistol you, thought you should stand hethind the king's chair. And I tell you may in his antigety's presence, that you may be sire I shall keep my word. Subsequently, when Charles II. had most unacountally pardoned though his majoty such to Ormond a request that he should also foreive the ruffian. Ormond thereupon replied, "that if the king could pardon the offender for stealing the crown, he might easily foreive the attempt upon his life." D. 1610; p. 1683.

Onnorsh, James Buller, second Duke of, was grandean of the preceding, and distinguished himself as a soldier under William III. and Anne; but upon the accession of George I, he embraced the cause of the Pretender, was attainted in consequence, and thenceforth passed battlets above.

his Hicabroad. n. 1055; p. 1747.

Carsao, Alphonso, or-na'-no, a Corsican leader, who was brought up at the court of Henry II. of France, but returned to his native country when he had attained his 18th year, and maintained a struggle with his compativities against the Genose, until the signature of peace in 1568. Thereupon he retired to France with 500 followers, and was appointed colonel-general of the Corsican troops in the service of Charles IX. For his subsequent services to the French monarch, he became marshal of France and lieutenant-general of Geinne. p. 1610.

ORNANO, Jean Baptiste, son of the preceding, was at first appointed superintendent-general of the household of thaton, dake of Orleans, brother to Louis XIII., and was afterwards excerted marshal of Francey but, for his share in the intripues against Richelien, he was, in 1824, imprisoned at Vincenness, where he was subsequently other strangled or poisoned. In 1541.

Chostus, Paul, o-ro'-si-us, a Spanish divine, why was sent to St. Augustine to consult into no some controverted points concerning the nature and origin of the soul. By the advice of the same father, he undertook a "listory of the World" to A.D. 418. He also wrote a treatise on Free Will, and other works. Flourished in the 6th century. His "History of the World" was translated into the Anglo-Saxon language by King Alfred; and of this an English version was made in 1773.

ORPHEUS, or'-fe-us, of Thrace, a Greek poet, who flourished before Homer. He was the disciple of Linius, and the master of Museus. His works are lost, except a few fragments; and their authenticity is doubted.

Orrece, Roger Boyle, Barloß, or'-re-re, a Bri-

OSENEY, Hoger Boyle, Earl of port-ever, a Brittish statesman, who, after concluding his educate exceedingly popular. In the same year he protion at Trinity College, Dublin, went alward, and on his return married the adaptiter of the adaptiter of the college product on his return married the adaptiter of the set of the title of "The Austrain Dungeous in Italy," of Suifidis. After the execution of Charles I. In repaired to Eucliand; when, being asspected Plerri and other accomplies, made an attempt of acting as an agent of Charles II., the committee of safety were about to send him to the That attempt failed, although the plot which Drower, but were prevented by Gromwell, who prevailed upon him to accept a commission under him in his Irish campaigns. His conduct gave Cromwell such satisfaction that, below so regarized in Euclust, due no he became protector, he made him one of his privy council. After the death of Cromwell, in the death of Cromwell, in the death of Cromwell such the death of Cromwell such reduction of monarchy and the product of the restoration of monarchy death of the respecting the right of measures for the restoration of monarchy, demand was indignatuly refused, Orsini was a policy, demand was indignatuly refused, Orsini was a policy, demand was indignatuly refused, Orsini was a policy, demand was indignatuly refused, Orsini was a policy of the control of the controlled, demand was indignatuly refused, Orsini was a policy, demand was indignatuly refused, Orsini was a policy of the control of the controlled of the cont

Orsini

Charles II., on his accession, created him carl of Orrery, and appointed him one of his prily council. He was shortly afterwards constituted one of the lords justices of Ireland, and commissioned to call a Parliament, before the meeting of which he drew up the eelebrated Act of Settlement. On the fall of Lord Clarended, he was offered the place of chancellor, but refused it. The earl wrote several poons and plays, and his Correspondence was printed in 1742.

an in record, 1921, p. 3, 1679.

In the control of the control of ship. n. 1678; n. 1731.

OBSTY, orw-me, a celebrated Roman family during the middle ages, the rival of the Colomna. The first Orsini known became cardinal in 1125. Matthew Orseni, his nephew, was prefect of Rome in 1153. Gaetano Orsini was made pope in 1277, under the name of Nicholas III. Another of the family was elected pope in 1734, with the name of Benedict XIII. The family has had many cardinals and other distinguished parameters, expect its mosphere.

personages among its members. ORSINI, Felice, a modern Italian patriot, in his 20th year was sent to prison for taking part in the proceedings of a secret society. part in the proceedings of a secret society. The amnesty granted by Pius IX., in 1846, gave him his liberty. He afterwards took part in the defence of Rome and of Venice, but was banished from Sardinia, in 1853, for trying to excite a revolt at Genoa. Upon this he repaired to Lon-don, where he became the intimate friend of Mazzini. In 1854 he went as agent of the revo-Intionary committee to Parma, and proceeded thence to Milan, Trieste, Vienna, and Herman-stadt; in which last town he was arrested, and, after undergoing an examination at Vienna, In 1856 he was sent to the fortress of Mantua. effected his escape from that stronghold, under the most extraordinary circumstances, and contrived to reach England, where he commenced the delivery of public speeches, which became exceedingly popular. In the same year he proexceedingly popular. In the same year he produced a narrative of his life in captivity, under the title of "The Austrian Dungcons in Italy." At the commencement of the year 1858, he, with Pierri and other accomplices, made an attempt upon the life of the emperor of the French, That attempt failed, although the plot which had produced it was carefully concocted during some length of time. Orsini and Pierri were executed; and it having been asserted that the plot was organized in England, the emperor of the French made a demand upon the English nation that its laws respecting the right of asylum to foreigners should be altered. This

793

cuted 1808.

OBTELLIUS, Abrahem, or-tell-ll-us, a Dutch geographer, who travelled in England, France, Germany, and Italy, and was generally accounted the first geographer of his time. In 1870 he produced "Theatrum Orbis Terre," or Theatrum Corons of the State of th Universal Geography, the success of which led Universal Geography, the success of which led to his obtaining the appointment of geographer to Philip II. of Spain. He composed other works of the same nature, and corresponded with most of the learned men of his time. B. at Antwerp, 1527; D. 1593.

ORTHES, Henri d'Apremont, Viscount of, or-'cai, was governor of Bayonne, under Charles LX. of France. Having received an order to destroy all the Hugemots in the city on St. Bartholomew's day (25th August, 1573), he replied to the king, "Sire, I communicated the letter of your majesty to the garrison; but, plied to the king, "Sire, I communicated the letter of your majesty to the garrison; but, although I could find everywhere good soldiers and loyal citizens, I could not obtain a single executioner."

OSBORN, Sherard, os-born, a captain in the Osborx, Sheard, os-born, a captain in the Royal Nary, who went to the Aretic regions in 1849 in search of Sir John Frunklin. He served in the Black See, in the Russian War in 1854, and in China. In 1863 he culered the service of the emperor of China to suppress piracy on the Chinese coast, but withdrew in 1863. He has written but withdrew in 1863. He has written some excellent accounts of his voyages. в. 1822.

OSBORNE, Lord Sidney Godolphin, third son of the first Lord Godolphin, and brother of the present duke of Leeds, a clergyman who obtained considerable celebrity for his letters in the "Times," on important social subjects of the day, under the signature "S. G. O." в. 1808.

OSCAR I., Oscar Joseph Francis Bernadotte, os'-kar, king of Sweden and Norway, was the only son of the celebrated French general Bernadotte, who became king of Sweden under the title of Charles XIV. When his father was elected heir presumptive to the Swedish crown, in 1810, he accompanied him to that country, where he received an education in conformity with the high position he was destined to fulfil. He abjured Catholicism for the Lutheran faith, was created duke of S. dermania, and began to display considerable aptitude for the military sciences, with which, and political economy, he chiefly occupied himself. In 1811 he entered chien occupied himself. In 1811 he entered the army as lieutenant-colonel, and soon after-wards rose to the high grades of grand admiral of Sweden and Norway, and general com-mandant of the fourth corps of artillery. In 1824 he was nominated vicercy of Norway, and became regent during the illness of his father in 1828. Meanwhile, he had married Josephine, daughter of Engene de Beauharnais, duke of Leuchtenberg. In 1844 he succeeded to the throne. During the war with Russia, although Sweden took no part in the struggle, he manifested the strongest sympathy with the cause of the allied Western powers. In 1855 a treaty between Sweden and France was signed, by which the former power engaged not to cede any portion of her territory to Russia. The health of the king having become frail, he, in 1857, made a tour in Germany, Switzerland, and Italy. B. at Paris, 1799; D. 1859.

O'SHAUGHNESSY, Sir William Brooke, o-shaw'nesse, a gentleman to whom is due the great became the confidant of Constantine, who by at Meldola, in the Roman States, 1819; exement of introducing the electric telegraphic system into India. The descendant of an an-OrthLuts, Abrahem, or-tel'-li-us, a Dutch eight limit, be ways sent, at an early age, cient Irish family, ne was sent, at an early age, to the university of Edinburgh, where he graduated M.D. In his 21st year he entered the service of the East India Company, with the grade of assistant-surgeon. After being transferred to civil employment by the governor-general in 1833, he acted as physician to Lord Metcalfe while the latter commanded at Agra. It was whilst holding the professorship of chemistry in the Medical College at Calcutta, that he first began to investigate the capabilities of the electric telegraph as a mode of communication between widely-separate places. In 1839 the published a work, wherein he urged the government to adopt a telegraphic system which was calculated to afford immense services to the civil and military administrations of India. But Lord Auckland, the governorgeneral of that day, gave the indefatigable man of science little encouragement; and the succeeding governors, Lords Ellenborough and Hardinge, were too much engrossed with war-like operations to give thought to any measure for the improvement of the internal resources of the country under their rule. In Lord Dalhousie, however, Dr. O'Shaughnessy found an appreciative patron: that nobleman authorized the projector to lay down an experimental line of electric telegraph, and to furnish a report of its working. That report was so satisfactory, the immediate construction of telegraphic lines between Calcutta, Agra, Bombay, Peshawur, and Madras. The lines were commenced in November, 1853, and so energetically did Dr. O'Shaughnessy pursue his labours, that, in less than six months, a line in full working order was completed between Calcutta and Agra, a distance of 800 miles. Early in 1855, the line was 3050 miles in length, and Calcuita and Madras were placed in instantaneous communi-cation. In February, 1856, the line was laid down throughout 4000 miles. To justly appreciate the gigantic labours of the doctor, it must be borne in mind that there was no iron road, few bridges; that the wires cross seventy broad rivers, and pass through dense jungles to enter which is death during six months of the year; but the chief difficulty that he had to contend with was the sudden and simultaneous training of 300 persons, who were to be employed in the many offices connected with the working of the system. In 1856 he went to England, where he was nominated a knight commander of the Bath, in acknowledgment of his great services. B. at Linerick, Ireland, 1809

OSIANDER, Andrew, o-ze-an'-der, a German divine, who studied at Wittenberg and Nuremberg, was one of the first disciples of Luther, and became minister and professor at Köngsberg, where he distinguished himself by a peenliar doctrine on justification, which he asserted to be effected in man by the union of God with our souls. This doctrine he zealously defended, and opposed Luther with great fury. He was the author of several Latin works, the most important of which were, "On the Harmony of the Gospels," and "Epistle to Zuinglius on the Sacrament of the Eucharist," B. in Bavaria, 1498; D. 1552.

Ostus, o'-si-us, bishop of Cordova, in Spain,

Osman

his persuasions convened in 325 the council of Nice, where Osius presided. The emperor Constantius II. persecuted him with so much cruelty to make him turn Arian, that Osius, at the age of 100, was induced to sign a confession of faith prescribed to him. He was then permitted to return to his diocese, where he died soon after, extremely penitent for his weakness, and renouncing the Arian heresy with great fervour. B. 257; D. about 358.

OSMAN OF OTHIAM I. .os*man, surnamed Elghaz, "The Victorious," the founder of the dynasty at present reigning at Constantinople, was at first the chieftain of a small territory in Bithynia; but, in 1299, he invaded the whole country of Nicæa, and subsequently extended his conquests as far as the Black Sea. B. at Sukut, Bithymia, 1259; D. 1326.

OSMAN or OTHMAN II., sultan of the Turks, was the son of Achmet I., and succeeded his uncle Mustapha in 1618. He declared war against Poland in 1621; but, after several defeats, was obliged to conclude a disadvantageous peace. Attributing his failures to the Janissaries, he resolved to substitute a militia of Arabs in their room, which so provoked them that they deposed him and placed Mustapha on the throne. Osman was strangled in 1622.
Osman or Othman III., became sultan in 1754, but reigned only three years, during which time he behaved with the utmost cruelty towards his subjects. D. 1757.

Osmorn, Sr., os'mond, a Norman prelate, who, in 1066, followed William the Conqueror to England, and was made chancellor of the to England, and was hade chancener of the kingdom and Bishop of Salisbury. For this diocese he reformed the liturgy, which became general throughout the kingdom, under the name of the Liturgy of Salisbury, and was com-monly used throughout England until the Reformation. At his death, he was canonized by Pope Calixtus III. B. in Normandy, in the B. in Normandy, in the Pope Calixtus III. B. in Normandy, in the IIth century; p. in England, 1099. Osonio, Jerome, o-so-re-o, a Portuguese bishop, who became professor of divinity at Coimbra, and afterwards bishop of Sylves. His works were published at Rome in 1592. On account of the elegance of his Latin style, he On was called the Cicero of Portugal. B. at Lisbon,

1506; p. 1580.

Ossar, Arnaud d', os'-sa, an eminent French cardinal, who, by the kindness of a gentleman. received a good education, and was appointed tutor to some young noblemen. He afterwards practised the law, but forsook that profession, and became secretary first to Cardinal d'Este, and next to Cardinal de Joyeuse. He was ambassador of France at Rome, and obtained the papal absolution for Henry IV., for which he was made bishop of Rennes in 1596. In 1598 he In 1598 he became a cardinal. B. 1536; D. 1604.

Ossian, os'-si-an, an ancient Scotch bard. was the son of Fingal, whom he accompanied in several military expeditions. He lived to an advanced age, and, at the close of life, became blind. Mr. Macpherson published a translation of poems, in a sort of poetical prose, which he ascribed to Ossian; but their authenticity has been disputed by several critics, and as zeal-ously defended by others. (See MACPHERSON, James.) Supposed to have flourished in the that, even as a child, "she knew more Greek and Latin than half the professors." In 1835 and Latin than half the professors." In 1895 this parent idied suddenly, and, her means be-coming straitened, Miss Fuller sought employ-ment as teacher of Latin, German, Italian, and French in a school at Rhode Island, Subse-quently, she joined the "Brook Farm" commuquenty, she joined the brook Path Collinarity, and began to exercise her pen by contributing to the periodicals. In 1839 she produced a translation of Eckermann's "Conversations with Göthe." About the same time, her great conversational powers induced some ladies of Boston to request her to form "con-versational classes" under her direction. This singular scheme became highly successful, and five-and-twenty ladies met to discuss such topics as "the genealogy of heaven and earth," "the celestial inspiration of genius and transmission of divune law." In 1840 Mr. Emerson commenced his "Dial," to which Miss Fuller contributed some philosophical articles on the "Fine Arts." At a later period, she went to reside at New York, on being appointed to the direction of the literary department of the "Tribune." In 1846 she set out upon a tour of Europe, a project which had long been che-rished in her mind. London and Paris were visited, the literary circles in both cities being her resort. At Rome, while attending divine service in St. Peter's, she met a young Italian nobleman, and, after a short acquaintance, be-came his wife in 1847. The marriage was, how-ever, kept secret until the siege of kome, which took place in the following year. During that struggle, she acted as nurse in one of the hos-pitals. When the French succeeded in entering the city, she, with her husband and infant child, retired to Leghorn, and, after remaining in that place several months, embarked for America; but, after a stormy passage, the vessel was wrecked upon the coast of Long Island, and herself, husband, and child, were drowned. A nuarrative of the Roman revolution, in manunarrative of the Roman revolution, in manuscript, was lost with her. Her essays were collected and published in a work entitled "Papers on Literature and Art." B. in Massachusetts, 1810: drowned, 1850.

Ossory, Thomas Butler, Earl of, os'-so-re, son of the duke of Ormond. Cromwell sent him to the Tower; whence he was released, after eight months' confinement, and then went to Flanders. At the Restoration he was appointed lieutenant-general of the army in Ireland, and in 1666 created an English peer, by the title of Lord Butler. He was a volunteer under Lord Albemaile in the great fight with the Dutch; for which, in 1673, he was made sole admiral of the fleet, in the absence of Prince Rupert. In 1677 he commanded the English forces in the town of Mons. B. in Ireland, 1643; D. 1680.

OSSUNA, Tellez y Giron, Duke of, os-soo'-na, a celebrated Spanish statesman, who attracted notice at court by his sareastic wit, and thereby incurred the displeasure of Philip II. Banished from his native country, he went into Flunders, where he assumed the command of a regi-ment, which he had equipped at his own expense, and fought with so much success on the Spanish side, that he thereby obtained his recall. He became the favourite of the duke of Lerma, and was appointed vicercy of Sicily in ord century.

3rd century.

3r whose father gave her so high an education, but refused to establish the Inquisition in Naples,

He conceived a plan of obtaining Venice for the Spanish crown, or, as some assert, as an inde-pendent monarchy for himself. He succeeded in deceiving the court of Madrid for some time, deceiving the coart of planta for some time, but was superseded as viceroy of Naples by Cardinal Borgia; upon which he was impri-soned in the castle of Almeida, where he died

Sonce in the cliste of America, where he died in 1624. B. at Valladolid, 1579. Osrade, Adrian van, os'-tad, one of the most celebrated painters of the Dutch school, studied celebrated painters of the Butch school, school under Frank Hals and Rutch school, and drew his subjects from low life. In his pictures we generally find people smoking and drinking in alchouses and kitchens, or indulging in rural sports. n. at Lübeck, 1610; n. 1885.

OSTADE, Isaac van, was brother of the pre-ceding, and was, like him, an excellent painter. Pictures by this artist are in the collections of Lord Ashburton, Sir Robert Peel, and the Bridgewater Gallery. B. at Lübeck, 1617; D.

1671.

OSTERRVALD, John Frederic, os-ter'-vald, Swiss Protestant divine, who wrote "A Cate-chism of the Christian Religion," "Arguments and Reflections on all the Books of the Bible," and other works, and produced a translation of the Bible in French, much in use among French Profestants. B. at Noufehâtel, 1663; D. 1747. OSWALD, os wald, king of Northumberland, was obliged, after the death of Ethelfrith, his father, to take refuge in Ireland, his uncle. Edwin, having possessed himself of the throne. He became a Christian in his retreat, and returning to his own country, defeated Cerdo-walla, king of the Britons, who lost his life. Oswald reunited the two kingdoms of Northumberland; but was slain in a battle with Penda, king of Mercia, 643 a.p. Monkish historians relate that many miracles were per-formed by his relies, for which he was canonized.

OSYMANDIAS, o-si-măn'-di-as, an Egyptian king, was the first monarch who formed a library. He caused a colossal statue of himself to be erected, on which was this inscription: "I am Osymandias, king of kings; whoever will dispute this title with me, let him surpass my works." He is said to have reigned at Thebes between the 20th and 16th centuries B.C.

OTHMAN. (See OSMAN.)

OTHO, Marcus Salvius, o'-tho, a Roman emperor, was of a family descended from the ancient kings of Etruria. Nero, whose companion he was in his debaucheries, elevated him to the highest offices in the empire. After Nero's death he attached himself to Galbu; but that emperor having adopted Piso as his heir, Otho excited an insurrection, murdered Galba and Piso, and ascended the throne in 69; was opposed by Vitellius, who was supported by the German army; and in a battle between the two rivals near Cremona, Otho was defeated; on which he slew himself, after reigning three months. B. at Rome, a.b. 31 or 32; p. 69.

O'no I., emperor of Germany, called the Groat, o'-to, was the eldest son of Henry the Powler, and was crowned in 937, at the age of 14. Berenger having usurped the title of emperors is 14. Oct. peror in Italy, Otho entered Rome, where he was crowned by John XII. That pontiff afterwards entered into a league with Berenger; on which Otho caused him to be deposed, and put Leo VIII. in his place, in 963. On the emperor's return to Germany, the Romans revolted, and imprisoned Leo; for which Otho again visited

Rome, where he inflicted severe vengeance on the senate. He next turned his arms against Nicephorus Phocas, emperor of the East, whose army he defeated, and after cutting oil the noses of his prisoners, sent them to Constantinople: but John Zimisees, the successor of Nicephorus, one some zamisees, the successar of Nicephorus, made peace with Otho. B. 923; D. 973.

Orno H., surnamed the Bloody, succeeded his father, the preceding emperor, in 973. His mother Adelaide opposed his accession; on which he acceled the form and the surely succession.

the Danes and Bohemians. He afterwards marched into Italy, in order to expel the Saracens from Sicily, but fell ill at Rome, where he died, 983; B. 951.

OTHO III., the son of the preceding, was only three years old at the death of his father; but his empire was administered by his grandmother Adelaide, conjointly with the archbishop of Cologne. At the age of 16 he assumed the reins of government, and went to Italy, which was in a state of confusion, owing to the opposition of different popes. Otho having re-esta-blished order, returned into Germany, and made Boleslas king of Poland. He was obliged again to pass into Italy to quell a revolt, and died soon afterwards. n. 980; n. 1002.

Otno IV., called the Superb, the son of Henry, duke of Saxony, was chosen emperor in 1208. He was excommunicated by the pope for seizing the lands which the Countess Matilda bequeathed to the Holy Sec. In 1212 the princes of the empire elected Frederic, king of Sielly, in the room of 0tho, who, after strug-gling against his rival until 1215, resigned the crown, and retired to Brunswick. p 1218.

OTHO I, king of Greece, was the second son of Louis I, of Bayaria, and was, in his 17th year, offered the throne of the new Greek kingdom in 1832. After being assisted in his government by a regency, he, in 1835, became the unassisted monarch of Greece. In 1836 he married Amelia, daughter of the grand-duke of Oldenburg, a marriage offering some peculiarities. The king was a Roman Catholic, the queen Protestant, while any children that might be born were to be educated in the faith of the Greek church. After some internal dis-sensions, the king, in 1814, promulgated a new constitution, modelled upon that adopted in France in 1830. At the commencement of the ear 1817, a public insult addressed to M. Athens, had nearly provoked a rupture between the two powers. In that affair, both the inte-ests of the nation and the dignity of the throne were compromised. In 1850 the com-merce of Greece was materially injured by the obstinate attitude of the king with respect to the indemnity claimed for M. Pacifico, an Euglish subject, by England, whose fleet was sent o blockade the Greek ports. During the war ith Russia, numerous bands of brigands were organized at the treek capital, which, taking advantage of the troubled condition of Turkey, committed great ravages upon the frontiers. committed great ravages upon the frontiers. Both England and France producted against the proceedings of these predatory hordes, and a Anglo-French division was sent to the Pircus. The Western powers also demanded the retirement of the ministry; after which seriod the administration was frequently and apparently capriciously changed until 1862,

Ondinot Otho

when a popular revolution drove Otho from the throne. B. in Bavaria, 1815; D. 1867.

OTHO VENIUS, a painter, and the instructor of Rubens, was born at Leyden, and after residing at Rome several years, went to Germany, where he was employed by the emperor. B.

1556; p. 1634.

OTLEY, William Young, F.R.S., F.S.A., and keeper of the prints in the British Museum, ot'-le, devoted himself to the fine arts, and was known as an artist, a collector, and an author. When scarcely 20 years of age, he proceeded to Italy, where he employed his own talents and those of others in taking copies of the most esteemed paintings. There he remained about esteemed paintings. There he remained about ten years; and on his return to England, produced a series of facsimiles of the original drawings of the best masters, under the title of the "Halian School of Design," a magnificent work, consisting of $4 plates. His other chief works are, "The Fforentine School," the "Origin and Early History of Engraving," "The Stafford Gallery," and "The Critical Catalogue of the National Gallery." b. 1771; p. 1836.

Orro, Louis Guillaume, Count de Mosloy, of-to, an eminent French diplomatist, was educated in the university of Strasburg. He was appointed, in 1779, secretary and charge d'affaires to the United States of America, where he remained till 1792. He was then emwhere he remained this 1702. He was then em-ployed by the committee of public safety in the foreign department of the state; but, on the fall of the Girondists shortly after, was sent to the Luxembourg prison, where he remained till the revolution of the 9th Thermidor. In 1800 he was sent to England, and remained there as minister-plenipotentiary till the peace of Amiens. In 1809 he was named ambassador to Vicuna, where he negotiated the marriage of Napoleon with Maria Louisa, and remained there till 1813, when, on his return to Paris, he became minister of state. At the restoration, in 1814, he was in disgrace; but, in 1815, during the Hundred Days, Bonaparte made him secretary for foreign affairs. After the battle of Waterloo he was employed by Napoleon to negotiate for his personal security with the English government; but the project failed, through Otto not receiving passports. B. at Baden, 1754; D. 1817.
OTWAY, Thomas, ot-wai, au English dramatic writer, who was educated at Winchester school, whence he removed to Christ Church, Oxford, which he left without taking a degree, and went to London, where he became a performer, and writer for the stage, producing his first tragedy, "Alcibiades," in 1675. The earl of Plymouth procured him a cornetcy in a regiment in Flanders; but Otway, having little taste for the army, returned to London, where, in great poverty, he re-commenced writing plays. Having been compelled by his necessities to contract debts, and being haunted by the emissaries of the law, he retired to a public-house on saries of the law, he retired to a phone-noise of Tower Hill, where, according to one account, he died of suffection, from swallowing, after a long fast, a piece of bread which charity had supplied. Otway excels in depleting the tender passions in tragedy; of which his "Orphan," and "Venice Pryserved" are proofs. A complete edition of his works, which were numerons, was published in 1814. B. at Trotten, Sussex, 1651; D. 1655.

kingdoms of Bohemia, Austria, and Styria, in 1253, and in the following year made some conquests in Prussia. He founded cities, encouquests in Prussia. The founded class, encouraged trades and manufactures, and protested against the election of Rudolph of Hapsburg. Placed under the ban of the empire in 1275, he was abandoned by his allies, and in the succeeding years deprived of Austria. He re-commenced the war in 1277, but perished at the battle of Marchfeld, in 1278.

OUDINOT, Charles Nicholas, oo'-de-no, marshal of France and duke of Reggio, at the age of 16 entered upon his military career, and in 1792 obtained the command of a battalion. the same year he performed his first great feat of arms,—the repulse of the Prussians from the fort of Bitsch, with the loss of 700 prisoners. In 1794, while in command of a distant outpost, he, with a single regiment, kept in check a corps of the Austrians numbering 10,000 men. For that service he was appointed general of brigade; and, after being severely wounded in a subsequent attack, was taken prisoner by the Austrians. On obtaining his exchange, he per-formed signal feats of bravery at Trèves, Nordlingen, and Donauwerth, and was created general of division in 1799. At Zurich, the siege of Genoa, the battle of Pozzolo, and the passage of the Mineio, he maintained his great reputation for skill and bravery. Napoleon presented him with a sword of honour, and when, in 1805, he established an élite corps of grenadiers, he entrusted the command to Oudinot. At the head of this corps, he was the first to enter Vienna, and likewise contributed to the victory of Austerlitz. In 1807 he gained the battle of Ostrolenka, in Poland; and at Friedland, soon afterwards, performed his greatest deed. With one corps, he kept the whole Russian army in check until Napoleon came up. After Wagram, the emperor created Oudinot a marshal, and duke of Reggio; and, upon the flight of Louis Bonaparte from Holland, he was sent to occupy that country, where he remained for two years, governing to the com-plete satisfaction of the Dutch people. Through-out the battles of 1812, 1813, 1815, Oudinot's name shone with all its old lustre; but, after the emperor's abdication, he gave in his adherence to the Bourbons, to whom he afterwards steadfastly submitted. In 1839, Louis Philippe nominated him grand chancellor of the Legion of Honour, and governor of the Invalides. Discreet, loyal, and brave, he merited the title bestowed upon him by his compatriots, "the Modern Bayard." - in France, 1767; p. at Paris, 1847.
OUDLNOT, Nicholas Charles Victor, a modern

French general, and eldest son of the preceding, was first a page to the emperor Napoleon I., and was created lieutenant of hussars for the Danube in 1809. His next employment was as aide-de-camp to Marshal Massena, in Portugal, Throughout the final campaigns of Napoleon, he signalized himself as the worthy son of a brave parent; and, at the abdication of the emperor, took service under the restored Bourberof, took service under the restored Louing the Hundred Days. For this fidelity he was, after the fall of Napoleon, created commandant of the grenadiers of the Royal Guard. At the revolution of 1830, he tendered his resignation of his varied appointments, and kept about from OTTOCAR II., of -in-kar, surnamed the Conquethe government of Louis Philippe until the year ror, succeeded Wenceslaus III., and united the 1835, when he was appointed to the command Oudry wards sent, at the near of a Fields expectation ary corps, to compel the Romans to accept the authority of the pope. The city was stoutly defended by Garibaldi, and only submitted after an obstinate struggle. Created a grand cross of the Legion of Honour after the fall of Rome, Oudinot returned to France, and took his seat in the Legislative Assembly. At the coup d'état, he was arrested, and remained for some time a prisoner in the fortress of Vincennes. After his liberation, he retired into private life. He wrote several valuable works on military tacwrote several valuable works on initial val-tics, and upon cavalry. B. 1791; D. 1863. Ouday, Jean Baptiste, oo'-dre, a French painter of portraits and historical subjects, whose skill in delineating animals, particularly dogs, was such, that Louis XV. is said to have recognised his favourite ones whenever he saw them in the groups of Oudry, who was pen-sioned by that monarch, and had apartments in sioned by that monarch, and had apartments in the Tulleries. B. 1686; D. 1755.

OUGHTHER, William, out-tread, an English divine and mathematician, was educated at Eton, whence he was elected to King's College, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship. About 1603 he was presented to the living of Aldbury, Surrey; after which he devoted him-self to mathematical pursuits, and wrote seve-ral treatises, particularly his "Clavis," the plan of which was adopted by Sir Isaac Newton. In the civil war he suffered considerably for his adherence to the royal cause; indeed, according to Fuller, he died of joy at hearing of the Re-storation of Charles II. Fuller states that "this aged Simeon had a strong persuasion, that before his death he should behold Christ's anointed restored to his throne; which he did accordingly, to his great joy, and then had his 'dimittis' out of this mortal life." Oughtred enjoyed the very highest reputation in his day, and was called "the prince of mathematiand was called "the prince of mathematicians." B. in Buckinghamshire, 1573; D. 1660. Out.ou-Bee, of-loo-bee, grandson of Tamerlane, to whose empire he succeeded in 1446. He resided at Samarcand, where he erected a fine observatory. Passionately fond of astronomical pursuits, he compiled a series of tables in Persian, and likewise produced some other writings upon astronomical science. B. 1394;

killed, 1449.

OUTRAM, Sir James, oo'-tram, a modern British general, who, after passing through his collegiate career at Aberdeen with considerable distinction, obtained an appointment as military cadet in India, whither he proceeded in 1819. He had not long been there when his abilities and energy attracted the attention of his immediate superiors, and he was appointed lieu-tenant and adjutant of the Bombay native infantry, which he subsequently quated, in order to assume the command of the Bheel Corps, for organizing and disciplining which he obtained great commendation. Afterwards, he became political agent in Guzerat, British resident at Hyderabad, Sattara, and Baroda, and evor-tually succeeded the late Sir William Sleeman as commissioner at Lucknow. In 1855 he was dispatched to Persia, armed with diplomatic powers of an African brigade. After the revolution lientenant-general. He was present at the of 1818, he was nominated to the command acture of Bushire, and gained the victory at the theory at the first and the foot of the Khooshab, in 1857. Returning to India shortly Alps. In that command he was succeeded by Marshal Bugeaud, in 1849; but was soon afterwards sent, at the head of a Fronch expedition any corps, to compel the Romans to accept the authority of the pope. The city was stonic divisional member of the Council of India. The authority of the pope. The city was stonic understanding the control of the council of India. The defended by Garibaldi, and only submitted after defended by Garibaldi, and only submitted after the council of India Strick Cheville India Strick India Stri his controversy with the late Sir Charles James Napier, relative to the cause of the ameers of Scinde, need no more than a passing allusion here. In India, long before the mutiny, he was here. In India, long before the mutiny, he was well known to fame as an officer of long expewen known to mine as an oneer of long experience and high distinction, and had earned for himself the title of the "Bayard of the Indian army, sans peur et sans reproche." In 1856 he was nominated a civil knight commander of the Bath, and in the following year a military grand cross of the same order. His later honours were a baronetcy, the grade of G.C.B., and the appointment of lieutenant-general of her ma-appointment of neutral and ther majesty's Indian forces. 5.1802; p. 1863.

Ouvrann, Julien, oov-rav, was a grocer at Nantes at the era of the first French revolution. Being an excellent calculator, and of great ad-dress and boldness, he rapidly made a fortune. He was a contractor under the republican, the imperial, and the restored Bourbon regimes; he had the provisioning of the foreign armies during their occupation of France by the allied troops in 1816, and of the French army in Spain during the war in 1823. He was often denounced for his contracts during the revolution, and escaped the guillotine in 1794, by General Boivin con-caling him in his house at Nantes. Under the successive régimes, he owed many an escape to the influence of his friend Fouché. In 1810 he was sent on a secret mission by the latter to England, while Napoleon also sent a mission to negotiate a peace. The two ambassadors counteracted each other; the British government evaded what it considered a trap; the rival ambassadors were dismissed; and, on their return, Fouché was disgraced, and Ouvrard imprisoned by Napoleon. He subsequently became bankrupt, but lived in such extraordinary luxury in prison. that his creditors held him confined there for a long time. Great complaints were made in the chamber of deputies in 1821, of the intrigues, extravagance, and material deficiencies of his contract for supplying the French army in Spain; but no inquiry into these financial operations was made. He subsequently resided in Parliam where he died. n. 1772; n. 1847.

Overbeek, Frederick, o'-rer-bek, an eminent German artist, who, with Cornelius, J. Von Schnorr, and other painters, created as great a revolution in German art as we have seen occur in England at a later period, in consequence of the cilorts of Millais and his fellow "Pre-Raf-faellite" brethren. At the beginning of the 19th century, the pictorial art of his country was under the domination of French taste, conbined with an imitation of the later masters of the Italian schools. With Cornelius, Overbeck took up his residence at Rome, in 1811, and devoted himself to Christian art, adopting the principle counciated by Schlegel, that in all religious themes the treatment should be spiritual and symbolic, rather than human and dramatic. Four years after his journey to Rome, he embraced the doctrines of the Roman Catholic as commissioner, with the forces sent thither, church. His best works are illustrative of enjoying, at the same time, the local rank of scriptural subjects; the most important of them 759

O'SHAUGHNESSY, SIR WILLIAM BROOKE.

OUTRAM, SIR JAMES.

Owen, Professor Richard.

Palmerston, Viscoun

Owain Owan

accompanied Columbus on his first voyage to Hispaniola. In the war of Naples he rendered great services to Spain, for which Ferdinand appointed him inspector-general of the com-merce of the New World; in which capacity he went to Hispaniola, where he made a vast col-lection of materials for the work which he subsequently produced, with the title "General History of the Indies." It is a book of immense learning, although it has been denounced by Las Casas as being "as full of lies. almost, as pages." There is also another important work by him, relating to the genealogy, revenues, &c., of the grandees of Spain; but it remains in MS., and is preserved in the National Library of Madrid. B. 1478; D. about 1558, but this is uncertain.

Owarn, o-wain', son of Cadwygan ap Bleddyn, a prince of Powys, who, having carried off Ness, the wife of Gerald, constable of Pembroke, was obliged to fiv with his father to Ireland: but they afterwards returned to their own country. Owain's father died in 1110, and, the but they enter the country. Owaln's father died in 1110, and, me year following, Owaln was in Normandy with Henry I, who knighted him. He was killed by Gerald, the husband of Noss, in 1114.

Owals, the son of Maxen Wledig, an eminent who wells a mulais, broke off the connexion between Britain and the Romans. and was, in consequence, chosen sovereign o the country. He was also accounted a saint in the British church.

Owars, commonly called Sir Owen Tudor lord of Penmynydd, in Mona, or Anglesca, and said to be the descendant of the ancient sovesand to be the descendant of the ancient sore reigns of Wales. He studied the law, which profession he quitted, and went abroad. Katha-rine, the wife of Henry V., after her husband's death, fell in love with Owein, and privately married him, in 1426. They had three children one of whom, Edmund, became earl of Rich mond in 1452, and was the father of Henr VII. After the death of Katharine, Owain war confined in Newgate; whence he effected his escape, but was retaken: however, he soon ob tained his liberty, and died on his estate. about 1385.

Owen, George, o'en, a physician, was educated at Oxford, and became fellow of Merton College in 1519. Henry VIII., to whom ton College in 1519. Henry VIII., to whom he was physician, left him a legacy of one hundred pounds. He served in the same capacity to Edward VI. and Queen Mary. He was the author of a work entitled "A Meet Diet for the New Ague." D. 1558.

Owen, John, a Latin epigrammatist, who was educated at Oxford, whence he is sometimes was caucated at Oxford, where he is sometimes styled Oxoniensis; after which he became schoolmaster, first at Trylegh, in Monmouth-shire, and next at Warwick. His Latin epigrams possess great point, and are inferior only to those of Martial. B. about 1580; D. 1622. Owen, John, a learned Independent divine, was educated at Queen's College, Oxford. During the civil wars he was a zealous advocate for the Parliament against the King. Cromwell made him his chaplain, and took Dr. Owen with him on his expedition to Ireland. He afterwards appointed him to the deanery of Christ Church, Orford, where he served the office of vice-chancellor in 1652, and the year following took his doctor's degree. He is said to have been of tolerant principles, though a figid Calvinist. At the Restoration he was deprived of his deanery; on which he retired to his estate in writer. His greatest works are, "An Exposi-tion of the Epistle to the Hebrews," "Discourse on the Holy Spirit," and "Treatise on Original Sin." Chrendon, in his "History of the Rebel-lion," extols Dr. Owen's mild disposition, and declares him to have been one of the most learned and rational men of his time. D. at Stadham, Oxfordshire, 1616; p. 1683.

OWEN, Henry, a divine of the Church of Ingland, was educated at Ruthin School and Jesus College, Oxford, where he took his degree of M.D., but afterwards entered into orders, and was appointed to the vicarage of Edmonton, in was appointed to the vicarage of random and Middlesex, and St. Olave, Hart Street, London. His works are, "Observations on the Scripture Miracles," "Remarks on the Four Gospels," "An Inquiry into the Septuagint Version,"
"Sermons preached at Boyle's Lecture," and
"An Introduction to Hebrew Criticism." B.

1715: p. 1795. Owen, Robert, a modern English philanthropist, and the founder of the political system called "Socialism." He was the son of parents in a humble condition of life, but who, nevertheless, gave him a fair education. After filling the situation of draper's assistant at Newton, Montgomeryshire, and at Stamford, he repaired to the metropolis, and there so distinguished himself by his business talent; that at 15 he ministra by his pasiness earner and at a some was enabled to become a partner in a small cotton-mill. His success increasing, he removed to the Chorlton Mills, near Manchester, which, under his management, became a very prosperous establishment. In 1797 he married Miss Dale, the daughter of David Dale, a wealthy and influential manufacturer of Glasgow. He soon afterwards became part pro-prietor and sole manager of his father-in-law's works, the "New Lanark Twist Company," the management of whose mills upon his own peculiar principles soon spread his name far and wide. In this factory, where not only cotton-spinning, but other branches of manufacture were carried on, as many as 4000 persons were at one time employed. Over that large number of individuals he presided with a highly benevolent care; built schools and improved dwellings; taught the children various practical arts; provided both parents and off-spring with the means of healthful recreation, and promoted by every possible means the welfare of his great charge. From 1810 to 1815 he published his "New View of Society; or, Essays on the Formation of the Human Character," which, with his practical exemplification of his theories, introduced him to such men as Mr. Wilberforce, Introduced that to such men as Mr. Wilberforce, Mr. Zachary Macaulay, the first Sir Robert Peel, Mr. James Mill, Sir James Mackintosh, Mr. Malthus, and Lord Brougham. As he said himself, "From these political economists, often in animated disenpointed economists, of the last with great good seeing, and a cordial friendship. They were Seeling, and a cordial friendship. They were iberal men for their time, friends to the actional education of the poor." Mr. Owen vas now fairly launched before the world as a social reformer. In 1817 he addressed memorials to the sovereigns assembled at the Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle, confiding their precontain to Lord Castlereagh, and became a selebrity. Among other notable persons who isited his infant-school at New Lauerk, was te late emperor Nicholas of Russia, then the rand-duke. At that time there was great commotion about the doctrines of Malthus, and dr. Owen relates that, "in a two hours' conversation with the grand-duke, before he left me, he said, 'As your country is overpeopled, I will take you and two millions of population I will take you ame two minious or population with you, all in similar manufacturing communities." This was in reference to the establishment at New Lanark, and was certainly a most extraordinary offer on the part of the most exhaustrative despote monarch in the world; for Mr. Owen's community was based upon "liberty, equality, fraternity." Mr. Owen, how-"ilberty, equality, fraternity." Mr. Owen, however, declined, as he thought his hands were full enough of work at the time. In 1823 he quitted the factory of New Lanark and went to North America, where, in the state of Indiana, he purchased a large tract of land, and founded a community called by him "New Harmony," It proved a failure, however, and in 1827 he returned to his native country. His later experiments at carrying out his new view of society were an establishment at Orbiston, in Lanarkshire: another at Tytherley, in Hamp-shire; and a labour-exchange in London; but all were complete failures. In his later years, as his mind began to fail, he accepted the doctrine of spirit-rapping, and lectured and published works upon that delusion. The last appearance of the philanthropist was at the Social Science Congress of Liverpool. He was a gentleman of ample means, and disposed of a large fortune in promulgating his principles. Whatever opinion may be held as to his theories. there can be but one, and that the very highest, with respect to his energy, moral integrity, business talents, and disinterested philanthropy, n. at Newton, Montgomeryshire, 1771; n. 1858.

Owen Pace

Owen, Richard, a celebrated English naturalist mis form.

ralist, who at first served as midshipman in the royal navy, but quitted it upon the conclusion of the war with America in 1814. After resuming his studies, he was sent to the university of Edinburgh, in order to take a degree in medi-cine. In 1825 he repaired to London, and became a student of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. In the following year he received his diploma as member of the Royal College of Surgeons; and, resolving to again onter the naval service, he called on his late professor, Dr. Abernethy, to bid him farewell. "What is all this?" said Abernethy,—"Going to sea, sir." "Going to sea?—going to the devil!"—"I hope not, sir." "Going to sea! you had better, I tell you, go to the devil at once," reiterated the downright dector, who insisted upon another interview at the end of a week. Owen revisited his rough but honest friend at the expiration of that time, when Abernethy proposed an appointment at the College of Surgeons. This was accepted; the youthful anatomist found himself happily associated with one congenial mind, and so the navy lost a good officer, and science gained one of her brightest ornaments. His first task in the Royal College of Surgeons, was the preparation of a complete and accurate catalogue of the great museum of John Hunter, which had been obtained by the institution. That work cost Owen thirty years of incessant toil, but it enabled him to become the greatest anatomst of the age. During more than twenty years he held the Hunterian professorship at work cost Owen fairty years of incessant toil, joined Pius VII. at Fontamobleau. He returned but it enabled him to become the greatest and to Rome in 1813, and in 1816 re-established tomst of the age. During more than twenty there the order of the Jesuits. He left some years he held the Hunterian professorship at increasing "Memoirs" of his Life and Times, the College of Surgeons; he received the Royal . a. at Benevezzo, 1765; b. 1844.

And Copley medals of the Royal Society, a pension and residence from her Majesty, and be vine, and down of the Paul's, London, was emegane a member of almost every learned body in ployed by Henry VIII. in several combassies;

Europe and America. The limits of this notice will not permit of even the bare enumeration of the titles of his many invaluable works. That information may be found in the "Bibliographia Zoologiæ et Geologiæ," published by the Ray Society. These works are the true records of is life—a life of devotion to science, wherein he has fairly carned the title which has been bestowed upon him—viz., the "Newton of Natural History." B. at Lancaster, 1804.

OWER GLENDOWER, (See GLENDOWER, Owen.)
OWENSON, Sydney. (See MORGIN, Lady.)
OXENSITERNA, AXE), Count, ox'-en-stree'-rar, a celebrated Swedish minister, who ree ived his education in Germany. On his return to Sweden, he entered upon a career of diplomacy, and was employed by Charles IX. When Guetavus Adolphus ascended the throne, in 1611, he nominated him his chancellor or prime minister; and to that monarch Ovensti-ma rendered the greatest services by his states-manship. When Gustavus was killed at the battle of Lutzen, in 1632, Oxenstierna put himself at the head of the Protestant coalition, and, by his sagacious measures, brought success to the league during two years. After the battle of Nordlingen, in 1634, he went to Paris to hold an interview with Richelieu; and, in 1648, he directed from Stockholm the preliminary negotiations which, by producing the peare of West-phalia, put an end to the Thirty Years' War. His son was one of the envoys who signed that treaty; and it was to him that the count wrote, in answer to a letter wherein the young man betrayed diffidence because of his inexperience in diplomatic affairs, this answer, since become in diplomate analys, this answer, since become proverbial:—"Neseis, mi fili, quantila pruden-tia homines regantur." ("You do not yet know, my son, with how little wisdom mankind are governed.") While Queen Christma was in her minority, he was at the head of the council of regency; and, after she assumed the government, he resumed his old office of prime minister: but not succeeding in dissuading the number; but no successing in distanting the queen from abdicating her crown, he retired into private life. The second volume of the Swedo-Germanie War" is attributed to his pen. p. at Fanö, Upland, 1533; p. 1654.

Oxford, ox'-ford, Earl of. (See Harley.)
Oxford, Bishop of. (See Wilberforce. Samuel.)

OZEBOFF, Vladislas Alexandrovitch, os'-cr-ov. a Russian tragic poet, who, after serving in the army, in which he attained the rank of majorgeneral, obtained a civil appointment. He was the author of tragedies cutilide "Fingal," "De-metrius Donsko," "Œdipus," and "Polyscoa," besides some lyric poems. B. 1770; D. 1816.

'ACCA, Cardinal, pall-ka, minister of Pius VII., drew up the buil of excommunication promulgated against Napoleon in 1800. He retired from Rome shortly afterwards, and remained at Fenestrella until 1813, when he re-joined Pius VII. at Fontainebleau. He returned but Wolsey, being jealous of his rising merit, procured his disgrace. He was held in great esteem by the most learned men of his time, particularly Erasmus, Sir Thomas More, and Cardinal Pole. He wrote some Commentaries upon the Scriptures. B. 1432; B. 1532.

Ploneco, Juan de, pa-chai'-ko, marquis de Villena, the favourite and prime minister of corrupted him by a pension, and this perfidious minister betrayed his master's interests in the minister ectrayed ms master's interests in the peace of 1413, by many articles prejudicial to the kingdom of Castile. Henry, having discovered his trachery, reproched him with it, which so provided Pacheco that he conspired against him, and preclaimed Prince Alphonso king of Castile, in 1485; but caused the young of Castile, in 1485; but caused the young king to be poisoned soon afterwards, and was reconciled to Henry, whose favour he retained till his death, in 1473.

till his death, in 1493.

Paonisco, Francisco, a celebrated Spanish painter and censor of pictures. In 1594 he painted two floags for the Spanish fleets of New Spain. They consisted of crimson damask, and were aceh 30 yards by 50, bearing, besides rich borders and other decorations, St. Iago and the royal arms of Spain. The decorations of the eathedral of Seville at the funeral of Philip II. were-also from his brush. In 1618 he received were also from his drush. In 1013 he received the appointment of censor of pictures from the Inquisition, it being one of his duties to prohibit the sale of pictures containing any nucle figures. Says Mr. Ford, "Nothing gave the holy tribunal greater uneasiness than how Adam and Eve in Paradise, the blessed souls burning in purgatory, the lady who tempted St. Anthony, or the last day of judgment, were to be painted; circumstances in which small-clothes or long-clothes would be highly misplaced." Pacheco was nevertheless an accomplished personage; and it is to his lessons that the great Velasquez owed much of his great skill as a painter. A portrait of Cervantes was one of his best works. B. at Seville, 1571; D. 1654.

PACHYMERUS, George, pak'-i-meer'-us, a Greek writer, whose talents procured him the favour of Michael Palmologus, who conferred on him several offices in church and state. wrote a valuable "History of the East," which is inserted in the collection of Byzantine historians, and was published at Rome in 1669, with a Latin translation. n. about 1250; p. 1310.

PACOUNS, pulk-o-rus, son of Orodes, king of Parthia, signalized himself by the defeat of Crassus, whose army he nearly cut to pieces, n.c. 53. He embraced the cause of Pompey, and declared himself for the assassins of Cusar. After ravaging Syria and Judwa, he was defeated by Ventidius p.c. 39, and fell in the battle.

Day Ventiditis B.G. 59, and ten in the cactic.

Park, Fertinand, par-air, a celebrated I falian composer, who produced an epera, entitled

"Circe," at Venice, when only in his 10th year.

After visiting Padna, Naples, and Rome, in each of which cities he composed musical works, he returned to Parma, where the grandduke bestowed a pension upon him. In 1795 he repaired to Vienna, and afterwards to Dresden, where he was appointed chapel-master. Having been introduced to Napoleon, siter the battle of Jena, the emperor took him into his

the restoration of the Bourbons he become director of the Italian Opera of Paris; but lost the post in 1818, through professional intrigue. Paer was a voluminous composer; some of his works, such as "Griselda" and "Agnese," rank-ing very high. He was a member of the French

ing very night. He was a member of the French Institute. B. at Parma, 1774; D. at Paris, 1859. Pagan, Illaise François, Count of, pn'-pa, a celebrated French mathematician and military engineer, who here arms in his youth, and displayed great valour during the campaigns in Italy and Flauders. Louis XIII, made him a general, and sent him as envoy to Portugal in 1642. The same year he became entirely blind, by the loss of his remaining eye at the siege of Mont. auban, having before been deprived of the sight of the other by illness. He then turned his ator the other by lines. He then tillned his attention to mathematical studies, and wrote a treatise on Fortification, "Geometrical Theorems," "Theory of the Planets," "Astronomical Tables," "An Historical Relation of the River of the Amazons." His treatise on Fortification is, even at the present day, an able work upon the subject of which it treats; but his mathematical works have lost their value. B. at Avignon, 1604: p. at Paris, 1665.

PAGANI, Gregorio, pargarae, an eminent Italian painter, of Florence, whose pictures have been sometimes taken for those of Michael-Angelo Buonarotti. B. 1558; D. 1605.
PAGANINI, Nicholas, pa'-ya-ne'-ne, a celebrated falian violinist, whose talents were so preco-cious, that, at the age of eight years, he played in a church at Genoa, and at the public concerts. He was subsequently placed under Costa, an eminent violoncellist, and received lessons in harmony from the composer Paer. He was next invited to Lucca by Eliza Bacciochi, sister of Napoleon I., to assume the direction of the court concerts. Subsequently he made a tour over Europe, exciting everywhere the greatest over Europe, extend everywhere the greates enthusiasm. After producing an enormous sen-sation at Paris in 1831, he went to London, where he demanded, and occasionally received, enormous sums for his services. His great power over the violin was only excelled by his thirst for gold; in one instance, his avarice led him to demand £1000 for three performances, which terms were rejected. Paganini was a marvellous performer: the purity of his tone, his feeling, harmony, and expression, were perfection; but his habit of playing upon one string, although an extraordinary feat, savoy red too much of sleight-of-hand to be creditable to so great an artist, who could have done much better with the four which naturally belong to the instrument. His harsh and eccentric character would seem to have made him many enomies. At Viennahe was charged with having murdered his wife; but he demanded proofs of his ever having had one; then he was accused of having stabbed his mistress, which charge he also related. At his death he left a fortune of upwards of £2.0,000, which devolved upon his son, sisters, and mother. B. at Genea, 178 D. at Nice, 1840. PAGET, William, first Lord, son of a serjeant-at-mace in the reign of Henry VIII., who, taking favourable notice of the son, made him clerk of the signet, afterwards of the council, and of the privy seal. In these employments be conducted himself with so much disservice, and, at a subsequent date, nominate erection and skill, that Herry sent him as amble mapped composer and conductor of chambers and conductor of conductor of chambers and chambers are chambers and chambers cretion and skill, that Henry sent him as amPagi Paisiello

He also made him secretary of state, and ap-pointed him one of the executors of his will. At the beginning of the reign of Edward VI., he was sent on an embassy to the emperor Charles V.; and on his return received fresh dignities, of which he was deprived and sent to the Tower, in consequence of his connexion with the duke of Somerset. Paget was reinstalled in his em-of Sourcest. Paget was reinstalled in his em-ployments by Queen Mary, and continued in involve during the reign of Elizabeth. p. 1561. PAGI, Antoine, pa²-she, a French monk, who undertook the laborious work of examining and correcting the "Ecclesiastical Armais" of Car-dinal Baronius. The first volume of his work appeared at Paris in 1689; the three remaining volumes were printed after his death, at Geneva.

Pact, François, nophew of the preceding, whom he assisted in editing Baronius, and published the three posthumous volumes. He was also the author of a "History of the Popes."anso the author of a "History of the Popes,"— There was a Jesuit of this name, who was a nephew of the above, and wrote a "History of Cyrus the Younger," the "Retreat of the Ten Thousand Greeks," and a "History of the Revo-lutions in the Low Countries." p. 1721.

Panlen, Peter, Count, pail-len, descended from a noble Livenian family, was appointed from a noble Livonina family, was appointed military governor of Petersburg by the emperor Pani; but fearing to fall a victim to the capticious disposition of that monarch, formed a conspiracy against lim, caused him to be strangled in 1001, and proclaimed his son Alexander emperor. Soon afterwards he withdraw from public life. a. 1769; p. 1826.

PAINE, Thomas, pain, an English writer, who was the son of a Quaker, and was brought up to the trade of a staymaker. After working for some time at this occupation in London, he obtained a place in the excise, at Sandwich, in Kent. About the year 1761 he found employment as teacher in a school in the suburbs of London, but quitted that post to again enter the excise. Having drawn up a statement of grievances under which his fellow existement of laboured, it was submitted to one of the com-missioners, who was so struck by the excellence of the style in which the paper was written, that he gave Paine a letter of introduction to Benhe gave Paine a letter of murousesson of local jamin Franklin. The latter recommended him to emigrate to America. Thither he accord-ingly went; and, after contributing articles to the periodicals for a short time, became editor of the "Philadelphia Magazine" in 1775. In of the "Philadelpina Algrazine" in 1770, In the following year he produced a work entitled "Common Sense," of which Burke afterwards spoke as "that celebrated pamphlet which pre-pared the minds of the people for independence." This small work was the means of obtaining for its author the sum of £500 from the legis-

the university of that province, and the mem-bership of the American Philosophical Society. Whilst the American war was in progress, he produced a series of patriotic appeals to the people; and in 1781 was chosen to accom-pany Colonel Lawrence to France, in order to negotiate a loan. In this affair he was perfectly successful, and upon his return to America in 1785, he obtained the appointment of clerk to the Assembly of Philadelphia, a gift of 3000

lature of Pennsylvania, the M.A. degree from

Loudon. There he remained several years, and in 1791-2 publi-hed his "Rights of Man," in answer to Burke's "Reflections on the French Revolution." This work was condemned as a "false, seendalous, maticious, and seditious libel," and Paine, as its author, was brought to trial in the Court of King's Bench. Notwithstanding an eloquent defence made for him by the Hon. Thomas Ecskine, he was found quity. (See Ersking) Pame, however, contrived to effect his escape to France, where he begane a member of the National Convention; but, having written a pamphlet in favour of preserv-ing the life of Louis XVI., he was thrown into prison by Robespierre; upon whose fall he was restored to liberty. He remained in France restored to liberty. He remained in France until the year 1802, his near constantly engaged untit the year 1802, his pen constantly engaged in producing social, political, and thoological works, the title of one of which may be given, as affording a notion of the Utopian character of at least a protion of Paine's ciloric. It was called, "Agrarian Justice opposed to Agrarian Law and to Agrarian Monopoly; being a plan for meliorating the condition of man, by creating in every nation a national fund, to pay to every person, when arrived at the age of twenty-one years, the sum of fifteen pounds sterling, to enable him or her to begin the world; and also ten pounds sterling during life to every person now living of the age of lifty years, and to all others when they arrive at that age, to enable them to live an old age without wretchedness, and go decently out of the world." In 1802 his friend Mr. Jefferson, who had been elected pre-sident of the United States, offered Paine a passage to America in a sloop of war, which Paine accepted. The latter years of his life were spent in producing works upon the building of ships of war, iron bridges, &c. Several years after his death, Cobbett caused his remains to be brought to England, where he expected to find them greeted with enthusiasm; but the undertaking brought only ridicule upon but the undertaking prought only ridictic upon himself. In his political writings, Prine displayed a clear and vigorous style; but his roligous treatises are defaced by seurrilly of language, and betray great ignorance. u. at Tuchtori, Norbiok, 1737; b. in America, 1899.
PAISTELLO, Glovanni, pai-we-wil-le, a celeptated Italian composer, who was sent, act a carly age, to the Jesuits' College of Tarento, to receive his education, and manifested such a decided taste for the musical art, that his father was prevailed upon to place him at the Conservatory at Naples, where the future composer made great progress under the tuition of the eminent musician Durante. Having produced a comic interlude, while a student of the abovea come mentact, while a statement of the door-named institution, he was employed to com-pose an opera for the Marsigli theatre at Ro-logna. This was the commencement of this professional career, and his reputation became so great, that he was in a few years commissioned to write operas for nearly every great city in Italy. In 1776 he accepted an invitation from Catharine II. to go to Russia, where he resided during nine years. In 1785 he returned to Naples, where he remained, although he re-ceived flattering invitations from Russia, France, successful, and, upon his return to America in ceived distorring invitations from Kussai, France, 1785, he obtained the appointment of clerk to anchingland. Upon the decease of Hoche, the the Assembly of Philladulphia, a gift of 3000 celebrated Franch general, he wrote a funeral dollars, and a small estate near New Rochelle, supploon, for which Aspoleon made him a rich Upon the conclusion of the war, he engaged in present. In 1799 a revolution burst forth at mechanical speculations, the prosecution of Kaples, which resulted in the establishment of which led him first to Paris and afterwards to a republican form of government, under which

Paixhans

Paisiclo became national director of music At the restoration of the royal family, he lost reinstated in them aude a sewssequently became chaple-master to Napoleon when first consul; for whom, also, when he constituted himsel emperor, Paistello produced a coronation "To Domn." After spending merly three years in Paris, he returned to Naples, and when Joseph Bonaparte became hime, he nominated the composer to several high appointments, affiting to them a liberal rainy. Napoleon I created him cherolite of the Legion of Honour, and the French institute elected him an associate. Of this great compacer, the Chevalier Lestwey writes, "Taistello was not only a great musician: he possessed a large fund of information, was well versed in the dead increages, and conversant with all the branches of literature. Endowed with a noble mid, he was above all mean passions, he knew nother curv, nor the feelure of rivalry." Two of his nebodies, "Hope told a flattering tale," and "For tendenness formed," have attained to a world-wide popularity. n. 1241, p. 1810.

and "for fenueness formon," have assumed as world-wide popularity. In 1741; b. 1816. B. Austrans, Henry Joseph, poiz-lan, a celebrated French general of artillory, and the inventor of the guns and projectiles which hear his name, was educated at the Polytechnic School, and selected the artillery, in which service he rose to the runk of general. The Paixhans gruss are adapted to throw shells and hollow shot. These guns and projectiles were teed on board the Itussian fleet at the battle of Sinope, where the Tarkish ships were aunilialated by their deadly effects. General Paixhans words several works, chiefly on the sathject of his inventions. In all Mctz, 1783; p. 1854.

Parot, Claude Pierre, par "school, a distinguish-Parot, Claude Pierre, par "school, a distinguish-Parot, Claude Pierre, par "school, a distinguish-

Parot. Claude Pierre, par-kol. A distinguished French soldier, who attered the army in 171, served in all the cammaigns of the Republic, and rose to the highest military honours. Nominated general of division in 1812, he commanded the ranguard in the Russian cammaign, when he took Minsk and some other towns; was left for dead at the battle of Leipsian in 1813, reaptured Monterean from the allies in 1814, and hand agained possession of Namur at the moment when the battle of Unterloop decided the fate of Dionaparie. If the the retried from the service of his owner, but re-entered it in 1830, when the revolution of July broke out, and directed the attack of the Paristans upon Ramboullick, whiel led to the flight of Charles X. For these evices he was made a peer of France, n. 1772 D. 1844.

D. 19-22.

PAKINGTON, Sir John S., pa'-king-ton, a Conservative statesman who represented Droit-wich from 1897 to 1883. He served under Lord Deeby in three administrations, having been colonial secretary in 1852, first lord of the Admirally in 1853 and 1866, and secretary of state for war in 1897. s. at Powiek Court, Worcestorshire, 1799.

PALEDIOGUS, put-le-ol-o-put, the name of a celebrated royal mouse, which gave a monarch to Constantinople, in the person of Michael VIII., in 1200. Between this year and 1163, when the Greek empire felt, theer reigned seven princes of this house; viz., Michael V-III., John VII., and, last of all, Coffstantine XII. Two members of the same family afterwards reigned at Pat-assand Argos, but were dethroned by Mahomet I. In 1153 and 1461.

Palestrina

PALATON, Junn de, pnl'-a-fire, a Spanish prolate and historian, who studied at Salamanca, after which he was appointed a member of the council of war, and next of that of the Indies, but renouncing civil distinctions for the ceclesiastical state, he was made a bishop in Spanish America, with the title of judge of the administration of the three vicerway of the Indies, While there he administered justice with strict impartiality; but, through the intrigues of the Jesuits, was compelled to return to Spain, He wrote the "History of the Siege of Fontarabla," "History of the Conquest of China by the Tartors," and some religious works. B. in Aragon, 1809, p. 16-0.

PALAFOX, Don Joseph, famous for his heroic defence of Saragossa in 1803-9, was surung from delenee of Saragonese family, and having entered an old Aragonese family, and having entered the military service of Spain at an early age, accompanied Ferdinand to Bayonne; but, on the resignation of that monarch, he returned to Aragon, and lived in retirement at a short distance from Saragossa. Proclaimed governor of Saragossa by the people, he took instant mea-sures to sustain the siege; and such was the effect of his combined intelligence and determination, that with a comparative handful of men, the city manfully resisted an overwhelming force, and at length compelled the French general to retreat after a siege of sixty-one days and the loss of thousands of his men. But Marshals Mortier and Moneey marched in No-vember of the same year, at the head of a large army, to recommence the siege. After suffering two defeats before Saragossa, Palafox once more retired within its walls, and commenced the same vigorous course of action which had been previously crowned with success; but on this occasion the besiegers were backed by a force more terrible than themselves; an epidemic fever was raging in the garrison; and Palafox. who was attacked by it, was obliged to resign the command on the 20th February, to General St. Mare, who signed a capitulation the next day. Palafox was sent into France, and was day. Paintox was sent into France, and was kept a prisoner at Vincennes till the restoration of Ferdinand. In 1814 he became captain-general of Aragon, but took little part in public affairs for many years before his death. B. 1780; D. 1847.

PALATE, N. de la Curne, pa-fail, a French historical writer, who breame a member of the French Acubemy, and of that of Inscription and Belles-Lettres. Hew rate "Memoriss of Arrival Chivalry," a work of curious research, and was also the auther of a "Memoris roth on the nicle of Glaber," in the Memoriss of the Academy of Inscriptions. In at Austrace 1997 n. 1281.

of Inscriptions. In, at Auverro, 1997. In 1881, PARLARIUS, Atonius, Jud'o-Jord's-tra, a learned Italian writer, who, after studying at different places, became professor of thresh and Latin explaces, but being suspected of Latineau found it necessary to withdraw to Lutenau them to Milian, where he was arrested and centre to Rome. The Impulsition coursed him to be form to the length of the Soul, and some theological works, which were condemned by the country of Trent. In A. Westel on defining the property of the Soul, and some theological works, which were condemned by the computed of Trent. In A. Westel on determine the property of the Soul, and some theological works, which were condemned by the computed of Trent. In A. Westel on determine the control of Trent. In A. Westel on the control of Trent.

some tacological works, which were condemned by the council of Trent. h. at Veroll, near Rome. PAINSENIAL, John Peler Louis, parl-distyre, an a celebrated Italian compaser, whose musical calculation was completed under Claude Goudinal, and content French musician, and a Haruenot, who was one of the victims of St. Bartholomew. In 1561 Palestrian became chapel-master to Pope Julius III., but lost the post when Paul IV. attained the tiara in 1555. After remaining for some time in a poor and neglected condition, he obtained the office of director of chapel music to Santa Maria Maggiore. The Council of Trent having resolved to reform the music of the church, by getting rid of the vulgar melodies which had crept into the sacred service, Palestrina was engaged to write a mass of a grand and solemn nature. He entered upon his task with religious enthusiasm, and produced a work which set a great example for later musicians to follow, and which is one of the most beautiful masses to be found in the whole catalogue of Roman Catholic church music. Soon after he had completed this mass, he was reinstated in his former post at the Vatican. The subsequent years of his life were spent in composing sacred music for the Romish church. Dean Aldrich adapted three of his moters to the 41th, 63rd, and 115th Psalms, the first and third of which are frequently heard in English cathedrals, viz., "We have heard with our ears," and "Not unto us."

After death, his remains were interred in St.
Peter's, and were attended to the tomb by the most distinguished persons in Rome. B. near Rome, 1524; D. in the same city, 1591. PALEY, Dr. William, puil-le, a learned English divine and theological writer, who received his elementary education under his father, who was master of Giggleswick school, in Yorkshire. He was afterwards sent to Christ's College, Cambridge, where, in 1763, he took the degree of R.A., and was elected fellow in 1766. He distinguished himself as a tutor, and became the friend of Dr. Law, bishop of Carlisle, who gave him a living in Cumberland, and afterwards that of Appleby, in Westmoreland. If calso ob-tained a prebendal stall in the eathedral of Carlisle, with the living of Dalston. About 1780 he became chancellor of Carlisle. In 1785 he pub-lished his "Elements of Moral and Political Philosophy." His next work was "Hore Pau-ling," or "Observations upon the Epistles of St. ling," or "Observations upon the Episteen be-Paur," in which he draws a comparison be-tween the epistles and the history of the apostle as given in the Acts; and from what he terms the "undesigned coincidences," seeks to prove the genuineness of revealed religion. His "Evidences of Christianity" appeared in 1794. After this, Dr. Paley obtained a prebend of St. After tins, br. Piney ordanics a process of the sub-deamery of Lincoln from the bishop of that diocese, and the living of Bishop-Wearmouth from the bishop of Durham. To the lastmentioned prelate he dedicated his book entitled "Natural Theology," which was given to the world in 1802. This work, one of the best-known and most delightful in the English language, was edited and annotated by Lord Brougham and Sir Charles Bell in 1845. Lord Brougham, in his preliminary discourse, states that he undertook the task of producing an edition of Paley, in consequence of an observa-tion that he had often made, that scientific men tion that he had often made, that scientific men are apt to regard the study of revealed religion as little connected with philosophical pursuits. "Many of the persons to whom I allude," he says, "were men of religious habits of thinking; others were free from any disposition to scepticism; but the bulk of them relied little upon natural theology." B. at Peterborough, 1743; p. 1805.

PALGRAVE, Sir Francis, păl'-graiv, an eminent Latin.

English historian and historical antiquary, who first became known in literature as the editor of some learned works published under the sanetion of the commissioners of public records. In 1831 he produced a valuable little work, entitled "History of England,—Anglo-Saxon Period," for the series named "The Family Library; and in the following year was knighted for his and in the following year was knighted for his services to constitutional and parliamentary literature. His valuable "Rise and Progress of the English Commonwealth,—Anglo-Saxon Period; containing the Anglo-Saxon Policy and the Institutions arising out of the Laws and Usages which prevailed before the Conquest." was produced in the same year. In the preliminary inquiries which led to the reform of the municipal corporations of England and Wales, he took an energetic and distinguished part, and was soon afterwards created deputy keeper of her majesty's records. Whilst worthly filling that post, he published a series of works of the greatest value to the students of English literature; some of the most important of which were, "Calendars and Inventories of the Treawere, "Calendars and invent-vies of the trea-sury of the Escheeuer," in Dominents Illustrat-ing the History of Scotland," and "Treths and Fictions of the Middle Ages," The first volume of his greatest work, the "History of Normandy and Bingland," was given to the public in 1851. in London, 1788; p. 1841.

Practises, Ternard, par-lisers, a celebrated French potter and chemist, who for his incentify in parallel server and chemist, who for his incentify in parallel server and the works, was patronized by Henry III., who endead control of the parallel server and the top the control of the work was partonized by Henry III. who endead catholic. But Palissy was an indestible Callinst, and and and and catholic. But Palissy was an indestible Callinst, and his old are, imprisoned in the Rastille. He wrote several works upon natural philosophy, and upon subjects connected with the was, in his old are, imprisoned in the sorting when the work of the partial philosophy, and upon subjects connected with the art of pottery. The best edition of his works, which are full of valuable and curious experiments, is that of Paris, 1848, with the notes of M. Faujas do St. Fond. His pottery has become celebrated, and fow things are more prized by the councisseur than the famous Palissy ware." D. about 1509; D. in the Bastille, 1559.—Mr. Morley has written an interesting biography of "Palissy ware".

teresting Biography of "Falsey the Potter."

PALLADJO, Andrew, path-toad-o, a celebrated Italian architect, who at first commenced the study of the art of seulphruc, but Trissino the poof advised him to apply himself to architecture, and sent him time times to Rome, where Palladio studied and designed after the ancient mounteness of thas city. In these pursuits he discovered the true principles of an art which, in his time, was buried in Gottlie harbertly. Among the noble structures which this linear trious architect built, one of the principal is the theatre called the Olympico, at Vicenza. The published a valuable trains on as discount and published a valuable trains on as discount and published a valuable trains on as discount as published a valuable trains on as discount as published a valuable train. The analysis of the published a valuable trains on as discount as published a vocate rule of the analysis of the published a vocate rule of the published as vocate rules in the analysis of the published as vocate rules in the analysis of the published as vocate rules in the analysis of the published as vocate rules in the analysis of the published as vocate rules in the analysis of the published as vocate rules in the analysis of the published as vocate rules are the analysis of the published as vocate rules.

phoisized a Work of his of the aminquines on ancient Rome. n. at Vicenza, 1518; p. 1550.

Pallahurs, pal-lai-di-re, an early Christian father, who became a hermit in 389, and in 401 was chosen bishop of Helenopolis, in Bittynia. For his attachment to St. Chrysostom he was greatly persecuted, and driven from his dicoses. At the desire of Laurst, governor of Cappadocia, he wrote the "History of Anchorets." There is also attributed to him a Life of Chrysostom, in a dialogne, Greek and Latin.

Partas, nall'-las, a freedman of the emperor losophy and theology in his society. Innocent Claudius, over whom he had so great an ascendancy, as to persuade him to e-pouse Agrippina, his nice, and to adopt Nero for his successor. Pallas, in concert with Agrippina, is charged with having hastened the death of Claudius by poison. Nero subsequently caused him to be secretly put to death, confiscated his treasure, amounting to unwards of two millions sterling: but erected a superb monument to his memory. Palles was brother to the Felix before whom

St. Paul pleaded.

Pallas, Peter Simon, pal'-las, a celebrated German naturalist and traveller, who was educated for the medical profession. In his youth he likewise evinced a great aptitude for the acquirement of languages, and for any knowledge bearing upon the natural sciences. Atter visiting the universities of Halle, Göttingen, and Leyden, he proceeded to London in 176). and there assiduously studied the collections of and there assumes state the conceins of natural history. In 1763 he went to the Higgge, and published a work upon zeology, which acquired him great reputation, and led to an invitation from the empress Catharine to St. Petersburg. Thither he proceeded in 1767, and was appointed professor of natural history in the Imperial Academy of Sciences. Shortly afterwards he formed a member of the expedition despatched to Northern Russia and Siberia, for the purpose of investigating the natural history of those regions. After an absence of six years, during which his companions and himself penetrated as for as the irontiers of China, he returned to St. Petersburg in 1774. with a large mass of notes and observations, to arrange and publish which cost him several years of intense application. For his services he was ennobled, and appointed precentor to the grand-dukes Alexander and Constantine. In 1791 he proceeded to the newly-conquered province of the Crimea, where he resided during lifteen years, busily engaged in accumulating facts and preparing his scientific works for publication. At length, feeling the advance of age, he requested permission to return to Germany; and, this being granted, he arrived at Berlin after an absence of forty-two years Pallas was an untiring observer of natural phenomena, and a most voluminous writer. His works, says Cuvier, "have placed the name of their author in the first rank of naturalists, who are constantly referring to and quoting from every page of them. They are also read and consulted with equal interest by the historian, the geographer, and the student of languages or of nations." The most valuable of his works are: "Travels through different Provinces of the Russian Empire;" an uncompleted work on the animals of European and Asiatic Russia, entitled, "Zoographia Hosso-Asiatica;" a "History of the Mongolian Na-tions;" and "Travels through the Sonthern Provinces of the Russian Empire." He likewise contributed a number of papers on geology and natural history to the "Transactions" of the Academy of St. Petersburg, and to those of the Regal Society of London and the Institute of France, of which learned bodies he was a member. B. at Berlin, 1741; D. 1811. PALLATIONO, SOTER, published-che'no, an eminent Italian cardinal, who, though the elder son of a noble family, renounced the advan-tages of birth, and entered the order of the Jesuits. After his novitiate, he professed phiosophy and theology in his seciety. Innocent X, employed him in several important affairs, and Alexander VII. made him cardinal. His principal work is a "History of the Council of Trent," written in opposition to that of Father Sarpi. The style is good, but the book is partial. He was also the author of a treatise on "Style in Written Composition," and a philoso-phical "Treatise on Happiness." B. at Rome. 1607; p. 1667.

PALLAVICINO. Ferrante, an Italian writer, who became a canon regular of the order of st Augustine; but, hating written some severe satures against Pope Urban VIII, and his re-latives the Barberini, he found it expedient to retire to Venice, as a price was set upon his head. A Frenchman, who pretended to be his friend, persuaded him to go to France, pre-misi-g him a brilliant career. Ferrante fol-lowed his advice, but was no sooner out of the Venetian territory than he was seized and conducted to Avignon, where he was put to death. The man who had betrayed him was assissinated some time afterwards by a friend of Pallavicano. His works were printed at Venice. Divorce; or, the Separation of Christ from the Roman Church." B. at Parma, 1615; executed.

Pallissen, Sir Hugh, pal'-li-ser, on English admiral, who early in life distinguished himself in the navy, and was made post-enptain in 1746, He was at the taking of Quebec, and was made comptroller of the navy, and created a baronet in 1773. Serving as second in command under Admiral Keppel, in the famous engagement off Ushant, July, 1778, a misunderstanding arose between them, and Sir Hugh preferred a charge against Admiral Keppel, who was acquitted. Sir Hugh was then tried in his turn and reprimanded. He was, however, a brave and exprimanued. He was, nowever, a brave and experienced officer, and became governor of Greenwich Hospital. B. 1721; D. 1796.

Palmer, Sawael, pa'-mer, a learned printer, who exercised his profession with great reputation in London, and in whose office the celebrated Dr. Franklin was employed. He wrote a "History of Printing." p. 1732.

Palmer, Sir Roundell, an eminent lawyer who, after a successful career at Rugby and became Q.C. in 1849. He first entered Par-liament for Plymouth in 1847, and became solicitor-general under Lord Palmerston in 1861. He held office as solicitor-general from 1864 to 1866. He has gained distinc-tion as a poet, and edited the "Book of Praise," a selection of hymns in 1862. n.

ALMER, John, the first projector of mailcoaches, was a native of Bath, where he was brought up as a brewer, but subsequently solicited and obtained a patent for a theatre in his native city, which concern proved eminently successful under his management. Being much in the habit of travelling from place to place, the idea occurred to him that a botter mode of conveying the mails was desirable, and he acletters by coaches with guards, now super-seded by railways. He succeeded in his object, though not without great opposition; but the utility of the plan soon became manifest, and he was made comptroller-general of the post-office, with a salary of £1500 a-year.

806

Some disputes, however, occurring, he lost his situation in 1792; and though he afterwards. through petitions, was reimbursed by Parliament, the compensation was very inadequate to the percentage he was to have received in case his plan succeeded. D. 1818.

PALMERSTON, Henry John Temple, Viscount, pa'-mer-ston, a modern English statesman, whose family, the Temples, are descended from a Saxon earl, anterior to the Conquest, although the title belongs to the Irish peerage. Sir William Temple, diplomatist, friend of William III., and patron of Dean Swift, is one of the most famous members of the same family. The future prime minister was first sent to Harrow school, afterwards to the university of Edinburgh, and finally to St. John's College, Cambridge; where, in 1806, he took a M.A. degree. In his twenty-first year he sought to enter the House of Commons as the representative of the University of Cambridge, but was defeated by Lord Henry Petty, afterwards Marquis of Lansdowne. Shortly afterwards, however, he was returned to Parliament for the over, he was returned to Farmaness for the borough of Bletchingley, and at a later period succeeded in securing the suffrages of the university of Cambridge. From the very outset of his parliamentary career, his ability and business talents were conspicuous, and in 1807, although only in his twenty-fifth year, he became a junior lord of the treasury in the Tory administration of the duke of Portland and Mr. Perceval. In the following year he made his first great speech in Parliament, in opposition to a motion of Mr. Ponsonby for the production of papers relative to Lord Catheart's expedition to Copenhagen. In 1809 he was appointed secretary at war, upon the resignation pointed secretary to war, non-the resignation of Lord Castlereagh. In this office he remained through the various Tory administrations for nearly twenty years. But in this interval his political views had undergone considerable modification, and after Canning's death he found himself unable to co-operate with the Torics. Between May, 1828, and March, 1830, he was without office; and, as an independent member, signalized himself so much upon foreign questions, that when the Whigs came into power, he received the appointment of foreign secretary, and kept it until the year 1834. After the fall of the Conservative ministry of Sir Robert Peel, in the following year, Lord Palmerston again resumed his func-tions in the Foreign Office. He remained in office until 1811, and it was during these six years that the name of Palmerston became so celebrated as a foreign minister. Throughout the continent, from Spain to Turkey, his name represented the power and influence of England—an object of fear and execution with some governments, of admiration with others; synonymous with alertness, brilliancy, and foresight with all. Between the years 1841 and 1846, he was in opposition to the Conservative ministry of Sir Robert Peel; but in the last-mentioned year was again appointed foreign secretary under the Whig ad-ministration of Lord John Russell. His too ready acknowledgment of the coup d'état effected by Louis Napoleon in 1851, led to serious differences between himself and his colleagues, and, in consequence, he was compelled to resign. His secession, however, speedily led to the fall of the Russell ministry, and upon the accession of the Coalition administration, in the following year, he took the office of home secretary. The mismanagement of affairs in the Crimea brought about the fall of the Coalition ministry in 1855; immediately after which Lord Palmerston reached the apex of power as first lord of the Treasury, and prime minister of Great Britain. His too great deference to the wishes of a foreign potentate, in the matter of the "Conspiracy Bill," introduced to the House of Com-mons shortly after the attempt upon the life of the emperor of the French by Orsini and others. aroused the strongest feelings in this country against his cabinet. Before that expression of public indignation he was compelled to retire, and to give place to the Conservative ministry of Lord Derby. In 1859, however, he overcame the Conservative party, and returned to power as premier. The tendency and results of his long political career may be studied with adonly pointed acter may be studed with advantage in two works, entitled, respectively, "Opinions and Policy of the Right Hon. Viscount Palmerston, as Minister, Diplomatist, and Statesman; with a Memoir by G. H. Francis," and "Thirty Years of Foreign Policy." a History of the Secretaryships of the Earl of Abordeen and Lord Palmerston. B. at Broadands, Hampshire, 1784; D. 1865.

Pamphilus, pām'-fi-lus, a painter of Macedon, who flourished under King Philip. He was the first who applied the laws of proportion and of perspective to his art, which he honoured by his manners and his talents. He founded a school at Sievon, the most famous of all the ancient academies of painting, and procured an edict that none but those of noble birth should be instructed in painting. The same law was after-wards extended throughout Greece. Apelles was the disciple of this master. Flourished in the 4th century B.C.

PAMPHILUS, St., bishop and martyr, of Casa-rea, in Palestine; to which city he presented a library, consisting of most of the works of the ancients. He transcribed the Bible with his own hand, and with the utmost exactness. He was put to death about 300.

PAMPHILUS. (See EUSEBIUS.)
PANTIUS, pa-ne'-shi-us, a Stoic philosopher of Rhodes, who studied at Athens under Diogenes the Stoic with such credit as to be offered genes the Scote with such creat as to be obserted the rights of citizenship, which he refused, saying, "A modest man is content with one country." He afterwards went to Rome, where he had numerous disobles; among the rest, Lælius, Scipio, and Polybius. Panætius accompanied Scipio in his expeditions, and rendered eminent services to the Rhodians by his interest with that commander. Cicero mentions a work of his on the Duties of Man, which is lost. Flourished in the 2nd century B.C.

is lost. Flourished in the 2nd century no. PANDEGOUSE, André JOSOph, pan-koolé, a French writer, who produced, among other numerous works, "Studies for Young Ladies," "History of the Counts of Flanders," "A Collection of Bon-mots," "Dictionary of French Proverbs," and "Besqus on Philosophers," B. at Ialle, 1709, na f Paris, 1758.

PANDEGOUSE, Charles Joseph, son of the procedile, was a multisher at Paris and be

PANGEOUELE, Charles Joseph, son of the preceding, was a publisher at Paris, and his skill in typography made him elebrated all over Europe. He established the "Monitors" newspaper and the celebrated "Encyclopedie Méthodique." His works are, "Mathematical Memoirs," addressed to the Academy of Sciences, translations of Lucretius, of Tasso's "Jerusalem," and of the "Orlando

Panigarola

Furioso" of Ariosto; a "Philosophical Discourse on Beauty," and another on "Pleasure and Grief." B. at Lille, 1736; D. at Paris, 179s.

Panigarola, Francis, pa'-ne-ga-ro'-la, an eminent Italian prelate, whom Sixtus V. created bishop of Asti, and sent with Bellarmine and Cardinal Gaetano to France, to strengthen the party of the League against Henry IV. On that occasion Panigarola displayed great zeal and eloquence. On his return he set about reforming his diocese, which is said to have given such offence that he was poisoned. He was the author of some fine sermons, which were printed at Rome; but his principal work is a treatise on the cloquence of the pulpit, under the title of "Il Predicatore." B. 1548; D. 1594.

PANIN, Nakita Ivanowitch, Count de, pa-nin, a Russian statesman, whose father, who was lieutenant-general in the service of Peter I., came originally from Lucea, in Italy. Panin commenced his career in the cavalry guards of the empress Elizabeth; but having secured the patronage of Prince Kourakin, he became gentleman of the chamber. By his address he gentleman of the chamber. By his address he gained the favour of his sovereign, who sent him, in 1747, to Copenhagen, and afterwards to Stockholm, with the title of minister plenipotentiary. On his return he was made governor of the grand-duke Paul, and lastly prime minis-ter to Catharine II. He was a man of considerable powers and enlarged views, and during his stay in Sweden conceived a great admiration of the more liberal form of government existing in that kingdom, and which he afterwards attempted to introduce into Russia, but without success. B. 1718; D. 1782.

Proti, Pasquale de, pa'-o-le, a famous Corsican pairiot, whose father, Giacinto de Paoli, was in 1735 elected one of the chief magistrates of the island, and subsequently acted as a leader in the revolt against the Genocse. On being compelled to quit Corsica, he retired to Naples with Pasquale, who was placed in the military college of that city. After serving for a short time as licutenant in the Neapolitan array, he was invited by the Corsicans to become their captain-general. In 1755 he put himself at the head of his countrymen, and, during twelve years, waged a fierce war with the Genoese, who were in the end driven from almost every fort in the island. Meanwhile, Paoli had to contend against a powerful chief named Matra, who, bribed by Genoa, excited civil dissensions amongst the Corsicans; but the patriot at length defeated and killed him, and forced his brother to seek refuge in Italy. Paoli established a legislative assembly, in which sat 500 deputies, elected by the country. This assembly elected an executive body of nine members, of which Paoli was the president, with the titles of general of the kingdom and chief of the supreme magistracy of Corsica. He organized a well-trained militia of 30,000 men, and established a fleet, which constantly harassed the Genoese vessels. Genoa, however, gave up the island to France in 1768; and soon afterwards a large force was landed, under the command of Count Marbouf, against whom Paoli and his followers fought desperately, and in two engagements defeated the French with great slaughter. But large reinforcements arriving to the invaders, the Corsicans were totally routed at Pontenuovo;

808

Paracelsus

Mirabeau having moved in the National Assem-bly the recall of all Corsican patriots, Paoli repaired to Paris. He was received with enthus siasm in the French capital, and was appointed by Louis XVI, military commandant in Corsica. Whilst the government of France was monarchical, Paoli remained faithful; but, at the out-break of the Revolution, he requested the assistance of the English in driving the French out of Corsica. The crown of the kingdom was out of Corsica. The crown of the kingdom was subsequently offered to the king of Great Britain. and Sir Gilbert Elliot named vicercy. The Cor-sicans had desired that Paoli should have been appointed to that office; and, to avoid dissen-sions, the patriot quitted the island and went to England, where he resided until his death, living upon a pension allowed him by the British government. His remains were interred in Westminster Abbey, where there is a monu-B. at Rostino, Corsica, ment to his memory. 1726: p. near London, 1807.

PAOLUCCIO, Paul Anafesto, pa'-o-loot-che'-o. the first doge of Venice, before whose time the republic was governed by tribunes chosen every year. The Venetians elected Paoluccio doge in 197. p. 717.

Papirius, pa-pi'-ri-us, surnamed Cursor, or the Courier, from the swiftness of his riding. was at first master of the horse to Crassus, and became dictator of Rome about 326 B.C. He defeated the Samnites several times, and appropriated the spoils to the building of a temple to Fortune. Livy declares Papirins Cursor to have been the most illustrious general of his time, and worthy of contending with Alexander the Great, had the latter turned his arms against Rome after the subjugation of Asia.

PAPPUS, Alexanderinus, pāp-pus, a philosopher and mathematician of Alexandria, whose most important writings are, "Mathematical Collections," a Latin version of which appeared in 1588; a comment upon the "Almagest" Ptolemy; "Description of the Rivers of Libya;"
"Tremise on Military Engines;" "Commentaries on Aristarchus, concerning the Magnitudes and Distances of the Sun and Moon," a trans-lation of which last was published by Halley. Flourished at the close of the fourth century,

PARACELSUS, pir'-a-sel'-sus, an extraordinary individual of the 16th century, generally so called, but who styled himself Philippus Aureolus Theophrastus Paracelsus Bombast, him an excellent education. Paracelsus, who had a fertile genius, applied himself to the study of medicine, in which he made great progress. He went to France, Spain, and Italy, for improvement, and on his return to Switzer-land, settled at Bale, where he acquired great reputation by his practice, in which he first made use of those two powerful medicines, mercury and opium. His charges, however, like those of empiries in general, were exorbitant, and, having cured a eamon of a dangerous and, having cured a canon of a mangerous complaint, his demand was so great that the patient refused to pay it, which produced a hearing before the council, who ordered the canon to pay only the accustomed fee. This so irritated Paracelsus, that he left Bale and went into Alsace, where he became noted as an alchemist, and pretended to have found not only the philosopher's stone, but the elixir of life. whereapon the island submitted. Pauli went He, nevertheless, died poor and at a compara-first to Leghorn and afterwards to England, tively early age. The best edition of his works where he remained until 1789, in which year, is that of Huser, at Basel, 1590. Brandt thus speaks of his labours : " His original discoveries are few and unimportant, and his great merit lies in the boldness and assiduity which he displayed in introducing chemical preparations into the Materia Medica: but though we can fix upon no particular discovery on which to found his merit as a chemist, and though his writings are deficient in the acumen and knowledge displayed by several of his contemporaries and immediate successors, it is undeniable that he gave a most important turn to pharmaceutical chemistry; and calomel, with a variety of mercurial and antimonial preparations, as likewise opium, came into general use." B. in Switzerland, 1493; D. at Salzburg, in the Tyrol, 1541.

PARADISI, Agostino, Count, pa'-ra-de-se, an eminent Italian poet, whose verses obtained for him admission to the Academy of Reggio at the early age of sixteen. After visiting Genoa, Venice, and Bologna, he in 1772 became professor of belles-lettres in the university of Mantua. In 1776 the duke of Mantua created him a count. His lectures were attended not only by his countrymen, but by distinguished persons from countrymen, but by distinguished persons from France and Germany. He returned to Reggio in 1780, and held a high official appointment there, giving his leisure to literary pursuits until his death. n. at Vignola, 1784; n. 1783. Paratro, Louis de, paerve-mo', a Spatish in-quistor, who published at Madrid, in 1898, a curious work, called the "Holy Office," a history of the Inquisition, written with great candour and accuracy. D. about 1619.

Pardies, Ignatius Gaston, pur'-de, an emi-nent French mathematician, who entered the order of the Jesuits at the age of sixteen, and afterwards became professor of rhetoric in the College Louis-le-Grand at Paris. His principal works are, "Dissertation on the Nature and Course of Comets," "Discourse on Local Motion," "Elements of Geometry," and "Discourse on the Knowledge of Beasts." B.1636; D. 1673.

PARDOR, Miss Julia, par'-do, a modern English authoress, who, in her thirteenth year, composed a volume of verse, and shortly afterwards an historical romance entitled "Lord wards an historical romance entitled "Lord Morear of Hereward," the action of which took place in the time of William the Conqueror. Her health being delicate, she was sent to Portugal, where she remained for some time. and. upon returning to England, produced a series of tales and sketches in a little work entitled "Traits and Traditions of Portugal," which ram through several editions. Encouraged by this success, she resolved to devote herself to literature, and produced, in quick succession, "Speculation," and "The Mardens and the Daventrys." During the terrible visitation of the cholera to Constantinopie, in 1835, Miss Pardoe was a resident of the city. Of that so-journ the literary fruits were, "The City of the Sultan," "The Romance of the Haren," and "The Beauties of the Bosphorus." "The River and the Desert" was also the result of her Eastern experiences. An historical sketch of Hungary and its institutions subsequently ema-nated from her pen, under the title of "The City of the Magyar." Some historical works Only of the suggrar. Some instoract worse of a more ambitious character succeeded; the most important of which were, "Louis XIV.; or, the Court of France in the 17th Century;" "The Life of France is.," and "The Life of Marie de Medici." These last, however, met with less success than her works of imagination, and to that path Miss Pardoe afterwards returned, producing "The Confessions of a Pretty Woman," "The Rival Beauties," "The Jealous Wife," &c. n. at Beverley, Yorkshire, 1806; p. 1862.

Pare, Ambrose, pa-rai', the most celebrated of the old French surgeons, who, after completing his education, went to Italy with the French army, and served during several campaigns, gaining so great a reputation that, in 1852, Henry II. appointed him his surgeon. Though a Protestant, he was afterwards surgeon to Francis II., Charles IX., and Henry III.; and, at the time of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, Brantôme tells us that Charles IX. saved him by shutting him up in his own bedroom. Pare made several discoveries in anatomy, and wrote some esteemed books on surgery. B. 1511; D. 1590.

Pareirs, Diego Gareia de, pa'-rai-dais, an eminent Spanish general, usually styled "the Spanish Bayard," who, entering the army at Spainsh Bayara, who, entering the annia an early age, fought gallantly against the Moors at Baza, Velez, and Malaga, in 1485. When the Moorish war was concluded by the capture of Granada, in 1492, he sought further distinction on the battle-fields of Italy. He distinction on the battle-fields of Italy, 11e was appointed to a high rank in the army of Pope Alexander VI., and served with distinction under the papal banner during seven years. In 1501 he assisted at the capture of Cephalonia from the Turks, was taken prisoner, but con-trived to effect his escape. During the war between the French and Spaniards in Naples, Paredes was one of the most undaunted and skilful soldiers in the ranks of the latter power. At the battle of Cerignola, he commanded the Spanish centre, and during the fight contended alone against a number of French knights until his own men came up. Some assert that he subsequently cruised in the Levant as a corsair ; but this is doubtful. At the famous battle of Pavia, however, he greatly signalized himself, and it is said assisted in taking Francis I. prisoner. B. in Spain, 1166; D. 1530.

Pareja, Juan de, pul-rui-ha, an eminent Spanish painter, who was a West Indian halfeaste, and became the slave of Diego Velasquez. In the absence of his master, Pareja laboured assiduously in drawing and copying his works; but secretly, for fear of giving offence. Philip IV., king of Spain, coming one day to visit Iv, ang of span, coming one any to visit velasquez, Parqia contrived to place in his way one of his own pictures, with which his majesty was extremely pleased. The slave then fell on his knees, and besought the king to ask his master to forgive him. Phillip not only did this, but obtained him his liberty. The faithful The faithful Pareja, however, would not quit Velasquez, and, after his death, continued to serve his daughter. His portraits are very fine, and were so close a copy of his master's style, that they could not be distinguished from them. B. in the West Indies, 1610; D. 1670.

PARENNIN, Dominic, pa-ven'-nā, a celebrated Jesuit, who was a missionary in China, where he was greatly esteemed by the emperor Kang-Hi, for whom he translated into Chinese several articles upon scientific subjects. A difference ariging between the Chinese and Russian courts, Parennin was charged to negotiate a reconciliation, which he effected. After his death, his remains were magnificently interred by order of the emperor. In Duhalde's "China" are several curious maps and letters of this learned man. B. in France, 1665; D. Science in Earnest." B. at Cambridge, 1785; D. 1856.

Park

at Pekin, 1741. PARENT, Antoine, pol-rawng, an eminent French mathematician, who was educated for the law, which he renounced for science, and became a member of the Academy, whose Memoirs he enriched with many valuable papers. His most important works are "Mathematical and Philosophical Researches," "Theoretical and Practical Arithmetic," "Elements of Mechanies and Natural Philosophy." B. at Paris,

1666; p. 1716.

PARENT-DUCHATELET, Alexandre Jean Baptiste, doo-shad-e-lai, an eminent French physician and writer, who, upon the conclusion of his medical studies, commenced the practice of his profession at Paris, in 1814. After spending ome years in that pursuit, his attention was directed to questions concerning the public health. He laboured at this task with great devotedness du... fifteen years, and to exercions, some of the most useful and efficient reforms in the sanitary arrangements of Paris were due. He wrote extensively on subjects connected with the public health, and, in 1824. produced a great work upon the common sewers of the French capital, and enother upon sewers of the renew configuration and choice thom the cholera. T. at Paris, 1700; p. 1836. Parint, Joseph, pareine, an eminent Italian poet, whose pursuit of knowledge in early life was sustained under considerable difficulty. In his 23rd year he produced a volume of poems, which attracted the notice of the Borromei which abstracted the house of the Borromer family, in which he became tutor. His next work was the first portion of a poem cnititled "Il Giorno," a famous siece in Italian litera-This gained him the patronage of Count Firmian, the Austrian minister in Lombardy, and through his influence Parini subsequently became professor of eloquence in the college of the Brera at Milan. When Bonaparte entered Milan at a later period, he caused him to be chosen magistrate; but the poet soon retired from the office. p. 1729; p. at Milan, 1799,

Paris, Matthew, pur's, an English historian, was a monk of the order of Benedictines, at St. Albans. He was a man of great knowledge and integrity, and was employed by the pope in reforming the monasteployed by the pope in reforming the monasteries of Norway, which service he discharged with wisdom and zeal. His principal work is a "History of England from the Conquest to the death of Henry III.," of which an edition, by Archbishor Parler, was published in London, in 1371. In about 1106; In 1230.

Pants, John Artion, an eminent English physician, who commenced the study of medicine in his 14th year, at the Westminster Hospital. He next passed to Caius College, Cambridge, and there graduated M.D. In his 3rd year he became physician to Westminster Hospital, but subsequently went to Penzance, in Cornwall, where he remained in the exercise of an extensive practice until the year 1817. About two years later, he published a "Treatise on Diet," which, although superseded at the present time by works embodying the disco ries of eminent chemists, was a valuable

, Joseph, pa'-rai-doo-rai'nai, a French financier of the 18th century, who reduced the national debt in France by nearly one half. In 1724 he proposed a measure for the abolition of pauperism, and afterwards suggested to Louis XV, the marriage with Maria Leganski. In 1726 he was impresoned in the Bastille; but afterwards regained his liberty, and was rein-stated in the favour of the court. This capitalist helped both Voltaire and Beaumarchais to make considerable fortunes.

PARK, Mungo, park, a distinguished African traveller, was the son of a substantial Scotch farmer, who gave him a good education. Mungo, while a boy at the parochial school of

kirk, was indefaurable in his application, and was always at the head of bis class. "Even at that age," rays his biographer, "he was reparked for being silent, studious, and thoughtful; but some sparks of latent ambition occa-sionally broke forth, and traces might be discovered of the ardent and adventurous turn of mind which distinguished him in after-life,' of hind when despendent main a network. In his 16th year he was apprenticed to a su geon at Selkirk, and renained in that capacity for three years. In 1789 he went to the University of Edinburgh, and after completing his professional education there, repaired to London, where, through the introduction of Sir Joseph Banks, he obtained an appointment as assistant-surgeon to the Worcester East Indiaassistantiangle of the Interest extrama-man. In this vessel he sailed for Sunatra in 1702, and upon his return, in the following year, published an account of some new isshes which he had observed upon that coast. Soon afterwards, Sir Joseph Banks introduced him to the African Association, by whom Park was engaged to solve a problem which was enwas engaged to shive a problem which was engaging the minds of geographers; viz., the existence and course of the river Niger. In 1795 he left England, and reached Pisania, some 200 miles up the river Gambia, at which place he stayed several months, acquiring the Man-dingo language. Setting out at length, he penetrated as far as Yarra, a frontier town of Ludamar, where he was detained by the chief for five months; at the end of which time he made his escape with a horse, a lew articles of clothing, and a pocket compass. Thus scantily equipped, he pushed on to Sego, and thence ex-plored the river Joliba down to Saba; after which he proceeded as far as Kamalia, a Manwhich he proceeded as ar as Kamana, a man-dingo town 500 miles from any European settlement. There he was prostrated by fever which passed away in a month; but it was five more before Park could obtain the means of travelling to Pisania. This last place was reached, however, after an absence of nifriend "as one risen from the dead."

return to London, wherehe was warmly i by the scientific public, he commenced the prework was completed and published in 1799, and was highly successful. In 1801 he commenced practice as a surgeon at Peebles, in Scotland; having in the meanwhile married the daughter rics of eminent chemists, was a valuable practice as a surgeon at Fectors, in Sectionary treatise at the period of its production, and having in the meanwhile manifed the dampler attracted much attention from the public. Upon of his did master at Selkirk. In 1805 the go-the death of Sir Henry Halford, in 1815 the go-the death of Sir Henry Halford, in 1815 the go-the death of Sir Henry Halford, in 1815 the go-the death of Sir Henry Halford, in 1815 the go-the death of Sir Henry Halford, in 1815 the go-the death of Sir Humphry stream. Among many other works, he was the the Congo and the Niger were one the author of the "Life of Sir Humphry stream. Park proposed to cross from the Gam-Davy," and "Philosophy in Sport made bia to the Niger, and then to sail down that river to the ocean. In May, 1805, Park and his The son followed his example, by complying party, consisting of his brother-in-law, a sur- with all changes. He was at first a zealous Puparty, consisting of an inconstruction, a sate with an eminges. He was a rare a zerous rea-geon, a draughtsman, five critisans from the ritan, but conformed to the Church of England, royal dockyards, thirty-live privates of the and obtained preferment. In the roign of Royal African corps, under the command of James H., he was made, for his servicity in Lieutenant Martyn, and a Maudingo guide, left Pisania. After penetrating beyond the Gambia, the party went on to Foulah Dougou, by which time eleven white men had died. In an eight days' march from Foulah Dougon to Sego, twenty-six men were lost by the rains, damps, Upon his departure from Sansanding, Park wrote to the colonial secretary: "I am sorry to say that of forty-four Europeans who left the Gambia in perfect health, five only are at present alive; viz., three soldiers (one de-ranged in his mind), Lieutenant Martyn, and myself. We had no contest whatever with the natives, nor was any one of us killed by wild animals or any other accidents. Your lordship will recollect that I always spoke of the rainy season with horror, as being extremely fatal to Europeans; and our journey will farnish a me-lancholy proof of it." After leaving Sansand-ing, Park proceeded towards Haoussa, and, from that time, neither he nor his companions were ever again seen. Their fate was narrated by their guide, who declared that, after Park had quitted Yaouri, the chief of that place falsely stated that the white men had gone away with-The king beout leaving the usual present. The king became enraged at this, and put the guide, who had been left behind, in prison, and sent a number of armed men to intercept Park and his companions at the narrows of the river. When the guide obtained his release, he gathered from a slave who had been with Park, that the white men's boat had been drawn into a rapid whilst they were endeavouring to effect their escape from a party of the natives who were attacking them. Mungo Park was possessed of many qualities calculated to raise him to high distinction as a traveller, had his career high distinction as a traceler, had his circumot been so unhappily and so prematurely brought to an end. He was of an athletic frame, had a fair share of scientific knowledge, was cool, courageous, and self-possessed, and, above all, was scrupulously veracious in his observations. B. at Fowlshiels, near Selkirk, Scotland, 1771; D. at Boussa, 1805.

PARKER, Matthew, pur'-ker, an eminent English prelate, who was educated in Corpus-Christi College, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. Conege, canoning, of wine in became to have Through the interest of Anne Boleyn, he was made chaplain to Henry VIII., and, in the suc-ceeding reign, was chosen master of his college; but in that of Mary he was deprived of his pre-ferments. On the accession of Elizabeth, Dr. Parker was preferred to the archbishopric of Canterbury. The archbishop was zealous in promoting the Reformation and in restraining the encroachments of the Puritans. He superintended the improved translation of the Scriptures, called the Bishops' Bible, which was completed in 1568. He was particularly versed in Saxon literature and early English history, in Saxon interature and carry English history, and published an edition of Matthew Paris, a treatise on the "Antiquity of Matthew Paris, a treatise on the "Antiquity of the English Church," and other works. p. 1504; p. 1575.

Parkers, Sanned, an English predate, who received his culteation at Watham College, Oxford. His father was a member of the High Court of Justice, and one of the barons of the Exchequer during the Commonwealth; but, at the Restoration, became king's serjeant-at-law.

supporting the king's arb.trary measures, bishop of Oxford and privy councilor. He was also constituted president of Magdalen College, in violation of the privileges of that society. He wrote the "History of His Own Time." Andrew Marvell, in his "Rehearsal Transposed," held Parker up to ridicule. The bishop replied, but with little effect. He is said to have contemplated, with James II., the placing of the English church under the authority

Pages, Richard, an English seaman, who was the chief of the mutineers at the Nore in 1797. He was a native of Exeter, and had received a good education; after which he enterest the navy, and became a midshipman, but we reduced in rank for some misconduct. Having a good addre-s and great fluency of speech, he was chosen principal of the delegates when the sailors rose on account of their wages and prize-money: on which occasion he assumed the command of the fleet, and was called Admiral Parker. He ruled with great authority for some time, to the alarm of the nation; but when the insurrection was suppressed, was tried and executed on board the Sandwick, in 1797.

PARKER, Sie William, a distinguished English admiral, who entered the navy at a very carig age, and, in 1796, assisted in the attack made upon St. Domingo. In 1804 he obtained post rank; and in the year 1806 he, with the Ama-zon frigate, engaged the Belle Poule and Marengo, two French vessels, both of which he captured after a long running fight, and other acts of bravery won for him the order of the Bath. In 1830 he became rearadmiral, and was sent with an English fleet to the Tagus. Between the years 1831 and 1841, he acted as a lord of the Admiralty, but in the latter year succeeded Admiral Elliot in the command of the naval operations in China. With the co-operation of Lord Gough, he captured Chusan, Ningpo, and, forcing the entrance of the Yellow River, appeared before Nankim. For these services he was created a baronet in 1814. During the revolutions of 1848, he commanded the Mediterranean fleet, and in the autumn of 1840 was sent with an English fleet to the Dardanclies, to encourage the sultan in his res' .tance to the demands of Austria and Russia with respect to the Hungarian refugees. In 1854 he became port-admiral at Plymouth. R.

at Almington Hall, Staffordshire, 1781; p. 1566. ARKER, Theodore, an eminent American theologian, received his education at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and afterward, became pastor of a Unitarian congregation at Roxbury Between the years 1840 and 1843, he contributed extensively to the "Christian Examiner," and about 1814, formed a collection of his most important orticles, which were published under the title of "Critical and Aliscollaneous Writing ..'' He shortly afterwards gave to the publie a "Discourse on Matters of Religion," wherein he declared his views relative to the a-thority of the Church, the infallibility of the Scriptures, and as to the divine attributes of our Saviour. For this expression of his scuti-ments, the Unitarian communions of Boston rejected him; upon which, he placed himself at the head of a congregation called the Twentyeighth Congregational Society of Boston. rationalist minister belonging to no sect, a theoretical politician belonging to no party, his sermons, delivered occasionally to very large sermons, delivered occasionally to very large congregations, were filled with allusions to every possible topic,—questions of polities or orientility, political or domestic economy, war, reform, or slavery. In 1852 he published "Sormons of Theism, Anteism, and Popular heology," and "Discourses, Addresses, and ecasional Sormons." His flatest works were, "Ten Sermons on Eldgion," and "Uld Age." is a lusge-shought 1819 by a tell Plance 1829.

Parkhurst

n Mussachusetts, 1810; D. at Florence, 1850. Parriugar, John, park-harst, a learned English divine, who was educated at Cambridge, and afterwards settled at Epsom, in Surrey. He was the intimate friend of Bishop Horne, with whom he shared in admiring the opinions of Hutchinson. He published a Greek and English, and a Hebrew and English lexicon, and wrote an answer to Dr. Priestley on the Pre-existence of Christ, and a pamphlet on the Fre-existence of Christ, and a pamping exainst John Wesley. E. at Catesby, North-amptonshire, 1728; D. at Epson, Surrey, 1797. Parma, Alexander, Duke of. (See Farnese, Alexander.)

PARKENIDES of Elis, par-men'-i-decs, a Greek philosopher, and the disciple of Xenophanes. He asserted the rotundity of the earth, which he placed in the centre of the solar system. He also maintained that heat and cold were the principles of all things. In metaphysics, he held that ideas are real, and have no dependence on the will. Flourished about the 5th century B.C.

PARMENIO, par-me-ni-o, a celebrated Macedonian general under Philip and Alexander, who contributed to the victories of the Graniens and Issus, and served with fidelity until advanced in years. After the battle of Arbela, Parmenio was appointed governor of Media; but his son Philotas having been accused of conspiring against the king's life, was put to the torture, and stoned to death. Orders were next sent to the subordinates of Parmenio to put him to death, which was done by Cleander, one of his officers, 329 n.c.

Parmentier, John, par-men'-te-ai, a French navigator, who was the first who conducted wessels to the coast of Brazil. He was well skilled in astronomy, and drew several good mans. p. at Dieppe, 1194; p. at Sumaira, PARMENTIER, James, a French historical and portrait painter, who settled in England, and resided chiefly in Yorkshire. He executed, among other works, the altar-piece of St. Peter's, at Leeds, p. 1655; p. 1750.

PARMIGIANO. (See MAZZUOLI, Francesco.)

PANNELL, Thomas, pur-nel, an Irish poet and divine, who was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his degree of M.A. and entered into orders. He obtained a living in Ireland, and the archdeacoury of Clogher. He was the friend and correspondent of Pope, Swift, Gay, Arbuthnot, and other eminent wits of the time of Queen Anne. Dr. Parnell wrote the Life of Homer for Pope's translation. His poems were published in one volume; the principal is that entitled "The Hermit." He also wrote some papers in the "Spectator." Is at Dublin, 1679; D. at Chester, 1717.

Parky, Evaristic Model No.

entered the army, became captain of dragoons. and, as aide-de-camp, accompanied the governor-general of the French East Indies to Pondicherry. In 1786 he quitted the military dicherry. In 1786 no quitted the mintary service and retired to an estate in France, where he gave himself up to depicting, in verse, an all-absorbing passion for a young and beautiful creole lady. On her side, however, the attachment was of an evanescent nature; for she shortly afterwards married a planter, who had more money than the poet. Parny's chief works were included in a collection of the French classies made by Lefevre, in 1827. B. in the Isle of Bourbon, 1753; D. 1814.

PARR, Catherine, par, sixth wife of Henry VIII., was the daughter of Sir Thomas Parr, and received, according to the custom of that and received, according to the existin of that age, a learned education. She was a friend of the Reformation, on which account Eishop Gardiner and other zealots of the Romish church endeavoured to effect her ruin ; but, by her prudence, she preserved the king's favour till his death. In 1547 she married Sir Thomas Seymour, lord admiral of England, who is said to have treated her so ill as to cause her death. She wrote Prayers, Meditations, and other religious pieces. p. 1548.

PARR, Thomas, a Shropshire peasant, who lived to the age of 152 years and 9 months. At the age of 100 he did penamer for an illegitimate child, and at 120 he married a second wife, by whom he had issue. In 1635 he was brought to London by Lord Arundel, and introduced at court to King Charles I.; but the change of air, and mode of living, partieularly drinking wine, occasioned his death the same year. B. 1483

Paun, Samuel, a learned English divine, who was destined for the profession of surgery; but a decided inclination for the study of the an-cient classics induced his father to send him to Cambridge, where he pursued a very brilliant career, which was, however, cut short by the death of his parent, in 1767. He next became assistant in Harrow school, and after the death of the master, Dr. Sumner, offered himself as candidate for the appointment. He was unsue-cessful, and this led him to retire to Norwich; after which, he, in 1786, settled at a small living in Warwickshire, where the remainder of his life was spent. He was a man of vast learning and strong political views; but al-though he left a mass of writings of great erudition, no great work emanated from his brain. B. at Harrow-on-the-Hill, 1746; p. 1825.

Parintastus, pur-pair-seas, a celebrated Greek painter, who was a native of Ephesus, but became a citizen of Athens, and was the contemporary and rival of Zeuxis. He studied under Socrates; by which means he was en-abled to give to his figures the expression of strong passions. In an allegorical picture, he strong passions. In an aneighnean picture, he represented the people of Athens with all the distinctive traits of their national character. He styled himself the "Prince of Painters." Flourished about the 5th century B.c.

PARROCEL, Joseph, pur'-ro-sel, an eminent French painter and engraver, who studied first under one of his brothers, and alterwards under Bournignon, the famous battle-painter. He was a member of the French Academy of Painting. Parrocel painted portrait, history, and battles; he also engraved in a good style. Larry, Evaristic Desire Desforces, par-se, and buttles; he also engraved in a good style.

2 French poet, usually styled "the Thinlins n. at Brignolls, Provence, 1613; n. 1701.—111s of France," was destined for the church, but son Churles was an excellent pointer, and a 1739. 1739. PARRY, Sir William Edward, pan'-re, an eminent English navigator, who, in 1803, entered the royal navy on board the Vitle de Puris, flag-ship of the Channel floct. After seeing a good deal of service in the Baltic, in the Northern seas, and upon the American coast, he became lieutenant, returned to England in 1817, and shortly afterwards was appointed to the command of the Alexander, one of two ships sent out under Captain Ross, for the purpose of ascertaining the probabilities of a north-west passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The expedition set sail from the Thames in April, 1818, and, on the 30th of August, in the same year, reached Laneaster Sound, which was found to be free from ice; but, instead of proceeding, Ross retraced his course, and set sail for England. The Admiralty subsequently dis-covered that Licutenant Parry's views were totally opposed to those of his late commander; whereupon he was appointed to the command of another expedition, during which he discovered Barrow Strait, Melville Island, Prince Regent's Inlet, and the Wellington Channel. He also gained a reward of £5000 for penetrating within the Arctic circle. In November, 1820, he reached England, and was soon afterwards promoted to the rank of commander, and elected V.B.S., &c. His experiences were given to the world in the following year, in a work entitled "Journal of a Voyage for the Discovery of a North-West Passage," which was produced under the authority of the Lords of the Audrily, in May, 1821, he were not at in command of a second expedition to the Arctic regions, during which he discovered the Fury and Heela Strait, and, after an absence of nearly three warse returned to Fueland. A record of wards promoted to the rank of commander, and three years, returned to England. A record of this voyage was given in his work entitled "Journal of a Second Expedition for the Discovery of a North-West Passage." In 1824 he again sailed northward as commander of a third expedition, which, however, met with much less success than his former ones. He was absent little more than a year, during which one of the two exploring vessels was wrecked. In 1826 Captain Parry published his third journal, and soon afterwards became hydrographer to the Admiralty. In 1827 he submitted a proposal for reaching the north pole by means of a land expedition in flat-tot-tomed boats, and was accordantly sent out in command of the Hedr, in 1827. When the expedition reached Treurenberg Bay, on the north coast of Spitzbergen, two flat-bottomed bonts were dispatched across the ice, one under the orders of himself, the other under Lieutenant Ross. After undergoing great hardships, tude of 82° 45' was attained, -the nearest point to the pole then reached. After an absence of 61 days from the ship, the boats returned, and 61 days from the simp, the boats returned, and shortly afterwards the Hecla sailed for England. A narrative of this expedition, which closed the labours of Captain Parry in the Arctic regions, was published in 1827, with the title, "Narrative of an Attempt to reach the North Pole in Boats litted for the purpose." In 1829 he went out to Australia as commissioner of the Agricultural Company of that member of the Academy. n. 1752.—Peter Par-Meanwhile he had been created a knight, and, rocel, nephow and pupil of Joseph, was an his-in 1837, was appointed to supervise the packet torical painter of great ment. n. at Avignon, service between Liverpool and Ireland. Bein 1837, was appointed to supervise the packet service between Liverpool and Ireland. Between the years 1837 and 1846, he acted as comptween the years 1007 and 1030, he acted as comprehence of the steam machinery for the royal navy. In 1852 he was promoted to the rank of rear-admiral of the White, and, in 1853, became lieutenant-governor of Greenwich Hospital, an office he filled until his death. He received the degree of D.C.L. from the University of Oxford at the same time as the gallant Sir John Franklin. B. at Bath, 1790; p. 1855.

Parsons, or Persons, Robert, par'-sons, a celebrated English Jesuit, who was educated celebrated English Jesuit, who was educated at Balliol College, Oxford, of which he became bursar and dean in 1572, but being churged with embezding the college money, went to Rome and turned Catholic. He there obtained leave from the pope to establish a seminary for the education of English students designed for missionaries for the propagation of the Roman Catholic faith in their native country. Parsons frequently visited England, where he endea-voured to foment sedition, and a price was set upon his head. He was a subtle disputant, and wrote several polemical books, and others on practical divinity. B. 1546; D. at Rome, 1610.
Parthenax, Catharine de, par'-te-nai, heiress to the lordship of Soubise, was married in 1568 to the baron de Pons, and in 1575 to Réné, Viscount Rohan. The famous duke de Rohan, who so courageously defended the Protestant cause in France during the civil wars of Louis XIII .. was her eldest son. Catharine, one of her daughters, who married the duke of Deux-Ponts, made the following answer to Henry IV., who solicited her favours: "I am too poor, sire, to be your wife, and too proud to be your mistress." Catharine de Parthenay was at Romistress." Catharine de Parthenay was at Ro-chelle in the time of its siege, and when the eneite in the time of its siege, and when the place surrendered, she and her daughters were sent to the eastle of Niort. She published poems in 1572, and two years afterwards a tragely, entitled "Jadith," was performed at tracelly, entitled "Jadith," was performed at Itchellel. She also translated the "Precept of Leocrates" into French, and wrote some other access the property of the property of the preceding the property of the property of the preceding the property of the preceding the property of t pieces. n. 1554; p. 1631.

Parrox, Mrs. Sarah, par-ton, was the sister of Mr. N. P. Willis, an eminent American littlerateur. She contributed for many years articles to several American serial publications under the well-known nom-de-plume of Fanny

Fern. n. about 1910

PASCAL, Blaise, pas'-kal, a celebrated French hilosopher, whose father, the president of the Court of Aids in Auvergne, superintended his education; but though he was himself a mathematician, he interdicted his son from that study. Young Pascal, however, in secret applied to geometry, and, without any assistance, demon-strated one of the most difficult propositions in Euclid. His father then permitted him to pursue his inclination, and, at the age of 16, the youth published his treatise on conic sections, which Descartes could not believe to be the production of a mere youth. At 10 he invented an arithmetical machine, which, though simple, was unequalled. The Torricellian experiment next engaged his attention, and, at the age or 24, he made considerable improvements upon 16. Not long afterwards, he solved a problem proposed by Mersennus, which had perplexed all the mathematicians in Europe. His great mind was now suddenly diverted to religious colony, and remained there until the year 1834. studies. Becoming more abstracted from the world, he retired to the congregation of the Port Royal, where he applied to the reading of the Holy Scriptures. But he was not altogether indifferent to the passing scenes of society. He the principles and practices of that celebrated order were exposed in a fine strain of ridicule, and with the irresistible force of truth. Boileau and Voltaire have pronounced them the finest productions in the French language. The life productions in the French uniquige. The life of this remarkable man was written by his sister, Madame Perier. The first complete edition of his works was produced at Paris by Rougere, in 1841. Passed was justly called by Bayle "one of the sublimest spirits in the Bayle "one of the sublimest spirits in the world." B. in Auvergne, 1623; D. at Paris, 1082

PASCHAL I., Pope, pas'-kal, was a Roman, of the name of Paschasius, and succeeded Stephen V. in 817. He crowned Lothaire, the emperor, at Rome. D. 821.

PASCHAL II. was a native of Tuscany, and succeeded Urban II. in 1099. He had a contest with the emperor Henry IV., and also with Henry I., king of England, respecting the right of investitures. The former visited Rome to be or investitures. The former visited frome to be crowned by the Pope, who refused to perform the ceremony unless he yielded the matter in dispute. On this, Henry caused Paschal to be seized by his troops, which gave so much offence to the Komans, that they rose in behalf of their pontiff, and Henry retired from Rome, but earried the pope with him. Paschal, after a cap-tivity of two months, renounced his claim to the investitures. This concession was afterwards cancelled in two councils. D. 1118.

PASCHAL III. became pope in opposition to Alexander III., in 1165, through the influence of the emperor Frederick I. He remained in possession of the papal chair while Alexander was absent at Benevento. D. 1168. Ivan Fedorowitch, vitch, a Russian general, who was descended from an ancient Polish family, but was educated at St. Petersburg, and afterwards became cauch at St. Persburg, and interwars secanic aide-de-camp to the emper r Paul. His first service in the field was at the battle of Austerlitz, in 1805; in the following year he was the bearer of the Russian ultimatum to the Porte, and narrowly escaped death at Constantinople. At the assault of Brailov he was left thropic. At the assaute of Drahov was left; but was picked up, and was shortly afterwards promoted to the rank of colonel for his gallantry. In 1812 he fought against the French at Borodino; was subsequently nominated to the command of a division of the Russian army, amounting to 30,000 men, and, after ng in the campaign in Germany, assisted at the capture of Paris. Subsequently to the peace, he made a three years' tour in Europe, peace, he made a three years tour in Europe, as the companion of the grand-duke Michael; and, after the accession of the emperor Nicholas, was appointed to the command of the lussian army on the Persian frontier. War broke out between Russia and Persia about the same time, and Paskewitch defeated the shah's army at Elizabethnol and at Erivan. The treaty of Turkmanchai restored peace between the belof turnsmatchar restores peace netween the near-ligercarty in twar against Turkey almost a method to seem the pro-modiately followed. In 1825 be took Kars, and, in the following year, Exercum; for which are the services the carpeter Nicholas created him followers the carpeter Nicholas created him followers the carpeter Nicholas created him followers. In 1829 he fought against only blim in 1738, and also constructed an astro-fick-inary-in. In 1829 he fought against only produce a monouting a colestial

Circassians, and, in the year following, succeeded Marshal Dicbitsch as commander of the Russian army acting against the Poles. His invariable good fortune attended his efforts, and he was soon the master of Warsaw. Elevated to the rank of Prince of Warsaw, and created governor-general of Poland, he spent the subsequent sixteen years in crushing the nationality of that country, and in converting Warsaw into a strong fortress capable of overawing the Poles. In 1819 he went into Hungary as commander of a powerful Russian acmy, and was soon afterwards able to commence a and was soon atterwards able to commence a dispatch to Nicholas with the words, "Hungary is at your feet." When war broke out between Turkey and Russia, Paskewitch was between turkey and russia, Laskewich was summoned to the field; but was slightly wounded at the repulse of the Russians at Silistria. He was shortly afterwards seized with an illness which terminated in his death. As a military commander, he was held, by the most competent judges, to be only mediocre; but the large and well-equipped armies he led against the Persians, and, at a later period, against the exhausted Hungarians, enabled him to achieve successes which were little dependent upon his own skill in werfare. B. at Pultowa, 1782; b. at Warsaw, 1856.

Pasley, Sir Charles William, pas'-le, an eminent British engineer officer, who at first served in the artillery, but subsequently exchanged to the engineers. He was at the defence of Gaeta in 1806; at the siege of Copenhagen in the following year; was aide-de-camp to Sir John Moore in Spain in 1808-9; and chief engineer to the marquis of Huntley's division in the Walcheren expedition. At the siege of Flushing he received a wound in the thigh and an injury to the spine. He subsequently served in the Peninsular war. Among his most important publications may be mentioned—"Course of Military Instruction, for the Use of the Royal Engineer Department," "Exercise of the New-decked Pontoons," invented by himself; "Rules for Conducting the Practical Operations of a Siege," and a very rancean operations of a suege, and a very valuable work to architects and many sections of the general public, entitled "Observations on Limes, Cements, Mortars, Stuceaes, Con-cretes, &c." In 1853 he was named colonel-commundant of the royal engineers, having previously been created lieutenant-general, and a knight commander of the Bath, as well as receiving the degree of D.C.L. from the uni-receiving interagree of D.E. From the university of Oxford. In about 1781; p. 1861.

Pasquier, Stephen, pas'-ke-ai, an eminent French lawyer, who pleaded so ably against Versoris, the defender of the Jesuits, that Henry 111, made him ad ral to the Chamber of Accounts, Hi are, "Re-searches relative to the History of France," an authority upon the civil history of the old French monarchy; letters, portraits, epigrams, and epitaphs. The most celebrated of his poems is that called "Puce," occ the author's seeing a flea on the I lady. B. at Paris, 1520; D. 1615.

Passemant, Claude Simeon, pass'-mont, a French mechanician, who was bred to trade, but having a great inclination to scientific pur suits, devoted himself to the construction of ciple of Domenichino. He wrote, "Lives of the Painters, Sculptors, and Architects" of his time, a work containing thirty-six lives. B. at Rome, about 1610; D. 1679.

Passeront, John Charles, pas'-se-ro'-ne, an eminent Italian poet, who was educated under the Jesuits at Milan, and was afterwards ordained a priest. He went to Rome with Lucini. the papal nuncio, but constantly refused all preferment, choosing rather to live a studious life in a condition almost bordering upon destitu-Returning to Milan, he became a member of the Institute of the Cis-Alpine Republic. and wrote a poem entitled "The Cicerone," in which he ridiculed the follies and vices of society. The poem is highly original in style and treatment. and is so flowing and natural, that its author has been compared to Ovid. He also wrote has been compared to Ovid. He also wrote several volumes of fables in verse, after the manner of Æsop, Phedrus, and others. E. at Condamine, Nizza, 1713; p. at Milan, 1803.

Passioner, Nuzza, 1715; D. at anian, 1505.

Passioner, Dominie, pas'-se-o-nav'-e, an eminent Italian cardinal, was of an illustrious family at Fossombrone, in the duchy of Urbino. He formed a rich library and collection of manuscripts. In 1706 he went to Paris, where he was much respected, particularly by Montfencen: thence he went to Holland, and was at the congress at Utreeht in 1712. He was employed in various negotiations, particularly in Switzerland; of which he published an account, under the title of "Acta Legationis Helyeticm." He pronounced the funeral oration of Prince Eugene, and was made archbishop of Ephesus. His library was purchased by the Augustine monastery, which, thus increased, became one of the finest at Rome. p. 1682; b. 1761.

Pasta, Judith, pas-ta, a celebrated Italian singer, who was of Hebrew extraction, and studied music at the Conservatoire of Milan. In 1816 she appeared at the Italian Opera of Paris, and afterwards passed to London, but obtained only a small amount of success in both these cities. This partial failure caused her to return to Italy for the purpose of increasing her musical knowledge. In 1820 she again sang at several of the principal Italian operahouses, and everywhere met with an onthusiastic reception. At Paris, where she reap-peared in the following year, she achieved the greatest triumphs as a vocalist, and when she reappeared in London, was greeted with a brilfant reception. After reigning as the queen of song during fifteen years, she, in 1838, re-tired to a magnificent villa on the Lake of Como. n. near Milan, 1793; n. 1867.

PATEL, Pierre, pu'-tel, an eminent French painter, commonly called by his countryment the French Claude, from his imitation of that master. His landscapes are very beautiful. B.

Haster. The sauccapes are very beautiment.

In France, 1654; killed in a duel, 1703.

Parraceurus, Caius Velleius, pai-ter-ku-lus, a Roman historiau, who commanded the cavalry in Germany under Tiberius, and was rewarded with the areaste him. He words no pullome of with the prectorship. He wrote an epitome of Roman history, which is extant, and which commences with a period anterior to the foundation of Rome, and concludes with the times of Tiberius and Sejanus. B. about 19 B.C.; D. it is supposed, 31 A.D.

sphere, which he presented to Louis XV. n. at of several celebrated projects in the 17th century, of whose early life scarcely anything is known. By some he is stated to have belonged nent Italian painter and poet, was the distorted by refersion; to have acted as a missionary in the West Indies, and afterwards as a buccancer. He first came into notice as the projector of certain schemes in trade and banking, which he submitted to the merchants of London, after having proposed them, without success, to the trading communities in the Low Countries. His banking projects are said to have been the foundation of the Bank of England, which was incorporated in 1694: but it is asserted that the rich capitalists quarrelied with and disearded him, after they had scheme was the famous Darien expedition, for the purpose of establishing, on that isthmus, a trading colony, which should rival the English East India Company. Paterson obtained an East India Company. Faterson obtained an act of the Scottish Parliament, in 1694, for the incorporation of "The Company of Scotland trading to Africa and the Indies." The scheme was stoutly opposed in England, and as warmly supported in Scotland, where it became quite a national speculation. The principles upon which the company proposed to trade, appear to have been sufficiently sound, and likely to render Scotland, as was represented in the English Parliament, "the general storchouse for tobacet sugar, cotton, hides, and timber;" but the selection of the istimus of Darien as a central point where the commerce of the East and the West was to meet. proved a most disastrous choice; for the expedition ended in total failure. Paterson was deeply afflicted at the unfortunate termination of his scheme, and returned to Scotland in a condition bordering upon insanity. His after-life was spent in obscurity. B. in Scotland, life was spent in conscirity. B. in scottain, about 1660; D. unrecorded when.

Parrut, John Reinhold, pat-knt, a Livenian gentleman, who defended the liberties of his country against the oppressions of Sweden with great firmness, and in 1689 was deputed to address a memorial on behalf of the distressed people of Livonia to Charles XI., who took it as an act of treason, and caused a process to issue against Patkul, who was condemned to be be-headed. Thereupon he fled to Russia, and afterwards to Poland. When Charles XII. forced Augustus to make peace, he made it one of the conditions that Patkul should be delivered up; and this brave and unfortunate man was broken on the wheel in 1707.

PATON, Sir Joseph Noel, pair-ton, a modern Scotch painter, who studied at the Royal Scottish Academy, and first attracted notice by his cartoon of "The Spirit of Religion," which obtained one of the £200 premiums given at the eartoon competition at Westminster Hall in 1845. Two years later, he won the second class 1846. "Two years later, fewon the second class prize of £300 for his paintings." Christ hearing the Cross," and "The Reconciliation of Oberon and Titania." His best works wore "Quarrel of Oberon and Titania," purchased for the Sectiah National Gallery for $1100; "Dante Meditating the Dissole of Francesca," "The Pussuit of Pleasure," and "Home." In at Dunlermline, Fifeshire, 1823.

Patrick, St., the apostle of Ireland, pat'rik, is asserted by some to have been a native of audon of nonic, and concludes with the teneme's asserted observed to have been a native of Tiberius and Scjanus. D. about 19 D.O.; D.I. Scotland, and by others, of Wales. In the supposed, 31 A.D. PAZERSON, William, pdf-er-sen, the originator have been principal of a college in Wales; but was taken captive by some pirates of Ireland. the inhabitants of which country he converted the finantiants of which country he converted to Christianity. It appears certain that he was a bishop, and founded many churches and schools of learning. D, towards the close of the

Patrick Paul

PATRICK, Peter, a native of Thessalonica, who was employed by Justinian in important negotiations, for which he was made master of Paratos, Simon, a learned English prelate, who was educated at Queen's College, Cambridge, and, on entering into orders, other the bridge, and, on entering into orders, other wards that of St. Paul, Covert Garden. During the plague of 1865, he continued in London, administering the officers. administering the offices of religion to his parishioners. He became dean of Peterborough in 1678, and, in 1689, bishop of Chichester; whence he was translated to Elv in 1691. He is well known for his valuable commentary on the Old Testament, usually published with Lowth on the Prophets, and Whitby on the New Testament. He was also the author of some controversial tracts against the Romanists and dissenters, and several books of practical divinity. B. in Lincolnshire, 1626: D. 1707.

PATRU, Oliver, pu-troo', an eminent French lawyer, whose talents procured him a place in the French Academy in 1640; on which occasion he made an eloquent speech, which gave rise to the custom for all new members to deliver introductory orations. The critical judg-ment of Patru was so great that he was called the Quintilian of France; it also gained him the friendship of Racine and Boileau. His works consist of Memoirs, Letters, and Discourses. B. at Paris, 1604; D. 1681.

Parrison, William, pat'-e-son, an English poet of great genius, whose imprudence, however, made his life miserable and his death prema-Having quarrelled with his tutor at Sidney College, Cambridge, and fearing expulsion, he went to London, where he plunged into all the pleasures of the metropolis, was soon reduced to indigence, and died of small-pox in PAUCTON, Alexis, poke'-twang, a French mathematician, who received his education in the mathematical and naval academy at Nantes, after which he went to Paris, where his integrity and talents procured him patronage and a place. and talents procured nun paironage and a piace. His works are, "Metrology; or, a Treatise on the Weights, Measures, and Moneys of all Countries, Ancient and Modern,"—a much-esteemed volume; "Theory of the Laws of Nature, with a Dissertation on the Pyramids of Egypt." B. in France, 1736; p. 1708.

Egypt." B. in France, 1736; p. 1798.
PAUL I., Pope, porl, was the successor of Stephen, in 757. He engaged in disputes with Desiderius, king of the Longobards, but was supported by Pepin, king of the Franks. p. 767.

Paul II. succeeded Pius II. 1464. He sought to organize a league of the Christian princes against the Turks, who, at the time, threatened to invade Italy, and also endeavoured to establish peace among the different Italian states. He had a great dislike to profane learning and t up an academy which had been formed at Rome for the cultivation of Grak and Roman learning, many members of which were imprisoned and tortured. D. 1471.

nese, was elected to the papil chair, in succession to Clement VII., in 1534. In his reign the Council of Trent was called. He established the Inquisition, confirmed the Society of Jesuits, eondemned the Interim of Charles V., and acted with rigour against Henry VIII. of England. D. 1519.

PAUL IV., John Peter Caraffa, was elected in 1555, at the age of 80. He was a bigoted pre-late, and when Queen Elizabeth announced to him, by the English amba-sador, her accession to the throne, he haughtily de lared that the kingdom was a fiel of the Holy See, and that she had no right to assume the crown without his leave, particularly as she was illegitimate. 1559.

Paul V., Camillo Borghese, was elected in 1605, after the death of Leo XI. He had a dis-pute with the senate of Venice, over which he pretended to have a right; but it was so firmly resisted that the pope excommunicated the doge and senate. He also raised forces against the republic; but by the interference of the emperor and other states, peace was re-tored in 1607. He embeliished Rome with many excelleut works of sculpture and painting, and an aqueduct. The Borghese family, one of the wealthiest in Italy, owed its rise mainly to him. p. 1021.

Paul I, emperor of Russia, was the son of Peter III, and Catharine II. He married Wil-helmina, daughter of the landgrave of Hesse-Darm-tadt, who died two years after their union. in 1776. Paul took for his second wife a princess of Wurtemberg, and niece of the king of Prussia. Upon the death of Catharine II., in 1796, he succeeded to the throne, and for some time gave promise of proving a great prince: he release I Kosciusko, the Polish patriot, Niemcewicz, and others who had been confined during the previous reign; but his real character soon afterwards displayed itself. In 1799 he entered into an alliance with Austria against France. and sent Suwarrow with a large army into Italy; suddenly changing his views, he re-alled his forces, formed a northern confederacy, and seized the persons and property of the English in his dominions. His conduct to his also became capricious and violent, and just as the northern coalition had been dissolved by Lord Nelson's destruction of the Danish fleet at Copenhagen, a plot was formed among the offieers of his court. The conspirators entered the emperor's apartments at might, and presented to him an act of abdication for his signature, On his refusal, a scuille cusued, and Paul wos strangled. When the people of St. Petersburg heard of his death there were general rejoieings.

heard of instantiner were general regornings. B. 1754; stranded, 1801. PAUL, called "Thi DELCON," who of The Blistory of the Londensky, "Lives of the Saints, and of the lish-hops of Metz," also a work called "History of Rome," in $2 hours, the pa-of Rome, "in $2 hours, Ho was secretary to hesiderius, king of the Lombards, and was afterwards in the service of Charlemagne. The Prince of Benevento invited him to his court, and on the death of that prince, Paul embraced the monastic life. B. about 740; D. 780.

PAVE DE SANTA MARIA, a learned Spanish Jew, who is said to have been converted to Christianity by reading the works of Aquinas. After the death of his wife, he entered into orders, and became preceptor to John II., king PAUL III., whose name was Alexander Far- of Castile, who made him hishop of Carthagena, and afterwards of Burgos. B. at Burgos, about and afterwards of Burgos. B. at Burgos, about 1375; p. 1455.—His three sons were baptized with him; the eldest became bishop of Burgos, and wrote a "History of Spain;" the second was bishop of Plauentia; and the third, Alvarez, wrote "The History of John II., King of Cas-

Pausias

PAUL, FATHER. (See SARPI, Peter.) PAUL OF SAMOSATA, an heresiarch of the 3rd century, who received his surname from the place of his birth, a city on the Euphrates, and became patriarch of Antioch in 260. Being entertained at the court of Zenobia, queen of Svria, he endeavoured to gain her to the Christian faith, by explaining away its mysteries. For this purpose, he held that Christ was a mere man, and that the Trinity consisted not of nersons but attributes. His errors were condemned by the council of Antioch, A.D. 270, and Paul was excommunicated. His disciples were called Paulinists. Lived in the 3rd century

PAUL VERONESE. (See VERONESE, Paul.) PAULA, St., pa'-oo-la, an eminent Roman lady, who was descended from the Scipios and the Gracchi. On becoming a widow, she retired to Bethlehem, where she founded a monastery and houses of hospitality, of which St. Jerome had the management. She practised the severest austerities and self-denial, which Jerome in vain endeavoured to moderate. She was acquainted with the Scriptures in the original Hebrew, in which she had Jerome for her master. B. 347;

р. 407.

PAULDING, James Kirke, paul'ding, an eminent American writer, who in 1807 becan a career of authorship in collaboration with his brother-in-law, Washington Irring. With this gentleman, he wrote a series of satirical papers, entitled "Salangandi." In 1813, he produced a burlesque poem, called, "The Lay of a Scotch Fiddle," and soon afterwards published a brilliant reply to some aspersions east upon the American people in the "Quarterly Review." His next effort was an imitation of Swift, in a work entitled "The Diverting History of John Bull and Brother Jonathan," published in 1816. During the subsequent twenty years he continued to labour industriously with his pen, and tinned to labour industriously with his pen, and in 1837 was appointed sceretary of the navy, under the presidency of Von Buren. When that president retired in 1841, Paudding resigned the post, and again took up his pen. His best works are "letters from the South," "The Dutchmark Fireside," "The Old Countmental," "John Bull in America," "The New Pilgrim's Progress: a Sattice," and "quales of Good Woman, by a Doublahl Gentleman." One of this finger wayes described from the Child State wayes described for the state of the of his finest novels, descriptive of life in the backwoods, and entitled "Westward IIo," was published in 1832. This title has since been taken by Mr. Kingsley; but there is no further resemblance between the works. B. at Pawlings, Duchess county, New York, 1779.
PAULINA, paw-le'-na, the wife of the philosopher Seneva, who attempted to kill herself when Nero condemned her husband to death. The emperor, however, prevented her, and she survived for several years in the greatest melancholy.

PAULINUS, paw-li-nus, a learned German missionary, whose real name was John Philip Werdin. He studied at Prague, and acquired a knowledge of some of the Oriental languages at Rome. In 1774 he went as missionary to the court of Malabar, where he remained during fourteen years. After his return to Rome, in 1790, he was employed in superintending the printing of religious works for the use of missionaries to Hindostan. He wrote a Sanskrit grammar, and various works upon the religion and literature of India. B. 1748; D. 1806.

PAULINUS, ST., bishop of Nola, discharged the office of consul in 378, and about the same time married a Spanish lady, by whose means he embraced Christianity. He then retired to Spain with his wife, where he bestowed his goods in charity, and led a life of mortifica-In 393 he entered into orders, and going tion. and in oso he entered into orders, and going to Italy, was chosen bishop of Nola. He was the author of some Discourses on practical charity, and Poems and Letters. B. at Bordeaux, 353; D. 431.

PAULINUS, St., patriarch of Aquileia, distinguished himself at the council of Frankfort in 794. He wrote a treatise on the Trinity.

D. 804.

PAULMY, Marc Antoine Réné de Voyer, Marquis of, pole'-me, minister of state, and a mem-ber of the French Academy, was the son of the Marquis d'Argenson. He collected one of the most magnificent libraries in Europe, which was sold to the Count d'Artois, brother to Louis XVI. M. de Paulmy published "Mélanges d'une grande Bibliothèque," in sixty-nine volumes. To him also is attributed a work volumes. To him also is attributed a work entitled "Essays in the Style of those of Mon-entitled "LESSAYS in the Style of those of Mon-nispie." In at Valenciennes, 1722; D. 1787.

PAULUS ÆGINETA. (See ÆGINETA, Paulus.)

PAUGUS ÆMILUS. (See ÆMILUS, Paulus.)

PAUSAINAS, pure-sai "ni-sa, the son of Cleom-brotus, king of Sparta, governed the kingdom for his cousin Pleistarchus during his minority. He also displayed great skill and valour against Athens, which city he took, and expelled the Addition, which is a decreased against the Persians with equal glory, but being discontented with his country, he entered into a secret treaty with the king of Persia, which being discovered by the Ephori, he, to avoid the punishment due to his treason, fled into the temple of Minerva, which being held sacred, the Lacedæmonians blocked it up with stones, the first of which was placed by the mother of Pausanias. He was there starved to death, B.C. 467. PAUSANIAS, a Greek historian and orator, who settled at Rome in the reign of Antoninus the Philosopher. Pausanias wrote "Travels in Greece," wherein he most minutely describes the buildings, monuments, statues, and paintings, as they existed 500 years after the most flourishing period of Greek art. Fuseli thus speaks of this valuable work: "The minute and serupulous diligence with which what fell under its author's eye is there described, amply satisfies us, although there is a want of method and judgment. His description of the pictures of Polygnotus at Delphi, and of the Jupiter of Phidias at Olympia, are perhaps superior to all that might have been given by men of more assuming powers. They are inestimable legacies to our arts." Flourished in the second cen-

PAUSIAS, paw'-si-as, a painter of Sieyon, who puril of Apelles and Melanthius. He worked in colours upon wood and ivory, according to the method row called encaustic painting. He drew a beautiful picture of his mistress Glycera, which was bought by Luculius for two talents (about $102). After his death, the Slevonian: sold his preinter to Scaurus, the grandson of Svila, who built a gallery for them at Rome. Flourished about 360 B.C.

Pauw, Cornelius. pon, a learned Dutch writer, who is known by his discourses on the Greeks, the Americans, the Egyptians, and the Chinese. These works are curious, and show en iderable ability, but they are too conjecturel. D. at Amsterdam, 1739; p. at Xanten, 1709.-There was another of this name who lived at Utrecht. and published several valuable editions of Greek authors, particularly Anaereon, in 1792.

Paxton, Sir Joseph, pax-ton, an eminent modern gardener, the designer of the building for the Great Exhibition of 1851, and of the gardens, terraces, and fountains of the Crystal Palace of Sydenham. Born of parents in moderate circumstances, he devoted himself to the pursuit of gardening, and was fortunate enough to attract the attention of the duke of Devonshire, who employed him first at Chiswick, and afterwards at Chatsworth. He subsequently became, besides chef gardener at Chatsworth, namazer of the duke of Devenshme's large estates in Perhyshire. At Chatsworth he constructed a grand conservatory of iron and glass. which covers an acre of ground; and when the building committee of the Great Industrial Ex-hibition of 1851 seemed almost to despair of getting an appropriate design, Mr. Paxton subgetting an appropriate design, and Fracton sun-mitted one prepared on similar principles: this design was accepted, and, with some slight modifications, carried out. The new style of architecture which he had thus created, was from the outset immensely popular. He after-wards prepared an improved design for the reconstruction of the same glass palace at Sydenham. For his services he received the honour ham. For his services he received the honour of hulghthough and in 1832 was returned to Parliament as member for Corentry without opposition. He wrote many works on horticultural subjects, the chief of which are "Paxton's Plower Garden," and "The Pocket Dotanical Dictionary." p. 1865.

Franks, Amsum, pacton, a usameansness. French chemist, was the son of a gouttenam largely engared in industrial enterprises, and was sent to study chemistry under Vanqueland Chevrell. About 1815 he assumed the directorship of a large manufactory of sugar from hother to all the companion of the from beetroot, and subsequently applied hadself to the discovery and application of new manufacturing processes, by which he greatly contributed to reduce the price of many articles of food ordinarily used. Between the years 1827-44 he acted as member and reporter of juries on French industry. In 1836, he was appointed member of the council and professor of the school of arts and manufactures, and afterwards rereived a similar appointment at the Conserva-toire des Arts et Méliers. In 1817 he was reated officer of the Legion of Honour. M. Pagen wrote extensively on subjects more or less infimately connected with agricultural and industrial chond-try. Among his most im-actant works "Course of Applied Cheestant works "Course of Ap Listry," "Men sirs on Vegetable ment," and "Manual of Organie Cl "Men ars on Vegetable Develop-applied to Agriculture and Indust riso a valuable and industrious contributor to the "Revue des Deux Mondes," and other leading periodicals. B. at Paris, 17-5.

PAYME, Roger, pain, an English bookbader, Payment, and the company of the strength of his banding. He was chiefly employed on scarce books, for the binding of which he received extraordinary prices. For an Æschylus, bound by him for earl Spencer, he was paid lifteen guineas. Payne lived in a cellar, and never worked while money. He made all his own to never suffer any person to see charitable American broker, who settled in London). In addition to providing ample fund resta. blishment of various institutions erent parts of the United States, he g parts of the content states, he g 1896, and 1709, perfons of a sun of £500,001 to be expended for the seafit of the poor of London. The mane case half out by the trustees of the fund dwelling-houses in St. diffels and els-swhere. n. 1795. . 18

Persony, t

PEACOCK, Reginald, pel-kok, an English pre-Phacock, Regiman, perkos, an engusa pre-late, was successively bishop of St. Asaph and Chichester, by the fatour of Humpbrey, the good duke of Glonester; but he way depoyed for resisting the papal authority, and denving for resisting the papar authority, and denying asubstantiation, with other articles of the nan Catholic faith. He was obliged to re-cant his views, and his books were publicly burnt. He then retired to an abbey, where he died, about 14st. PEARCE, Nathaniel, peerse, an English traveller, who spent many years in Africa, and lived for several years at Abyssinia. Hes manuscripts, which he to Mr. Salt, much valuable information relative to the manners and customs of the last-named country,

B. near London, 1780; D. at Alexandria, 1820. Pearce, Zachary, a learned English divine, who received his education at Westminster school, whence he was elected to Trinity Colserion, whence he was elevered to Trainy Col-leze, Cambridge, where he wrote some papers for the "Guardian" and "Spectator." He pub-lished an excellent cdit on of Longinus in 1734,

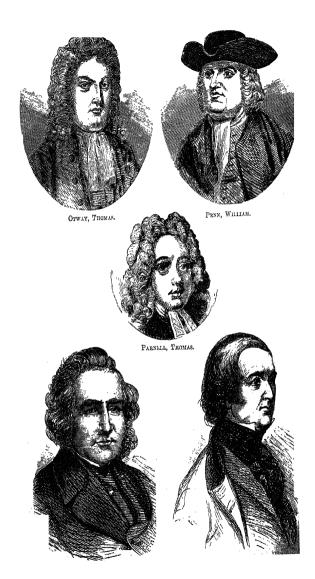

When Woolston attacked the miracles of our When Woolston attacked the miracles of our saviour, he was repla to by Dr. Pence in an manymous pamphler, entitled "A Vindient of the Ultrades of Josses," which was been also of the Ultrades of Josses," which was preferred to the deanery of Whichester in 1750, advin ed to the deanery of Whichester in 1750, advin ed to the see of Barror in 1718, and, in 1750, translated to Eoche ter, with the deanery of We trainster annexed. Some time before his death he collected leave to resign his prefer-ments; as this, however, was unusual, it was refused with respect to the bishopric, but he retised with respect to the osciopar, one may was permitted to give up the deanery. Besides the above, he published: "A Review of the Text of Milton," "On the origin of Temples," "An Account of Trinity College, Candridge," and other works. After his death were published his "Commentary on the Gospels and Acts," and Sermons. I. in London, 1690; p. 1771.

Pearson, Edward, peocle, m. a learned English airline, who was calcuated at Cambridge. and atte and atter ge, in that university. He wrote largely, but is chiefly known for his controller, ks, wherein he wrote against Dr.

Paley's theories as to moral obligation. He was likewise a stanch opponent of Calvinism, and Pearson, John, an eminent English bishon. who received his education at Eton, whence he was elected to King's College, Cambridge. He was promoted to the hishopric of Chester ir was promoted to the assimpting of Chester. In 1673. Bishop Pearson is principally known by his valuable "Exposition on the Creed," of which there have been several editions. He which there have been several editions. He also wrote a "Defence of the Epistles of St. Ignatius," and other learned works. p. in Norfolk, 1013; p. 1636.

Pecchio, Joseph, pck'-kc-o, a modern Italian author, who was educated for the law, and after-wards became assistant councillor of finances at Milan, which post he lost at the Austrian occupation in 1811. Seven years afterwards he was forced to fly, on account of the part he had taken in a conspiracy against the Austrian rulers of Milan. He travelled a great deal upon the continent; but eventually repaired to England, where, in 1825, he was commissioned by the Philhellenic committee to convey a large sum of money to the Greeks, then struggling against the Turks. He subsequently married against the turns. It subsequently married an English hady, and devoted himself to literature, composing, among other valuable works, a series of sketches of English habits and manners, which were as humorous as they were just and discriminating. B. at Milan, 1785; D. 1805.

PECHANTER, Nicholas de, pe'-kantr, a French poet, who three times gained the poetical prize from the Académie des Jeux Floraux. His tragedy of "Geta" was performed at Paris in 1637 with great applause. This was followed by "Jugartha," "The Death of Nero," and some others. B. at Toulouse, 1638; D. 1708.

PECK, Francis, pck, an eminent English anti-quary, who received his education at Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. He obtained where he took his degrees in arts. He obtained the living of Godeby, in Leiestershire, where he remained until his death. He wrote, among many other learned weeks, "The Anals of Stamford," "The Life of Milton," "Memoirs of Cromwell," and published a collection of histo-rical tracts, entitled "Desiderata Curiesa."

B. at Stamford, Lincolnshire, 1692; D. 1713.

PECORONE, Glovanni Florentino, pek-o-ro'-nat, a Florentine novelist of the 14th century, who, according to some, was a notary, and to others, a Franciscan monk. He belonged to the party of the Guelphs, and was an ardent follower of the pope. His "Novelli," which have been often reprinted, are little inferior to Boccaccio, and are valuable for the view they afford of the opinions and manners of his time. D. about PECQUET, Jean, pel'-ai, an eminent French physician, who discovered the lacteal voin that conveys the chyle to the heart, and which is therefore called the reservoir of Peague. In 1654 he published a work entitled "Experi-menta Nova Anatomira," and, in 1661, another, "De Thoracis Lacteis." p. 1622; p. 1674.

Penno I., Don Antonio, pe-dro (pai-dro), emperor of Brazil, was the son of the terent of Portugel, afterwards John VI. In the interval between 1808-21, his father found a refuse in Brazil, having been driven from Portugal by Napoleon I.; but, a year after John had left the country for Portugal, Brazil declared itself independent, and elected Don Pedro as its emperor. The death of John VI., in 1826, left Don Pedro the crown of Portugal: he soon afterwards established a liberal government in that country, and granted it a charter. After abdicating the crown of Portugal in favour of is daughter, Donna Maria, he nominated his nother, Don Miguel, regent; but scarcely had requitted Portugal, than Don Miguel took possession of the throne. In 1831 Pedro was com-pelled to abdicate the throne of Brazil in favour of his son, Don Pedro II. Returning to Europe, he raised troops in France and England, with which he, in 1833, drove Don Miguel from the throne of Portugal, and placed the crown upon the head of his daughter. He was twice mar-ried; his first wife being Maria Leopoldina, archduchess of Austria, and the second, Amelia, daughter of Prince Eugène de Beauhar-

nis. p. 1793; p. 1831.

PEDRO II., Don John Charles, emperor of Brazil, was son of the preceding, who abdicated the throne in his favour when he was only in his 6th year. Until 1841, Brazil had been governed by a council of regency; but at that period he was compalled to ascend the throne in his 15th year. The beginning of his reign was much troubled; but José Feliciano, the last of the insurgents, was totally defeated in 1842, after which time he reigned in peace. In 1851 the war between Brazil and Buenos Ayres was terminated with the fall of Rosas. Under Don Pedro II. the Brazilian empire made rapid advances both in the arts of peace and com-

PERSO V., king of Portugal, was the son of Donna Maria II. and Fernando of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, king consort. After visiting France and England during his father's regency, he ascended the throne in 1855. In 1857 he married the Princess Stephanic Wilhelmina Antoine, of Hohenzollern Sigmaringen, who died two years

Hohenzollern Sigmaningen, who died two years afterwards, n. 1837, n. 1801.

Pern, Sir Robert, peel, first baronet, and father of the Driids statesman, was brought up to the cotton trade, and in 1773, he being then in his 23rd year, entered into partnership with LN r. William Yates, at Bury, in Lancashire. The contraction of the partner, and from that time his career of his partner, and from that time his career. was one of uninterrupted prosperity. In 1790 he entered the House of Commons as member for Tamworth. Seven years afterwards, when the capitalists of the nation were called upon to subscribe to the "Loyalty Loan," the firm of which he was the head contributed the considerable sum of £10.000. He also distinguished himself by his zeal in the volunteer movement of the period, and was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the Bury Loyal Volunteers, consist-ing principally of his own workmen. In 1800 he was created a baronet, and shortly before had made a speech in Parliament, advocating the mion with Ireland, which was published, and circulated in large numbers throughout that country. He retired from Parliament in 1820, and went to reside on his estate of Drayton Manor, Staffordshire. His large landed property was entailed upon his eldest son, the great tatesman, to whom also he left, it is supposed, bout half a million of money. To his younger sons he left £150,000, and to his daughters £50,000 each. He had previously allowed his eldest son an annual income of £9000, and had Atled upon his other children about £240,000.

Atted upon his other children about £29,000.

At Poel's Cross, near Lancastor, TrO; D. at Druyōn Manor, Staffordshire, 1820.

Brun, Sir Robert, second bareand, a distinquished British statesman, was clust son of the preceding. His early education was rewired under the eye of his father, a man of $$3 \text{ G} 2$
$$3 \text{ G} 2$

great energy and clearness of intellect. When Whig party having regained office, Sir Robert he arrived at a sufficient age, he was sent to Harrow, where he showed himself a docale and submissive schoolhov, but, at first, by no means an advanced one. After a short time, however, he progressed rapidly and securely, and soon left all competitors behind. Lord Byron, his contemporary at Harrow, has given the following record of his scholo-days:—"Peel, the orator and statesman (that was, or is, or is to be), was my form-fellow, and we were both at the top of our remove. We were on good terms. but his brother was my intimate friend. There were always great hopes of Peel amongst us all, -masters and scholars; and he has not disappointed them. As a scholar, he was greatly my supe-ior; as a declaimer and actor, I reckoned at least his equal. As a schoolboy, out of school, I was always in scrapes, and he never; and, in school, he always knew his lesson, and I rarely; but when I knew it, I knew it uearly as well." When Peel had completed his 16th year, he became a gentleman commoner of Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his degree of A.B. with unprecedented distinction, taking the honours of a double first class,first in classics, first in mathematics. In the year 1809 he attained his majority, and also entered the House of Commons as member for Cashel, in Tipperary. He began his Parlia-mentary career as a supporter of Mr. Perceval. In the following year he seconded the address in answer to the speech from the throne, and had so greatly distinguished himself among the Tory party, that he soon afterwards entered office as under-secretary for the Home department. He continued in the Home department until the death of Mr. Perceval, in 1812, when certain changes in the ministry took place, and Mr. Peel was appointed chief secretary to the lordlieutenant of Ireland. In the same year he was elected for Chippenham, in Wiltshire. He held the secretaryship of Ireland for six years, during which he introduced s veral measures tending to preserve peace in that country, and also established the constabulary force. In 1817 he was chosen as one of the Parhamentary representatives of the University of Oxford. Two years later, he sat as chairman on the celebrated committee which resulted in the return to eash matter when resulted in the return to cash payments. On the retirement of Lord Sidmonth, in 1822, Peel became Home secretary, When Caming became prender, in 1827, Peel retired, in consequence of still retaining his opin on that the demands made by the Roman Catholies should be resisted. In the following year, however, he again entered the ministry, this time under the duke of Wellington, Both the duke and himself were subsequently brought to see that the claims of the Catholies could no longer be withstood, and he accordingly moved the Relief Bill, which was carried, after a long and arduous struggle, in 1829. In the follow-ing year he succeeded to the baronetey, upon the death of his father. He opposed, with all his power, the great movement for Parliamentary reform, which was brought to a triumphant close in the year 1832. Under the reformed Parliament the Tory party was in a recorned raniament the roty panel has in a decided minority; but Sir Robert was, nevertheless, summoned to form a Conservative ministry. Much against his own inclination, he did so; but, as he had predicted, the Conserva-

went into opposition, and devoted himself to the careful organization of his forces, so as to take advantage of the first great check the Whigs might receive. In 1839 the Whig ministry resigned; Sir Robert Peel was "sent for," and submitted to her Majesty a list of his condiutors, at the same time requesting that certain ladies of the bedchamber, who were near relatives of the Whigs, should be removed. This request was not acceded to; whereupon Si Robert abandoned his idea of forming a cabinet The Whigs, accordingly, retained power until 1841, when, having been repeatedly defeated in the House of Commons, they resigned, and made way for their great opponent, who became first lord of the treasury, the duke of Wellington accepting a seat in his cabinet without office. but taking the leadership of the House of Lords The limits of this article produce anything like a detailed account of the great events which followed, and which caused Sir Robert Peel to be regarded by the British nation as the greatest and most disinterested statesman it has ever had. Sir Robert Peel's ministry was formed on the strictest protectionist principles; but, nevertheless, the leader of that great and powerful party contrived to effect considerably more in the way of fiscal and financial reforms than could be even attempted by the Whigs, who were supposed to be the more liberal and more progressive party. Sir Robert Peel, during his celebrated tenure of office, between the years 1841-46, effected the reneal of the corn laws, the relaxation of the whole con mercial code; passed the Bank Charter Act, and established the general financial policy of the country on a firmer basis than was ever before the case. For these great services, which were only effected by a fundamental change of the policy to which he had hitherto pledged himself, Sir Robert Peel incurred the odium of his party, most of the members of which abandoned him. In 1846 he was compelled to resign office; and from that period until his death he continued to assist the Whig Administration. Henceforth he never son ht to weaken any of the existing parties in the House, but continued. to give his adherence to whatever measure he thought best calculated to advance the general "He had known enough of place and power," it has been said; "he was jealous of his influence, and eared for little beyond. Time had chastened the few prejudices he possessed, and his clear head was undisturbed by any of those cloud, with which the passions or promptings of the heart obscure the judgments of most public men. On the night before the occurrence of the fatal assident which terminated the life of Sir Robert Peel, the House of Com-mons, which for more than forty years had witnessed his triumphs and reverses, was filled with an extraordinary assemblage, anyons for the result of a great political crisis." That result would, most probably, have been the return of the great statesman to the power he no longer coveted; but, on the very next day, while riding through St. James's Park, his horse suddenly shied, and threw Sir Robert over its head. He was taken up, and conveyed to his residence in Whitehall Cardens, where, three days afterwards, he breathed his last. This notice of the great statesman's life is netives held power for a few months only. This cessarily short and incagre; but students of his happened in the early part of the year 1835. The career may find every detail requisite for the full comprehension of his policy in all its bearings, in two works, entitled respectively, "The Political Life of Sir Robert Peol," by Thomas Doubleday, and "The Life and Acts of Sir Robert Peol," by M. Guizot, a translation of which work was published by Mr. Bentley. After an able characterization of Sir Robert's robbins of the property of the pro political genius, M. Guizot thus concludes:state; proud with a sort of humility, and desir-ing to shine with no brilliancy extrinsic to his natural sphere; devoted to his country, without any craving for reward, Severing himself from the past without cynical indifference, braving the future without adventurous boldness; solely swayed by the desire to meet the necessities of the present, and to do himself honour by delivering his country from peril or embarrassment. He was thus, in turn, a Con-servative and a Reformer, a Tory or Whig, and almost a Radical; popular and unpopular; using his strength with equal ardour, sometimes in making an obstinate resistance, sometimes in yielding concessions which were perhaps excessive; more wise than provident, more courageous than firm, but always smeere, patriotic, and marvellously adapted, in a period of transition like ours, to conduct the government of modern society as it has become, and as it is becoming more and more, in England as clsewhere, under the influence of the democratic principles and feelings which have been fermenting in Europe for fifteen centuries, B. at Chamber Hall, Bury, Luncashire, 1788; p. in London, 1850 —His sons, Robert (see year trait) and Frederick, embraced political lise, at

held office in connexion with the Liberal pur-

PEEL, Sir William, was the third son of the statesman, and entered the navy in 1838, as midshipman on board the Princess Churlotte, in which vessel he took part in the bombardment of Acre. After serving on board other vessels in the China seas and elsewhere, he, in 1814, passed his examination for lieutenant in so brilliant a manner as to call forth the warmest eulogiums of Sir Charles Napier and Sir Thomas Hastings. In the same year he became licatenant of the Winchester, on the Cape of Good Hope station. In 1846 he was promoted to the rank of commander, and remained upon the North American and West India stations until the commencement of the war with Russia. During that war he greatly distinguished himself in the naval brigade before Schastopol. In 1856 he went out to the China station as captain of the Shannon frigate; but had scarcely arrived there when he was ordered to Calcutta with troops, to afford assistance in suppressing the mutiny in India. Upon his arrival he organized a naval brigade, and went ashore with 24 and 08-pounder guns, with which he and his sailors performed great deeds of skill and bravery at Cawapore and Lucknow. At the storming of Lucknow he was severely wounded : but was recovering from this hurt when he was attacked with smallpox, which, to the profound grief of the English nation, carried him off. "There was something about Peel which, it is said, recalled the great Nelson. He had the daring and the dash, the frankness of heart and buoyant courage of the hero of Trafalgar: it was impossible not to love him. Brawny seamen wept bitterly when they heard that he was wounded, and young midshipmen longed for the honour of serving under his flag. Sir William Peel, in short, like Nelson, 821 was a popular hero." For his distinguished services during the Crimean was he was created C.B., and afterwards K.G.B for his Indian exploits. He was also an officer of the French Legion of Honour, and had received the war medial of Sardinia. n. 1825; n. at Cawnpore, 1859.

modal of Sardhala. B. 1825; p. at Cawappore, 1868. Paters, George, peel, an English dramatic writer, who was student of Christchurch College, Oxford, where he took his degree of M.A. In 1879. After leaving the University, he went to London, where he gained a poor and precurous subsistence as an actor and writer for the state. Ile was a good pastoral poet, and his plars were acted with great applains in the University, p. supposed in Devonshite, 1559; p. ahout 1517, p. supposed in Devonshite, 1559; p. achout 1517, p. achout 1517, p. achout 1517, p. achout 1517, p. achout

n. supposed in Devoishire, 1559; p. alvout 1537, Pairson, Stephon Galviel, pun-pa, a leanned French bibliographer, who was educated for the gal profession, but who became, in 1518, livrarian to the collect at Dijon, and devoted his life to the production of valuable and important works connected with the history and classification of books. His "Alumalo fibliography," Philological Amusements," and "Dictionary of Suppressed Works," are of considerable impracts. B in France, 1765; p. at Dijon, 1845.

PEIRESC, Nicholas Claude Pabri, Seigneur de, pat'-resk, an emment French autiquary and learned writer, who studied at first under the Jesuits; after which he visited various universi-ties, and took the degree of doctor of laws at Aix in 1604. His these on that occasion was greatly admired. Visiting Paris soon aftergreatly admired. Visiting Paris soon after-wards, he obtained the friendship of the most learned men in that city, particularly De Thou and Casaubon. In 1600 he went to Eugland in the suite of the French ambassador, and was received with marks of distinction by James I. He next went to Holland, and became acquainted with Julius Scaliger and Grotius. On his return to France, he was admitted a councillor of the Parliament of Aix. The learning of Peirese was various and profound; and he particularly excelled in the knowledge of medals. He wrote extensively on mathematics, medallic science, languages, and antiquities, and was a great collector of literary treasures, which he generously distributed among the learned of his acqua ntance. D. in Provence, 1589; D. at Aix, 1637.

PERLACIVE I., pe-lab-ji-re (1009); D. at Aix, 1637.
PERLACIVE I., pe-lab-ji-re (1009); was a native of Rome, and ascended the papal clarit, in succession to Virgilius, in 555. He endearoured to rolorn the clergy; and when Rome was besigned by the Goths, he obtained from Tottia, their general, many concessions in favour of the "trens. D. 509.

PELACTUS II. ascended the papal chair, in succession to Renedict I., in 578. He opposed John, patriarch of Constantinople, who had assumed the title of ecumenic or universal bishop. D. of the plague, 590.

DISHOP. D. OI THE PRINCE, SOU.
PELACUSE, the Founder of Pelagianism, in the 6th century, is supposed to have been a native of Britain. His real name was Morgan, which he changed to the Greek appellation of Pelagias. He went to reside at lione about 400, where he denied the doctrine of original sin, and maintained free will. He afterwards retired, with his friend Celestius, to the Holy Land, but subsequently returned to his native condity. His opinious were condemned by the counted of Cethiage. n. in Britain towards the close of the 4th century; n., it is supposed, in Wales, about 439.

Pelayo, pui-la-c-o, first king of the Asturias, was the chief of the Gothic Christians, who, Pelissier after the songuinary battle of Guadalete, in 711, field from the resentment of the Moors to the mountains of the Asturias. In 718 the Moslems attacked him and his followers, but were signamesee min and mis followers put were sig-nally defeated at Covadonge. He then took the title of monarch; and, in 722, drove the Moors out of the city of Leon, where his successors reigned. After firmly establishing the small kingdom of Asturies by many victories over the Moors, he died, 737.

PELISSIER, Aimable Jean Jacques, pe-lis'-se-ai, marshal and duke of Malakhoff, was the son of a respectable farmer, and, after receiving a liberal education, was sent, in 1814, to the military school of St. Cyr, which he left to join the army as sub-lieutenant during the Hundred Days. Precluded from active employment by the pence which soon afterwards ensued, he devoted himself assiduously to the study of his profession. In 1823 he took part in the Spanish campaign, and won several orders and crosses for his bravery and efficient conduct in two years of service in Algeria, his health gave way, and he was compelled to return to France. During the subsequent seven years he was em-During the subsequent seven years he was em-ployed in the War department at Paris, and in 1810 was again sent to Africa. His bravery and capacity during the different campaigns which took place, gained for him the rank of colonel in 1845. In that year he was sent in pursuit of one of the most ficree of the Kabyle tribes. Being closely pressed, the Arabs took refuge in their caves: Pelissier summoned them to surrender, offering to spare their lives if they would come forth from their retreat. The Arabs refused; whereupon be ordered fascines to be lighted and placed close to the mouths of the caves, in order to compel them to come out: still they remained stubborn. He next sent in to them some Arabs, and afterwards a flag of truce, which was fired upon. upon the lighted fascines were pushed still closer to the cavern mouths, and kept burning for some time. In the end, nearly 600 dead hodies were found in the caves, and about 200 more Arabs died after being drawn out. This operation excited general horror throughout Europe, and was strongly denounced by Marshal Soult, at Paris; but Marshal Buggand defended his subordinate, and termed the dismal act "a necessity of war." Notwithstanding this affair, Pelissier was created lieutenant-colonel in 1818, and remained in Algeria until 1855, when he was ordered to take the command of a division of the French army in the Crimea. At first, second in command under General Canrobert, his superior energy led to differences between himself and his chief. Shortly afterwards, Canhimself and his ciner. Snormy autorwates, can-robert asked to be allowed to resign, which re-quest was conceded, and Pelissier was nomi-nated to the chief command. The expedition to Kertch, the advance upon the Tchernaya, and many bold and successful attacks upon the Russian works, were all carried out under his command, which was brought to a triumphant termination by the storming and carrying of the great fort of the Malakhoff, the key of the Russian position on the south side of Schastopol. For these services the emperor Napoleon created him marshal of France, grand cross of the Legion of Honour, and duke of Malakhoff; Queen grand cross of the Bath. In 1858, during a period of some diplomatic difficulty, he zo-placed M. Persigny as anibaseador of France at the court of St. James's; but after filing that post for a short period, during which however, he secured the highest opinions of those with whom he came in contact, by his frank and cordial hearing, he retired; and was subsequently named governor-general of Algeria. B. near Rouen, 1791; D. 1864.

Pale, John, pel, an eminent English mathe-matician and divine, who was educated first at he went to Amsterdam, to assume the pro-fessorship of mathematics there; but afterwards removed to Breda, upon the invitation of the Prince of Orange. In 1652 he returned to England, and was sent by Cronwell as resident to the Protestant cantons of Switzerland. In 1661 he was ordained by the bishop of Lincoln, and, the same year, was presented to the rectory of Fobbing, in Essex. He wrote "An Idea of the Mathematics," "A Table of 10,000 the field. In 1828 he became captain in the Idea of the Mathematics," "A Table of 10,000 King's Guards, and, two years later, formed a member of the great Algerian expedition. After I Second and Tenth Books of Eweldy," and other works. B. at Southwick, Sussex, 1610; D. 1685.

Pellegrini, Camillus, pel-lai-gre'-ac, a celebrated Italian antiquary, who was the first to collect into a regular series the scattered, partial, and isolated histories and chronicles of the middle ages, which design was afterwards more completely carried out by Muratori and others, His sketch of the "Antiquities of Capua," and his "History of the Lombard Kingdom," are among the most valuable works treating of the

among the mass valuation works revening of the middle ages of Italy. B. 15:8; p. 16:6; PELLERIN, JOSeph, preb-to-ric, an eminent French numismatist, who was commissary-general, first clerk of the French marine, and afterwards commissioner of the navy. He deancerwards commissioner of the may. He de-voted his leisure to the collection, arrangement, and classification of medals. His entitled medals, in the purchase of which he was as-sisted by the king, was very large and valuable.

He published nine quarto volumes illustrative of medals, with plates. D. 1681; D. 1762; Prizico, Silvio, peb-lo-ko, an eminent Italian writer, who was the son of an official in the department of war at Milan, and afterwards at Turin. After spending some time in France, he joined his father at Milan, and was appointed professor of the French language in the seminary for military orphans in that city. Ardently devoted to literature and to liberty, he formed the acquaintance of Ugo Foscolo, the poet, and others, and likewise allied him elf with a num-ber of distinguished men, who hoped to free Lombardy from Austrian domination. In 1819 he wrote a traceiy, entitled "Francesca da Rimini," which was cuthusiastically received in the chief cities of Italy. After writing other works, he, in 1819, established, with the assistance of Manzoni, Sismondi, and others, a journal intended to be conducted upon liberal principles, entitled "Il Conciliatore," This print was, however, soon afterwards suppressed by the Austrian government. Towards the close of the year 1820, he was suddenly arrested on the charge of plotting against etablished order. He was at first confined in the prison of Santa Margherita, at Milan; but was afferwards sent to a dangeon on the Island of San Michele, near Venice. While there, in 1822, he was tried and complement of doubt the land of the was tried and the santa was tried and the sa condemned to death, which sentence was, how-Victoria also conferred upon him the ever, commuted to fifteen years of "careere durg"

822

Pellisson-Fontanier

(severe imprisonment) in the fortress of Spielberg. Speaking of this sentence, he says, "Those condemned to 'carcere dury' are obliged to labour, to wear chains on their feet, to sleep on bare boards, and to eat the poorest food. Those condemned to 'carcere durissimo' (very severe imprisonment) are chained more heavily. and with a band of iron round the waist, the circin being fastened to the wall; so that they only walk just by the side of the boards sano, though the law says only bread and water." For the first dishtant imprisonment he was fortunate enough to be placed under an indulgent gaoler, by whoin he was permitted the use of pen, ank, and paper, and to read the Bible, Homer, Dante, Petrarch, Shakspeare, Göthe, Sectt, Byron, Schiller, and other authors; but this personage having been sent to another prison. Pollico's situation became very severe during the four subsequent years, and almost led to the complete destruction of his health. Between the years 1847-30 he was treated with more elemency; and in the latter regain his liberty, which, in reality, followed soon afterwards. In 1831 he produced a work entitled "Le Mie Prizioni" (My Prisons), which was written in a style of touching sampheity, was translated into every language of Europe, and was everywhere admired. After his release he repaired to Turin, where his parents were residing, and devoted himself to literary composition, producing, among other works, three tragedies, and a prose treatise on the "Duties of After his death, his memoirs, correspondence, and inedited works, were published.

B. at Saluzzo, Piedmont, 1789; D. 1854. Pellisson-Fontanier, Paul, pel'-lecs-sawngfon-ta'-ne-ai, a French historian, who was educated for the legal profession, but quitted it for a life of retirement in the country, where he occupied himself with literary studies. Having written the history of the origin of the French Academy, he was chosen a member. Subsequently, the ministor Fouquet became his putron; but, when he was disgraced, Pellisson was sent to the Bastille, where he was confined during four years. On his release he received a pension, and became a favourite of Louis XIV., whom he attended in his campaigns. He wrote
"The History of Louis XIV." "The Life of Anne of Austria," "History of the Conquest of Franche-Counté," "Historical Letters," Poems,
"Reflections on Differences in Religion," and

"Treatise on the Eucharist." In at Beziers, France, 1624; D. at Versailles, 1693.

Encornas, po-lop'-i-das, a Theban general, who inherited from his tather Hippochus alarge fortune, which he disposed of liberally among his fellow-citizens. Between himself and Epa-minondas there existed the closest friendship. from which the Thebans derived the most important benefits. When the Lacedemonians gained the sovereignty of Thebes, Pelopidas went to Athens, where he assembled a number of his exiled countrymen, with whom, in 370 B.C., his extreat countrylini, will whom, in 378 k.c., the returned, seized upon Thebes by night, and threw off the Spartan yoke. He afterwards de-feated the Lacedomonians at Tegyra; and, with Enaminondas, shared the great victory of Leuetra. 371 B.o. He was next sent by his countrymen on an embassy to Artaxerxes, king of Persia,

Penn

Thebans, very advantageous to them. On his return, he persuaded his countrymen to make return, as persuaged his countrymen to make war against Alexander, tynant of Phera, but fell shortly after in buttle, 364 n.c.

Prigelly, William, F.R.S., pen-gell-le, one of the most eminent geologists of the nine-teenth century, who formed a time collection of Devonian fossils, now in the University Museum at Oxford. He has always taken an active part in the advancement of science. B.

at East Love, Cornwall, 1812.

PENN, Sir William, pen, an English admiral, who commanded the fleet, and Venables the land forces, at the taking of Jamaica from the Spaniards, in 1655. The same year he was Spaniards, in 1655. The same year he was elected member of Parliament for Weymouth. He was sent to the Tower by Cromwell, for quitting his command without leave, but was soon released. After the Restoration he became a knight, commissioner of the navy, and a vice-admiral. Under the duke of York, he fought in the naval action in which the Dutch were defeated, in 1665. In the following your he retired from the service. B. at Bristol, 1621; D. 1670.

PENN, William, an eminent Quaker, and founder of the state of Pennsylvania, was the son of the preceding. He received a good edueation, which was completed at Christ Church, Oxford; but he disappointed his father's expectations by turning Quaker, and was discarded by him. Sir Wittiam afterwards releated, and sent his son abroad. Young Penn visited France and Italy, and returned to his native country in 1664. He spent two years in the country in 1661. He spent two years in the study of the law at Lincoln's Inn, and was then sent to Ireland to manage his father's estates; but, happening to hear a discourse at Cork, by Thomas Loc, a leading Quaker, he reverted to his former opinions, and travelled to propagate this new faith. He was taken up for preaching, and sent to prison; but was released through the interest of his father. After his return to England, he was sent to the Tower, on account of a book which he had written; and, while there, he composed his principal work, entitled "No Cross, no Crown," intended to show the benefit of suffering. On his reto show the benefit of suffering. to show the belief of sthering. On the te-lease, he resumed his former labours, and was apprehended with some others, and tried for preaching at a conventiele in Gracechurch-street. The jury persisted in finding them not guilty, and were fined for acting contrary to the dictates of the judge. Admiral Penn was re-conciled to his son before his death, and left him all his property. He continued firm in his attachment to the Society of Friends, and, in 1677, went on a mission to Holland and Germany, with Fox and Barelay. In 1631 he obtained from the crown, in lieu of the arrears due to his father, the grant of the province in North America now called P wasy'varia. Peru called with a colony of Quaker, and sounced Philadelphia; but before he entered uson possession, he made a treaty with the Indians. The code of laws which he formed for the government of his province was simple, but would have done honour to the profoundest legislators. After spending about two years in the administration of the new colon, he returned to England in 1684. Upon the death of Charles II. P im at-tracted to himself the favour of James II.; and this intimacy led to his being several times arwho received him with honour, and, through accessors charged him with lengt a Pupist and a his means, entered into a treaty with the Josuit; but although he, during several years, 8233 rested after the king had been dethroned. His calumnies of his enemies, he at length de-fended himself before William III. and his council, and was honourably acquitted. In 1696 he married his second wife, and, three years afterwards, again set sail for Pennsylvania. In 1701 he returned to England, and, being encumbered with debts, endeavoured to negotiate the sale of Pennsylvania to the crown for £12,000. This negotiation was interrupted in 1712, through his being attacked by an apopleetie fit, which, happening twice afterwards, greatly impaired his mental faculties. He survived for six years longer, but with a constitution much shattered, and quite unfitted for any serious employment. Lord Macaulay, in his History, charges Penn with uttering "something very like a lie, and confirming it with something very like an oath;" with being a species of court agent for the sale of pardons with endeavouring to persuade the fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, to accede to James II.'s illegal acts; with seeking to bring about the king's return by means of a foreign army; and with other "scandalous acts." These and with other "seandalous acts." These charges, however, have been met by Mr. Hepworth Dixen, in his "Biography of William Penn." In one instance he shows the great historian to have been wrong; viz., that in which he declares Penn to have sold pardons to the maidens at Taunton who had been condemned for presenting the dake of Monmouth with a standard. Mr. Dixon proves that it was not William Penn, but George Penne, who pursued that kind of traffic. The question is an interesting one, the details of which may be found in the third and fourth volumes of " Macaulay's History," and in the Historical Biography above mentioned. After Penn's death, his sons held the proprietary governments of the state of Pennsylvania. After the American revolution, the claims of his descendants upon the state of Pennsylvania were bought up for £130,000. Montesquieu calls Penn "the modern Lyeur-gus." Penn wrote a number of works, which

gus. Fenn wrote a numer of works, which were cellected and published in 1723. m. in London, 1644; n. at Russombe, Berkshier, 1718. PENNAST, Thomas, per-laud; an eminent British naturalist and antiquary, who, after caching his grammatical ductation at Wrexham school, was sent to Oxford, where he principally applied himself to the study of natural philosophy. After travelling over England, the went almoad, and was introduced to Voltaire, Butfon, Linnerus, and other eminent men. In 1750 he published the "British Zoology," a work of considerable merit. In 1771 appeared his "Tour in Scotland," which passed through several editions. This was followed, at differ in Pariods, by a number of similar works; as "A Tour in Wales," "A Journey from Chester to London," "An Account of London," & He also published "Genera of Brids," "Arctic Coology," "Literary Memories;" and, at the time of his death, was engaged on a description of India, of which one volume was printed. In a Downing, Flintshire, 1726; in 1793.

PENNIFATHER, General Sir John Lysaght, pod"n-ful"cher, entered the army at eighter, in 1813, rishing through the variouggrades until, in the year 1830, to became leattenin-colond. In 1813 he served as brigadier under Sir Charles James Napher, and greatly contributed to the victory ov. The America of Schiede at Menney, where he redeved a severe wound, Upon the:

remained in sectusion, and did not refute the calumnies of his enemies, he at length defended himself before William III. and his of the second division, and was mentioned in council, and was honourably acquitted. In 1696 the most distering terms by Lord Ragian for married his second wife, and, three years his bravery at the Alma. At Inkenniam he afterwards, again set sail for Pennsylvania. In 1701 he returned to England, and, being vers his bravery at the Alma. At Inkenniam he enumbered with debts, endeavoured to negotiate ship. In that battle he maintained his high the sale of Pennsylvania to the crown for reputation for skill and bravery, and contributed to the proposition of the sale of pennsylvania the terms of the proposition of the sill and bravery, and contributed his high the sale of pennsylvania fleatibles. He sum and of the divisions, was created a major retry impaired his mental faculties. He sum and of the division, was created a major vived for six years longer, but with a constitution much shirtered, and quite unifted for any of Honour. In 1841 he was made littlement of the Legica (History, charges Penn with uttering "soone G.C.B. b. in Tepperary, Iredual, Isono G.C.B. b. In Tepperary, Iredual, Ison general, and consequency of coloring permanent of Cally and the Privacy, beautiful privacy, and taking painter, who was the disciple of Inflicting, to whom he became steward; on which account he obtained the title of Il Patture. Dr. Wangen considers that many parts of the Railfallel cartoons at Hampton Court were executed by him, as at Florence, 1488; n. at Kanles, 1528.

n. at Florence, 1483; p. at Naples, 1523, PENSTOURS, Alexander, post-in-chalo, a Scotch physician, who, after spending his youth abroad, returned to his native country, and occupied himself with literature. He wnote a topographical account of Tweediade, and a number of poems descriptive of the natures of the gentry and peasantivy in his time. He is also said to have given to Allam Ransay the plot of his "Gentle Stepherd," the scenes of which were 1-id on his estate of New-hall,
p. 1652; p. 1729.

B. 1652; D. 1722.
PENNINGTON, Israe, peni-ing-ton, lord mayer of London in 1610, who headed most of the frois against Charles I, and was one of that king's judges. In 1620 he was tried and commed, but respited, and died in the Tower.
PREZANCE, Lord (see WILDE, James Plaisted).

Pere, William, pai-pai, a modern Italian general, who, in 170), entered the ranks of the republican army formed in Naples by the French, when they proclaimed the Partheno-pean republic; but was taken prisoner, and banished at the restoration of Ferdinand, which shortly afterwards followed. (See Ferdinand IV.) He next served in the Italian legion of the French army, but was permitted to return to Naples in 1801. Under Murat he was appointed officer of the ordinance, and, in 1810, served in the campaign of Catalonia, under Marshal Suchet, who created him general of brigade. He was made a baron by Murat in 1814. After the death of Murat, he remained at Naples; and became one of the chiefs of the great secret society called the Carbonari, which, in 1821, compelled Ferdinand IV. to grant a ustitution similar to that of Spain, and to government took underage at these measures, and sent two armies towards Naples. Pepe, at the head of some ill-disciplined volunteers, met them, but suffered a defeat, and, being abandoned by his followers, was compelled to fly. He went first to Spain, and afterwards to England, in both of which countries he endeavoured o raise corps of volunteers in the cause of talian liberty. During his absence he was ondemned to death; but he remained safe in fondon, where he married a rich heiress. In onsequence of certain expressions made use of y Lamartine in his "Last Canto of Childe Hald," relative to the national character of the

52

Pepe Percy

Italians, General Pepe sent a challenge to the was secretary to the Admiralty in the reigns of poet, who was wounded in the duel which fol- Charles II. and James II., having been nomitowed. In JSIS the amnesty permitted him to nated to a clerkship in that establishment return to Naples, and the king, submitting to through the interest of his relative the earl of return to Naples, and the king, submitting to the popular feeling, appointed him to the command of an army sent to co-operate with Charles Albert of Piedmont against Austria; but, shortly afterwards, recalled his troops. Pepe, however, instead of obeying, led the Neapolitans to assist in the defence of Venice. Atter covering himself with glory by his heroic defence of the fort of Malghera, he, upon the sapitulation of Venice, made his escape to Corfu on board a French vessel, and subsectively account of the control of the quently repaired to Paris; but, having little sympathy with the character of the French people, he shortly afterwards left their capital to take up his residence at Nice, where he resided until his death. He was the author of several works, chiefly descriptive of the events from the unpublished Italian manuscript, and published in London, in 1850. B. in Calabria, PEPE, Florestan, a modern Italian general, and brother of the preceding. At the proclamation of the Parthenopean republic, he took service under its flag. In 1806 he was with service under its liag. In 1906 he was with the Neapolitan brigade in Spain, and, in the Russian campaign, covered the retreat of the French rear-guard with his Neapolitan cavalry. Severely wounded, he became, notwithstanding an obstinate resistance, prisoner to the Russians; but was shortly afterwards liberated. Murat created him lieutenant general in 1815, and, after serving against the Austrians in Upper Italy, he returned to Naples, which he held until the arrival of the latter. Subscquently to the Neapolitan revolution of 1820, he retired from his native country, and remained abroad during several years; but returned at a later period. He took no part in the events of 1848, but continued to live as a private citizen.

1818, on Continued to live as a private citizen.

Perin the Short, pe'-pin, king of France, was the first of the Carlovingian kings. He was at first Mayor of the Palace under Children in 1750 dethroued that monarch, and confined him in a monstery. Having requested and obtained the sanction of the pope, Pepin was constituted king. He assisted Pope Stephen III. against the Longobards, defeated the Saxons, Bavarians, and other German na-tions, and united Aquitaine to his crown. After a reign of 17 years, he died at St. Denis, 708. His syn Charlemagne succeeded him as king of the Franks.

Peria, grandson of Charlemagne, and son of Louis le Débomiaire, became king of Aquitaine in 817. p. 838 or 839.

Paruson, John Christopher, pe'-poosh, an eminent Prussian musician, who, at the age of 15, had the houour of teaching the Prince-royal. He afterwards settled in England, and was en-He atterwards settled in England, and was engaged as composer at Druy-lame Theatre. The University of Oxford conferred on him the degree of doctor of music. He acquired a considerable fortune by teaching, and by his maringe with an Italian singer. He adapted the music, and composed an overture for the "Beggar's Opera," and wrote a treatise on Harmony. B. at Berlin, 1667; D. in London, 1752.

Sandwich. His knowledge of naval adminissandwich. His knowledge of havin administration was very large, and it was by his energy that the affairs of the Admiralty were reduced to order and method. His "Memoirs relating to order and method. His "Memoirs relating to the Nary" is a well-written work, and his collection of MSS, with his library, now at Magdalen College, Cambridge, is an invaluable treasure of naval knowledge. In 1684 he became president of the floyal Society. But his clebutated "Diary" forms his best claim to re-debutated "Diary" forms his best claim to remembrance. This work, after lying undeciphered in shorthand characters during 150 years, was published by Lord Brasbrooke in 1825. It is one of the most delightful books in the English language, and a perfect treasury of facts and incidents relative to the time of hacts and incidents relative to the time of Charles II. p. in London, 1693; p. 1703. Percuvat., Thomas, per'-we-val, an English physician and philosophical writer, who received his education in the Warrington grammer-school; after which he went to Edinburryl, where he applied himself to the study of physic, in 1761 he was chosen fellow of the Royal So-coty, and Johnt the same time went there? ciety, and about the same time went abroad. Having passed some time at Paris, Hamburg, and other places, but principally Leyden, where he took his doctor's degree, he returned, in 1765, to England, and in 1767 settled at Manchester, where he continued in considerable practice till his death. His most important works were, "Instructions to his Children." "Moral and Literary Dissertations," "Medical Ethics," ossus observations and variety and variety and variety. Ethies," essays, chemical and medical, and several excellent papers in the "Alemoirs of the Manchester Society," of which he was one of the principal founders and ornaments. D. at Warrington, 1740; D. at Manchester, 1804.

PRICEVAL, Spencer, an English statesman, second son of the Earl of Egmont, a lord of the Admiralty, was educated for the legal profession, and was elected a member of the House of Commons in 1797. His advance was rapid. He became solicitor and attorney-general, and chancellor of the Exchequer, in quick succession. Finally, he, in 1819, attained the summit of power as first lord of the Treasury. He retained this office until the year 1812, when he was assassinated in the House of Commons by Bellingham. B. 1702.

Percy, the Family of, per'-se, one of the most distinguished in England. Its founder was William de Percy, who accompanied the Conqueror to England, and received several lordships in Lincoln and York. A descendant of his was one of the barons who obtained the Great Charter from King John. In the reign of Edward I, Henry de Percy obtained Ainwick and other possessions in Northumberland, with which county the name of Percy hence-forth became intimately connected. In the reign of Edward III., a Henry de Percy married Mary of Lancaster, daughter of a grandson of Henry III. Another Henry de Percy was created earl of Northumberland by Richard II. in 1377. He distinguished himself against the Seets, and took Berwick. Some years later, the Seets, by computing the governor, again made themselves masters of it; on which the duke of Lancaster brought an accusation against the at Bêrlin, 1667; D. in London, 1752. earl in Parliament, and he was sentenced to Pervs, Samuel, peps, an English writer, who lose his life and estates. But the king having revoked this sentence, the earl laid siege to revoken in senience, the earl hald slege to Berwick and took it. When Bollingbroke assumed the crown, with the title of Henry IV., he created the earl constable of England. In the fourth year of that reign, the earl and his son, commonly called Hotspur, defeated the Scots at Halidon Hill, and took the earl of Douglas prisoner. Having demanded the pay due to him as keeper of the Marches, and not receiving a satisfactory answer, the earl took up arms against the king, and placed Hotspur at the head of his troops; but he was shin at the battle of Shrewsbury in 1 MC; upon which Percy made his submission and received the royal pardon. Notwithstanding this, he royal pattern. Normandan day in collected another army, but was defeated and slain in Yorkshire in 1408. Henry V. restored the title to a son of Hotspur. This second earl was slain of the b.tile of St. Albans, in 1455; and the third at Towton, in 1430. The fourth earl was killed 11:9; the fifth died in 1527, sixth died in 1537 without issue, and the title of Northumberland remained out of the family Junil it was restored to the Percies by Queen Mary. The seventh carl was put to death by Queen Elizabeth, in 1872, and his brother, who steeceded him, was shot in the Tower. The eventh carl, in whom the chief male line of Percy became extinct, died at Turin in 1670, in hi; twenty-sixth year. At that period several cies; and one of them, a trunkmaker at Dublin, endeavoured to obtain the family titles, but without success. Lady Elizabeth Percy, daughter of the eleventh earl, who married Charles Sey-mour, duke of Somerset, had a son Algernon, who was created earl of Northumberland in His daughter, Lady Elizabeth Seymour, Americal Sir Hugh Smithson, who took the mane of Percy on becoming earl of Northumberland, at the death of his wife's father. He was created duke of Northumberland in 1706, and from him is descended the existing peer.

Percy

Percy, Dr. Thomas, a prelate of the Irish church and a distinguished antiquary, received his education at the university of Oxford; and, upon taking orders, obtained a living. His lirst work was a translation of a Portuguese translation of a Chinese novel, which was follawed by "Miscellaneous Pieces relating to the Chinese." Delween the years 1701-63, he produced some translations of Leclandic poetry, and in 1764 a new version of the "Song of Solumon," with a learned commentary. His "Key to the New Testament" followed; in 1765 he produced the celebrated collection of old Eng-lish ballad literature, known as the "Reliques of Ancient Poetry." In the following year he of Ancient Poetry." In the following year he became chaplain to the duke and duchess of Northumberland, the name of whose family he bore; and, after receiving other preferment, was created bishop of Dromore in 1782. The "Northumberland Household Book," and "The Hermit of Warkworth," both connected with the history of the Percy family, were also pub-I shed by him; his last work being a translation of M. Mallet's "Northern Antiquities." After he was ordained a bishop of the Irish church, he relinquished his pen, and devoted himself ex-clusively to the affairs of his discesse. B. in histopolitic, 1728; D. in Ireland, 1811.

Printice start by the first start and the generals of Alexander the Great, after whose death he a spired to the crown of Macedon; to accomplish of Alexander the Great, after whose death he aspired to the coown of Macedon; to accomplish which design he endeavoured to form a matri- I talian musical composer, who studied under monial alliance with Cleopatra, sister of Alexander. His project being discovered by Anti-gonus, he entered into a league with Antipater, Craterus, and Ptolemy, governor of Egypt, against Perdiceas, who marched to Memphis, but was slain in his tent by some of his soldiers. в.с 321.

Pergolesi

Pereira, Jonathan, pe-ri'-ra, a distinguished English physician, who was apprenticed to a surgeon in his fourt, enth year. At eighten he hecame a student at St. Eartholomew's Hospital, and about a year later, obtained the appointment of anotherary to the Aldersgate-street ment of apothecary to the Aldersgate-street bispensary, London. After spending several years as private tutor to medical students, he, in 1825, obtained his diploma from the Royal College of Surgeons. His great work, entitled "Elements of Materia Medica," was first pub-Eshed in 1839, and was founded upon the lestures he had delivered in the Alders rate-street School of Medicine, while holding the appointment of chemical lecturer. In the meanwhile, he had lectured upon chemistry and botany at the London Hospital, of which institution he became a sistant physician in 1810. Five years afterwards, he was elected follow of the College of Physi ians, before which time he had pro-duced an important work upon "Food and Dict." His later app intments were physician Diet." His later app jutinents were physician to the London Hospital, examiner at the London University, and fellow of the Royal and Linnavan Societies. His valuable life was brought to a sudden termination through a melancholy accident, which was thus described:-"He had been to consult Professor Quekett (of the College of Surgeons) on a scientific question, and whilst descending a starrease leading to the Hunterian Museum, made a false step, fell, and ruptured the rectus femoris muscle of both legs In all probability at the same time some internal injury was sustained by the heart or larger vessels; but as only local inconvenience was experienced, no danger was apprehended; but whilst getting into bed on the 20th of January, he felt a violent throb in the region of the heart, when he became fully aware that a speedy termination of his life was at hand, and this impression was of Portugal in 1383, and subsequent y reduced several cities of Alentejo, for which services he was nominated constable of the kingdom. In 1355 he commanded a wing of the army at the battle or Aljubarrota, and at a later period rendered the most important services to his sovereign. After an energetic career, both military and diplomatic, he retired to a monastery in the year 1121, where he remained sechuled from the world until his death. n. about 1990; n. 1431.

Perrez, Antonio, pai'-raith, a Spanish writer and statesman, was the natural son of Gonzalo Perez, secretary of state to Charles V., and himself became secretary to Philip II. He was employed in state affairs, but afterwards fell into disgrape; on which he retired to England, and afterwards to France. His "Letters" and "Narrative," in whi It he gives an account of his transactions with Philip, and his subsequent trial and tortures, are curious and important, His "Relaciones," or memoirs, were printed at

OF BIOGRAPHY.

Periander

Gactano Greco, one of the ablest musicians in Audient History." D. at Dam, Holland, 1651, Italy; after which the Prince of Stigliano took D. 1715. han under his protection. His countrymen style him the Domenichino of music. His "Salve Regina," "Stabat Mater," and "Gloria in Excelsis," are his most admired compositions.

10 Excess, are his most manured compositions. In hear Kaples, 1704; b. 17.06.

Periander, per-l-čn'-der, the tyrant of Corinth, who was called, by his flatterers, one of the seven sages of Greec, began by overturning the constitution and liberty of his country, and usurping the sovereignty, B.C 623.
The commencement of his reign was mild, but he soon showed himself a thorough despot. He committed fearful cruelties on the Cornthians, put to death his wife Melissa, and banished his son Lycophron for lamenting her fate. According to Aristotle, he was the first who reduced despotic rule to a system. D. 585 B.C.

Percess, per'-1-klees, a celebrated Athenian, who distinguished himself as a general, statesman, and orator. Having acquired great popularity among his countrymen, he prevailed upon them to alter their government; and caused Cimon, and his other rivals, to be banished; thus constituting himself sole master of Athens. He commanded the army in the Peloponnesus, and gained a great victory, near Nemma, over the Sieyonians. He next took Byzantium and Samos, at the siege of which place were invented several warlike machines. Perceles advised the Athenians to continue the war against Sparta, for which he was consured and disgraced: but for which lie was consured and dispersed; but the recovered his popularity and the govern-ment, and died of the plague which desolated Athens, no. 429. Pericles was a great patron of arts, letters, and, indeed, luxury. In his age, all three flourished to their highest extent.

PERIER, Casimir, per'-e-ai, a famous French banker, and subsequently a statesman, at first enbanker and solve querry a checken and the served the army, and served with reputation in the campaigns of Italy (1799 and 1800), but on the death of his futher, a merchant, abandoned the profession of arms for commercial pursuits. In 1802 he established a banking-house in company with his brother, Scipio Perier, in the manage-ment of which he acquired an intimate acquaintance with the most difficult and important questions of public credit and finance. At the revolution of 1830 he took a decided part in favour of the national liberties, was subsequently chosen president of the chambers, and finally formed one of the first cabinet of the new king, without holding the portfolio of any department, In March, 1831, he became president of the council. p. 177; p. 1832.
PERINGSRIOLD, John, posing-ske'-old, a learned Swede, who became secretary of antiquities, councillor to the king of Sweden, and nological Tables from Adam to Jesus Christ," He was also the editor of the works of Messe-

nus. p. in Sudermania, 1634; p. 1720.

Perizonius, James, per i-zo ni-us, a learned Dutch writer, who studied first at Deventer, and afterwards at Leyden, under Gravius, by whose means he obtained the rectorship of the Latin school at Delft, and the professorship of history and eloquence at Francker. In 1693 he removed to Leyden, where he filled the chair of Greek PLEKIN WARDECK. (See WARDECK, Perkin.) Peakins, William, per'-lins, an English diving, who received his education at Christ's College, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. He was a rigid Calvinist, and published several works on that form of faith; some of which, being translated into Dutch, were replied to by Arminius, and osea-ioned those famous disputes for the settling of which the Synod of Dordt was called. B. in Warwickshire, 1558; D. 1602.

PEROUSE, (See LA PEROUSE.)

PERRAULT, Claude, por rolle, a celebrated French architect, who studied medicine, and wrote some works on that subject, but did not practise. His taste for the fine arts, particu-larly architecture, drew him from his first profession. He designed the east front and colonnades of the Louvre, the Observatory at Paris, the grotto at Versai les, and other great works. He also translated Vitruvius into French, which he illustrated with fine designs of his own. Perrault was admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences, though Boileau satirized him term of Sciences, along in Boneau saffized him as a physician turned musen. His other works are "An Abridgment of Vitravius," "Description of Machines of my Invention," "On the Ancient Columns of Architecture and their Ornaments," "Memoirs for a Natural History of Animals." E. at Paris, 1613; p. 1698.

Perrault, Charles, brother of the preceding, had, from his youth, a time taste for literature, particularly pactry. Colbert appointed him comptroller-general of the public buildings; and Perrault made use of the influence he had with that minister in promoting the arts and assisting worthy men. He became a member of the French Academy, and was one of the institutors of that of Belles-lettres and Inscriptions. He also contributed to the Memoirs of the Academy of Paunting, Sculpture, and Archi-tecture. After the death of Colbert he was dis-charged from his post; on which he devoted himself wholly to letters. His poem on the "Age of Louis the Great," in which he exalted the on both the draw, in which he cancients, was highly censured and ridiculed. He then ven-tured to publish its "Parallel of the Ancients and Modernis," which gave still greater offence, and occasioned a violent controversy between him and Boileau. The celebrated fairy tales, known in England as "The Storics of Mother Goose," are said to have been written by him, although they are usually ascribed to his son. Perrault d'Armancourt. D. 1628; D. 1703.

Perron, Jacob Davy du, per'-rawng, a cele-brated cardinal, was born of Calvinist parents, and was educated under his father, sequiring a and was educated under his ather, sequiring a great knowledge of the Latin, Greek, and He-brew languages, as well as of the mathematics, philosophy, and history. Illi proleichney was such that Philip Desportes, albub of Tryon, re-ported him to Henry III. of France as a prodigy of memory. Having renounced the Probecame famous as a preacher, but more as a controversialist. His success in converting Protestants was great; and among others whom he brought over to his church, were Henry and John Spondanus. In 1593 he be-came bishop of Evreux; and, in 1600, had a conference on matters of religion with d'Auand history wift reputation. Among other conference on matters of religion with d'An-works, he wrote "Animadversiones Historica," bigné and Morney, in the presence of the king, and "Dissertations on several Points of in which Perron was equally matched. This conference procured him the dignity of cardinal. great importance among the London n He was employed in several important negotiations, and was made grand almoner of France and archbishop of Sens. Du Perron was a man and archibishop of sens. Du Perron was a man of great policy and ambition, and his learning, was various and profound. His favourite authors were Rabelais and Montaigne. He wrote a treatise on the Eucharist, another against King James I. of England, Letters, &c.; which were all collected into 3 vols., with his which were an collected must a vois, with his life prefixed. B. 1556; p. at Paris, 1618. Perroner, Jean Rodolphe, per-vo-nai, eminent French engineer, who was instructed by Benusire, architect to the city of Paris, under by meansing, are necessary to the city of Paris, under whom he made great progress. About 1745 he became inspector of the school of engineers, of which he was afterwards director. France is indebted to him for several of its fluest bridges and best roads, the canal of Burgundy and other great works. For his public services he was honoured with the order of St. Michael, was admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, of the Royal Society of London, and of the Academy of Stockholm. He wrote a description of the bridges which he had constructed, "Memoirs on the Method of Constructing Grand Arches of Stone from 200 to 500 feet." B. at Surênes, 1708; D. 1791.

827

Perugino

Perrot, Nicholas. (See Ablancourt.)
Perrot, Sir John, per-rot, an eminent English statesman, was one of the knights of the Bath at the coronation of Edward VI., who had a great partiality for him. At the beginning of the reign of Mary he was sent to prison for harbouring Protestants; but, by the good offices of friends, he was discharged. He assisted at the coronation of Elizabeth, who sent him, in 1572 to Ireland, as lord-president of Munster, which was in a state of rebellion, but, by his promptitude, was quickly reduced to obedience. was afterwards appointed admiral of a fleet on the coast of Ireland, which was threatened with invasion by the Spaniards; and continued cruising there till the necessity for such an enterprise was over. In 1583 he was made lord deputy of Ireland, where he carried things with so high a hand as to give great offence, and he was recalled in 1588, and sent to the Tower. In 1592 he was tried by a special commission, found guilty of high treason, and sentenced to death. The queen, however, was persuaded of his imocence, and respited him; but he fell ill, and died in confinement the same year. B. in Pembrokeshire, 1527.

PERRY, John, per'-re, an English engineer, who was invited to Russia by Peter the Great, and was there employed in forming a communication between the Volga and the Don; also in making some other rivers navigable, and improving the Russian navy; for which services he was badly requited. In 1712 he returned to England, and was engaged in stopping the Degenham breach, in Essex, of which he published an account. He was also the author of "The Present State of Russia," p. 1783.

PERRY, James, an entirent political writer, who received his education at the grammar-school and Marischal College, Aberdeen. After being employed in an advocate's office at Aberdeen, he went to Edinburgh, and next to Manchester; finally, he repaired \(\) London in 1771, where he obtained employment upon the newspapers. Subsequently he became part pro-prietor and editor of the "Morning Chronicle."

guilty. b. 1756; d. 1821.
PERRUS, king of Maccdon, per'-sec-oos, succeded his father, Philip V., B.C. 179. He endeavoured to form an alliance of the Greek states against the Romans, who thereupon marched an army into Macedonia. In 168 s.c., the Romans, under Paulus Emilius, met Perseus, who was totally defeated at Pydna. The king fled to Thrace, but afterwards surrendered to the Romans, and was conveyed to Rome. He was then sent to Alba, where he died.

Pensiony, Jean Victor Gilbert Fialen, Due de, pair-secut-ye, a modern French statesman, an enthusias ic supporter of the acts and general policy of Napoleon III. He was minister of the interior in 1860 and 1862, and from 1855 to 1858 was French ambassador at the court of St. James's. He was made a duke in 1863. p. 1812.

us, Aulus Flaccus, , a Latin satirical poet, who studied, with Lucau, under Cornutus the Stoic, for whom he had a great regard. Persius wrote in the reign of Nero, whom he satirized with great severity. His works are enigmatic, and have been compared in this respect, to the Greek Lycophron. They have been translated and annotated by Gifford. Dryden, Sir William Drummond, and others. B. at Volterra, Etruria, 31; p. 62.

PERTHES, Christopher Frederick, pairt'-es, an eminent German bookseller, who, after experiencing many difficulties in early life, established himself in sa at Hamburg in 1700 In 1822 he left his shop at Hamburg and went to Gotha, where he commenced the publication to Gotta, where he commenced the pinnearing of the "Almanach de Golfal," and was employed to a man other celebrated writers. The "General History of the States of Europe," to which many of the first German writers contributed, also issued from his e-tabli-hunnit. After orgamixing a most extensive business concern, he refined from the management about 1838. His correspondence with almost all the celebrities of his day has been published, and is very interesting. B. at Rudolfstadt, 1772; p. 1813.

PERTINAX, Publius Helvius, per'-ti-nex, a Roman emperor, who was the son of a dealer in charcoal. He, however, obtained a good edu-cation, and was some time an instructor of youth in Liguria; after which he entered the army, and by his bravery obtained rapid preferment. The emperor Aurelius made him e usul, and on the death of Commodus, in 193, he was elected to the imperial dignity by the soldiers. He distributed his lands among the people, and sold the property accumulated by his predecessor to pay off the public debt. He also abolished the heavy imposts which had been laid on by Commodus. But although these virtuous acts pleased the senate and the people, the Præto-rians rose against and killed him, after he had reigned only a few months. B. whout 126.

Partaino, Peter, pai-roo, je-no, un eminent Italiam painter, was the disciple of Andrea Verocchio, but is chiefly celebrated for being the master of Raffacile. He was empl. Sixtus IV. to paint several pieces for his chapel Perugino was very avarietous, and amassed considerable wealth, of which being robbed, the which, under his management, assumed very loss occasioned his death in 1521. There are

PETER THE GREAT.

PITT, WILLIAM.

PERRY, JAMES (Morning Chrosicle).

Planché, James Robinson.

Permazi

Peter

at Rome by Popes Julius II, and Leo X.; by the former in ornamenting his palace, and by the latter as one of the architects of the church of St. Peter. He was taken prisoner when Rome was sacked by the Constable de Bourbon, but obtained his liberty on painting a picture of the captor. Two of his works are in the Na-the captor. Two of his works are in the Aditional Gallery. D. at Volterra, 1181; D. 1706.

PESCENNIUS NIGER, Calus, pes-en/s-cos ni/-jer, a Roman emperor, was a native of Aquino. He was appointed governor of Syria, and commander of the legions in Asia, by Commodus; and on the death of Pertinax, in 193, the troops of Pesceunius appointed him emperor. He was defeated at Issus, in 195, and was killed by some soldiers, while on his flight to the Parthian dominions

Pastalozzi, John Henry, pes-ta-lot'-se, a celebrated Swiss school teacher, and the founder, upon the continent, of the mutual-instruction or monitorial system, which was about the same time inaugurated in England by Lancaster. (See Lancaster, Joseph.) After completing his education, he devoted himself to the instruction of poor children, and established schools at several places in Switzerland, the last of which was founded at Yverdun, in the canton of Vaud, and became elebrated throughout Europe; but ultimately, through the dissensions of its teachers, it declined in prosperity. He was the author of a large number of works, more or less closely bearing upon education. B. at Zurich, 1746; D. at Brugg, Switzerland, 1827.

Petau, Denis, pet-o, an eminent French writer, who entered the society of Jesuits at the age of 22, and became a great ornament and defender of that order. His knowledge was general; but he particularly excelled in chro-nology, in which science he stood unrivalled, Philip IV. of Spain and Pope Urban VIII. solicited him to settle in their respective states, with the most flattering promises, which he declined, preferring a tranquil life in a monas-tery. His principal works are "De Doctrina Temporum," in which he applies chronology to history, ancient and modern; "Rationarium an abridgment of the former; Temporum," and the Psalms, translated into Greek verse. He had several controversies with Scaliger, Salmasius, and Casaubon; and published editions of some of the works of the ancient fathers. B. at Orleans, France, 1583; D. at Paris, 1652.

Peter I., of Aragon, not-ten, was proclaimed king after the death of his father, in 1001. He gained the battle of Alearaz, and subsequently subdued Barbastro and other places. D. 1104.

PETER II., of Aragon, was the son and suc-cessor of Alphouso II., in 1106. He drove away the Vaudois, who had taken refuge in his king-dom, entered into an alliance with Alphonso IX. against Sancho VII., king of Navarre, and in 1212 defeated the Almohades at Tolosa. He was himself subsequently defeated and slain by Simon de Montfort, at Muret, 1213.

Paren III., king of Aragon, succeeded to the throne upon the death of his brother, James I., 181272. It held the text to the throne of the two pictures by this master in the National resolved to make himself master of that island, Gallery, entitled, respectively, "The Virgin and and, to effect his purpose, contrived the terrible Infant Christ," and "The Virgin Adoring the massacre known as the "Sicilian Vespers," or Infant Christ," a, ab Perngia, 146; n, 122.

PEREZZE, Balthasar, nai-root-ze, a celebrated the hour of vespers, or Easter-day, 122. For Italian painter and architect, who was employed this crime, Pope Martin IV, excommunicated the hour of vespers, on Easter-day, 1282. For this crime, Pope Martin IV. excommunicated him, and the Sicilians laid Aragon under an interdict, and gave Sicily to Charles of Valois; but Peter defended himself successfully against Charles, as well as his own son James, hing of Majorca, until his death, which occurred 1285.

Peter IV, king of Aragon, was son and suc-cessor of Alphonso IV. He dethroned James II. of Majorea, fought against the Moors of Por-tugal and Castile, between the years 1340-12, and in 1353 defeated the Genoese at sea Alghero. In 13 9 he entered into an alliance Aighero. In 15 5 he entered into an annance with Peter the Cruel, king of Castile, against his brother, Henry of Transtamare. He founded the University of Huesea, but his reign was troubled by several revolts. D. 1337.

Peter Adexiowitz I., ezar of Russia, called the Great, was the son of Alexis Michaelowitz. and was placed on the throne after the death of his elder brother Theodore, or Feodor, to the prejudice of his other brother Ivan, who was as weak in his intellect as in his constitution. The Strelitzes, a militia which greatly resembled the Jamssaries of Turkey, being excited by the Princess Sophia, the sister of Peter, revolted in favour of Ivan; and, to avert a civil war, it was resolved that the two princes should reign in conjunction, with the ambitious Princess Sophia as regent. Russia was at that time in a condition little better than barbarism. In his 17th year Peter married; and when it became apparent that his wife was pregnant, Prince Galitzin rose in insurrection, but was defeated and banished, the Princess Sophia being also sent to a convent, where she remained for the rest of her life. Peter then commenced to reign alone, and his first acts were to reform the army and government, in which, notwithstanding the difficulty of the task, he had great success. In 1696 he took Azof, which he placed in a state of defence against the Tartars. He next turned his attention to the finances, and corrected many gross abuses. The year following he undertook a journey into various parts of Europe, for the purpose of acquiring a knowledge of arts, sciences, and mechanics. After passing through Germany, he visited Amster-dam, where he entered himself in the company of shipwrights in the dockyard, and worked with great diligence, under the name of Peter Zimmerman. In 1698 he went to England, and paid attention to manufactures and to every public institution. Having conceived the idea of forming a junction between the Don and the Volga, he engaged some English engineers to enter his service for the accomplishment of that great undertaking. From England the ezar went to Vienna, intending to go to Italy; but the news of an insurrection in Russia obliged him to hasten home. Several of the insurgents were executed, and the greatest part of the Strelitzes decapitated or sent to Siberia. (See Unlows.) In 1699 Peter instituted the order of St. Andrew, by way of exciting a spirit of emulation among his subjects, and, in 1703, founded the city of St. Petersburg. The next pear he declared war against Charles In 1276. The laid claim to the kingdom of Na-XII. of Sweden, but that with small success, varre, but was unsuccessful. Having married This, however, did not discourace Pefer, who the daughter of Alanfred, king of Sielly, he said, "I knew that the Swedes would best us at first; but they will, in time, teach us to beat them." This was verified in 1709, by the important victory of Pultowa, in which the greatest part of the Swedish troops were made prisoners, and their king obliged to seek an asylum in Turkey. Peter availed himself of his advantage to seize Livonia, Ingria, Finland, and part of Swedish Pomerania. the prisoners was a young girl, whose husband, a sorgeant in the Swedish army, whom she had only married the day before, was killed. young girl subsequently became first Peter's mistress, and afterwards his wife, declared czarina in 1711, under the name of Catharine Alexina. In the mean time, the Turks, at the instigation of Charles XII., broke their truce with the ezer, whom they completely hearmed in, with his army, on the banks of the Pruth, in 1711. In this perilous situation, he was saved by the presence of mind of negotiations with the grand vizier, who consented to the terms, and a peace was settled. In memory of this event, the female order of St. Catharine was instituted, of which the examina became the head. At the close of 1713 Peter had taken all Pomerania, with the exception of Stralsund, from the Swedes. The restoration of tranquillity enabled the ezar to make another tour in Denmark, Germany, Holland, and France. When in the lettler country, he visited the tomb of Cardinal Richelien, on the sight of which he exclaimed, "Greet minister, why were you not born in my time? I would have given you one born in hy dominions for teaching me how to govern the other." Meanwhile, Prince Alexis, his son, having joined a party of malcontents, who were displeased at the changes which had taken place both in ecclesiastical and civil matters, the egar caused him to be tried, and the judges sentenced him to death. This de-eree was not executed; but the prince soon after died, as was said, of an apoplexy. Some degree of suspicion, however, fell upon the father, which was not lessened by the rigorous execution of several of the friends of Alexis. The Tartars having massacred a Russian garrison on the borders of Persia, Peter, in 1722, embarked on the Caspian Sea, and took the city of Derbend, with three provinces, which were afterwards recaptured by Nadir Shah. After this expedition, the ezar devoted himself to the internal regulation of his empire; and of the many important establishments and improvements of which he was the author, the following were the principal: a reform among the clergy, and the abolition of the patriarchal dignity; the organization of a numerous army;

the formation of a formidable navy; fortifientions in all the principal towns, and an excel-lent civil government in the cities; an academy for navaleducation; colleges at Moscow, Petersburg, and Kiev; a college of physicians, and a dispensary at Moscow; public lectures in am-tony, a branch of science in which the exar himself had made great progress und r Ruysch, at Amsterdam; an observatory, which was also a repository of natural curiosities; a botanical garden, stocked with plants from all parts of the world; printing-offices, and a royal library.

But one of the most extraordinary acts of this great man was the founding, upon piles, in morass, of the city of St. Petersburg By his last

"to his people, and was himself a savage; he taught them the art of war, of which he was himself ignorant; from the sight of a small hoat on the river Moskwa he created a powerful fleet, made himself an expert and able shipwright, sailor, pilot, and commander; he changed the manners, customs, and laws of the Russians, and lives in their memory as the 'Father of his country.' After his death, Catharine was proclaimed empress, and rules during two years. B. at Moscow, 1672; b. 1725.

Presen II., comperer of Russia, was the som of Alexis and grandson of Peter the Great. Ho ded, in 1727, the empress Cathari who had:

I him grand-duke of Russia

the year preceding. The most remarkable event of his reign was the disgrace of the prime inister Menschikoff, who was banished to Si-unster stemsenkfolf, who was benished to Siberia, B. 1714, B. 1730.

Peren III., the son of Charles Prederick, edite of Holstein-clottery, and of Anna Petrowna, daughter of Peter the Great, was declared grand-duke of Hossa in 1742, by his annt, the empress Elizabeth, whom he sugceeded in 1762. He was a warm admirer of the character of Frederick the Great, king of Prussia. and would have imitated him, had his abilities been equal to his wishes. Peter was weak, passionate, and irresolute, and, a few months after his accession, was delironed by his wife Catharine, who was proclaimed empress, and who caused him to be strangled by her favourite, Count Orloff: B. 1726; strangled, 1762.

Peter Nollsgue, founder of the Order of Mercy for the Redemption of Captives, was in the service of James, king of Aragon, and by his interest with that prince instituted a religious and military order in 1223, whose province it was to re-cue Christian slaves from the infidels. He was very successful in this good work. B, in Languedoc, 1189; b. 1256.

Peter or Sicily, an historian, who wrote a History of the Manicheaus, which contains many curious and important facts. Flourished in the 9th century.

Perm the Churt, king of Castile, succeeded his father, Alyhouso XI., in 1859, and commenced his reign by several acts of wanton barbarity. He caused Leonova de Guzman, his father's mistress, to be put to death, and having charged the daughter of Philip, duke of Boarbon, repudiated her shortly afterwards, and sent her to prison, in order that he might renew his connexion with Maria de Padilla. his former mistre s, who in turn was aban-dened, upon his seeking a marriage with Donna Juana de Castro, a noble lady, who was also cast off shortly efter this union; whereapon her brother, a powerful Gallielan noble, headed a revolt against Peter. His cruelties provoked his subjects to take up arms against him in 1366, and after three years of ranguinary warfare, Henry of Translamars, who was as cruel and cold-blooded as his brothes, besieged him in the town of Montiel. Peter requested of Duguese in, who had joined Henry's standard, to aid his escape; and upon the Frenchman's enticing the king to his tent, he was set upon and murdered by Henry, 1369.

Perce the Reader, a French gentleman of Amiens, in Picardy, who renounced a military life to embrace that of a pilgrim. At the end of the 11th century, a general alarm was spread will, he constituted the empress Catharine his that the last day was approaching; on which successor. "He gave a polish," says Voltaire, numbers of persons slocked to the Holy Land Peter Petion days near the holy sepulchre. Peter was of the number, and on his return to Europe made so pathetic a representation of the state of the Christians in Palestine, to Pope Urban II., that he gave Peter leave to preach up the necessity of a crusade throughout Christendom. The appearance, zeal, and eloquence of the hermit, produced a prodigious effect, and all ranks and ages, of both sexes, pressed excertly into the service. With a motley crury, estimated at 100,000 men, Peter passed through Hangary. In his absence, his followers artacked Solyman's army at Nicea, and all, except a few thousands, periphed, "and," says Gibbon, "a pyramid of bones informed their companions of the place of their defect." Peter remained in Palestine, and was at the slege of Anthoch, in 1007, but on his attempting to make his reason. 1097; but on his attempting to make his escape, shortly afterwards, was brought back, and compelled to take a new oath of lidelity and obedi-ence to the holy cause. Two years later he was present at the siege of Jerusalem, where he displayed great bravery, and when the place was taken, was made viear-general. Peter, on his return to France, founded the abbey of Noirmoutier, in the diocese of Liège, where he died, 1:15.

PETER, commonly called the Wild Boy, was found in the woods near Hameln, in Hanover, in 1725. He was supposed to be then about 12 years of age, and had subsisted in those woods upon the bark of trees, leaves, berries, &c., for a considerable time. How long he had been in that state could never be ascertained; but, when found, the remains of a shirt-collar were about his neck. In the following year he was brought to England by order of Que.n Was brought to England by other of their Caroline, but he could never be taught to speak. He was placed under the care of a farmer at North Church, in Hertfordshire, where he lived on a stipend of £35 a year allowed by government. Notwithstanding his remaining so long in a savage state, and his being quite an idiot, he was harmless and tractable. p. 1785.
Perfencaoren, Charles Mordaunt, Earl of, po'ter-bur-9, an eminent English general, who entered the navy, and distinguished himself at Tangier, when it was hesteged by the Moora. In the roign of James II. be went to Holland, attached himself to the Prince of Orange, and accompanies him on his expedition to England in 1638. The year following he was created earl of Monmouth, and appointed first commissioner of the Treasury; from which po-t he was removed in 1690. In 1697, on the death of his uncle, the earl of Peterborough, he succeeded to that title. In the roign of Queen, Anne he displayed the greatest bravery and skill as com-mander of the English forces in Spain, where he took Barcelona, and brought several pro-vinces to acknowledge Charles III. as their king. He was afterwards employed on various embassies, and in 1714 appointed governor of Minorea. Some of his letters are in the works of Pope, with whom he was intimate. It was said of him that he had "seen more kings and more postilions than any man in Europe. B. 1659; D. 1735.

Petermann, August Heinrich, pa'-ler-man, a modern German geographer, and superintendent of the celebrated map-establishment of Justus Perthes at Gotha. Destined for the

from all countries, with a view of ending their hausen; but a strong predilection for geogra-days near the holy sepulcine. Peter was of phical science caused him to become, in 1839, a special pupil in the academy which the learned Berghaus had established at Potsdam. There he made the acquaintance, among other distinguished men, of Humboldt, for whom he executed the "Map of Central Asia." When it was resolved to issue an English edition of the celebrated "Physical Atlas" of Berghaus, Petermann was invited to Edinburgh, where he spent two years in preparing and revising the work. In 1917 he repaired to London, where wors. In 1917 he repaired to London, where he became a member of the Royal Geographical Society. He subsequently produced an "Atlas of Physical Geography," with the existence of the fire. Thomas Milner; and an "Account of the Expedition to Central Africa," giving groups of the proof work and with the control of the proof work of the proof work of the proof work of the proof work or the proof of the proof reports of the most recent explorations. 1854 he accepted the invitation of the duke of 1902 he accepted the invitation of the dutte of Saxe-Coburg to occupy the chair of geography in the university of that place, and soon after-wards established the "Geographical Journal," which Sir Roderick Murchison described, in 1857, as "exercising powerful and salutary influence on the progress of geographical science." B. at Bleicherode, Prussia, 1822.

Peters, Hurh, pc'-tere, an English divine, who was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge; whence he was expelled for irregular behaviour. He afterwards went on the stage, where he acquired that theatrical action which where he acquired that the arrival action which subsequently distinguished him in the pulpit. He was ordained by Bishop Mountaine, and was for some time lecturer of St. Sepulchre's, London; but, having an intrigue with another man's wife, he field to Rotterdam, where he joined the Independents. He went thrue to New England; and, at the heginning of the eivil war, returned to London, where he begins to the contract of the contr came a zealous preacher in the cause of the Parliament. For les share in the events of the time, especially the execution of Charles I., he was hanged and quartered in 1660. B. in Cornwall, 1500.

Petersen, Niels Matthias, pet-ter-sen, a mo-dern Danish antiquary, who, after completing his education at the University of Copenhagen, carned a subsistence as teacher; but, having gained the prize offered by the Society for the Promotion of Danish Literature for the best essay on the history of the Scandinavian languages, he resolved to devote himself to history and philology. In 1829 he obtained the appointment of assistant librarian to the Univer-

Ancient Northern Geography, and "Voyages and Travels of the Lectuniers at Home and Abroad." p. in Funen, 1701; p. 1867.

Aurona. B. in Futuch, 1701; D. 1897.

PETTON, Alexander Subes, pe-li-on, a negro, who became pre-distinct of the requisition of Harvit, at first served in the Prench army during the proofs at St. Domingo, and Tose to the grade of adjustant-ceneral. He held the fort of Jacob a grainst Taissaint Ponverture, and, after the defeat of his party, required to France. He returned with the expedition under General Leclere; but afterwards quitted the French ranks to join General Destalines, and became commandant of Part-an-Prince, under king Christophe, in 1806. In the following year he modern therman geographics, and salmenters done to the celebrated maps stablishment of revolted against Christophic, and proclaimed Justus Pevales at Gotta. Destined for the himself President of Hayth retaining the post church, he was educated at the college of Nord-until his death, p. 1707, p. 1818.

PETON, Jerome, was mayor of Paris at the outbreak of the Fyench revolution, and was for a time the idol of the people of Paris; but was proscribed with the Girondias, in 1793. He scened from Paris, and fled to the Landes of Bordeaux, where his body was afterwards found, half-decoured by wolves.

PLTIS DE LA CROIX, François, pet-e'-krwaw, an eminent French orientalist, who was the son of a professor of the oriental languages. Having been so fortunate as to altract the favourable notice of Colbert, he was sent, in his 16th year, to reside and study in the hast. He lived at Aleppo, Constantinople, and Ispahan, and acquired, during his stay, the Arabic, Persian, and Turkish languages. Returning to Paris in 1680, he was attached to the embassy about to be sent to the sultan of Marocco, before whom he delivered an oration in Arabic, which excited the admiration of the court, in consequence of its fluency and purity. During two years he acted as interpreter to the French expedition against Algiers, and indeed officiated as chief diplomatist in all the transactions which took place about that time between his native country and the eastern courts. In 1692 he received the appointment of Arabic professor at the Royal College of France, and, three years later, was nominated royal interpreter. He wrote extensively; but his works remain, for the most part, in manuscript. The most important of these were a "History of the Conquest of Syria," translated from the Arabic; "History of the Ottoman Empire;" a dictionary of the Armonian language; "The Antiquities and Monuments of Egypt;" and a small work entitled "Ancient and Modern Jerusalem." B. at Paris, 1653; p. at the same city, 1713.—His son Alexander was also an eminent orientalist.

Petri, Jean-Louis, pat-d', an emia at Frener surgeon, who studied under Lettre, Cast, Land Marcschal, and in 1724 was invited to attend the king of Poland, whom he wered, as he he did the Prince of Spain in 1733. He was admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences, rector of that of Surgery, and was regraded as the first surgeon in Europe during his time. He invented several surged instruments, and wrote "A System of Surgery," "Freatise on Discusses of the Bones," and discretations in the "Memo'rs of the Academy of Sciences," D. at Paris, 1674, p. 1769.

Pestra Pierre, a French mathematician, who became geographer to the king, and introduct of the fortileations of France, to which office he was appointed by Cardinal Richelica. He was the infinite friend of Desentes, and was author of treatises on the Proportional Coep 188, on the Construction and Us of the Cabines of Artillery, on Sight, on Eelij 8, on Preventing the Immatations of the Sen 4 and on Comets. B. at Montheon, 1508; b. 1677.

Perrico, Join, per colo, an univalled paint of in enamel, who was bugelt up to the trade of a jeweller; but having made several successful attempts at producing cunnels for that branch of industry, he resolved to entirely devote himself to the pursuit. After studying in Italy, he visit d kingland, where he was greatly principally by Charles I., after whose death he went to France, and was employed by Lepis XIV. He published the face and hands of his portraits, and his brother-law, foorlier, added the drapery. The mest crichard dworks of this distinguished artist were portraits of Charles I, and his family.

Charles II., Louis XIV., Anne of Austria, and Maria Theresa. Fifty-six of his portraits are in the museum of the Louvre, but his finest production is a copy of Vandyck's portrait of the Countess of Southampton, in the collection of the duke of Devonshire. He was a zealous Protestant, and resisted the greatest clotted made by the cloquent bissuet to induce him to embrace Romanism. 2. at Geneva, 1007; p. 1691.

Peröff, Alexander, pell-affe, a celebrated Hungarian poet, was at first a strolling player, but had long been in the habit of composing songs for his own anuscement. In 1843 he became acquainted with the celitor of the "Pesh Atheneum," and was by him engaged to compose short lyries for his paper. These poems soon attracted notice, and speedlify became the favourities of the entire nation. Upon the outburst of the Hungarian recolution, he recited one of his songs, "Tyn Magyars, up!" to the students of the University of Pesth, who were thereby excited to enthusiasm. Two other of his songs, "Now on Never," and "Pattle Song," stirred to fierce action the whole Hungarian people, during the same momentous period. Soon afterwards he became aide-de-camp to General Ben, with who it a served in the campaign ag the Russians and after a great battle there was never soon again. The Hungarian refugees in London declared that he was still living, but he was declared that he was still living, but he was and after a great outlet there was never seen again. The Hunarian refugees in London declared that he was still living, but he was never afterwards heard of A collection of his flor songs, under the title of "Sounds from the Poster," was published in Leipzic in 1851. 1. in Hatt," was published in Leipzic in 1851.

Humary, 1821; h. as supposed, in 1839.
Petranaeu, Francis, F. & a clobrated Ralim poet. On account of the dissensions which raged in his native country, his father removed with him to Avienon, and afterwards to Carpentras, where Petrarch began has education, which was completed at Montpellier and Bologna. He was intended for the law; but Virgil had more charms for him than Justinian. On the death of his porents he returned to Avignon, where, in 1237, he saw a young lady in church, and became passionately in love with her. The name of the haly was Laura de Noves; she was 10 years of age at the time, and the wife of High de Sade, a gentleman at Avignon, afte the, poor's hand-ane person, impassionated.

d pleading, and flattering verses, he could no impression upon her heart. After stru gling in vain to overcome his passion, he retired to Van la e, a romantie spot, where he poured out his maorous complaints in several pieces. He alterwards travelled in different countries; but with his return to Vaucluse his passion for Laura returned. Again he celebrated her charms, and the delights of his retreat. His a nee became famous; and he received invitations from the sen de of Rome, from the thing of Apples, and the University of Pari. He accepted the former, and on Easter-day, 1311, was crowned with laurel in the Capitol, with great pomp; he was also declared a flowant citizen. In 1343 he received the news of the death of Laura. He was then at Parm; but immediately set out for Vanchuse, where he passed some time in trief. In his copy of Virgil he thus records the fact; "It was in the early days of my youth that Laura, distinguished by her virtues, and celebrated in my verses, first blessed my eyes in the church of Santa Clara, at Avignon, and it was in the same month of April, at the same time of the moming in the year 1348, that this bright luminarwas withdrawn from our sight, whilst I was at Variance, alsa! ignorant of my calamity." In 1353 he returned to finity, and, at Padaa, obtained a canonry; but many years of his His were spent, by invitation, at the courts of the pope and other great Italian potentiates. The sounces of Petrurch are tender and melodious to the greatest degree; but, besides being a great poet, he was a profound scholar and parton of learning. His Latin poems are inferior to the Italina; and he words extensively und the colorial and philosophical subjects. n. at Access 1391, p. 1875.

poet, he was a protound scholar and patron of learning. His Latin poems are inferior to the Italian; and he wrote extensively upon theological and philosophical subjects. B. at Arezzo, 1304; p. 1374.
PETER, Sir William, pet-ter, an eminent English statesman, whose abilities recommended him to Thomas Cromwell; by whom he was employed in state affairs, and appointed a member of the commission for visting the monasteries. He obtained a large share of the church lands, which he contrived to retain even during the reign of Mary, to whom he was councillor, as he had been to her father end brother. This complying courtier found means to ingratiate himself with Queen Elizabeth, who appointed him one of her secretaries of state, and member of the prive yound! His manors in Essex were very considerable, and are possessed by

1571.

Persontus Annrean Titun, postovisies, a Latin poet, who was said to be one of the favourities of Nero, and became proconsul of Bithynia; but being accused by Tigellinus, another of Nero's friends, of being cangaged in a conspinacy against that tyrnit, he sought a conspinacy against that tyrnit, he sought a conspinacy against that the triends. One of his pieces, a supposed satin carainst Nero, is extremely well written, though very Heentious. His other works are a poem on the "Civil War between Casar and Pompey," on the "Education of the Roman Youth," on the "Goruption of Eloquence," and on the "Causes of the Decline of the Arts," "The Shipwreck of Lyes, 25 and 18 Durmann, 17-18. The sity of his writings is as good as their subject-matter is bad. Supposed to have been horn near Marcailles, about the commencement of the let century A.D.; D. 68.
Persontus Maxinty emperor of Rome, was sorn of an illustrious family, and, after being a Perioditis Maxinus, emperor of Rome, was born of an illustrions family, and, after being a senator and consul, he seized the throne, by assassinating Valentinian III., in 455. He then married the widow of his predecessor, Endoxia, who was, however, ignorant of his crime. On becoming acquainted with it, she applied to Genseric, king of the Vandals, who enteed Griseric, king of the Vandals, who enteed tally with fire and sword, took Rome, and skew the usurper. The Romans were so emerged with Maximus, that they dragged his body about the streets, and throw it into the Tiher. D. 395.

Perrx, Sir William, pet-te, a celebrated English writer on political economy, was the son of a clothier, and received the first part of his education at the school of his native town, after which he went to the university of commandy. On his return to England he begran the study of physic and anatomy, to perfect himself in which he went to Leyden, Am-fect himself in which he went to Leyden, Am-feet himself in which he went to Leyden, Amsterdam, and Paris. In 1647 he returned to England, and soon afterwards went to Oxford, where he became assistant to the professor s those survey he had a survey he had a survey he had a survey he had a survey but a survey but of anatomy, and fellow of Brasenose College. He was also chosen one of the council of the Royal Society, upon its establishment. In 1625 he was appointed physician to the army in Ireland, where he became secretary to Henry Cromwell, Jord-lieutenant of that kingdom. He was one of the commissioners for dividing the forfeited lands; but, in 1625, was dismissed from his employments on a charge brought against him in the House of Commons. At the Restoration he was knighted, and made surveyor-general of Ireland. He wrote a great number of books on subjects of practical or political Milking, the most important of which were "Political Arithmetic." The Political Anatomy of Ireland?

of retaind, and a treatise on atone; a to Romsey, Hampshire, [1632] p. 1637.

PETET, William. (See Emiliaries, Earl of.)

PETET, William. (See Emiliaries, Earl of.)

PETET, William. (Note Emiliaries, International mathematician, who became medical processor at Wittenberg, where he married life-insection's daughter. He was imprisoned for early early of the press on account of his opinions; and, while in conflicement, wrote his thoughts on the married so the process of the process of resources, at Bautzen, 1825; p. 1802 of a revisionment, s. at Bautzen, 1825; p. 1802 of a cook endeavouring to prove that Adam was not the first man, for which he was set to prison at Brussels. By the interest of the Prince of "Gadd, to whom he was libration, he obtained is likerty and went to Rome, where he abjured 18 errors. He also wrote a book on the kestioners.

mit other works. In 1870: The pair-son-nel, a carned French writer, who accompanied the reach and assaulor to Constantinople in 1735, secretary, and afterwards travelled through Asia Minor, collecting medals and identifying he geographical positions of ameient places. He wrote several dissertations inserted in the Memotirs of the Academy of Inseriptions, of vhich he was a member. He was also the author of an culegy on Marshal Villars, a Discourse on Corals, and other pieces. In at Marculles, 1700; D. 1767.

cauce, 1700; J. 1700; g. 1700;

Pazzx.s, Esprit, pez-c-ne, a learned French ceutt, who became professor of philosophy and vylvography at Marcellis. Among other works to translated Macellins Angelra and Fluxions of termelated Macellins Angelra and Fluxions nto French, "Dateer on the Microscope," Nathematician's Guide, whilth, "Optics," and other works from the hagital. His own works consisted of several reatises upon mathematical philosophy. D. at vigron, 1003; p. at the same cty, 1776.

Presuryen, Madmue Ida, f./fer, a celebrated erman traveller, who states that from her ariset years she was possessed with a longing or travel; but, having married, family cares and utle prevented her from gratifying her pasion until sloedend attained the age of 47 years, t that time her husband was dead, and her ro sons were established in life, one as an tist, and the others as government official.

3 H

Accordingly, in 1842 the set forth towards Palestine, that she might "have the incliable delight tine, that sha mught "maye the remaine tengine of treading those spots which our Saviour hallowed by his presence." In the following year a narrative of her journey was published, under the title of "Journey of a Vienna Woman in the Holy Land." She next went to Sweden, Nor. way, and Lecland, in 1845, and again published a narrative of her wanderings. In the summer of the following year, she left Hamburg for her of the following sear and the world. Her route, courageously partied through every form of danger incidental to such an undertaking, was from Vienna to Brazil, Chill, Tahiti, China, Hindostan, Persia, and Asia Minor. She had been absent from Vienna two years and three months, during which time she had travelled about 40,000 miles by water, and 2760 by land. In 1850 she published her account of this great journey, in a work entitled "A Woman's Journey round the World," which was speedily translated into French and English. In 1851 she went to London, when, after witnessing the opening of the Great Exhibition of Industry, she left the Thames, on board a sailing vessel, for the Cape of Good Hope. From the Cape she proceeded to Singapore, Dorneo, the island of Sumatra, Java, the island of Celebes, Batavia, which last place she left for California. The "execrable city" of St. Francisco was visited: "execuble city" of Fk. Francisco was vis.tde. after which she proceeded to Panama and Lima, crossed the Andes, visited the sources of the river Amazon, and returned to Panama. New Orleans, the Mississipid, Lakes Superior, Huron, Eric, and Michigan, and the Falls of Nigarra, were the seems of I er subsequent wanderings; Canada and New York succeeded; till at length, she crossed the Atlantic, and arrived in London at the commencement of 1855. "A Lady's Second Voyage round the World" contained the records of this journey, and, like its predecessors, found great favour with the reading public of France and England. Towards the close of the year 1856, having resolved to visit the i-land of Madagascar, she set forth upon one of the most perilous of her journeys. In a letter to a friend, she thus wrote:—"I often smile as I think what strange notions people, who only know me through my works, must form of me. Of course they picture me to themselves as more a man than a woman. How wrong they are! You, who are acquainted with me, know that instead of being six feet high, an Amazon, with pistols in my girdle, I am as simple, peaceable, and unassuming as the best of my sex who have never set foot beyond their native village." B. at Vienna, 1795; D. 1858.

Paranov. fe'-don, a disciple of Socrates, who purchased him of some pirates. After the death of his ma-ter, Pho-don returned to Flis, his native country, where he founded a sect of philosophers called Elean. Plato affixed his name to a dialogue on the death of Socrates. Flou-

PERFORM IN the Occurry Latin port, was a native of Thrace, and appears to have been the freedman of Augustus. Under Tiberius he was persecuted by Fejanus, to which circumstance he has alluded in his Fables, which possess considerable merit, and are written with preat purity of style, though they are exclently por-rowed from the pupil r fibles of the Greeks. Flourished there is the return A.D.

GARIS, fal'-a-ris, became the tyrant or

Phidias

raler of Agrigentum, in Sicily, B.c. 570. From his youth he showed a cruel and ambi-tious temper, and delighted in the invention of tions temper, and congrued in one invention of new instruments of torture. At his command, Perillus, an artist, made a brazen bull, which was hollow, and so contrived that when a fire was kindled under the body, the crise of the unhappy victim within resembled the roarings of the animal it represented. Phalaris, after of the animal is represented. Financis, ander commending the work, ordered Perillus to be the first to make trial of it. The tyrant was himself put to death by his subjects in the same way, p.c. 563. The letters of Phalaris same way, n c. 56k. The letters of Phularis have caused several literary disputes, particularly that between Boyle and Bentley. The best edition of the letters (probably the work of a Souhist in the time of the Cre-ars) is that of Schäfer, Leipsie. n. in Cret , in the 6th century B.c.

PHARAMOND, far'-a-mawng, according to many historians, was the name of the first king of France, who reigned at Trèves about A.D. 418. To him is attributed the celebrated Salique law, by which females were excluded from the succession to the throne. p. 428.

PHARNACES I., far'-na-sees, king of Pontus, was the son of Mithridates IV., and grandfather of Mithridates the Great. He made war against the king of Pergamus, and reigned between 190 and 156 n.c.

Pharmacesil, kingofthe Chamerian Bosphorus, was son of Mithridates VI., king of Pontus, and revolted with the army against his father, who slew himself in despair, n.c. 63. Pharmaces cultivated the friendship of the Romans, and, in the war between Casar and Pompey, he remained neutral; but Cayar de dared war a rainst and defeated him, B.C. 47, after a strengle of three days only. It was on that occasion that three days only. It was on that occasion that Cresur wrote to the Roman senate, in allusion to his easy triumph: "I came, saw, and con-quered." (Vew, vidi, vici.) Pharmae.s died shortly afterwards.

PHERECRATES, fe-rek'-ra-tree, a Greek comic poet, was contemporary with Plato and Aristophanes. None of his comedies have come down to us in a complete form, and of the seventeen plays which he wrote, only some fragments have been preserved by Hertelius and Grotius. There is in Plutarch a piece of his on the music of the Greeks. Flourished in the 5th century n.e.

PHI IN CYDYS, for easi'-dees, a philosopher of the isle of Syros, was the disciple of Pitacus and the first who wrote upon natural science and the essence of the roots. He was the master of Pythagoras, who regarded him as a father. There are different accounts of his death : some a-sert that he did in the island of Delos, and others that he threw himself from the top of Mount Corveius, near Delphi. It is most probable that he died of extreme age. Diogenes Lacrtius ascribes to him the invention of prosody. Flourished about 514 B.c.-He is not to be confounded with a historian of this name who lived at Atheus, between 480 and 456 B.c. :

Vossius, however, says they are the same.
Phidias, fid-i-as, a sculptor of Athens, and one of the most celebrated artists of antiquity. He constructed a beautiful statue of Minerva: but being accused of embezzling some of the gold entrusted to him for that work, he was, according to one account, banished. On this he went to Elis, where, by way of revenge, he made a colossal statue of Jupiter Olympius,

D. ADOUT B.C. 4932.
PRILEMON, fi-le'-mon, a Greek comic poet, who was contemporary with, and the rival of, Menander, and is asserted to have been the author of 97 comedies. Plantus imitated some of his works. His death is said to have been occasioned, at the age of 97, by laughing at seeing an ass eat figs. B c. 274.

PHILETAS, fi-le'-tas, a Grock grammarian and poet of Cos, and preceptor to Ptolemy Philadelphus. He wrote elegies and epigrams, which are lost. D. about B.C. 200.

PRILIP, fil'-ip, was the name borne by several kings of Macedon, the most celebrated of whom were:-

PRILIPIL, the son of Amyntas, who succeeded his brother Perdices 350 p.c., in his youth displayed great military talents, which were improved by studying under Epaminondas at Thebes. At the beginning of his reign he had to oppose the Illyrians, Paonians, and Thra-cians. The two former he disarmed by presents and promises, and the latter were not able to act against him. He then made war against Athens; and, having gained a great victory over the troops of that republic, he restored all the prisoners without a ransom, which generosity produced a peace. Philip then turned his arms against the Illyrians, whom he defeated. After this he took Crenides, a city belonging to the Thracians; and, having made himself master of the gold mines near that place, he employed a number of men in working them, and was the first who had gold coin stammed with his name. His ambition now became boundless: he formed the design of subduing all Greece, and began by besieging Olynthus, a city belonging to Athens, and, having corrupted the principal inhabitants, obtained possession of the place. The Athenians were roused against Philip by the eloquence of Demosthenes; but all the efforts of the orator proved ineffectual when opposed to the arms and gold of the king of Macedon. After vanquishing Greece, Philip resolved to attempt the conquest of Persia, and was for that purpose elected commander-in-chief of the expedition in a general assembly of the Greeian states; but, while preparing for the enterprise, he was assassinated by Pausonias, one of his guards, leaving his vast designs to be accomplished by his son Alexander. Assassinated 335 n.c.

Philip V., king of Macedon, obtained the crown at the age of 17, upon the death of his coust Antigonus, 220 n.c. The beginning of his reign was brilliant, owing to the conquests of his general Aratus, whom to the conquests of his general Aratus, whom Philip, out of jealousy, caused to be poisoned. After the battle of Canne, 216 n.c., he joined Haunibal against the Romans, but the consul Lawinus against the kolmans for the constant Lawrinus marched into Macedon, and compelled Philip to sue for peace. The Roman senate being apprised of a secret treaty between Philip and Hamibal, sent Flaminius against the fermer, who was defeated, and obliged to concede diswho was defeated, and object to concent dis-honourable terms. At the instigation of his son Perseus, he put to death his cldest son Demetrius, who was accused of designs upon

PHILLIP I., king of Spain, surnamed the Hand-son, was the son of Maximilian I., emperor of Germany; and, by his marriago with the heiross of Ferdinand V., king of Aragon, and Isabella, 835 which infinitely surpassed his Minerva, and queen of Castile, he obtained the crown of Castwas deemed one of the wonders of the world. the . D. 1493; D. at Burgos, 1806.

PHILLY II. Was the only legitimate son of PHILLY II. was the only legitimate son of Naplewho was contemporary with, and the rival of, and Sielly, by the abdication of his father, and in the same year marvied Mary, queen of Eng-land. In 1556 his father resigned to him the crown of Spain, having in the previous year given him the government of the Netherlands. He declared war against France, and was present at the battle of St. Quentin, where, it is said, he made two vows, the one never again to hazard his person in an engagement, and the other to build a palace to the honour of St. of Escurial, near Madrid, and gave to the building the form of a grideron, in commemoration of the instrument of the saint's martyrdom, In 1559 he made peace with France, and, on his return from the Netherlands to Spain, caused an auto da fé to be celebrated, by which several unfortunate victims of the Inquisition were burnt alive. Resolved to extirpate heresy in his dominions, he employed fire and sword with unsparing bitterne, s in his Italian possessions; but the Netherlands resisted the attempt to establish the Inquisition, and, led by William the Silent, seven proviners succeeded, after a long and terrible struggle, in throwing off the Spanish yoke. (See Oranger, Prince of.) In 1589 Philip fitted out his famous expedition called the Invincible Armada, for the invasion of England. This fleet, consisting of 130 ships in all, manned by troops, sailors, and galley-slaves, to the number of nearly 30,000 men, together with 2000 Spanish nobles and their retainers, was almost totally destroyed by storms or by the English ships. When Philip > tacked England he gave his assistance to the Roman Catholic league in France, against Henry IV., hoping thereby to creatually subject pate that country. Philip is accused of sacri-fleing his son Don Carlos to what he called his "regard for the welfare of the state." precise reasons for his conduct towards him are not established; but it is certain that the unfortunate young man perished miserably in a dungeon in his 23rd year. The greatest praise that can be accorded to this cold-hearted bigot is, that he gave a certain amount of our > ment to arts and sciences. H. 1527; D. 1598.

> PHILIP III., the son of Philip II. and of > Anne of Austria, succeeded his father at the age of 20. His reign was unfortunate and impredent; the king himself being too indolent to rule his dominions, resigned the entire guidance of affairs to his favourite, the duke of Lerma. Spinola took Ostend, after a siege of three spinon took vistent, after a siege of three years, but with the loss of 80,000 Spaniards. The United Provinces, taking advantage of the exhausted condition of Spain, established their independence under the House of Nassau, and independence under the rious of Nissan, and extorted from Philp in acknowledgment of their freedom. In 1609 he issued a decree that all the Moors should quit his kingdom in three days, by which Spain lost above a million of its most useful, altholitudis. The lavish expen-diture and confused management of the finances during this reign, were among the chief causes of the decline of the Spanish power. B. 1578; D. 1621.

PHILLE IV. succeeded his father Philip III ..

at the age of 16. The same year war was renewed with Holland, and the Spaniards, under Spinola, gained some advantages; but at sea they were totally unsuccessful. In 1635, Philip, at the instigation of his favourite and minister, the Duke Olivarez, declared war against France, which proved very disastrous. He lost Artois; the Caulonians revolted, and put themselves under the protection of France; and Portugal, taking advantage of the distracted state of the throne the house of Braganza. Olivarez, the author of these disasters by his negligence and mismanagement, was disgraced; and, in 1659, a disadvantageous peace was concluded with France. p. 1605; p. 1665. Lord Macau-lay, in his fifth volume of the History of England, gives us a painfully real portrait of this list of a race of bigots :- "Sometimes he starved himself, sometimes he whipped himself. At length a complication of maladies completed the rain of all his faculties. His stemach failed. Nor was this strange; for in him the malformation of the jaw, characteristic of his funily, was so serious that he could not masticate his food. While suffering from indigestion, he was attacked by ague. Every third day his convulsive tremblings, his dejection, his fits of wandering, seemed to indicate the approach of dissolution. His misery was increased by the long he had to live, and wondering what would become of his kingdoms when he should be

PRIMIT V., duke of Anjou, the second sen of Louis, dauphin of France, and of Maric Anne of Ravaria, assumed the crown of Spam in 1700, by virtue of the will of Charles II. His claim, however, was contested by the house of Austria, in favour of the archduke Charles. This produced the grand alliance, in which Austria was supported, against France and Spain, by England, Holland, Savoy, Portugal, and Prussia. The beginning of this war, memorable in history as the War of the Spanish Succession, was very uisastrous to Philip, who lost Aragon, Gibrultar, and the islands of Minorea and Majorea, al-Sardinia and the Ringdom of Naples. cutrendty he was about to retire to Spanish America, when the duke de Vendônic arrived with succours, and by gaining the battle of Villariciosa, gave a more favourable turn to clinirs. The victories of that great general, and those of Marshal Villars, in Flanders, conirmed Philip on the throne, and restored peace to Europe by the treaty of Utrecht, in 1713. The war was renewed in 1717, and the Spmish Sect was defeated in the Mediterranean by Sir George Byng. Pence was restored in 1720, after which, Philip became a victim to confirmed mel'incholy, and in 1724 abdicated the throne to his son Louis, and retired to a monastery. Louis died a few months after, of the small-pox, and Philip was compelled to resume the government. His subsequent conduct was characterted by greater spirit and judgment. In 1733 he entered into an alliance with France against the emperor, and his son Don Carlos conquered Sicily and Naples, of which he became king. In 1734 the royal palace was burnt, and a number of the paintings destroyed. In 1736 ; care was concluded; but a new war broke out in 1739. B. 1683; D. 1746.

PHILIP I., king of France, succeeded his father, Henry I., in 1000, under the regency of Isaldwin V., count of Flanders. Philip at the age of 13 lost his faithful quardiam. The young king showed at first a waithes spirit, tut after wards gave linuself up to licentious pleasures. The most important incident of his reign was his divorce of his wife Bertha, and marriage with Bertrade, the wife of the count of Anjou, for which he was excommunicated by the Council of Auton, in 1091; but ten years afterwards he was absolved by the pope, who also approved his marriage with Bertrade. 1, 1033; n. 1108,

PHILIP II., surnamed Augusius, succeeded his father, Louis VII., in 1180, at the age of 15, Henry II, of England, taking advantage of his youth, invaded France; but Philip put himself at the head of his forces, and compelled Henry to renew the ancient treaties between the two kingdoms. After this, he turned his attention to the regulation of abuses in the government, and to the improvement of the city of Paris. He expelled the Jews from his dominions, under circumstances of great injustice and cruelty, In 1190 Philip accompanied Richard I. of England to the Holy Land, where they took Acre: but dissensions arising between the two monarchs, Philip returned to France. Though he had sworn on the Go-pels not to undertake anything against the interests of Richard in his absence, he invaded Normandy, and took some places; but being repulsed at Rouen, made a truce for five years, and in the interval ma ried Ingeburga, Princess of Denmark, whom h afterwards divorced, and esponsed the daughter of the Duke of Méranie, for which he was extill he took back his former wife. Philip gave his assistance to Prince Arthur against his uncle John, king of England; but John having declared himself a vas-al of the Holy See, the pope gave countenance to his acts. This giving offence to the English noblity, they made an offered to the English modify, they made an offer of the throne to Philip, who declined it, but sent to England his son Louis, who was crowned at London in 1216. On the death of John, however, the Eurlish barons acknow-ledged his son, Henry 111., and Louis returned to France. B. 1165; D. at Mantes, 1223.

Lie III., surnamed the Hardy, was proclaimed king of France in Africa, on the death of St. Louis, his father, in 1270. After concludling a peace with the king of Tunis, whose city the French were besieving, he returned to France, and was crowned at litheims. Peter of Argoot, harding coexistened the horrible massurer of the French in Norly, called the Sieillan Vespers, Philip marched against him in 1283, and took several towns, but died of a fever on his return, at Perpiguan, in 1285. n. 1295.

PHILIP IV, called the Fair, succeeded his father, the preceding monarch, in 1285. III father, the preceding monarch, in 1285. III became king of Navarre, in consequence of his marriage with Joan, daughter and heiress of Heavy I. In 1295. Phillip engaged in a war-uca'net Edward I., king of England, who formed several powerful alliances with continuity ninces against the French monarch. In 1390, Phillip, while attempting to suppress a record of the Flemings, lost the battle of Courtrai where persisted the count of Aroles, with 200 men. But, in 1304, he gained that of Mons-en-Puelle; in commemoration of which a fine cquestrian statue of this monarch was set up in the church of Notre Dame, at Paris. This victory was followed by a peace; but Philip was shortly afterwards embroiled in a contest Philip Philistus with Pope Boniface VIII., who pretended to the the younger, and seized upon the throne. He right of disposing of benefices, which was resisted by the king. On this the pope issued his bull of excommunication, which Philip caused to be burnt. The violent acts of Boniface were condemned by the Popes Benedict and Clement condemned by the ropes hencure and chemens V, the latter of whom assisted Philip in perse-cuting and abolishing the order of Knights Templars in 1310. B. 1268; p. 1314. PHILLY V, surnamed the Long, was the younger son of the preceding, and succeeded his brother Louis Hutin, by virtue of the salique law, which excluded females from the French throne, in 1316. He made war against Flanders, formed an alliance with Scotland, and expelled the Jews from his kingdom. The leprosy, a disease brought by the crusaders from Palestine, prevailed in a great degree in his reign. B. 1294; D. 1322.

PHILIP VI., or PHILIP OF VALOIS, the first

king of France of the collateral branch of Yalois, was the son of Charles, Count of Valois, brother of Philip the Fair. He ascended the throne in 1328, on the death of his cousin, Charles the Fair. In 1329, Edward III., king of England, did homage for the duchy of Guienne; but in 1337 he assumed the title of King of Philip the Fair by his mother. This produced a disastrous war, which lasted, with a few intera cassrous war, which lasted, with a few inter-vals, during many years. In 1840, Edward III, gained the battle of Cressy, in which the French lost near 30,000 men; among whom were John, king of Bohemia, and the flower of the nobility. This was followed by the loss of Calais and other important places in the following year. Edward sent a challenge to Philip to decide their myterious, he single combat which the their pretensions by single combat, which the latter refused. The disasters of his reign were completed in 1348, by the outbreak of a ter-rible pestilence, which carried off a third portion of his subjects. B. 1293; D. near Chartres, 1350.

Printing, physician to Alexander the Great, who cured his master of an attack of fever contracted while bathing in the river Cydnus. Parmento wrote a letter to Alexander, informing him that his physician had been bribed by Darius to poison him; but the king of Macedonia, having confidence in his physician, took the draught which had been prescribed for him, at the same time handing to Philip the letter he had received. The speedy recovery of Alex-ander proved the fidelity of his physician. Flourished in the 4th century B.c.

PHILLE, a native of Phrygia, and governor of Jerusalem, where he greatly persecuted the Jews. Antiochus Epiphanes, who had appointed him to that post, left him regent of his kingdom during the minority of his son ; but Philip was opposed by Lysias, and slain in battle.

PHILIP, duke of Suabia, son of Frederic Barbarossa, was elected emperer on the death of his brother, Henry VI., in 1197. But another party of the electors chose Otho, duke of Saxony, which occasioned a civil war. The pope ex-communicated Philip, but afterwards absolved him, and endeavoured in vain to reconcile the contending princes. B. 1178; assassinated at Bumberg, 1208.
PHILIP, Marcus Julius, called the Arab, from being a native of Bostra, in Arabia, was born of an obscure family, and became a common soldier in the Roman army; but by his merit he rose to the command of the Imperial guard. In 244 he assassinated the emperor Gordianus he wrote the History of Sicily, and that of gained great popularity at Iome by his genc-rosity, and by making a canal for supplying the city with water. He celebrated the secula. games with much pomp, and permitted great toleration to the Christians; indeed, by some writers, he is stated to have been himself a Christian. In 249 he was defeated by Decluy, near Verona, and was assassinated by his soldiery immediately afterwards.

PHILIP OF DREUX, the son of Robert, Coun! de Dreux, embraced the ecclesiastical state, an ! became bishop of Beauvais; but the character of his mind more inclined him to warlike affair. than religious exercises. He joined the errsaders, and distinguished himself before Acre, in 1191. Philip II. having declared war against the English, the bishop took up arms in his favour; but was taken prisarer, and kept in close confinement. He made an appeal to the pope, who demanded him, as his son, from Richard I. That monarch, however, sent to the pope the bloody armour in which the bishop was taken, accompanied with these words, "See, holy father, if this be thy son's coat." The pope would not recognise the habiliments as canonical, and the bishop remained a prisoner till 1202. He afterwards fought against the Albigenses; and D. at Beauvais, 1217.

PHILIP THE GOOD, duke of Eurgundy. Out of revenge for the death of his father, who was slain in 1419, he formed an alliance with Henry smin in 1419, he formed an alliance with Herry V. of England, against Charles II. of France and his successor. He defeate I the dauphin at the battle of Mons, in 1421, about which time he made war, with success, against the Countess of Hainault, and compelled her to acknowledge of rhamant, and competed her to networkedge him as her heir. It was during this war that Joan of Arc. in 1435 he was reconciled to Charles VII. The people of Dinan, in the province of Liège, having committed some outrages, Philip sent against them his son, the count of Charolois, who burnt the city to ashes, and put the inhabitants to the sword. This inhuman action being approved of by the father, proves that he had no right to be called the Good, B. 1396; D. 1467.

PHILLIPPON, flb:p-awng, Baron, a French licutenant-general, distinguished for his defence of Badajoz, in 1811. He was taken prisoner, and in 1812 made his cscape from Oswestry.

в. 1760; р. 1836.

PHILIPS, John, fil'-ips, a poet, educated at Win-Fillers, John, Ju-198, a poet, caucated at Win-clester School, and Christehurch, Oxford; was the author of "The Splendid Shilling," "Blen-heim," a poem in prasse of Marlborough's vic-tory; and one on "Cyden," formed on the Geor-gies of Virgil. p. 1676; p. 1768.

Philips, Ambrose, an English dramatic writer and poet, was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he wrote his Pastorals, which were greatly admired, and praised by some good writers. Pope, however, ridi-culed them with great severity, at the same time that he exempted Philips's "Winter Picea" from his censure. He was also the author of a from his censure. He was also the author of a tragedy of merit, entitled the "Distressed Mother," and an abridged "Life of Arehbishop Williams." B. about 1071; p. 749. Piritusrue, j.-lus-lus, a Greek writer, and the favourite of the tyrant Dionysius of Syraens, who afterwards banished him. In his crile Dionysius, which Cicero has commended. He was recalled by Dionysius the Younger, but was defeated by Dion in a naval engagement, and put to death, B.c. 356. Some extracts from his writings are included in the "Fragmenta" of

Müller.

Philipor, André, fil'-li-dor, a French mu-sical composer, but better known as a distinsuch composer, but better known is a distin-guished chess player. At an early age he be-came a chorister in the chapel of Louis XV; but after the changing of his voice he was left without employment. Being an adept at chess without employment. Iseing an adopt at clear playing, he set out upon a tour through Hol-land, Germany, and England, and carned, by exhibiting his skill, the means of improving his knowledge of music. In 1733 he set to music Concreve's "Ole to Harmony," which obtained some success. While in London he also devoted much of his time to chess, and produced a work on that art. Retiring to Paris in 1751, he assisted in founding the Opéra Comique. He paid another visit to England in 1774, and there produced a musical work, but soon afterwards began to exhibit himself as a chess-player at Parsion's Club, in St. James's Street, where, among other feats, he, blindfolded and simultaneously, played and won two games. B. at Preux, 1726; p. in London, 1795.

Philips, Edward, ft'-ips, one of the nephews of Milton, was educated by his celebrated uncle. He was the author and compiler of several valuable works; but that by which he is best) is the "Theatrum Poctarum, or a com-plete Collection of the Pocts." n. 1680.

Pallings, John, brother of Edward, was also cducated under his uncle, whose political opinions he espoused and defended till the Restoration, when he became a writer on the side of royalty.

PHILLIPS, Samuel, a modern English litterateur, was the son of a tradesman in London, who brought him up for the stage. At the age of 14 he appeared at the Haymarket Theatre, in the character of Richard III; but, at the instance of some friends, his father afterwards sent him to the University of Göttingen. He next proceeded to Cambridge; but the death of his father called him to London, in order to carry on the business for the benefit of his mother and family. In 1841 he adopted the profession of literature, and wrote "Caleb Stukely" for "Blackwood's Magazine." Subsequently engaged upon the staff of the Times sequently changed upon the stan of the 2 min newspaper, the contributed to that print many of the best reviews of books which have ap-peared in its columns. He was fix a period "literary director" to the Crystal Palace Company; during which time he wrote the "Crystal Palace Portrait-Gallery" and the "Guide to the Palace and Park." Some of his criticisms upon books in the leading English journal were re-printed, with the title "Essays from the Times," Consumptive tendencies had for a long time exhibited themselves previous to his death, which was at length brought about by that malady. B. in London, 1815; p. 1854. PHILLIPS, John, an eminent modern geologist, professor of geology at the University of Oxford, and assistant general secretary of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. He was an active worker in the paths of geological science for nearly half a centary, and assisted in many great works connected to the great undertaking,-the "Geological Survey of the United Kingdom." He edited or arranged twenty-seven volumes of the Reports arranged twenty-seven votatives of the British Association; and in the "Bibliography of Geology" of Mr. Strickland and Sir W. Jardine, thirty-one treatises of his on geo-

Geology of Yorkshire," "Rivers, Monutain, and Seacoast of Yorkshire," and "Geological Map of the British Isles." To the "Encyclopedia Britumica," "Encyclopedia Metro-politana," "Penny Cyclopedia," &c., he continued many valuable articles on branches of geological sei, nec. 1n 1-53-53 he was president of the Orbertal Science, and 1800. of the Geological Society. n. 1890.
PHILLPOTS, the RI. Rev. Henry, D.D., fil-

pots, for 30 years Bishop of Exeter, was edupors, nor 39 years inshop of exeter, was educated at the eathedral school at Glouester, and at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where the took his B.A. degree in 1795. He became tellow of Magdaten College, but was not ordained until 1803. Three years after he became chaplain to the Bishop of Durham, and took an active part in the controversy against the Roman Catholic church which raged about that time. After obtaining no less than five livings and two prebendal stalls in little more than ten years, he received the rich living of Stanhope, in Durham, and in 1828 was made Dean of Chester by the Duke of Wellington, when he ceased to write as heretofore against the Roman Catholies. In 1830 he became bishop of Exeter. He was an able debater and an earnest churchman, ready at all times to do battle against error of any kind, but apt to carry out his intolerance of opposition to his views with a pertinacity that savoured of persecution. He was equally opposed to Romanian and Calvinism. B. at Bridgewater, May 6, 1778; p. at Bishopstowe, near Torquay, Sept. 18, 1809.

1 attachment, filo-pe-men, general of the Achieuns, who displayed great bravery in dehending his native city against Cleomenes III., king of Sparia; and, in 208 n.c., defeated the Æjoliums in a battle near the Lawssus. For this he was made cartein-general; and shortly afterwards sl. tyrant of La-cedamon, near Mantinea, with his own hand Nabis, the successor of Machanidas, defeated Philopartics of the Archive States. Philopomen at sea; but he recovered this loss on land, took Spart's, razed its walls, and also-lished the laws of Lyenrgus. The Messenians having revolted, Philopomen marched against them, but was taken prisoner by filling from his horse. Din crates, the Messen an general, threw him into prison, and caused him to be poisoned, 182 n.c. n in Arcadia, about 253 n.c.

possence, 182 n.c. n in Arcada, about 233 n.c.
Philostrarts, Flankins, fi-less/rai/4m, a famous Greek sophist, who re-kided at Rome, where he was patronized by Julia, wife of Septimins Severus. He wrote the "Life of Apolonius of Tyana," a pretended philosopher. It is an extravagant romance, full of fables. He calls writed the "Lives of the Southist" and a also wrote the "Lives of the Sophists," and a commentary upon the heroes of Homer. Flourished towards the close of the 2nd century.

PHILOXENUS, fi-lax e-nus, a dithyrambic poet of Cythera, lived at the court of Dionysius of Syracuse, who banished him to the stone-quarries for censuring his verses. B. at Ephesus, about 390 n.c.

with his favourite pursuit, from the date of the Philboon, fit-gon, called Trallianus, from "Map of the Strata of England and Wales" the place of his birth, a city of Lydia, was the freedman of Adrian, and wrote a "History of Marvellous Things;" also a "History of the Olympiads," part of which is extant. He is said to have mentioned the darkness at our Saviour's crucifision. This passage caused a controversy between Whiston, Chapman, and others, in the 18th century. The best edition of his remains is that of Westermann, 1839. Flourished in the 2nd century.

PROOSS, fo'-kas, emperor of the East, usurped the throne by murdering the emperor Maurice and his children, in 602. Khosru or Chosroes II., king of Persia, made war on him and took several of the Asiatic provinces of the Eastern empire. At last, roused by his cruelties, Hera-chus, governor of Africa, conspired against and slew Phoeas, in 610.

Priocion, fo'-shi-on, a celebrated Athenian general and statesman, who was the disciple of Plato and Xenocrates. He displayed great elo-quence, and opposed Demosthenes when that great orator endeavoured to rouse the Athenians to declare war against Philip. Phociou saw in that measure the ruin of Athens; but, when the war commenced, he manifested the patriotism and talents of a brave general. Philip and Alexander made several attempts to corrupt him, but in vain. Phocion held the generalship at Athens forty-four times; but, notwithstanding his splendid virtues and abilities, he could not escape persecution. He was accused of treachery, and deposed, on which he field; but was taken and poisoned, B.C. 317.—His son Phocus was a man of licentious character; but he avenged the fate of his father upon his accusers, and erected a statue to his memory.
PHOCYLIDES, fo-sil'-i-dees, a Greek poet and philosopher, was a native of Miletus, There is philosopher, was a lattre of inflocus. There is a poem existing a poem existing a full the strong philosopher and tributed to him. Flourished about 530 n.c. Phoramor, for "mi-on, an Athenian general, who succeeded Callias, n.c. 432, and gave great proofs of his courage in the Peloponnesian war, and in defeating the fleets of the Lacedemo-nians. He sold his estates to pay his army, and refused the rank of commander-in-chief.

Phorrus, fo shirts, patriarch of Constantinople, whose learning was great, and advanced him to several high offices in the state, after which he entered into orders; and, on the deposition of ignatins, aspired to the patriarchate, which he obtained in an irregular manner in 853, but was nevertheless contirmed in the appointment in 858. This occasioned a schism, and Photius exercised great severities on those who adhered to Ignatius. He was deposed in the following year. Photius, however, con-trived to gain the favour of the emperor Basil, who restored him to the patriarchal see upon who restored that of the parasited as see diploit the death of Ignatius, in 877. But, in 886, Leo caused him to be again deprived, and confined in a monastery, where he died. His works are, "Myriobiblion," a Commentary on several au-

a tragic poet, and the other a general.

Piazzi, Joseph, pe-ad/-tse, an Italian astro-nomer, was born at Ponte, in the Valleline; entered into the order of the Theatines; and, after having been a professor at Genca, Malta, Ravenna, and Palermo, was in 1787 made director of the observatory founded in the latter city. About this time he visited Paris and London, and entered into a correspondence with the most celebrated European astrono-mers. In 1801 he discovered a new planet, which he named Cores Ferdinandea, and in 1805 he made a new entalogue of 7616 fixed stars. This distinguished astronomer produced various treatises and memoirs of great importance to the science, and was a member of many Picarnol institutions. B. 1746; D. 1820.

Picarno, Jean, piki-ar, a French astronomer, who became a member of the Academy of Sciences in 1663, and five years afterwards was sent by the king to Uranienborg, which was built by Tycho Brahe to make celestial observations. servations. Picard brought with him from Denmark many manuscripts of Tycho's, TTo was engaged in measuring a degree of the meridian, and in determining the meridian of Astronomical Observations made in Den-mark." E. in France, 1620; D. 1682. Prograf, Nicholas, ps-chet-ne, a celebrated richard, Radons, ps-cas-re, a constance Italian musical composer, whose first masters were Leo and Durante. From Italy he went to Paris in 1776, where the connoissears were divided in comion between him and Glück. At the Revolution, Piccini returned to Naples,

At the Revolution, Piceful returned to Naples, where he was proscribed as being a Jacobin; on which he went again to France, where he remained until his death. His principal operacare "La Ocechina," "Iphigenia in Tauris," and "Roland." n. at Burl, Norles, 17-28, n. 1800. Procotomix, James, pill-kolo-mel-ne, a cardinal, whose real name was Ammenati, but which he changed out of respect to Pope Pius II, his patron, who was of the Piecolomia family. He become successively bishop of Massa and Frascati, and, in 1461, cardinal. Sixtus IV. and Pressay and in 1789, cardinal. Sixus resized his property after his death, and applied it to the building of an houjital. He wrote a "History of his Own Times," and Letters, which have been printed. p. at Lucca, 1422;

n. 1479.

PICCOLOMINI, Alexander, held the offices of archbishop of Patras and coadjutor of Siena, where he wrote several dramatic pieces of reputation. His other works are, a treatise on the Sphere, "Theory of the Planets," "Moral Institutes," &c. Ito was the first who wrote on philosophical subjects in Italian, Latin having been theretofore used by the learned. B. at

"Myriolibilion," a Commentary on several authors of antiquity; "Momenous," or several authors of antiquity; "Momenous," or a collection of the canons of the Church; and a collection of the canons of the Church; and a collection of the logical and controversal works, bright works, b Siena, 1303; D. 1578.
Procolomini, Octavio, an Austrian general, oranve. All occame a prince of the enaptic, but disgraced his renown by great cruelty. He is a prominent character in Schiller's play of "Wallenstein" n. 1698; n. 1606.

Promeau, Charles, peck-"groo, a celebrated general of the French republic, who came of humble parentage, but received a good education.

at the military college of Brienne; after which he entered the army, and rose to be ser-geant. The Revolution elevated him to the rank of general, and, in 1794, he succeeded General Hoche in the command of the army of the north. Shortly after, he relieved Landau, and compelled the English to evacuate the Netherlands. He next marched into Holland, of which he made a complete conquest. In 1707 he was elected a member of the legislative body; but his opposition to the Directory, and his speeches in favour of the royalist emigrants, occasioned an accusation against him as designing to restore royalty. He was ordered, without caped to England, where he remained till the spring of 1804, when he went to Paris, where ie was apprehended and sent to the Temple. Three weeks afterwards he was tound strangled Three weeks atterwards no was found stranged in his hed, by means of a silk handkerchief twisted round his neck, and tightened with a short stick. The body was examined and exposed, and a laboured account published, to make it appear that he had hid violent hands on himself; but the circumstances warrant the on that he was a sa-sinated, B. at Arbois, id to be transported to Cavenne, whence he

France, 1761; p. 1801, PIGHLER, Caroline, an eminent German novelist, who commenced a literary career at an early age, by contributing short poetical pieces to the almanaes. She subsequently produced a number of historical novels, quently produced a number of historical novels, some of which appeared before Sir Walter Scott. commenced his career. The best of these novels were "Frederick the Flighter," "Henricits of England," "The Slege of Vienna," and "The Swedes in Prague." As a dramatist she was less successful, but her "Pictures of the Times," and "Memorable Events of my Life," became highly popular in Germany. About a year after her death, a collected edition of her works was given to the world, and consisted of sixty volumes. As a novelist, she displayed considerable constructive skill, and often wrote with great pictorial effect; but her style was generally marred by too great diffuseness. p. at Vienna, 1769; p. 1813.

Picken, Alexander, pik'-en, a Scottish miscellaneous writer, who commenced his literary career by the publication of a volume of "Tales and Sketches of the West of Scotland," which was shortly followed by the "Sectarian" and the "Dominie's Legacy," and at a later period by "Traditionary Stories of Old Families," which was designed to embrace the legendary history of Great Britain and Ireland. A novel called "The Black Watch," founded on some early incidents in the history of the 22nd High-

Paisley, 1788; D. 1833.

modern English painter and Royal Academician, who, after completing his career as student, embraced the historical style of art. He subsequently devoted himself to portraits, and became one of the most fashionably patro-nized artists in that walk in England. Elected R.A. in 1825, he, ten years later, succeeded to the office of librarian to the Royal Academy. In the British collection at the South Kensington Museum, there is a portrait by him of libert Vernon, the generous donor of the Vernon col-

Pickersgill, Frederick Richard, a modern English painter, and relative of the preceding, was a student of the Royal Academy, and, in 1810, exhibited his first picture, "The Combat between Hereules and Achelous." In 1843 he between Hereunes and Amelous: In 1818 he gained one of the £100 prizes, for his carforn cutitled "The Death of King Lear," and, in 1847, won one of the first-class prizes of £500 for his oil-painting of "The Burial of Harold," for which he was afterwards paid an additional £500 on its purchase for the House of Lords About the same time he became A.R.A., and, in 1857, R.A. One of his best pictures—"Flori-1857, R.A. One of ms nest pictures—"frog-mel in the Cottage of the Witch"—is in the national collection at the South Kensington Museum, Among Eis most important works may be mentioned, "The Adoration of the Margi," "The Christian Church during the Persecut on by the Pagan Emperors at Rome," "Samson Batrayed," and "Love's Labour Lost." B. in London, 1820.

Pieron, Sir Thomas, K.C.B., &c., a gallant British officer, was descended from an ancient family of Pembrokeshire, and commenced his military career as an ensign in the 12th regiment of foot in 1771. He served on the Gibraitar station till 1778, after which he the chbradar station in 1778, after which he was promoted to a captaincy in the 75th. In 1704 he embarked for the West Indies; and, after the reduction of St. Lucia and Trinidad in 1797, rose to the rank of colonel, and was appointed governor of the latter island. Whilst holding that situation he was applied to by a Spanish magistrate to sign an order for inflicting the forture on a female slave, and, being told it was a customary practice, did s . without inquiry. The girl, who was only fourteen years of ago, was accordingly picketed, with a view to extort from her the discovery of a theft com-mitted by her paramour. For this act of craelty the governor was, in 1807, indicted, and found guilty by an English jury. As many exagge-rated rumours had preceded the colonel to England, a new trial was granted, and though he was acquitted of morat guelt, the deed was one which threw a shade over his bright career, However, in 1800 he was again employed by his country. He was at the siege of Flush ing, and on its capture was appointed governor. From Flushing he returned to England an invalid, but was soon again in the field. His courage and intrepidity shone on every occasion; ever foremost in the fight, he was a victorious over oremost in the high, is was a victorious leader at Badajoz, at Vittoria, at Chudal Ro-drigo, &c. At the battle of Waterloo, General Picton commanded the 5th division of the army, and fell in the moment of victory, having just repulsed one of the most flerce attacks made by carly functions in the instance of the state region and the present one of the instance and a many of all the French. A monument to his memory was, Pristers (1783; D. 1833).

Pristers (1784; D. 1833).

Pristers (1784; D. 1833).

Pristers (1784; D. 1834).

French writer, who was educated for the profession of a civil engineer, and obtained employment under the French government. Quitting his native country, he went to Russia, where he was engaged to execute several important surveys; but having presented to Count Orlolf a plan for establishing a colony of foreigners upon the eastern shores of the Caspian Sea, under republican government, he met with Vermon, the generous donor of fac Vermon colsuch a reception as decided him to leave that lection to the nation. There is also another country. He repaired to Poland, with the inwork of his, cutified "A Syriam Maid," in the tention of taking arms against Russia, but fell all-ry. n. about 1782; p.,1808. deeply in love at Warsaw, and forgot military glory in admiring the beauty of a Polish maiden. which have been translated into almost as many After spending some time in Germany, he re-turned to France, and soon afterwards joined an expedition, the ostensible object of which was to form a republican colony in the island of Madagracar; but discovering that his fellow-voyagers were in reality going thither to obtain a supply of slaves, he abandoned them, and landed in the Lie of Paras (Marvita), whose in

FINORDECE, Thomas, pinelt-bek, an English mediantician, who invented several machines, which himself to literature, and produced his his name. D. in London, 1783. beautiful little story of "Paul and Virginis," PINDAE, pia-day, the second alter which has become a classic in every Pinenes. beauthin fittle story of "Paul and Virginis," Pindar, pindar, the prince of lyric poets, which has become a classic in every European | In his youth he bore away the poetical prize language. His other works were, "Studies of, from Myntis, but was loss and poetical prize Nature," "Harmonics of Natu language. His other works were, "Studies of Nature," "Harmonies of Nature," "The Indian Cottage," "Narrative of a Journey to Russia;" and several plays. When the Revolution burst languages as the Bible. These celebrated fa-bles or tales are said to be drawn from an old Sanscrit work in five books, called the "Pancha Tantra." They have been translated into English by Sir William Jones.

test with Corinna, who defeated him five times, It is said, however, by some authors, that she owed her victory less to her poetry than to her charms. At the Olympic games, where women dark several pays. When the televolution burst lower are view, less to her powers than to forth, he was reduced to great distress, which | charms. At the Olympic games, where women was afterwards alleviated by the generous pa-| were excluded, Pindar conquered all his rivals,

A complete edition of his works, with his biography attached, was published at Paris in 1836. B. 1737: D. 1814.

Pignotti, Lorenzo, peen-yot'-te, an eminent Italian writer, who was a physician and pro-fessor of medicine at Florence and Pisa, counseller of the latter university, and further distinguished himself as a naturalist, poet, historian, and antiquary. His poems form six volumes, and he also produced some highly popular fables. A "History of Tuscany" by him was a learned work, but was considered too liberal in its tendencies by the court of Rome, who condemned it to be burnt. B. in Tuscany,

1739; p. 1812.

Piles, Roger de, peel, a celebrated French painter and writer on painting, who, in 1662, became tutor to the son of the president Amelot, with whom he made a tour to liome, where De with whom he made a soul to have a first lying the Piles had ample opportunities for gratifying the taste which he possessed for the fine arts. younger Amelot being appointed ambassador to Venice, De Piles accompanied him as secretary; and afterwards attended him in the same capacity to Lisbon and Switzerland. In 1692 he was sent by Louis XIV. to the Hague, ostensibly as a picture-dealer, but in fact to negotiate with a hetero-death; out in and to negotiate when those who were friends to France. The object of his mission being discovered, he was sent to prison, where he wrote his "Lives of the Fain-ters." On his return to France he obtained a pension. He was a member of the Academy of Painting, and a great admirer of Rubens, whom he imitated with success. Besides the above work, he wrote a treatise on "Anatomy, adapted to Painting and Sculpture," and a "Course of Painting," p. at Clamery, 1635: p. 1709.

PILKINGTON, Letitia, pilk'-ing-ton, the daughter of Dr. Van Lewen, a physician of Dublin, became the wife of the Rev. Matthew Pilkington, from whom she was separated on account of the irregularity of her conduct. After this of the Pregularity of her conduct. After this sets estitled in London, where she subsisted partly by writing, and partly by the bounty of her friends. She wrote "The Roman Pather," a tragedy; and "The Turkish Count, or London Apprentice," a comety; "Mernoirs" of her life; and various poems, &c. m. 1712; m. 1720.

Pripax, or Bidden, pill-pay, an Indian Brahmin and philosopher, who was, it is believed, alle. D. about 1530. a part of Hindoston, and counsellor. Proparties, Baccio, pin-fail-le, a celebrated to an Indian king, whom he instruct d by fables, Italian architect, who designed the famous given the spartans took Thebes, they spared the house of Pindar, as did Alexander the Great. The best edition of this poet is that by Böckh, Leipzie, 1811. There is an English translation by Cary. Flourished in the 5th century B.C.

given t

PINDAR, Peter. (See WOLCOT.)
PINDLI, John Vincent, penail-le, a learned Italian, who fixed his residence at Padua, where Italian, who used his residence at Fadda, where he formed a magnificent library, stored with rare books and valuable manuscripts. The most learned men in Europe were among his correspondents, and his literary treasures were always open for their use. B. at Naples, about 1570; D. 1601.—A descendant of his, Mafheus Pinelli, was a printer at Venice, where he formed a very valuable library, which was brought to Lomion, and there sold by auction. p. at Venice, 1785, and Fragais, Alexander Gui, pan grad, a clever Franch astronomer, who became librarian of St. Gónóviève, at Paris. In 1700 he was sent to the South Sea, to observe the famous transit of Venus over the sun's disc. He was afterwards employed to prove the timepieces of Lo Roy, and was admitted a member of the French Academy and of the Institute. His works are, "State of the Heavens from 1754 to 1757," Memoirs of Discoveries made in the South Seas," "An Historical and Theoretical Treatise on Comets," "Translation of Manilius's Astro-His works are, nomics," and a portion of a projected "History of Astronomy in the 17th Century." B. at PINIERTON, John, pin-ker-ton, a Scotli-h writer, who was bred to the bar, but devoted himself to literary pursuits. For half a century he continued to produce works in various dene continued to produce works in various de-partments of knowledge, many of which were of a valuable and important chraneter. Among the rest, he gave to the world "A General Cel-lection of Voyages and Travels," "The History of Scotland," "Portraits of illustrious Persons of Scotland," several collections of andent Year-tish pooms, and "Walpoliana," n. at Edila-horeb 1758 - n. the Paris [88].

tish poems, and "Wulpoliana." n. at Edinburgh, 1759; n. at Paris, 1828.

Pirson, Richard, pia/son, a native of Normandy, who became servant to William Caxton, and afterwards printer to Henry VII. and Penry VIII. He printed Magna Charta, and several bolks, which are now scarce and valuable. n. about 1530.

He also built the Sistine chapel at Rome. Sisting chapet at Rollie. He also but the Ponte Sisto over the Tiber, several churches, and the old library of the Vatican. After the Jeath of his patron, Sixtus IV., he was invited to Urbino by Frederick, bases 17, ne was invited to Urbino by Frederick, the second duke; and designed for him the ducal palace and some churches. His designs were made upon such excellent principles that several of his buildings still tempin in a state of perfect preservation ; and his bridge over the Tiber, although nearly 400 years old, is yet as substantial as a new fabric. B. at Florence early in the 15th century; p. at Urbino about 1494.

Pinto, Ferdinand Mendez, pin'-to, a Portuguese traveller, who was at first in the service of a Portuguese gentleman; but being of an a lyenturous turn of mind, he resolved to make a voyage to India, where he arrived in 1537.

During the subsequent twenty-one years he led a life of constant vici situde; at one time the owner of large treasures, at another pining in empliyity. He travelled in the East Indies, China, Japan, and Siam; sometimes on land, sometimes in command of a vessel manned by during adventurers. In 1558 he returned to Portugal, and composed a narrative of his voyages and adventures for the amusement of his children. This work is a curious one, but wholly unrelible, in consequence of a large admixture of fiction. B. near Coimbra, about 1510: D. 1543.

Prevented to the school of Pernardino, or Bernardino, Betti, pin-too-ric-ke-o, a celebrated Italian punter, who belonged to the school of Perugino, and excelled in historical subjects and In the latter walk he was extenportraits. sively employed; and had, among other highly-born sitters, Cwsar Borgia, Queen Isabella of Spain, and Giulia Farnese. D. at Perugia, 1451;

Program, Baltistand del, pe-om'-bo, a cele-brated Italian painter, who was a disciple of Giorgone, and painted historical and portrait coorgone, and painted instorieal and portrait pieces. One of his finest works, "The Raising of Lazarus," is in the National Gallery in London. Later in life, he quitted his profession to assume the functions of keeper of the signet to assume the machina of a keeper of the signet of Phope Clement VII., whence rose his name Del Phombo, "of the lead," in allusion to the lead of the seal. Many of the designs for his petures were furnished by Michael Angelo; Sebastiano supplying the fine colouring which characterized his style. B. at Venice, 1485; D. 1517.

Piozzi, Mrs., pe-ot'-se, un English authoress, and the friend of Dr. Johnson, was the daughter of John Salusbury, a gentleman of Car-naryonshire, and having appeared in the London world of fashion with much success, became the wife of Mr. Thrale, a rich brewer of Southwark. It was as Mrs. Thrale that she Linde the acquaintance of the great lexicographer; but after she became a widow in the ith year of her marriage, she retired to Bath with her four daughters. At Bath, she met Habiret Piozzi, an Teamir masse-man, she married in 1781. This union, which took place shortly before Dr. Johnson's death, led to the breaking up of their long friendship. After the Docbr's ceath, she produced her "Ancethe Doctor's death, she produced her "Ance-dotes of Dr. Samuel Johnson during the last twenty years of his life," which work Boswell declared to have been written in a Spiteful and revengeful spirit. Peter Pindar Dr. Wolcot) took the opposite view, and wrote his satirical rathon, and having taken Athens by surprise, poem called "Bozzy and Piozzi" thereupon, put to death all the friends of Megacles. He 819

Besides the work just named, Mrs. Piozzi wrote "The Three Warnings," a poem; "Observa-tions and Reflections made in the course of a tions and reflections made in the course of a Journey through France, Italy, and Germany;" "British Synonomy," &c. Her "Autobiogra-phy, Letters, and Literary Remains," which contain many interesting facts relative to Dr. Johnson, have been recently published, about 1730; p. at Clifton, near Bristol, 1821.

Piraxest, John Baptist, pe-ra-nail-se, a cele-brated Italian architectural engraver, who was remarkable for a bold and free style of drawing, which he generally executed upon the plate at once by etching with aquatortis. He kept an ablishment at Rome for the production of architectural engravings, which became famous throughout harope. His works, consisting of triumphal arches, bridges, buildings, and other remains of antiquity, occupy 20 folio volumes.

remains of amounty, occupy 25 1600 volumes, in at Venice, 1720; a R Rome, 1738.

Preamest, Francis, was son of the preceding, and, like hum, a celebrated engraver and draughrisama. He took part in the revolution at Rome, and upon the arrival of the French. in that city, repaired to Paris, where he produced a splendal collection of Roman antiqui-ties. His works consist of 29 folio volumes.

B. 1713; D. 1810.

Pruon, Alexis, pe'-rawng, a French dramatic poet, who was the son of an apothecary, and was educated for the law, but was prevented from establishme himself in practice in consequence of a reverse of fortune experienced by quence of a reverse of tertule experienced by his parents. After living in obscurity till his 30th year, he repaired to Paris, where he be-came employed as a writer for the stage, pro-ducing, among other plays, the "Metromanie," one of the best French comedies in existence. He subsequently wrote satirical poems and epigrams, and sought to become a member of the Academy; but being unsuccessful, he retaliated by keenly satirizing the members of that body. Piron was a man of infinite wit and humour, but his works are too often defaced by licentiousness. He wrote his own epitaph, which was as follows:-

"Here lies Piron, who was nothing, not even an Academician,

His works were collected and published in This works were conserted and published in 7 volumes, in 1776. n. at Dijon, 1881; D. 1773. Pristratus, piesis-tra-lus, tyrant of Athens, was a descendant of Codrus and a relative of Solon, and distinguished himself early in life by his courage, particularly at the taking of by his courage, particularly at the taking of Salamis plut after nobly serving his country, he endeavoured to enslave it. To effect his object he had recourse to an extra ordinary device. Having inhibeted several wounds on himself, he appeared before the people, and preleated that an attempt had begun made to assas-mate him. The Athenians believed the tale, and assigned him a guard, which he increased, and by that means made himself master of the citadel. The citizens out of fear acknowledged him their ruler; but Megacles and Lycurgus united their forces and expelled Pisi-tratus from Athens. Shortly after, Mega-cles offered to assist Pisistratus, on condition of his marrying his daughter; to which the tyrant consented, but afterwards used her so ili, that her father gathered a force and com-pelled him to quit the city. After an exile of thirteen years, he made himself master of Ma-built an academy, which he furnished with a valuable library; made the first collection of the poems of Homer, and died in possession of the sovereign power, 527 B.c.

Pitt

Piso, pi'-so, an eminent Roman family, which produced some great men; as—Piso, Lucius produced some great line; as—riso, hactors Calpurnius, surnamed Frugi, on account of his frugality. He was consul 149 n.c., and termi-nated the war in Sielly. He composed annals and orations, which are lost.—Piso, Caius, consul 67 n.c., was the author of a law to restrain the factions which usually attended the election of the chief magistrates.—Prso, Cheius, was consul under Augustus, and governor of Syria under Tiberius, in which situation he behaved under Holetas in which statated he between with great cruelty. He was charged with poisoning Germanicus, on which account he destroyed himself, a.n. 20.—Pr.o. Luchus, a senator, who attended the emperor Valeran into Persia in 258. On the death of that emperor he assumed the imperial title, but was defeated by Valens, and put to death in 261.

PITCATENE, Archibald, pit'-bairn, an eminent Scotch physician, who studied divinity and afterwards law at the University of Edinburgh. but quitted both these professions for mathematics and medicine. After publishing a thesis, in which he endeavoured to prove that the doctrine of the circulation of the blood was known to Hippocrates, he, in 1602, accepted an invitation from the curators of the University of Levdon to assume the professorship of medicine, but returned to Edinburgh about a year afterwards, He published "Dissertationes Medicae;" also wrote some Latin poems of the satirical kind. wrote some rath poems of the satirizat kind, chiefly against the principal authors of the Revolution. The celebrated Boerhaave was one of his pupils at Leyden. n. at Edinburgh,

1652; p. 1713.

Pirnor, Pierre, pe'-loe, a learned French law-yer, who was educated a Huguenot, and narrowly escaped in the massacre of St. Bartholomew. Afterwards embracing the Roman Catholic faith, he became attorncy-general in the chamber of justice of Guienne. He defended the rights of the kings and church of France against the court of Rome with great ability. His most impor-tant works are,—" Treatise on the Liberties of that works are.— Freatise on the Indocates of the Gallican Church," "Commentaries on the Customs of Troyes," "Notes on various Authors." To Pithou we are indebted for the first publication of Phadrus, the "Novella" of Justinian, and other ancient remains. B. at Troyes, 1530 : p. 1500.

PITHOU, François, brother of the preceding, became attorney general in the chamber of jus-tice established under Henry IV. He discovered the manuscript of the fables of Phedrus, which the manuscript of the Lodes of Pineorus, when he published in conjunction with his brother. His own works were, "Body of the Canon Law," and "The Laws of the Romans compared with those of Mosses." n.1544; p. 1621.

Percor, Henry, 7e 4c, an eminent French maties without a master, and in 1724 was admitted a reacher of the Academic Sciences. His work member of the Academy of Sciences. His work member of the Academy of Sciences. His work on the theory of manocurving ships was translated into English, for which he was closted a member of the Royal Society. He was appointed chief engineer of Languedoe and inspector-general of the canal. The city of Montpellier being in want of water, Pitot constructed an aqueduct, which supplied that place from a distruction of three longers, as it was not supplied that place from a distance of three leagues. B. at Aramont, Languedoc, 1695; p. 1771, 843

Pirs, or Pirseus, John, pits, an English biographer, who was educated at Wykeham's School, near Winchester; after which he went to Rheims, where he taught rhetoric and Greek. The civil wars broaking out in France, he re-tired to Loraine, and obtained a canonry in the church of Verdun. The duchess of Cloves appointed him her confessor, and on her death he became deau of Liverdun. His work, "Lives he became dean of Liverdun. His work, "Lives of the Kings, Bishops, Apostolical Men, and Writers of England," is his principal production, in Hampshite, 1560; n. at Liverdun, 1616. Prar, Christophen, pil, an English poet and divine, who is known by excellent translations of the "Ehedd," Vida's "Art of Locity," and some pleasing poems. p. 1039; p. 1748.

Pitt, Thomas, founder of the illustrious family of that name, towards the end of the 17th century went to the East Indies, as governors. nor of Fort st. George, where he resided many years, and realized a large fortune; particularly by a diamond (called after him the Pitt diamond) which he purchased for £20,400, and sold to the king of France for somewhat more than five times that sum. A rumour having prevailed in England that the governor gained this jewel unfairly, and Pope having given the slander currency by a sort of poetical adoption of it in the following couplet-

" Asleep and naked as an Indian lay,

An honest factor stole a gem away,"
Pitt published a refutation of the calumny. 1716, Mr. Pitt was made governor of Jamaica, but did not hold that situation above a year. He sat in four Parliaments for Old Sarum and Thirsk, and was buried in Blandford church, where a monument was creeted to his memory. B. 1653; D. 1726. Pitt, William, earl of Chatham, the celebrated

English statesman, was the sen of Robert Pitt, Esq. of Boconnoc, in Cornwall, and was edu-cated at Eton, whence he removed to Thinty College, Oxford. He was for some time a cornet of dragoous; but, in 1735, quitted the army, on being chosen member of Parliament for the borough of Old Sarun. He exerted himself strenuously in opposition to the measures of Sir Robert Walpole, and produced such an effect, by his elequence and power, in lowering the tone of that minister, that the duchess of Mariborough, who hated Walpole. bequeathed him a legacy of £10,000. On the change of administration in 1746, he became joint vice-treasurer of Ireland, and paymastergeneral of the army, which places he held till 1755. The next year he was appointed secretary of state, but in a few months afterwards was again out of office. An efficient administration being desired in 1757, he again became secretary of state. The stupendous staresmanlike quelities of his mind now began to reveal themselves. He soon acquired an immense ascendancy over both the Parliament and the ministry, and the war in which the country was then engaged with France began to assume a new aspect. A fresh impetus was given to every department of the government, and the enemy was beaten both on land and at sea. In all directions the most brilliant actions were performed on the continent, whilst in other parts of the globe the flags of Great Britain was completely triumphant, several valuable places, both in America and the East Indies, being added to her possessions. Such was the state of affairs on the derth of George II.; soon after which, a change taking Pitt place by the coming of Lord Bute into power, and Pitt was appointed chancellor of the Ex Mr. Pitt resigned. The peace of 1763 followed; chequer, he being at the time in his 24th year, but it was not popular, and, in 1760, a new ad- Peace with the Americans and with Spain and nous now some popular, and in 1700, a new net react with the Americans and with Spain and ministration, was formed, in which Mr. Pitt France was concluded by this administration, had a share as lord privy seal; and at this which soon gave way to what was called the time he was created Earl of Chatham. This Coalition ministry, formed by Lord North and ministry, however, being ill-arranged, was dis-

those correve measures which attinately led to [1785, the important onices of first lord of the the war of Independence and the separation of the United States from the mother country. For some time previous, the popularity of Pitt had been on the wane, but it was now revived with all its former splendour. The end of his days, however, was at hand. As he was speaking with his accustomed cherry on the subject of American independence, in the House of Lords, April 8, 1778, he was overpowerd, and fell down in a fit of convulsions; from this he never sufficiently railied to give hopes of a permanent recovery, but, on the 11th of the following month, breathed his last, and was solemnly interred in Westminster Abbey, where a monument was erected to his memory at the national eynense. B. at Boconnoe, Cornwall. 1708: p. 1778. His lordship left a widow, who was created a baroness in her own right, with a was created a basiness in her own right, with a pension of £3000 a year. She died in 1803, at Burton Pynsent, in Somerset-hire, an estate which had been left to Lord Chatham by Sir Thomas Pynsent, from admiration of his cha-

PITT, William, an illustrious English statesman, was the second son of the great Earl of Chatham. His elementary education was re-Pynsent, in Somersetshire. His private tutor was the Rev. Dr. Wilson, afterwards canon of Windsor; but his education was principally conducted by the earl himself, whose favorrite son he was, and who saw in him the seeds of that greatness which would confer additional glory on the name of Pitt. In 1773 he was sent to Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, where "although he was little more than 11 years of age," says one of his tutors, "and had laboured under the disadvantage of frequent ill-health, his profidesign the learned languages was probably greater than ever was acquired by any other person in such early youth." At Cambridge he proceeded to the degree of M.A.; and on leaving the university was entered at Lincoln's Inn, and in three years was called to the bar. He went the western circuit once or twice, but never had much practice. In 1780 he stood for the University of Cambridge, but was unsuccessful. By means, however, of Sir James Lowther (afterwards earl of Lonsdale), he was returned to that Parliament for the borough of Appleby. As a senator he soon displayed his great oratorical talents in opposition to Lord North and the American war. His manner was thus described :- "His voice is rich and striking, full of melody and force; his manner casy and elegant; his language beautiful and luxuriant. He gave in this first essay a specimen of cloquence not unworthy the son of his immortal parent." In 1782 he brought forward a motion for an inquiry into the stale of obtained the office of first load of the Treasury, conferred on Mr. Pitt. In the following month he brought forward a new bill for the better government of India, which was rejected. On this the Parliament was dissolved, and the pre-mier, who was returned for the University of Cambridge, again brought forward his bill for the regulation of India, and carried it trium. phantly in both House mercial treaty with France was entered into the terms of which were highly advantageous to England. About this time also he adopted other beneficial measures relative to the finances, for extinguishing the national debt by a sinking fund; established a new constitution for the East-India Company, and passed acts for the rehef of the Roman Catholics. It is impossible to embrace all the great points of his administration, combining, as it does, so much of the history of England and of the world. During the king ss. Put ga eat popularity by taking constitute nalground in stremously maintaining, accust Fox, the right of Parliament, and not of the Prince of Wales, to settle the regency. The French Re-volution, which shook the bayis of political affairs throughout Europe, next burst forth.

The execution of Louis XVI. occasioned the ministry to dismiss the French and assador, and this was followed by a war, which lasted eight years. In 1860 Pitt effected the union of Ireland to Britain, and soon afterwards retired from office. The peace of Amicus, signed under the Addington administration, was of short duration, and a new war ensued. In 1804 Mr. Pitt returned to his former office, but he was surrounded with difficultie, a former had joined the many of his opposition, am he might almost be said to have been left to wield the energies of the state alone. He effected another condition with Russia and Austria against France, which failed. In the mean time, a gouty habit and unremitted mental exertions, together with a too free indulgence in wine, had completely undermined the constitution of this wonderful man, who succumbed to the vexation and pressure of troubles induced by the non-success of the European coalition against France, upon which he had set his heart. His character, if it lacked the fire and vizour of his father, was nevertheless noble and imposing. All that his greatest enemies, even in his own time, could pretend to charge him with, was ambition; while they were compelled to allow him the merit of vigorous application to business, uncommon eloquence, profound financial wisdom, and, above all, perfect disinterestedness. Though he had remained in power during so many immortal parent. In 1652 ne prougar for the man remainer in power uning so many ward a motion for an inquiry into the state of years, he died in debt, which the Parliament the representation in Parliament, which was resolved to discharge. His remains were also rejected by a small uniquiry. On the death of interred at the public expense, in the same the marquis of Rockingham, Lord Shelburne vault with his father. Besides his official s, he was warden of the Cinque Ports,

811

Pros. pi-us, pope, succeeded Hyginus in 142, and condemned the heresy of Valentinian. D.

Prus II. (Æneas Sylvius Piccolomini) in 1431 became secretary to Cardinal Capranica, at the Council of Râle, and acted in the same capa-city to Cardinal Albergotti, who sent him to Scotland to negotiate a peace between England and that country. He afterwards displayed great talents in the disputes between Eugenius and the Council of Fale, which he defended against the pope. The emperor Frederick III. made him imperial secretary, and employed hin in several embassies. In 1456 he ob-tained a cardinalship, and two years later was elected pope. He becam his pontificate by annutling all that he had maintained at the Council of Eale, issuing a buil, in which the declared void all appeals from the papal decree to a general council. Plus was about to dispatch a fleet against the Turks when his death took place. His principal works are,

"Memoir of the Council of Bale;" "History of the Bohemians;" "On Cosmography;" of the Bohemans; "On Cosmography; "Treatise on Education;" "Poem on the Crucifixion;" "Letters;" a romance entitled "Euryalus and Lucrelia;" and a Memoir of his own life. B. at Corsignano, Siena, 1405; B. at Ancona 1164.

Prus III. (Francesco Piccolomini,) nephew of the preceding, was elected pope in 1503, but died in less than a month afterwards.

Pius IV. (cardinal de' Medici), rose by merit to several high employments, in 1549 obtained a cardinalship, and, on the death of Paul IV., in 1559, was elected pope. He con-firmed the decrees of the Council of Trent, after the closing of that assembly in 1564. In the following year a conspiracy was formed against his life by Benedict Accolti and others, who were executed. This pope was not of the cele-brated Medici family of Florence. B. at Milan, 1490; p. 1505.

Pius V. succeeded the preceding in 1566. He was a Dominican, and had been created by Paul IV. bishop of Sutri, and cardinal and inquisitor-general in the Milanese, where he displayed great bigotry and eruelty. After his election to the papal chair he issued a bull, in which the jurisdiction of the Roman church was sought to be carried to an extravagant pitch. Pius made war against the Turks, which produced the famous battle of Lepanto, wherein the latter were defeated. He was a cruel per-secutor, and enforced the mandates of the Inquisition throughout Italy. n. in Piedmont, July p. 1572.

Pius VI. (John Angelo Braschi). Benedict XIV. created him treasurer of the apostolic chamber, and Clement XIV. conferred upon him the cardinalship. He succeeded that pon-tiff in 1774. Shortly after his election he wrought some important reforms in the public treasury, and completed the magnificent mu-seum in the Vatican, which he filled with monutreasury, and completed the magniment multiple of the count of the violation, which he filled with mount between his brother Jerome and Miss Patinents, vases, medals, and other ancient remains tergon, an American Protestant lady, which the found in the Ecclesiastical States. But the pope refused to 0. (See Bonarare, Jerome.) greatest act of his pontificate was the draining. Other grounds of quarrel were found by the of the Pontine Marshes, a project which had emperor, who wrote to the pope from Dresden, halfild several of the Roman emperors and "that he runst not take him for a Louis many of the popes. These marshes occupied le Debonnaire; that his chathemas would governor of the Charter-house, master of the the whole of the valley extending from the Trinity-house, and high steward of the Uni-Apennines to the sea, commencing at the port vensity of Cambridge. n. at Hayes, Kent, 1759; of Astura, covering the coast of Terraina, and reaching to the kingdom of Naples. This great tract contained nearly 200 square miles, and through the perseverance of Pius VI. a large proportion of it was rendered fit for cultivation. He also constructed on the side of the canals formed to carry off the water of the marshes, a beautiful road nearly 10 miles loug, ornamented with rows of poplars. Besides this great enterprise, this pontiff built several handsome editices at Rome, and founded some hospitals. The emperor Joseph II. having suppressed several monasteries, and decreed all the religious orders in his dominions free from name jurisdiction, Pius, apprehensive of the consequences of this revolution to the Holy See, went in person to Vienna in 1782; but though he was honourably received, his efforts could not divert the emperor from his designs. On his return to Rome, the pope became embroiled with the courts of Naples, Modena, and Venice, chiefly with regard to the right of presenting to evele-siastical benefices. The French revolution was, however, fraught with more serious consequence to the papal see. Upon a mere pretext, the French Convention ordered General Bonaparte to enter the Ecclesiastical territory, when, having taken several places, he compelled the page to purchase a peace by a contribution of thirty millions of livres (£1,200,000), and the delivering up of the finest works of painting and sculpture. In 1797 a band of French revolutionists excited a tumult at Rome, and being driven to the house of the French Ambassador, were there headed by General Duphot, who, together with several of the French, was slain. Upon this, General Berthier entered Italy, and made the pope prisoner in his capital, which was plundered. The venerable pontill was carried away by the victors, and hurried over the Alps to Valence, where he died. His body was interred in a private manner; but in 1802 it was taken up and convey d to Rome, where it was interred with great pomp. B. at Cesena, in the Papal States, 1717; p. 1709.

Pius VII. (Gregorio Barnaba Chiaramonti) was at first a Benedictine monk, but became, at the age of 40 years, bishop of Tivoli. In 1785 he was created a cardinal, and, after the death of Pius VI., was elected to the papal chair in 1800, by a conclave of thirty-live cardinals, after several months' deliberation at Venice. In the following year he entered Rome, which city was shortly afterwards evacuated by the French. The relations between Pius VII. and Bonaparte, then first consul, were at the outset of a sufficiently cordial nature. A concordat was signed between the republic and Rome. and in 1804 Pius repaired to Paris, where, in the cathedral of Notre Dame, he was present at the coronation of Napoleon as emperor. The misfortunes of the pope commenced in the following year. The emperor suddenly sent his troops to Ancona in 1805, and, shortly afterwards, Civita Vecchia was seized. Napoleon also wished Plus to annul the marriago never make his soldiers drop their muskets; that, if provoked too fir, he (Napoleon) could separate the Romish church from the greater part of Europe, and establish a more rational form of worship than that of which the pope ite of

was the head, and that such a thing was easy took possession of Rome, and, shortly afterwards, the finest or kome, inner, shortly arrivants, in lines provinces of the papal territory were united to the kingdom of Italy. It was in vain that Prus remonstrated: Napoleon declared that unless he fo, the ith entered into an offensive and defensive all mee with the kingdom of Naples and Italy, "he would lose his temporal sovereignty, and rem in bishop of Rome, as his predecessors were during the first eight centuries, ! and under the reign of Charlemagne." After remaining some time as a prisoner in his palace on the Quirmal, Purs was suddenly taken off, under French es ort, to Grenoble, whence he was conveyed to Sarona, in the Riviera of Gener. In 1812 he was taken to Fontainebleau, but still remained obdurate, and refused to sanction Napoleon's separation from Josephine. The defeat of the French in Germany, as well as the previous disaster in Russia, caused Napoleon to give way believe his passive but indexible op-ponent. In 1s14 he reat him back to Italy but Pius, instead of proceeding to Rome, stopped at Cescua, his native town. Upon the abdeation of Napoleon, Pius proceeded to Rome, where he spent the remainder of his life, engaged in reforming the civil institutions of his dominions. He created a new police, aboli, hed tarture and the punishment of death for otheres against religion, extirpated the banditti of the Campagna, and put an end to several vexations.

faudal imports. n. 1712; n. at Itome, 1823; Pires VIII. (Carolinal Castlejione) because pope in succession to Leo XIII. in 1829. Acce a short pontificate of one year, he died, 1830.

Prus IX. (Giovanni Maria Mastar Ferretti) became pope in succession to Gregory XVI, in 1846. Born of a noble Halian family, his youth was characterized by mildness and a charitable disposition. In his 18th year he went to Rome, with the intention of entering the body-guard of the pope; but having been seized by an epaleptic attack, he, upon recovering resolved to devote himself to the service of the Church. After completing his studies at the college of the surprised a Volterra, he was ordained a priest, and dis-patched upon a mission to Chili, in 1823. Upon his return, two years later, he became precident of the hospital of St. Michael. In 1819 his 2011 was rewarded by an appointment to the archhishopric of Spoleto, from which he was, in 1832, translated to Iutola; and became cardinal under Gregory XVI, in 1840. Upon the nal unter Gregory Avi. in 1800. Close the easily and the death of Gregory, in 1818, the conditionery and his explicit that the character of Cardinal Ferretti gained unthe bitasel him the tiars. The first measures of the new pontiff were of a popular and liberal character; was treacher was treacher. imendational annesty; reformed civil abuses, and lightened the burthens of his people to a very considerable cutent. But the spirit of republicanism, which awoke at Paris in 1848. spread throughout Europe; and at Rome, as elsewhere, the people rose against their ruler. remaining some time a prisoner in his palace, crown, and another portion for Almagro's party, fled in discusse to Gasta. These events pro- Pizarro and his companions had 1,528,500 ounces duced a complete reaction in the weak and vaciliating mind of the pontiff. All the liberal tendencies of his policy disappeared under the influence of his minister, Cardinal Antonelli. and under his tear of republican institutions. He called upon the great Cathol e powers of had: ved at Home, wh In 1540 a m I me, and succe. pope to mathrane. The ever, to hold the "patri tact, for in 1860 the gre tory was annexed to the Three events in the I Ly remarked in basis of an edict by which a archy was re-established in 1

e asconence of which a bill was English houses of Paragement f hishops to bear ceel sin t cal tit s in Er the doctrinal decision as to the or the immagniate concertion: (Ecumenical Conneil which wa 1stit for the purpose of deslari b htty of the papes of Rome. B ne ar Ancona, 1792.

Planning in and a granter nish adventi ter, v ho discover-Pere, was the initial son of was in his youth employed by tend plas. He area to the behaviolate the read or wr a bold and enter of mar event covery of the New World op-suitable theater ju which to v ten wit. After fourt day not everyless, he is had the good Att pealth in the cheet of which we gold red on to the routh of P. he sailed from Palaman with o toon, and tour horses, and all it i years, during which he and h pericured every forca of hard L in which gold and slver alcom He then went to Spon, and Charles V, the title of governgeneral of the new god water d the assistance of cont. dation, with wigained greatly dy. Af e colony at then with of the ce d d igland t that time is rogast deter ear, At Came not only for a sils; and the

when the inea came to Pizarro's quarters, he was treacherously noted, and combaed in a he disbanded his Swiss guard; granted to poli- room twenty-two feet long by sixteen feet tical offenders, amounting to 2000, a general and bread. Shortly afterwards, Atalmahot offered to lid this apartm at with gold as high as the Spanish adventurer could reach, if he would set him free. The oner was instantly accepted, and aith ugh the impatience of the Spanards was too great to allow of all the promised treasure being collected, the hoard was so great, A republic was proclaimed; and Pius IX., after | that after a fifth part had been reserved for the

France, Austria, Spain estab his authority estab

of P

200,0000 l, and m d by the ad the falls aulia.

> 5 and s par nt to of w

> but 1 al th

i to Peru, where Al towns, and adang a Spanish to divide among them. After wringing all he could from the unfortunate Atahuajpa, Pizarro inhumanly put him to death in 1533, and then radrogeded to capture the city of Cuzeo, where great treasure was taken. In 1534, Ferdiand, one of Fizuro's brothers, laid the royal share at origin on the paternal side, Henry II. of English city of the country of t the feet of Charles V., whereupon the Spanish leader was confirmed in his power, while to Almagro, his rival, was granted all the country that might be conquered southward of Pizarro's vice-royalty. Whilst Pizarro was engaged in settling the government of Peru, Almagro proceeded to conquer Chili. In 1536, the Peruvians having risen against the Spaniards, Almagro marched to their relief: but after defeating the insurgent natives, he took prisoners Pizarro's brothers. Almagro himself subsequently fell into the hands of his more enterprising rival, by whom he was brought to trial and executed, in 1538. Thus left alone in power, Pizarro began to rule in a despotic and partial manner, whereat many of the Spanish adventurers became alienated and attached themselves to Almagro's son. In 1541 a conspiracy was formed against Pizarro; he was surprised at midday, set upon, and after a most determined resistance, himself and a few devoted followers were slain. B. at Truxillo, 1480.—Gonsalvo, one of his brothers, was acting as governor of Quito at the date of Pizarro's murder, and subscquently succeeded in gaining supreme power quently succeeded in gaining supreme power throughout Peru. After retaining this position during three years, he was, in 1513, defeated and taken prisoner by Guasca, whom Charles V. had created viceroy. He was brought to trial, condamned as a rebel, and executed almost immediately afterwards

Planche, James Robinson, pla'-shai, a mo-dern English writer and dramatist, who was deseended from a French family which came to England on the revocation of the Ediet of Nantes in 1635. Early in life he wrote a bur-lesque, entitled, "Amoroso, King of Little Britain," for a private performance, which was afterwards accepted by the committee of management of Drury Lane Theatre, where it was produced with complete success in 1818. This broated who complete success in 103. This unexpected piece of good fortune determined the young author to apply himself to dramatic writing; and, during the subsequent forty years, he wrote about two hundred plays, some of the most successful of which were the charming extravaganzas produced under the management of Madame Vestris. He also adapted several of the plays of the old dramatists, and was at one period engaged to design the costumes for the Shaksperean dramas placed upon the stage of the shakspereal dramas placed upon the stage of Covent Garden Theatre. For the series called the "Library of Entertaining Knowledge," he wrote a "History of British Costume;" the articles on costume in Knight's "Pictorial Shak-speare," as well as the articles "Costume and Furniture" in the "Manners and Customs," chap-ters in the "Pictorial History of England" were ters in the "Pictorial History of England" were also from his pen. He became a member of the Society of Antiquaries in 1830, but retired from it in 1852. A course of travel in the north of Europe led to his producing "Lays and Legends of the Rhine," and "Descent of the Danube." Not the least valuable of his many excellent offorts was his translation of the Fairy Tales of the Countess D'Aulnoy, Perrault, and others. In 1854 he received the appointment of Rouge Croix Pursuivant of Arms, and was made Somerset Herald in 1856. Among his works on land, the first of the line, having been the son of Geoffrey V., duke of Anjou, and of Matilda, daughter of Henry I. The Duke of Anjou was named Plantagenet because he usually wore a sprig of broom—in Latin, planta gensta, in French plante genst—in his cap. Henry II, ascended the English throne in 1154, and his descendants reigned during 331 years, the last monarch of the line being Richard III, who fell at the battle of Bosworth, in 1485, 14th century the line became divided into then century the may became divided in: two great with factions, that of York and of Lancaster, or the parties of the Red and White Roses. (See Hexen Y. II., III., IV., and VI.; Richard I., II., and Hi; Edward I., III., IV., and VI.; and John.)

Playing Chapterbooks and VI. and John.

Plantin, Christopher, plantia, a celebrated French printer, who settled at Antwerp in 1555, and became distinguished for the beauty and correctness of his productions. His editions are extremely valuable. His chief work was a polyglot Bible, executed by order of Philip II. of Spain. n. in Touraine, 1514; p. 1589.

Platina, plate'-nu (Bartholomew Sacchi), a learned It dian historien, who, on going to Rome, was patronized by Cardinal Bessarion, by whose means he was appointed apostolical abbreviator; of which post he was deprived by Paul II. Platina wrote a letter to that pontril who sent him to prison and caused han to be who sent him to prison and caused han to be tortured. Subsequently, Sixtis IV. made him librarian of the Vatican. He was the author of a "History of the Popes;" a "History of Mantan," the "Life of Nerio Capponi," and other works. n. near Mantan, 1421, p. 1431. PLATE, plateto, an illustrous Greek philosopher. His father was Ariston, the son of Aristoules: on his mother's side he was descended from Solon. His first master was Dionysius the grammarian; and afterwards he received instructions in gymnastic exercises from Ariston. an Argive wrestler, who, according to some accounts, gave him the name of Plate, because accounts, gave mit the name of Pinto, occasive of the broadness of his shoulders and the 16-bustness of his person. His former name was Aristocles, which was that of his grandlather. He next applied to the study of music and poetry, and composed some pieces intended for Olympic exercises; but on hearing Socrates deliver a long discourse, he burnt them, and became his disciple; some of his epigrams, however, are still preserved. He was a disciple of Socrates for about ten years; and mon his death, in 809 n.c., Plato left Athens, and travelled into different countries in search of knowledge. At Cyrene he studied geometry and other branches of mathematics; thence he went into Egypt, where, during thirteen years, he sought to learn all that the private could teach him. He next visited Italy, and settled at Tarentum, where he formed an intimacy with Eurytus and Archytas. He afterwards made a voyage to Sielly, to observe the wonders of that island, particularly Mount Etna. In Sielly he became acquainted with Dionysins, tyrant of Syracuse, whom he was unfortunate enough to offend, and who induced the Spartan ambassador, in whose vessel Plato was returning home, to sell him for a slave at Ægina; but his purchaser

Platoff

Athens, where he commenced teaching in the garden of the Academy whence his philosophy was called the Academic. At the request of Dion, the uncle of Dionysius the Younger, he made a second voyage to Sicily, where he was received with great honour; but finding that his advice was not heeded by the youthful tyrant, who chose rather to imitate his father, he reand choose ranger to indicate his father, he returned to athers, where he gained a number of followers. After making a third journey to Syracuse, he settled in his native city, and there rpent the remaining years of his life in literary and philosophical pursuits. The philosophy of Plate is so sublime, his morality so pure, and ... views of the Divine Being and a future state so clear, that he has been thought to have state so clear, that he has been thought to have find a knowledge of the Mosaic writings; a supposition which, considering his long resi-cence in Egypt, is not improbable. The best clitions of Plato are.—the Greek text, edited by Bekker, and published at Herlin, 1823; a complete French translation, by Victor Cousin; a partial translation into German, by Schleiera partial Gaussalou into octman, by School-macher; and an English version by Taylor. Some of his principal writings have been trans-lated and published in Bohn's Classical Library.

n, at Athens, B.C. 420; D. 347 B.C. Platoff, Count, plat-tor, hetman of the Cossaeks, served in the campaign of 1846-7 against the French, and subsequently defeated the Turks in several engagements in Moldavia. He was opposed to Napoleon during the advance of the grand army into Russia, in ISI2. He experienced several defeats, particularly at (rodne; but in the subsequent retreat of the french, his Cossacks proved as destructive as a plague to the fugitives. In the campaigns of 1811-15 he signalized himself chiefly by allowing his Cossacks to plunder without restraint. B. about 1765; p. 1818.

PLAUTUS, Marcus Accius, plan'-tus, a Latin comic dramatist, was a man of humble birth. and settled at Rome, where his plays were per-formed with great applause. There is more intrigue and plot in his pieces than in those of Terence: the humour, also, is extremely natural and entertaining. Only twenty are extant. A good English translation is that entitled "Bonnel Thornton's Comedies of Plautus, translated into Familiar Blank Verse." B. at Sarsina, in into Familiar Blank Verse." B. at Sarsina, in Umbria, about 227 B.C.; D. 184 B.C.

PIAYFAIR, John, plai-fair, an eminent Scotch mathematician, who, in his 18th year, became a candidate for the professorship of mathematics at the Marischal College, Abernathematics at the Markena Conege, Auct-deen, and was only excelled by two older men. In 1735 he was appointed joint professor of mathematics in the University of Edinburgh, and, in 1805, succeeded to the chair of natural philosophy at the same seat of learning. He as a supporter of Dr. Hutton's geological theories, and, in 1802, published "Hustrations of the Huttonian Theory of the Earth," an improved edition of which he contemplated, and, with that view, made a geological tour in Italy, France, and Switzerland. He published "Outlines of Natural Philosophy" and "Elements of Geometry," To the "Edinburgh Review" he contributed many articles on astronomical to the "Encyclopadia Britannica," n. at Bervie, 1227 Dundee, 1749; n. at Edinburgh, 1819.

XIAIR, William, brother of the preceding, was an increasions projector and author. After and after acquiring a fortune, retired to an estate having given him his freedom, he repaired to serving an apprenticeship to a millwright he was engaged as a draughtsman at Boulton and Watt's establishment, Soho, Birmingham, On going to London, he obtained patents for various inventions, and engaged in many speenls. ons inventions, and a characted in many special-tions, and became a firtile writer on politics and other subjects. His most important pub-lications are, "A Commercial and Political Attas," "An Inquiry into the Decline and Fall of Nations," Prince as it is," "History of Jacobinism," and "Politish Fanniy Antiquity." B. 1793; p. 1823.

PLAYFAIR, Lyon, an eminent modern chemist. who was sent from Bengal, in the East Indies, to receive his education at the University of St. Andrew's, and having shown a taste for St. Amerows, and naving shown a case no chemical science, was, in 1834, placed under Professor Graham at Glasgow. In the follow-ing year he went to India, but shortly afterwards returned to Europe, and having resumed his chemical studies under his former teacher, at University College, London, possed to the celebrated laboratory at Giessen, in 1838. Under Liebig he made great progress in organic chemistry; and after taking the degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of Giessen, returned to London, where he produced some translations of the great German chemist's "Reports on the Progress of Organic Chemis-In 1813 he became professor of chemistry in the Royal Institution of Manchester, and in that position became very popular. Nominated a member of the Health of Towns Commission, he drew up several of the reports of that body. His next appointment was as chemist to the Museum of Economic Geology, then in Parliament Street; but when the new building in Jermyn Street was commenced, the arrangements of the laboratory were placed under his charge. He was one of the most active commissioners of the Great Exhibition in 1851, for services was created a Companion of the Bath, and was further rewarded by Prince Albert with the appointment of gentleman usher in his household. He subsequently be-came joint-secretary, and, at a later period, sole secretary of the department of science and art. Dr. Playfair published some valuable anal of coal-gas in the "Memoirs" of the Museum of Economic Goology, and several lectures upon the products exhibited in the Crystal Palace of 1851. Throughout his career he displayed great scientific knowledge, was the discoverer of some new chemical compounds, and was one of the best chemical analysts of his time. B. in Bengal, East India, 1810.

Physic, Ignace, pli-rl, a German musical composer, who studied his are under Vanhall and Haydn, and during a long tour in Italy. In 1753 he received the appointment of chapelmuster at Strasburg cathedral, and while holding that office composed a number of masses and other pieces of sacred music, which were consumed by a great fire which occurred in the city. Become famous for his compositions, he was, in 1791, invited to London, where he was so liberally rewarded for his efforts that he was enabled to purchase an estate near Strasburg. During the French revolution he narrowly escaped the guillatine. About that period he also began to lose his hold upon the popular musical taste, a change which induced him to abandon the science of music for the trade of music-publisher and pianoforte-manufacturer; near Paris. B. at Rupperstahl, near Vienna, 1757; D. near Paris, 1831.

PLINY, Caius Plinius Secundus, plin'-e, plin'e-us, called the Elder, was of an illustrious family, and in his youth bore arms with reputation: after which he was admitted to the college Vespasian appointed him procurator ofanours of Spain, in which office he conducted himself with strict integrity, devoting the day to public affairs and the night to study. His mind was stored with various knowledge, and he was an indefatigable observer of the works of nature, To this spirit of observation he sacrificed his life; for, lying at Misenium, in the Gulf of Naples, with a fleet which he commanded, he was surprised at an extraordinary cloud issuing from Vesuvius. He immediately moved his vessel so as to be enabled to land at the foot of the mountain to ascertain the cause of the phenomenon: but the suithe cause of the phenomenon: but the sul-phureous exhalations from the burning lava overeame him, and he was suffocated. Of all the works of Pliny none remain but his "Natural History," which, says Cuvier, "is one of the most precious monuments left us by antiquity." It is a perfect encyclopacial of ancient science, and is divided into 37 books, tated as science, and is divided into 3 books, treating of astronomy, melcorology, the theory of the earth, geography, botany, zoology, agriculture, medicine, mineralogy, sculpture, painting, &c. B. it is supposed, 23 A.D.; D. 79.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Caius Plinius Caeilius Secundus, was the nephew of the preceding, who adopted him as his son and heir. He had Quintilian for his master, and advanced so rapidly, that at the age of 19 he pleaded in the forum with an eloquence equal to that of the greatest orators of his time. When Trajan was elevated to the throne, he conferred the consular dignity on Pliny, who, at the desire of the senate, pronounced that fine oration which is extant, entitled the "Panegyric on Trajan." He was some time after appointed governor of Pontus and Bithynia, where he abolished the arbitrary imposts and stopped the persecution of the Christians, of whom he gave a liberal account to the emperor. After his return to Rome, he settled at Comum, his native place, where he established an academy and library for young men who had not the means of edu-cation. Pliny was a liberal patron of men of virtue and learning. For Quintilian he always retained the greatest regard, and gave his daughter a handsome down on her marriage. Of the many works of this writer, only his "Epistles" and "Panegyrie on Trajan" remain. He also wrote the "History of his own Times," of which Tacitus speaks in high terms. The best edition is that of Amsterdam, 1734. Hearne, Lord Orrery, and Masson, have furnished English translations of them. B. about 62: D. about 116.

PLOT, Robert, plot, a learned English anti-quary and naturalist, who became secretary to the Royal Society in 1632, and published their "Transactions" from No. 143 to 166. He was appointed first keeper of the Ashmolean Museum, and professor of chemistry at Oxford. auseum, and professor of chemistry at Oxford, He was also nominated historiographer to the king, and Mowbray herald extraordinary. His works are, the "Natural Histories of Oxfordshire and Staffordshire," papers in the "Philosophical Transactions," and an essay on the "Oxigin of Springs," in Latin. B. in Kent, 18413—18406. 1041; p. 1696.

PLOTINUS, plo-ti'-nus, the most celebrated of the neo-Platonic philosophers. After studying for eleven years under Ammonius, he travelled into Persia and India, where he acquired a great store of knowledge. He served in the army under Gordian; but, when that emperor army under Gordian; but, when that emperor was slain, Polotinus effected his escape, and went to Rome, where he opened a school of philosophy, and had many disciples. His works were printed at the Oxford University press, in 3 volunces, 1835. a. at Lycopolis, Egypt, 204; D. in Campania, 274.

PLOWDEN, Edmund, plou'der, an eminent English lawyer, who was educated at Cambridge; whence he removed to Oxford, where he took his degrees in physic, which profession be conited for the law. It is "Conservation." he quitted for the law. His "Commentaries and Reports" are greatly esteemed. They consist of a collection of cases from Edward VI. to the middle of the reign of Elizabeth. B. in Shropshire, about 1517; D. 1585.

Pluche, Noel Antoine, ploczh, a French writer, who became professor of rhetoric in the white, who became protests of the orders, and subsequently went to Paris, where he taught geography and history. His principal works are, "Spectacle de la Nature," of which there are several English translations: "The History of the Heavens," an inquiry into the origin of mythology and idolatry (this has also been translated into English); and "On the Mechanism of Languages." B. 1638; D. 1761.
PLUKENET, Leonard, pluke'-net, an eminent

PLUKENER, LOCAIRA, putcke*-net, an emment English botanist, who was doctor of pluysic; but, notwithstanding his great merit, was neglected till the close of life, when he was appointed superintendent of the garden at Hampton Court, and royal professor of butany. He published several "Collections of Lotany," and his Herbal, containing 8000 plants, is in the British Museum. B. 1612; D. 1706.

PLUMIER, Charles, ploo'-me-ai, an eminent Freich botanist, who at first studied mathematics, but afterwards applied himself to natural history. Louis XIV, sent him to America, to collect plants useful in medicine, and he made three voyages for that purpose. The king rewarded him with a pension, and appointed him warded him with a piension, and appromise nimit royal botanise. He was on the eve of undertaking a fourth voyage, but died as he was about to embark. His works are, "Description of the Plants of America," "Treatise on America, Form of the Plants of America," "Treatise on American Form," "The Art of Turning," wo dissertations on Cochineal, in the "Journal des Sevans," &c. B. 1646; D. near Cadis, 1706.

Plunket, Oliver, plun'-ket, archbishop of Armagh and Roman Catholic primate of Ireland, who was accused of having attempted to excite an insurrection of the Roman Catholics of Ireland against Charles II. On that charge

he was condemned to death, and after execution his body was quartered, in 1631. B. 1616. PLUNER, William Conyngham, first Lord, an Irish lawyer and statesman, who, having distinguished himself by his ovatorical talents while a student at Trinity College, Dublin, was returned to the Irish Parliament through the influence of the earl of Charlemont. In 1787 innuence of the earl of Challemont. In 1/89, was called to the bar, and obtained such a large practice that, by the year 1807, he had acquired a fortune. In the same year he was returned to the British House of Commons, when he attached himself to the Whigs, and became a powerful orator of that party. In 1837 he was created lord chief paties of the Common he

Pluquet

Pleas in Ireland, and a peer of the United Kingriess in Freund, and a peer of the United Ming-dom. During the passage of the Roman Ca-tholic Emancipation Bill he was the constant adviser of the duke of Wellington in the English adviser of the case of vernington in the lengths. House of Lords. In 1830 he became lord chancellor of Ireland, which post he retained until the year 1811. Lord Plunket's later year were spent apart from political life, in retirement at his estate in Ireland. He was a great and impassioned orator; but though he has been compared to Pitt and Burke, he was too been compared to Fits and Banks, he was observed to be the considerable of legislation to have been equal to those statesmen. As a lawyer, he was more brilliant thun sound, more dexterous than learned. n. at Newton, Cork, 176k; D. near Bray, Ireland, 1854.

PLUQUET, François André Adrien, ploc'-kai, an eminent French writer, who entered into orders and obtained a canonry, which he quitted orders and obtained a canonry, which he quitted assume the professorship of history at the College of France, in 1776. He belonged to the party of Fontenelle, Montesquieu, and Helvenius; and, ameng other important works, wrote "An Examination of Fatalism," "Dictionary of Herosice," Mo Schaliffey" (in this work he combated the opinion of Hobbes, and proved below the Schaling of Hobbes, and proved the Hobbes of Hobbes, an that man is beneficent and religious); "The Classical Books of the Empire of China," and On Luxury."

On Luxury." B. at Bayeux, 1716; D. 1790. Privancii, plad-turk, a celebrated Greek biographer and moralist, who studied philosophy in the school of Ammonius, at Delphi; and so greatly was he esteemed by his countrymen, that, when but a young man, he was asso-ciated in a deputation to the proconsul of the province, on an important mission, which he discharged with honour. He is stated to have afterwards travelled through Greece and into Egypt, and his observations in the latter country are believed to have led to his producing a treatise on Isis and Osiris. One account, but not a perfectly reliable one, declares that, when he visited Rome, he was received with flattering marks of distinction by Trajan, who raised him to the con-sular dignity, and appointed him governor of Illyria. It is certainly ascertained that he resided at Rome, where he delivered lectures in Greek upon philosophy, and enjoyed the friendship of Lucan, the younger Pliny, Martial, and support having the younger largy margin, and others. At an advanced age he retired to his native town. He left two sons, Plutarch and Lamprias. The last wrote a list of his father's works, which were numerous. The most celebrated of his works are his "Lives of Illustrious Men," in delineating which he has shown great impartiality, an abhorrenge of tyranny and vice, and an accurate acquaintance with the human mind. His "Morals" also contain many valuable of servations and curious narratives. The and of servations and caroos harratives. The phens, Greek and Latin, 1572. His "Lives" have been translated into English by Driden, by Laughorne, and by Professor Long. His "Morals" have also been translated into English. B. at Cheronen, Beeolia, about 48; D. at the same place, at a very advanced age.

same piace, at a very advanced age.

Pococs, Fdward, pol-kok, a learned English divine and orientalist, who, at the age of 1t, was entered of Magdalen Hall, Oxford; whence he removed to Corpus Christi College, where he obtained a fellow-hip. In 1629 he enteredento orders, and was appointed chaplan to the Eng-lish factory at Aleppo. While there, he im-proved himself in the Hebrew, Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic languages, which he had before and belinopte auguages, which he had corors studied at the university. He was also employed by Archbishop Laud in purchasing ancient manuscripts and coins; and that prelate having founded an Arabic lecture at Oxford appointed Mr. Pocock the first professor. Ho returned home in 1636; but afterwards made another voyage to the East, and remained there four years. On his arrival in I-nesland, he found his patron in the Tower and the kingdom in commotion. In 1618 he was nominated to the Hebrew professorship, with the prebend of Christehurch annexed; he published in the same ve r his "Specimen Historice Arabum." 1052 he was one of those concerne I in preparing the intended edition of the Polyglot Bible. His principal works were-" Por a Mosis; or, The principal works were—"Por a Mosis; or, The Six Predatory Discourses of Moses Maimonides," "The Annals of Entychius; ""Abu-l-farsi Historia, Dynastarum;" ("Commentaries in Michi, Malachi, Hosca, and Joel;" a Syriac version of the second epistle of St. Peter, the second and third of John, and that of Jude.

B. at Oxford, 1604; D. 1631. POCOCK, Isaac, an artist and dramatist, whose father distinguished himself as a marine painter; and Isaac appearing to have a genius for the and isade appearing to have a genius for the same art, was placed first with Romney, and afterwards studied under Sir William Recent, He gained the first prize given by the British Institution, by the production of his historical picture of the murder of Thomas à Becket. He afterwards painted other pictures, but becoming independent, he retired to Maidenhead, where he occasionally used both his peneil and pen, and produced many dramatic pieces, the greater and produced many dramatic pieces, and greater part of which were successful. He was the author of about 40 melodeamas, farces, and operatic pieces; among which were, "The Miller and his Men," "Hit or Miss," "John of Paris," "Robinson Crusoe," "Montrose," &c. B. 1782: D. 1835.

Por, Edgar Allan, po, an eminent American writer, who was the son of a strolling player, and was in childhood left an orphan, but was adopted by Mr. Allan, a wealthy merchant. He accompanied that gentleman to England in 1816, and was placed at a school at Stoke Newington. Returning to his native country in 1822, he was sent to an neadency at Richmond. and at a later period to Charlottesville University, Virginia. His career at school and college was brilliant, so far as the acquirement of learning was concerned, but was marked by so much extravagamee and irregularity, that it termi-nated in his expulsion from the last-named establishment. He soon afterwards quarrelled with his generous prefector, in consequence of the latter's refusal to pay some of his gambling debts. Intending to proceed to Gree, e, at that period struggling to throw off the tyranny of the Turks, he want to Europe, but, although he never reached his destination, he wandered about the continent until he was seized by the police of St. Petersburg, for being engaged in a drunken riot. The American ambassador proarunen rot. The American ambussador pro-cured his releas, and sent him home, where he was kindly received by Mr. Allan. In a short time, however, he had a serious quarred with Mr. Allan, who declared he would never see or assist him again. A small volume of peems which he had published, had been so successful us to lead Poe to believe that he might rely upon literature as a means of subsistence; but deeming himself slighted, he soon afterwards

hin

enlisted as a private soldier. Some military friends rescued him from this position; upon which he again adopted a literary career. He readily obtained employment upon the magazines and periodicals; but his unfortunate prediluction for strong drinks always lost him what his great talent had secured. Towards the close of 1848, he joined a temperance society, but un-happily was weak enough to accept the invitation of some friends to drink, while staying at Baltimore, and became so utterly inebriated that he fell down in the streets. On being picked up, he was conveyed to an hospital, where he expired on the following day. His works consist of "Eureka, a Prose Poem," one volume of poetry, and two of tales. B. at Lal-timore, United States, 1811; D. in the same city, 1849.

Poelemberg, Cornclins. (See Polemberg.) Poerio, Carlo, po-ecr'-e-o, a modern Neapo-litan statesman, who was the son of Baron Joseph Poerio, counsellor of state and attorney-general of the high court of justice at Naples. Carlo was educated at Florence under the most able professors, but returned to Naples in 1828, where he commenced practice as an advocate, and distinguished himself by eloquently defend-ing the principles of representative government, for which he was three times prosecuted by the ruling powers. When a constitutional government was proclaimed at Naples, in 1848, Poerio was appointed under-secretary for home affairs, and afterwards became minister of public in-struction. When Bomba suddenly and infa-mously destroyed the constitution, Poerio was, with other enlightened members of the state imprisoned. During ten years he suffered all the horrors of a Neapolitan dungeon, but obtained his release from the late king of Naples in 1859. With Settembrini and many other patriots, he was placed on board a ship, which was ordered to proceed to the United States. But the patriots, who greatly outnumbered the But the patriots, who greatly outsitumered the crew of the vessel, sent a deputation to the captain, informing him that, without wishing to employ force, they had resolved to steer the ship into the nearest Eritish port. The exiles were in consequence landed at Cork, and soon afterwards Poerio and his companions proceeded to London. He subsequently returned to his country, and was elected a member of the Italian Parliament in 1860. B. 1803; p. 1867.

Poggendorff, John Christian, pog-gen-dorf, an eminent German physician, who in 1834 was appointed professor of physics at the university of Bettin, and in 1838 beeame member of the Academy of Sciences. In his work entitled "The Alagnetism of the Voltaie Pile," he was the first to demonstrate, and apply the principles of the multiplier. In 1824 he assumed the direction of the "Annals of Physics and Chemistry," which, under his editorship, became one of the first of the scientific journals of Germany. With Liebilg and Wealher, he afterwards under took a "Dictiumry of Chemistry," and subsequently produced a "Biographical Dictionary of Mathematicians and Naturalists," and Studies for a History of the Exact *Ceiences." His scientific researches have been principally directed towards electricity and magnetism. of Berlin, and in 1838 became member of the directed towards electricity and magnetism, He invented a galvanometer, another instru-ment for producing a constant current of electricity, and made some important discoveries Hamburg, 1796.

Poggio Bracciolini, John Francis, pod'-io bratch'-che-o-le'-ne, a learned Italian historian, whose merit procured him the office of secretary to Pope Boniface IX. and several of his successors. While he was at the council of Constance. he was employed in searching for ancient manu-scripts in that city, of which he discovered several. From Constance he went to England, where he continued for some time, and then returned to Rome; but, in 1435, settled at Florence, married, and became secretary to that republic. His principal works are—"Funeral Orations," "History of Florence," "De Varie-tate Fortung," "Epistles," a collection of wit-ticisms, a Latin translation of Diodorus Siculus, nd editions of several ancient writers discoered by him, particularly Quintilian and Ammianus Marcellinus. B. at Terranova, Florence, 1380; D. at Florence, 1459.—His son James translated his father's "History of Florence" from the Latin into Italian; also the "Life of Cyrus" from the Greek, and other works. He was put to death for being concerned in the conspiracy of the Pazzi in 1478.

Potrier, Germain, pwoi'-ri-ai, an eminent French chronologist and antiquary, was of the order of Benedictines of St. Maur, which he quitted in 1769. He was one of the writers of The Art of Verifying Dates," and undertook, n conjunction with Precieux, the 18th volume of the "Collection of the Historics of Gaul and of the "Concession of the Habster of Grand and France," begun by Bonquet. B. 1724; D. 1803. Poinson, John B., paob'-sawng, an eminent French geographer, who preduced a "Physical and Political Atlas of the whole World," the atlas for the "Universal Geography" of Malte-Brun, and several of the maps accompanying the works of Humboldt. He also constructed several fine globes, one of which is preserved in the Louvre museum, B. 1761; D. at Valence, 1891. Poissor, Raymond, pwois'-sawing, acclebrated French actor and dramatic virties; who was gentlemen of the chamber to the Dan de Crequi, but quitted that service for the stage. His pieces are, "The Baron do la Crassa," "The Good Soldier," "The Food of Quality," and some others: B, about 1620; p. 1800.

Poisson, Simeon Denis, an eminent French mathematician, who, in 1811, was appointed professor of mechanics in the Normal School at Paris, and subsequently became examiner of the Polytechnic School, member of the Academy of Sciences and of the Council of Public In-struction, and baron and officer of the Legion of Honour He was one of the most profound mathematicians of his time, and largely contributed to the scientific journals. His dissertations chiefly relate to the mathematics of magnetism, heat the gases, capillary attraction, gravitation, &c. He excelled in applying the methods of mathematical analysis to questions of physics. A monument to his memory was creeted in his native town. p. at Pithiviers, 1781; p. at Paris, 1840.

POLYRE, Peter, poler, an eminent French naturalist and traveller, who entered the Congregation of Missionaries and was sent to China, where he was imprisoned during two years. In his passage to Europe the vessel was attacked by the English, and Poivre had his arm carried off. He subsequently quitted the ecclesiastical state, and was sene by the French India Company, in 1749, to open a commercial establishment in Cochin-China, and was also appointed intendent 3 T 2 introduced the bread-fruit tree and other valuable plants. He wrote "The Voyage of a Philosopher," a treatise on the "Dyeing of Silks," and "The History and Manners of China," &c. B.

at Lyons, 1719; b. at the same city, 1786.
Pole, Reginald, pole, cardinal and archbishop of Canterbury, was the son of Richard Pole, Lord Montague, and of Margaret, daughter of Lord Montague, and of Margaret, aurginer of George, dake of Clarence, younger brother of Edward IV, and cousin-german to the mother of Henry VIII. At the age of 12 he was entered at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he may be a supported to the considerable progress in learning. In 1817 he obtained a prehend in the cathodral of Salisbury, and two years after, the deaneries of Exeter and Wimborne. About this time he went to Italy for improvement, upon a liberal establishment from his relation Henry VIII. He returned to England in 1525, and was held in great favour by the king, on account of his engaging manners and accomplishments; but, when that monarch arowed his design of divorcing his queen, Pole opposed it, and went anybody else. To learn by heart a whole tra-to Italy. Henry having assumed the supremacy [red] cost me nothing. In a word, if I must over the Church, and caused Dr. Sampson to write a defence of that title, sent the book to Pole, who refurned an answer to it under the title "Pro Unitate Ecclesiastica." This gave such offence that his preferments and pensions were taken from bim; but he was abundantly compensated by the pope and emperor. The former made him cardinal in 1536, and appointed him nuncio to France and Flanders. At home, however, he was declared a traitor, and a price was set upon his head. He was one of the legates at the Council of Trent, where he attended as long as his health permitted. On the death of Paul 111, he narrowly missed election to the populon. Queen Mary was no sooner settled on the English throne, than Pole was appointed legate to reduce England to submission to the papal see; but, before he set out, the act of attainder which had been passed against him was repealed. He arrived in 1554, and was magnificently received and lodged in the palace at Lambeth. Shortly after he met the Parliament, and pronounced the papal absolution of the kingdom. The day after the death of Cranmer, he took upon himself the title of archbishop of Canterbury, having been prometed to that dignity some time before. He was also lected chancellor of both universities, which he visited by commission. He behaved with moderation to the Protestants, and was displeased with the conduct of Gardiner and the other persecuting prelates. He survived Queen Mary only sixteen hours, Besides his book Mary only sixteen hours. Besides his book against Henry VIII, and his defence of it, he wrote several pieces in favour of the papal authority and the doctrines of the Church of Rome. It is difficult to absolve Cardinal Pole from all acquiescence in the dreadful persecutions which took place in Queen Mary's reign; but his mild and honourable disposition seems totally at variance with the fearful acts which disgraced that period. B. at Stourton, Stallordshire, 1500; D. at Lumbeth, POLEMBERG, Cornelius, po'-lem-buirg, an coinent Datch painter, who, at the invitation of Charles L, visited England, where h cabinet pictures of great Yearty. His failed, and on his return to France was for land capes are particularly fine. On the dissone time in disgrace. He afterwards reconstructures breaking out between the King and Parliament, he returned to his native country, in negotiating the treaty of Utrecht. In the 850 of the isles of France and Bourbon, where he B. at Utrecht, 1586; D. at the same city. 1660.

POLEMON, pol'-e-mon, a Greek philosopher. FOLKMON, poi-e-mon, a creek philosopher, who in his youth led a dissolute life; but, passing the school of Xenocrates one day, inflamed with wine, he entered in order to ridicule the philosopher. The discourse of Xenocrates on the misery of intemperance had such an effect that Polemon became his disciple and successor After this change he drank nothing but water during the rest of his life, B, at Athens, about attring the reso of his had 2510 B.C.; D. 270 B.C.

Polevox, Nicolas Alexiewitch, pol'-e-roi, an eminent Russian writer, who was the son of a merchant settled in Siberia. He never went to school, but was taught reading in his sixth year by his sister. He was a prodigious reader, and by his sister. It was a produgious reader, and, while still a mere child, wrote a drama, a manuscript newspaper, and a "History of Peter the Great." "At last," he says, in his Autobiography, "I became my father's walking dictionary in geography and history, for my memory at describe my mental progress up to the year 1811, it was this .- I had read about a thousand volumes, of all kinds and sorts, and remem-bered all that I read." In 1812 his father had settled at Moscow, when the city was destroyed sected at and-cow, when the eny was destroyed by tire on the advance of Aspodeon I.; after which event he returned to Irkutsk, where young Polevoy sport several years as clerk to his father, who wished him to become a man of business, while the inclinations of the son were wholly towards literature. In secret he learnt the French and German languages, and in 1817 sent an account of the emperor Alexander's visit to Kursk to the "Russian Courier," which was his first essay in print. He continued his contributions, and repaired to St. Petersburg, where he made the acquaintance of the most distinguished literary men; and proceeding to Moscow, established there the "Moscow Tele-graph," in 1825. The succeeding twenty-one years were occupied in incessant literary labour. He was a journalist, an historian, a romancewriter; he produced essays, tales, translations of Shakspeare, and a multitude of dramas, traof stassister, and a marcare of dramas, ra-gedies, and comedies, at a rate faster than criti-cism could follow. His most important works are, a "History of the Russian Nati a," which was left incomplete at his death; "Sketches of Russian Literature;" Dramate Works and Russian Liferature;" Dramatic Works and Translations; and Lives of Napoleon, Peter the Great, and Suwarrow. His translation of "Ham-let" was played with great success at

in 1837. B. at Irkutsk, 1706; D. 1846. H. I.S. J. B. as (FRAUSA) 17:07 J. LOSO.
POLIGNAC, Melchior de, pot-leen-yak, a celebrated French cardinal, who was descended from one of the oldest families in France, and received his education at Paris, where he, at the same time, defended the philosophy of Aristotle and that of Descartes with great ingenuity. In the disputes between the pope and the court of France, Polignac rendered great service by bringing about a reconciliation. Louis XIV. sent him as ambassador to Poland to procure the election of the prince of Conti, after the death of John Sobieski. In this he

PRIOR, MATTHEW.

Pope, Alexander.

PFEIFFER, IDA.

Polo, MARGO.

Pric. Jones

next year he received from Pope Clement XI. mined by his intense application. He was pre-the dignity of cardinal. After the death of paring to start for Italy, but n. at Southampton, Louis XIV. he was crited to his abbey of Anchin, 1827; n. in Renfereshine, 1789. and was not recalled till 1721. In 1726 he was made archbishop of Auch, and in 1732 commander of the order of the Holy Ghost. Car-dinal Polignac wrote an excellent Latin poem, cutitled "Anti-Lucretius." n. at Puy, Langue-

Counted "Anti-Lucretius." B. at Puy, Langue-doc, 1661; D. at Paris, 1741.

Polionac, Prince Jules de, minister and favourite of Charles X., was the son of the due de Polignae and his duchess, the favourite and confidante of Marie Antoinette. At an early age he joined the count of Artois, then in exile, and was appointed his aide-de-caup. In 1804 he returned to France, where he and his elder brother engaged in a plot against the first consul; on the discovery of which he was condemned to an imprisonment of two years. Even after the expiration of this term he was detained in custody, but contrived to effect his escape in 1813. After fulfilling various missions in the interests of the Bourbons, he was, upon their restoration to the throne of France, sent as ambassador to the court of England. From that post he was recalled in 1829 by Charles X., who appointed him minister of foreign affairs and president of the council. But his acts excited general dissatisfaction, and his reactionary policy led to the fall of Charles X. and the expulsion of the elder branch of the Bourbons from the French throne. During the revolution of 1830 he obstinately refused all compromise, and, after the triumph of the people, attempted to escape under a disguise; but was taken at Granville, conducted to Paris, and brought to trial before the Court of Peers. which condemned him to imprisonment for life. with the loss of all his titles and orders. After being detained for several years in the fortress of Ham, he was pardoned in 1836; upon which he repaired to England; but sub-equently returned to France, where he spent it e remainder of his days in strict privacy. This blundering statesman was, apart from politics, an honour-able and worthy man; but his public acts may be assumed to have sprung from the projudices of his birth and education, and his blind faith in the principles of the old régime. B. at Paris, 1783; p. 1847.

POLIZIANO, OF POLITIANUS, Angelo, po-lishi-ai-nus, a learned Italian writer, whose poetical talents recommended him to the patronage of Lorenzo and Julian de' Medici, the former of whom made him tutor to his children. He discharged this trust so well as to be appointed professor of Greek and Latin at Florence. His principal works were, "History of the Confederacy of Pazzi," a Latin translation of Herodian, "Greek Epigrans," Latin Epistus, "Bucolle Poems," a "Treatise on Anger," and "Orfeo," the earliest form of the libretto of an

"Otteo," the earliest form of the libretto of an open extant. n. in Tusenty, 1545, n. 1494. Pollito, (See Assinius). Polloto, thobert, poll-lok, a Scotch poet, who was educated for the church, but produced, before he had attained his 25th year, a very romarkable poem, on titled "The Course of Time." Upon the recommendation of Professor Wilson. Messrs. Blackwood, of Edinburgh, published the work, which attracted the most unqualified admiration in the religious world. It speedily ran through several editions; having in the

Polo, Marco, po'-lo, a celebrated old Vene-an traveller, whose father and uncle left tian traveller, whose Venice in 1250 for Constantinople, travelled up the Euxine, and afterwards proceeded to Bokhara, where they acquired the Monzol language: they next joined the suite of the Persian amba-sador, with which the brothers pro-ceeded to the court of Kubla Khan, in Chinese Tartary. The Venetians were well received by Kubla, who commissioned them to carry a letter to the pope, in which he asked that a hundred learned men might be sent into his dominious. They arrived safely at Venice in 1269, after an absence of ninetecu years. In 1272, the two brothers, and Marco Polo, the son of Nicolo, together with two Dominican friars, again set forth into the interior, from the coast of Syria; but the friars, becoming too frightened to proceed, left the three Venetians to prosecute by themselves their journey into central Asia. In 1275 they arrived at the camp of Rubla Khan, who soon afterwards dis-putched Marco Polo on several missions to China and India; and Marco was thus the first European who visited China, In 1291 the three Venetians were permitted to accompany an em-Veneraus were permitted to accompany an ear-bassy to Petsia, and, after travelling through China, they embarked at Fo-Kien, and sailed thence for Persia. From Persia they set sail for Venice, which they reached in 1295. Venice was at that period at war with G noa, and Marco Polo was placed in command of one of the war-galleys of the state; but, being taken prisoner, was conveyed to Genoa. While in captivity he dictated to a fellow-prisoner the narrative of his adventures. This MS, he afterwards corrected on regaining his liberty, and caused a French translation to be made of it. The work was published at Venice in 1559. It is one of the most interesting and valuable of the ancient works on geography. Marco Polo was B. about 1250; D. about 1323.

POLYMNUS, pol'-i-é-nus, a Macedonian, who wrote a work entitled "The Stratagens of War," dedicated to the emperors Antoniaus War," dedicated to the emperors Antoniaus and Verus. There are several editions of this book in Greek and Latin. It was translated into English by R. Sheppard, 1793. Flourished about the middle of the 2nd century A.D.

POLYBIUS, po-lib'-i-us, a Greek historian, whose father, Lycorias, was a distinguished Greeian general, and taught his son the principles of philosophy and policy. Philopeemen was his instructor in the art of war. Polybius displayed great skill and courage in several expeditions during the war between the Romans and Perseus, king of Macedon. When that monorch was defeated. Polybius was taken prisoner and sent to Rome, where he gained the friendship of Scipio, whom he accompanied to the siege of Carthagena, and to that of Numantium. Polybius, on the death of Scipio, was greatly afflicted, and retired into private life. Partonly of his "Universal History" of his own time, in Greek, remains, which was translated into English by Sir Henry Sheares, in 1693. B. at Megalopolis in Arcadia, about 204 B.C.; D. about 123 g.c.

, pol'-i-karp, bishop of Smyrna, and a martyr of the Christian church, was the disyear 1857 attained its twenty-first. The young ciple of St. John the Evangelist. He made a poet's constitution was frail, and was under-journey to Rome in 160, to settle the controversy respecting the proper time for the celebration of Easter. On his return to Smyrna, in 166, he was condemned to the flames by the proconsul. His martyrdom is affectingly related in a letter from the church of Smyrna to the churches of Pontus; and there is also extant an epistle of his to the Philippians, published by Usher, with those of Ignatius, in 1617. B. 71.

THE DICTIONARY

Polycletus

POLYCLETUS, pol-i-kle'-lus, a sculptor of Sicyon, in the Peloponnesus, who was the rival of Phidias. It is reported that Polyeletus, by way of convicting the critics, exhibited a statue for public animadversion, offering to correct the faults that should be noticed. On producing it a second time, amended exactly according to the errors which had been pointed out, he placed by it another, formed according to his own judgment. The observers manimously approved this last, and censured the former; on which Polyeletus said, "That which you cond-un, is your own work; that which you admire, is unine." Flourished about 410 B.C.

POLYBORE VERGIL. (See VERGIL.)

POMBAIL, Don Schastian Joseph Carvalho, Marquis de, pon'-hal, a Portuguese statesman, who served during some time in the army; but abandoning a military life, retired to his estate until 1739. In 1745 he was sent ambassador to Vienna, where he married the Countess Daun, a relation of the famous marshal of that name. In 1750 he was appointed secretary for foreign affairs, and had the principal share in the administration. He displayed great talent, encouraged agriculture and commerce, placed the marine on a respectable footing, and instituted several excellent regulations; but he disgraced his public life by his avarice. He, however, distinction had himself by his honourable conduct after the earthquake which de-troyed Lisbon in 1755. By his means the city was speedily restored, and the public calamity relieved. But his radicance at court created him many engmies; and at length a conspiracy was formed against him and the king, which was discovered, and the authors and agents severely punished. Being suspicious that the Jesuits were con-cerned in this plot, he caused them to be expelied from the kingdom. On the death of Joseph II., in 1777, the power of Pombel was destroyed, and he was extled from coast. s, at Soura, Coimbra, 1689; p. at Pombal, 1782.

Coimbra, 1639; n. at Pounda, 1822. Pomer, Pransois, palanca Pranshab cuit, who published, canong other borned works, "Trea-che Europels of the Ancients," "Pantise on the Funerals of the Anchents, "Treatise on the Funerals of the Anchents," Pantheum Mysthema," and "An Account of the Heathen Mythology," of will be yndrew Tooke gave an English trans. It is, we don't ack ledgment, E. 1618; p. 1613.

Pomraer, John, pomofred, an Haglish and divine, who entered into orders, and tained the living of Malden, in Pedford hire. On account of a payerse in his pasm enticled "The Choice," Dishop Compton was for some time very much prejudiced against him. His poems poscess little merit, but were once very popular. n. at Luten, 1667; p. 1763. Pour vnoch, Jeans Antoinette Peleson, Marchione, in., pad qual or, mistress of Louis XV was the dan heer of a butcher, and at an early nge married M. D'Etioles, the nephew of the farmer-upus rel Normand Tournehad. While hunting in the forest of Sonart, on the borders of immediately enamoured. She was created manchioness of Pompadour in 1745, and retained a complete ascendancy over the heart of Louis till her death. The marchioness is stated in her "Memoirs" to have taken a conside able shore in the political affairs of her time, particularly the war of 1756. B. 1721; D. at Versailles, 1761.

Pomperus, Uneius, pom-pe-yus, commonly called Pompey the Great, was the son of Pompey, an able general, under whom he studied the art of war, and with such success, that at the age of twenty-three he was fitted to command three legions, which he raised at his own expense, and with which he joined Sylla. Three years afterwards he recovered Sicily and Africa. and became so great a favourite with the army that Sylla recalled him. He obeyed the menthat Sylia recance min. He obeyed the impa-date, though his soldiers wished him to resist the orders of the dictator. Sylia received him with expressions of friendship, and saluted him with the appellation of Imperator; he also obtained the honours of a triumph. After the death of Sylla, Pompey compelled Lepidus to quit Rome; and brought the war against Sertorius in Spain to a victorious conclusion. for which he obtained a second triumph, B.c. 73, and, at the same time, was elected consul-In his consulate he restored the tribunes, exterminated the pirates, gained great advantages over Tigranes and Mithridates, and made numerous compaests in the East. After these exploits he entered Rome, and was homoured with a third triumph. But his glory and valu white their training for his goog and van character processed him many chemics; to counteract whom he joined with Cassus and Casar in forming the first triumvivate, n.c. co. To strengthen this alliance, he married Julia, daughter of Casar; but the two great men hoemes rivals, in a measurement Pompey's being On the de-

Julia, he married Cornelia, daughter of Merellos Semio, whom he associated with himself in the consulate. Ca. ar held the government of Gaul, when the senate, at the schertation of Pompey, passed a decree common ling him to quit the passed a decree comman and man or que are army, on pain of being declared an enemy to his country. War now broke out between the two generals, who encountered each other on the plains of Bharsaila, where Pompey was defeated, and field, but was consciously on landing in Ervident little contact the landing in

Cheins Marnny, e , son of the indeavoured to ha his father's edat Munda, a Cassara but wood was: hortivattera shan, n.c.45. over son of

vien; but being defeated by the latter in a great scasticult, n.c. 36, he fled to A in and was put to Pompionan, Jean Jacque & le Franc, Margada of, part-paralysis of, a French writer, with was admitted a member of the Academy In 1799; on which occasion he had the courage to deliver on inaugural di course in doten e ef Christianity, which drew up a Linea namber of satires and lampoons from Volcaire and the other insidels of that reciety. His works consist of dramatic pieces, stated odes, in ral dis-courses, a translation of Virgil's "Georgies," &c. n. at Montauban, 1769; p. 1784.

Pompionan, Jean George le Franc de, brother which Transition hold an estate, the king had an opportunity payers by afforded him of seeing church. He wrote—"Critical Issay on the Madane Droofe, with windows charms he was Present State of the Republic of Letters," on the Secular Authority in matters of Religion; "Scepticism convicted by the Prophecies:"

"Religion avenged on Incredulity by Incredulity itself." B. at Montauban, 1715; p. 1790.

POMPONATIUS, Peter, pom'-po-nai-shi-us, a learned Italian, who taught philosophy at Padua and other cities in Italy, with extraordinary re-putation. In his book "De Immortalitate Anima," printed at Bologna, in 1516, he maintained that a future state was no part of the Aristotelian philosophy, but a matter of religious faith. This position occasioned a violent controversy, and Pomponatius, though supported by Cardinal Bembo, was regarded as an other of the control of ported by Cardman Bernou, was regarded as an atheist. B. at Mantua, 1482; D. 1525.

POMPONIUS LETUS, Julius, pom-po'-ni-us, a name given to Peter of Calabria, who went to name given to reter of canabral, who went to Rome, where he was distinguished for his taleuts, till he was falsely accused of con-spiring against Pope Paul II. He then retired to Venice; but, after the death of Paul, returned to Rome, where he became suspected of atheism, on account of his enthusiasm for the ancient philosophy. His principal works are, "The Lives of the Cæsars," editions of Sallust, Pliny the Younger, and some of the works of licero: Commentaries on Quintilian, Columella, Virgil, &c. B. in Calabria, 1425; D. 1498.

virgi, cc. B. in Calabria, 1425; D. 1498.
PONIATOWSKI, Stanislaus, Count, pon-e-a-tow-ske, a Polish nobleman, who distinguished himself as general of the Swedish army of Charles Vivers and the Swedish army of Charles XII. It was through his bravery that Charles was enabled to effect his escape after the battle of Pultows, and he afterwards succeeded in winning over the Porte to support the unfortunate monarch against the Russtans. He subsequently returned to his native country, where King Augustus appointed him general of the royal guard and treasurer of Lithannia. He also enjoyed the favour of the cleeter of Saxony, who had succeeded to the kingdom of Poland. By that monarch he was appointed castellan of Cracow, one of the highest posts in the country. Cne of his sons became king of Poland, under the name of Stanislaus Augustus. B. 1678; D. 1762.

PONIATOWSKI, Joseph, Prince, a distinguished Polish general, who at first served in the Austrian army, and when his countrymen rose against Russia, fought under Kosciusko; but, upon the defeat of that general, Poniatowski sought a refuge at Vienna. When the French entered Warsaw, in 1806, he was appointed to the command of the Polish army which was the command of the Poinsi army which was to co-operate with the French against Russia. In 1912 Napoleon gave him the command of the Street army, which was composed of Poles. In the subsequent battles he distinguished himself by his skill and bravery, and covered himself with gory in the create from Bloscow. Shortly before the lattle terms of the poles of of Leipsic he was created a marshal of France. n. at Warsaw, 1763; drowned in the Elster, 1813. Ponsoner, Sir Frederick Cavendish, K.C.B., pon-son-be, a distinguished cavalry officer and major-general in the British army, the second son of the Earl of Bessborough, was appointed to a cornetcy in the 10th dragoons in 1800, and after passing through the intermediate grades of rank, obtained a majority in the 23rd light dragoons in 1807. During the Peninsular war he had frequent opportunities of distinguishing himself, and was regarded as the benu ideal of a cavalry officer. At Talavera, Barossa, Vi-book; and when he was at school, at the age of miera, Salamanca, and Vittoria, he performed ten, he turned some of the events of Homer into some most brilliant exploits, and during the whole of the retrograde movement of the army from the Douro, a day seldom passed without his being more or less engaged with the enemy's advance. He closed his career on the field of Waterloo, where, in the absence of his com-manding officer, General Vandeleur, who had a few minutes before led forward the 16th light dragoons, he observed a French column rapidly advancing into the small valley which lay be-tween the two armies. There was not a moment to lose; Colonel Ponsonby, calculating the coto use; Council Poissing, calculating the co-lumn at about 100 b, excludined, "They must not be allowed to come further," and with his well-known cry, "Come on, 12th!" dashed against the enemy, followed by his men. At the very mo-ment when they had driven their opponents back into the enemy's lines, the colonel received a ent on his right arm, which caused his sword to drop, and immediately afterwards received another on his left, which he raised to protect his head. By the latter he lost the command of his horse, which galloped forward, and Colonel Ponsonby, unable to defend himself, received a blow from a sword on his head, which brought him senseless to the ground, he lay, exposed on the field, during the whole of the ensuing night. After being pierced through the classing light. After being ploreet through the back by a laneer, plundered by a French tirallieur, rode over by two squadrons of Prussian cavalry, and encumbered for some hours by a dying soldier lying across his less, he was at length accosted by an English soldier, whom he persuaded to stay by him until morning, when a carteonveyed him to the village of Waterloo. He had received seven wounds, but ultimately recovered. He became a major-general in the army, K.C.B., and colonel of the royal dragoons, besides enjoying the honour of four foreign orders of knighthood. B. 1783; D. 1837.

PONTOPPIDAN, Erie, pont-op-pi-dan, an eminent Danish divine, who was professor of theology in the university of Copenhagen, and, in 1747, became bishop of Bergen. He wrote extensively upon the history and antiquities of his country. The most important of his works were,—"A History of the Reformation in Den were, "A History of the Reformation in Denmark," and another upon the History, Antiquities, and Migrations of the old Danish races.

B. in Jutland, 1693; D. at Bergen, 1761. Pore, Sir Thomas, pope, a patron of learning, received his education at Eton school, and afterwards studied the law. At the age of 28 he became treasurer of the Court of Augmenta-tions, and was shortly afterwards appointed visitor of religious houses, in which situation he conducted hinself with moderation. In 1540 he was knighted and made master of the jewelhouse in the Tower. He was the intimate friend of Sir Thomas More, to whom, by order of the king, he communicated the sad tidings of his intended execution. In 1551 he founded Trinity College, Oxford. B. at Dedington, Oxfordshire, 1508; p. in London 1558.

POPE, Alexander, a celebrated English poet, whose father was a linendraper in the Strand, London. His parents being of the Roman Ca-him the i Greek languages. Meeting with Ogilby's "Homer" about this time, he was so much pleased with the work that it became his favour to a play, which was performed by the upper boys, the master's gardener representing Ajax. At the age of twelve, Pope retired with his parents to Binfield, in Windsor Forest, where his father had purchased an estate. Here he formed his intention of becoming a poet, and wrote his "Ode on Solitude," which appears as the first-fruits of his poetic genus. It was here also that he first met with the works of Waller, Spenser, and Dryden; but, on perusing Dryden, he abandoned the rest, and studied him as a ne aonamment the rest, and standed inth as a model. In his sixteenth year he wrote his "Pas-torals;" the "Essay on Criticism," "Rape of the Lock," and "Windsor Forest," quickly follow-ing. The "Essay on Criticism," notwithstanding the youth of the author, is one of the finest poems in the language, and contains the soundest rules; but his genius shone to greater advantage in his "Rape of the Lock," founded on the circumstance of Lord Petre's cutting off a lock of Mrs. Fermor's hair. About 1713, the poet being then in his twenty-lifth year, he published proposals for a translation of the "Higd," in which he met with such great encouragement, that he was enabled to purchase a contragement, that he was chance to processe a house at Twickenham, whither he removed with his parents in 1715. After completing the "Hiad," he undertook the "Odyssey," for which also he obtained a liberal subscription. He was,

Success as wen as the ment of inprocured him numerous enemies among the inferior classes of writers, from whom he experienced frequent splenetic attacks. His temper was too irritable and too little under control to permit his taking no notice of them; and in 1728 he vented his resentment in a mock heroic, entitled "The Duneiad," in which he took more than warrantable revenge, and, what was worse, exposed to ridicule many worthy and gifted individuals who had given him no offence. In 1733, by the advice of Lord Bolingbroke, he employed his pen upon a moral and philosophical subject, the result of which was his "Essay on Man," an ethical poem addressed to that statesman. Of this work it is needless to speak; for, whatever may be thought of its leading principle, it possesses refined thoughts and substantial beauties. He next wrote satires, in which he attacked several persons of rank. Pope was engaged in preparing a complete edition of his works when he was carried off by astima. In person Pope was small and crooked; yet there was much animation and elegance in his countenance, except when he was labouring under his hereditary complaint, the headache. His friendships appear to have been capricious, and he had no pear to have been caprizions, and he had no small portion of vanity in his disposition; to which, and self-interest, almost all considera-tions were readily sacrificed. The best editions of Pope are Warburton's, in 9 volumes, and those of Bowles and Roscoe. The latest and best memoir of the poet was recently brought out under the auspices of J. W. Cr. ker and Ar. Peter Cunningham, p. in London, 1688; p.

Nero, who had seen her accomplishments, soon deprived him of her, and sent him out of Italy After he had taken this step, Nero repudiated this wife Octavia, and married Poppera. The cruelty of the emperor did not, however, long permit her to share the imperial dignity. She died of a kick which she received from him when advanced in pregnancy, about 65 A.D.

PORDENONE, John Authory Licinio Regillo, pop'-dai-no'-nai, an eminent Italian painter, so called from the place of his birth, was disciple of Giorgione, and the rival of Titian, The emperor Charles V. conferred on him the honour of knighthood. B. 1483; p. 1539.

Porpuvry, por fire, (Porpurry, por fir i-ns), a platonic philosopher, who studied eloquence at Athens, under Longinus; and philosophy at Rome, under Plotinus, whose life he wrote. His learning was great, and he composed many works, one of which, against the Scriptures, was burnt by order of Theodosius the Great, n. at Tyre, 233; p. at Rome, 304.

Porphyrogenitus, por-fi-ro-jen-i-tus (See Coxxecxeive VI (

Porsenna, or Porsena, por-sen'-na, or port-se-na, ruler of Clusium, a city of Etruria, who declared war against the Romans because they refused to restore Tarquin to his throne, At first successful, he would have entered the gates or Rome, had not Horatius Cocles stood at the head of a bridge, and resisted the fury of the whole Etrurian army, while his companions behind were enting off the communication with the opposite shore. (See Cocks, Horaius.)
This act of bravery astonished Porsenna; but when he had seen Mutius Scavola, who had entered his camp with the intention of murder. ing him, burn his haid without emotion, to convince him of his fortitude, he no longer dared to make head azaiast so brave a people. He made a peace with the Romans, and never after supported the claims of Tarquin. The story of Porsenna's attack upon Rome forms the subject of one of Lord Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome."

Porson, Richard, por'-son, a celebrated Greek cholar, who was the son of a parish clerk in Norfolk. Through the liberality of Mr. Norris, a gentleman of that county, he was enabled to pursue his studies at Eton. A similar act of pursue his studies at room. A similar act of liberality on the part of Sir George Baker was the means of his proceeding to Cambridge, where he continued his studies in a most distinguished manner till, in 1790, he was unanimously elected regius professor of Greek. Until the establishment of the London Institution, Porson struggled with poverty, having only the £10 a year afforded by his professorship to subsist upon; but on being appointed chief librarian to the last-named institution, with a salary of (20) per annum, his circumstances became comparatively easy. Although one of the greatest scholars England has produced, Porson published very little, his "Tracts and Miscellaneous Criticisms upon the Greek Writers," and his edition of the "Lexicon of Photius," being his most important efforts. B. at East Ruston, Norfolk, 1759; b. 1898.

Porra, James della, par-ta, a celebrated Italian nautron, who parried a knight, by whom she had a son. Her personal charms captivated Villa Aldobrandini, now called Belyeders, is Otha, who was then one of Nero's favourites. one of his best works. B. at Milan, about 1530; He carried her away, and married her; but D. at Rome about 1595.—His nephew, William della Porta, was an eminent sculptor, and restored the legs of the Farnese Hercules.

Posra, John Baptist, a learned Neapolitan writer, who invented the eamera obscura, and acquired a great reputation by his works on science, particularly mathematics, medicine, clin carcer; but meeting with illsaccess in and natural history. He held assemblies of trade, he resolved to devote himself to statistical literature. on science, particularly mathematics, medicine, and natural history. He held assemblies of learned men in his house, which were condemned by the court of Rome, on the absurd charge that the object of their meetings was the discussion of magic. Some writers have claimed for Porta the discovery of the telescope; but the most competent critics admit that is due. His principal works are, "Hearise on Natural Magic," in Latin; another on Physiog-nomy, mixed with Astrology, and other delu-sions of his age. D. about 1550; D. 1615.

PORTAL, Antony, por'-tul, an emineut Italian physician, who went to reside at Paris, and there became the friend of Buffon, a member of the Academy of Sciences, professor at the College of France, and president of the Academy of Medicine. At the restoration he was appointed consulting physician to the king. He was an industrious writer, his most important publication being a "History of Anatomy and Surgery, first produced in 1773. B. 1742; D. 1832.

mst produced in 1773. n. 1742; n. 1832.

Powrez, Anna Maria, por ter, an English novelist, who, while a child, residing with her mother at Edinburgh, made the acquiminance of Sir Walter Scott, then in his youth. Her first attempts in faction are said to have sprung from the screenforce of the Attention. from the suggestions of the future novelist, who used to relate stories to her. Her chief works are, "The Hungarian Brothers," "The works are, "The Hungarian Brothers," "The Recluse of Norway," "The Village of Marien-dorpt," and "The Knight of St. John," She She was also the authoress of a collection of ballad-was use the attnovers of a concentration branch about 1781; D. near Bristol, 1892. Porrer, Jane, an English novelist, was the sister of the preceding, and the authoress of "The Scottish Chiefs," "Thaddeus of Warsaw," "The Pastor's Fireside," "The Field of Forty Footsteps," &c. These novels display certain powers of description and skill in construction; but enjoy, at the present time, but little of the great popularity they once had. B. 1776; D. 1850.

PORTER, Sir Robert Ker, an English painter, and the brother of the two preceding novelists, produced some battle-pieces of an extraord; nary size. His "Storming of Seringapatam," exhibited in the Strand in 1800, was 120 feet in length; "The Siege of Acre" and "The Battle of Agincourt" (hung in the Guidhall), were also of large dimensions. In 1804 he was ap-pointed historical painter to the emperor of of the Ad-

the Great

i St. Petersburg." He went to Spain in 1808, and accompanied the army of Sir John Moore until the battle of Corunna: he was also a spectator of the great Russia, campaign of Napoleon while in Russia, an account of which he pubhished on his return to England. In 1813 he was created a knight by the Prince-regent. During the interval 1817-20 he travelled with his wife, the Princess Mary de Sherbatoff, in Georgia, Persia, and Armenia, and published a work on that tour in 1922. Several years later he obtained the appointment of British consul at Venezuela, which post he filled until the year 1841. During the concluding years of his life literature. In 1832 he received an appointment at the Board of Trade, and, in his various employments therein, displayed so much energy and intelligence, that he rose to a secretaryship of the board, at a salary of £1500 per annum, in 1841. He was one of the founders of the Galileo is the only person to whom that honour Statistical Society, and a constant contributor is due. His principal works are, "Treatise on to its Journal. To the same body he was also elected treasurer, upon the retirement of Mr. Hallam in 1841. His most important work, entitled "The Progress of the Nation," was commenced in 1836, and completed about 1840; but several new and enlarged editions were subsequently put forth. His other works were a translation of Bastiat's "Popular Fallacies regarding General Interests," a section of "The garding General Hierosis, a Section 1 The Admiralty Manual of Scientific Engineering," edited by Sir J. F. Herschel, and a portion of the "Geography of Great Britain," published by the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge; and the "Tropical Agriculturist." London, 1792; p. at Tonbridge Wells, 1855.

Portus, Francis, por-lus, an eminent Greek professor, who filled the chair of classical lite-rature at Padua, Modena, and Ferrara. Having rature at Padda, Acodemi, and gerrard. The mig-embraced the reformed faith, he quitted Italy and went to Geneva, where he obtained a pro-fessorship in 1562. His works are, additions to the Greek Dictionary of Constantine; commentaries upon Pindar, Thucydides, Lou Xenophon, and other ancient authors. Longinus, Accophon, and other auctent authors. In the island of Crete, 1511; p. at Geneva, 1591.

Poaus, pon-us, king of part of India, near the river flydapses, on the banks of which he was defeated by Alexander, who, asking him how he would be treated,—"As a king," said Porus. This answer so pleased the victor, that he not only restored to him his dominions, but added thereto several provinces. He was treacherously put to death by Eudamus, B.C. 317.

Postdonius, pos-i-do'-ni-us, an astronomer of Alexandria, who ileurished before Ptolemy, and undertook to ascertain the circumference of the earth, which he made to be 30,000 forlongs.—There was a Store philosopher of the same name, who was a native of Apamea, in Syria, and taught with reputation at Rhodes. Josephus charges him with having invented sosephus charges him will having invented the calumny against the Jews, that they worshipped the head of an ass. Cicero makes several allusions to his writings. Flourished about 100 B.C.

Poster, Gnillaume, pos'-tel, a French mystic, was sent by Francis I. into the East, to collect manuscripts, and on his return was appointed royal professor of mathematics and languages. He lost this post, however, in consequence of his extraordinary opinions, and went to Rome, where he turned Jesuit; but was expelled from the order and imprisoned, for maintaining that the authority of councils was superior to that of popes. On gaining his liberty he went to Vanice, and formed an intimacy with an old woman who had given herself up to mystic reveries. Postel started the strange notion that women had been left without redemption, which was now accomplished by Mother Joan, the name of this visionary. For his wild fancies ha was again imprisoned; but recovered his liberty, and returned to Paris. He afterwards wrote a retractation, and was restored to his professorship; but again relapsed, and was confined in a monastery. He wrote a great number of works on theology and the oriental languages. B. in Normandy, 1510; D. 1581.

Posthumus, Marcus Crassus Latianus, pos'thu-mus, a Roman general, who was elected emperor in Gaul on the death of Valerian, in 31. He defeated the Germans in several actions, and displayed talents and virtues worthy of his dignity; but having refused to allow his coldiers to plunder Mayence, they rose against and slew him and his son, in 267.

POTFMKIN, Gregory Alexandrovitch, ro-tow'-7 ia a Russian general tayoured by Catharine II. He entered the cavalry of the Russian grand at an early age, and, having attracted the notice of Catharine, by his tall and handsome person, she made him minister of war; in which capacity he suggested the idea of taking the Crimea from the Turks. In 1787 he renewed the war against Turkey, and put himself at the head of the army. The year following he took Otshakoy, and put its inhabitants to the sword. He a quired prodictous riches, was appointed fieldmarshal of Russia, grand betman of the Cossaeks, and possessed almost uncontrolled power. He was a man of debanched principles, and an inordinate evicure, which produced a disorder that earried him off. His remains were interred under a magnificent mausoleum at Cherson. He is said to have aspired to the duchy of Courland and to the kingdom of Poland. B. near nsk, about 171);

Potr, Pe

ni. I zeon, who was elected surgeon to Si, Bartholonew's Hospital, and, in 1764, became rellow of the Royal Society. He invented some surcleal instruments, and wrote a treatise on "Hernia," another on "Wounds of the Head," and "Observations on the Fistula Lachrymalis.

z. in London, 1713; p. 1788.

Potter, Paul, pat'-ter, an eminent Dutch painter, excelled in painting landscapes with cattle, and in representing the effect of the necridian sun upon objects. His "Bull" is univercally admired as an extraordinary piece of animal-panating; it is in the maseum at the numua-pantine; it is by the massean act in Hugue, in at Encklinysen, 1625; p. 1651. Portrus, John, a learned English prelati who was educated at the University of Oxfore Ground Cemens Mey ndrinus, and some the ological works. E. in York-hire, 1674; E. 1747.

POTTER, Robert, a learned English dwine, who made several excellent translations of classical authors, the most important of which D. 1801.

Porringra, Sir Henry, pot'-tin-jer, an Eng-lish diplomatist, who went to Italia as eadet in 1864, and, by his energy and ability, rose in su

Powell

Ahmednuggur, in the Decean, political resident at Cutch, and president of the regency of Scinde. In 1839 he was further honoured by being ereated a baronet; and, upon the outbreak of war between England and China, was sent to the latter country as ambassador extraordinary. After acting with much decision in concert with Admiral Sir William Parker, he suceceded in obtaining from the Chinese authorities a treaty of commerce. At the conclusion of the war, he was nominated governor and commander-in-chief of Hong Kong, and knight grand-cross of the Bath. Upon his return to England, in 1811, the House of Commons voted hun a pension of £1500 per annum. In 1846 he was appointed governor of the Cape of Good Hope, a post he vacated to assume the governorship and command-in-chief of the presidency of Madras, which he held till 1854. In all thus employments he exhibited the best qualities of a public administrator. B. 1789; D. at Malta 18

Poussin, Nicholas, poos'-sa, unominent French painter, who studied in Italy, where he applied himself principally to landscape. On his return to France, in 1639, he was named first painter to Louis XIII., and provided with apartments in the Tuileries. He was also appointed to ornament the gallery of the Louvre; but being thwarted in his plans while executing that great work, he went to Rome, and continued to reside there until his death. Eight ine pactures by him are in the National Gallery. A set his pictures, entitled the "Seven Sa-rament; of the Church of Rome," are included in the collection of the earl of Ellesmere. B. at Andely, idy, 1591; p. at

Iti French extraction, and whose real value was Dughet; but he took that of Poussar, his sister having married Nicholas Poussin. His landscapes, particularly those which represent landstorms, are very line. Six of his paintings are contained in the National Gallery. B. at Rome, 1613; b. at the same city 1675. Powell, Ed. : Roman Catholic priest. ry VIII., in 1523, to west-

per but having, at a later period, maintained the same views in og plastier to his former royal patron, he was con connect to be hanged and quartered in 151).
Powers, Sir John, bart, an eminent and pointed chapter to Archbishop Tenison for of Liauvia, Carmartheria, in the parameter to Lambeth, and, in 1768, I came in the Court of Kinds from the Key and in the prepared to Lambeth, and, in 1768, I came in the Court of Kinds from the Key and diviging prefer or of divinity. In 1715 he was a taseushed himself so much by his interstyping preferred to the ree of Oxford, whence, in 1797, I always to the third of the Sector beshops, that he was translated to Carterbury. He wrote James II, the prevention of the conference of Court of the court of the sector of the court of the sector of the court of of that distincted had man, and was offered the great seal of Earland if he would have decided against the bish ps. When every effort to in-fluence had against the bishops had failed, the were his Sophocles, Euripides, and Æschylus, court, it is said, made the same aftempt upon He was also the author of a vindication of his eldest son Thomas, who for many years re-Gray, the part, against Dr. Johnson. B. 1721; pre-ented the county of Carmarthen in Parliament, which reaching the judge's cars, he sent for him, and told han that if he accepted of and place, or the promise of any place under gov ru-ment, he should consider it as intended to bias ergy and abinty, rose in su __i ment, he should consider it as intended to bias s of judge and collector at his judgment, and would disinherit him; and,

as to himself, he would rather live upon his cockle-bank at Langharne, than do anything so repugnant to his conscience.

POWELL, Rev. Baden, an eminent English mathematical professor, who received his edu-cation at Oriel College, Oxford, and, in 1827, became Savilian professor of geometry in the same university. During his long connexion with Oxford, he was one of the most energetic supporters of reform, and a constant advocate for the introduction of a more extensive system of teaching with respect to the natural sciences than was there pursued. The nature of his researches will be seen by an enumeration of his principal works or contributions to scientific journals. These are—" Elementary Treatise on Experimental and Mathematical Opties;" "Revelation and Science;" "The Connexion of Natural and Divine Truth; or, the Study of the Inductive Philosophy considered as subservient to Theology;" "Tradition Unveiled;" Essays on the Spirit of the Inductive Philosophy, the Unity of Worlds, the Philosophy of Creation, the Plurnlity of Worlds, a revised edition of Dr. Pereira's work upon "Light;" an "Histo-rical View of the Mathematical Sciences," contributed to Dr. Lardner's "Cabinet Cyclopadia; and a large number of papers on Natural Philoand a large number of papers on Natural Philosophy and Mathematics, furnished to the "Philosophical Transactions," the "Annals of Philosophy," the "Reports of the British Association," and "Taylor's Scientific Memoirs." He was the author of one of the "Essays and Reviews," a work which depty agilated, the religious world. B. in London 1798; p. 1859.

Powses, Hiram, post-cre, an eminent modern American semptor, was the son of a small farmer in Win Isor county, Vermont, U.S. On the death of his fether hand to be son of the death of the death of the section. the death of his father, being left in poor circumstances, he was compelled to maintain himself by his own exertions. After inding employment in an hotel, a provision-store, and a clockmaker's shop, he made the acquaintance of a foreign artist, and, having from his youth been an adept at drawing, quickly learnt the art of modelling in plaster from his tutor. He then obtained employment in the Cineinnati then obtained employment in the Chemnati Museum as a modeller in wax. Whilst thus engaged, he assidnously cultivated his artistic powers, and with so much success, that, in 1835, he was quabled to set himself up at Washington ne was chaosed to set limited up at washington as a modeller of busts. Two years later he pro-ceeded to Italy, which for a long period had been a cherished idea. In that land of art his progress was very rapid. The first work by which he acquired fame as a sculptor was an "Eve," in marble. In 1851, his 'Greek Slave' was placed in the Great Exhibition of Loudon, where it became an object of popularity to a most remarkable degree. From that period his fune became European, and he was everywhere a lmitted to be a highly-gifted representative of American art. His other works were, a "Fishertorma," "La renserosa," and a number of por-trait busts of the most distinguished statesmen and public men of his native country. B. at Woodstock, in Vermont U.S., 1903.

Powwalt, Thomas, pow-aad, an English writer and politician, who, in 1753, went to America, and was appointed governor of New Jersey and afterwards of South Carolina. He returned to England in 1761, and, several years later, entered the House of Commons, where he opposed the war with America. He wrote a treatise on the "Antiquities of Roman Gaul," "Intellectual Physics," an assay on the "Nature of Being," a treatise on "Old Age," "Memorial to the Sovereigns of Europe," and other works, nat Lipeod 1729. " a "Unit 1829."

B. at Lincoln, 1722; D. at Bath, 1805. Pozzo DI Borgo, Charles André, Count, pot'-ro de bor'-go, a Corsican nobleman, who was sent, in 1701, as deputy to the National Assembly, to thank that body for having annexed Corsica to France; but afterwards returned to hi- native island, and struggled, in concert with General Paoli, for the establishment of a free government, under English protection. In 1797, the English having abandoned Corsica, he repaired to London, where he became the leader of the French refugees. In 1803 he went to Russia, and entered the diplomatic service of that country. emperor Alexander appointed him his ambassa-der to Louis XVIII. in 1814, and, as the envoy of Russia, he took part in all the acts of the Holy Alliance. He was present, as Russian commis-sioner, at the battle of Waterloo, where he raceived a wound; and afterwards was one of those who suggested that Napoleon should be exiled from Europe. He represented the emperors Alexander and Nicholas at the court of France until the year 1834, when he returned to St. Petersburg. Shortly afterwards he resumed his former post at Paris, and in 1835 repaired to London as ambassador extraordinary of the ezar. In 1839 he retired from public affairs, and took up his residence at Paris. B. at Ajaccio, Corsica, 1764; p. at Paris, 1842.

PRACE, Winthrop Maskworth, praid, an Iluglish poet and prose writer of celebrity, who commenced his literary career by contributing to the "Etoniun," and "Knight's Quarieriy Magazine." He was called to the bar in 1823. He was called to the bar in 1829, and in the following year entered parliament, where he offered a resolute opposition to the Reform Bill. A complete edition of his works appeared in 1864. n. 1862; p. 1839.

Prart, Samuel Jackson, pred, a novelist, poet, and miscellaneous writer, in early life went on the stage, but relinquished that pursuit, and subsequently bee me an itinerant lecturer, a bookseller, and, lastly, an author by profession. He settled at Bath, where, under the fictitious appellation of Courtney Melmoth, the nethions appearation of courtiery atemotis, he published several novels and poems. The principal of his pooms were, "The Tears of Gentins, on the Doath of Goldmilli," "Sympathy," and "Landsenges in Verse." Its best novels were, "Liberal Opinions," "Emma Corbet," "The Pontis of Pleasure," and "Family Secrets." Besides these works, he published Secrets." Besides these works, he published "Gleanlings through Wales, Holland, and West-phalia," "Gleanlings in England," "Harvest Home," "The Fair Circassian," a tragedy; and some others. n. 1729; p. 1814.
PRATA, Charles. (See CAMDEN, Earl of.) PHANAGORAS, pracage-ories, a Greek his-

Pharagonas, prā-ag-o-rās, a Greek his-torium, who was a native of Athens, and wrote a history of the severeigns of that country, and another of Constantine; also one of Alexander the Great. Flourished about 315. Prarageness, prā-di-d-o-ce, a celebrated Gre-cian sculptor, who executed several fine statues, in bragoz and marble, of Bacchus, a satyr, Venus, and Apollo. An ancient copy of one of his works, the "Apollo Saurockonos," is the only example of his genius extant. He ex-celled in the grace, tenderness, and finish of celled in the grace, tenderness, and finish of his works, and was esteemed as second to Phidias only. Phryne, a celebrated Thespian ring as only. Firtype, a ceretrated the space courtesan, was his mistress, and served as the model for his statues of Venus. He also exe-cuted a series called "The Labours of Hercules," for the temple erected to that here at Thebes. Two of his sons acquired fame as neocs. Two of his sons acquired hime as sculptors. Praxiteles is supposed to have been n. about 360 n.c.; n. about 230 n.c. Parscott, William Hickling, pres-kot, a cele-

Praced American historian, who came of a New Ingland family of high honour. His grand-father, Colonel William Prescott, commanded the American forces at Bunker's Hill; his father was an eminent judge at Boston. In 1811 he was sent to Harvard University, where he graduated in 1814. While at college, he was deprived by an accident of the use of one eye; and the sight of the other became so imeye; and the sight of the other became so hip-paired as to compel him to abstain from any lengthened course of study. Happily, his father's circumstances were such as to preclude the necessity of his tolling for bread. He carly determined to devote himself to a life of literature. Soon after quitting college, being advised to fravel, he went to Europe, and spent two years in an extended journey through England, France, and Italy. At the end of that time he returned to his native country with restored health, but with no great improvement in the state of his eyes. His marriage took place soon after, and from this period his days flawed on in diligent and uneventful devotion to literary pursuits. But he laboured at his task under circumstances which would have crushed many men. "While at the university, he says, "I received an injury in one of my eyes which deprived me of the sight of it. other, soon after, was attacked by inflammation so severely that for some time I lost the sight of that also; and though it was subsequently restored, the organ was so much disordered as to remain permanently debilitated; white twice in my life since I have been deprived of the use of it for all purposes of reading or writing for several years together. It was during one of these periods that I received from Madrid the materials for my History of Ferdinand and Isabella; and in my disabled condition, with my trans.tlantic treasures lying around me, I was like one pining from hunger in the midst of abundance. In this state I resolved to make the ear, if possible, do the work of the eye. I to me the various authorities; and, in time, I became so far familiar with the sounds of the different foreign languages (to some of which, indeed, I had been previously accustomed by a residence abroad) that I could comprehend his reading without much difficulty. As the reader proceeded, I dietated copious notes; and when these had swelled to a considerable amount, they were read to me repeatedly, till I had mastered their contents sufficiently for the pur-pose of composition." But the difficulties of mastered their contents stanced by or the par-pose of composition had yet to be overcome. Dieta-tion was at first tried; but finding that he could not attain the force and freedom he required, he was compelled to relinquish that former on the treadmill sees what he is grinding on the other side of the wall, it becomes very difficult to make corrections. This requires the subject to be pretty thoroughly canvassed in the mind, and all blots and erasures to be made then, before taking up the stylus.

This compels me to go over my composition to the extent of a whole chapter, however long it may be, several times in my mind before sitting down to my desk. When there, the work becomes one of memory rather than of creation, and the writing is apt to run off glibly enough. In 1838 the first of the historical works composed under so many difficulties was produced under the title of "The History of Ferdinand and Isabella the Catholic of Spain." The work and resound the Canone of Spani. The work became universally successful, and was trans-lated into French, Spanish, and German. Its author was immedicitly elected a member of the Royal Academy of Madrid, Prescot's literary industry was not checked by the suc-cess of his first work. He immediately devoted himself to the delineation of another brilliant period in the history of Spain, the fruits of which appeared in 1843, in a work in three which appeared in 1848, in a work in three volumes, called "The History of the Conquest of Mexico," which was received with even greater favour than that which had greeted the "History of Ferdimand and Isabella," The Hterary world recognised in it the same careful research, the same accuracy of statement, the research, the same accuracy of sourcement, and same persuasive sweetness and beauty of style. In 1817 he published the "History of the Con-quest of Peru," a work of kindred and commensurate excellence to that of the "History of the Conquest of Mexico." The historian next devoted himself with unabated ardour to the preparation of a work of wider range and broader scope,—the "History of the Reign of Philip II," He had become one of the great literary names of the age, and everywhere both public and private collections were thrown open to him. It was while preparing himself for the composition of the last-mentioned work that he paid a brief visit to England, where he was cordially received by individuals of the highest literary and social distinction, and where the favourable impression created by his works was confirmed by his prepo-sessing manners and appearance. He took ample time for the task which he do fined to be the great performance of his life. The first two volumes of the work appeared in 1855; and the highest expectations formed by the public were justified, the following year he produced an edition of Robertson's "Charles V.," to which notes and a supplement, containing an account of the emperor's life after his abdication, were added. in the last year of his life he published the third volume of his "History of Philip," which, unfortunately, did not complete the work. His other works consist of essays upon Italian, Spanish, English, and American literature, and a memoir of Brockden Brown, the American novelist. He obtained the highest acknowledgments of literary distinction. The University of Oxford, in 1850, conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws. In 1845 he received the highest of all distinctions of its kind, in quired, he was compelled to reimpusar unatable of all distinctions of its kine, in mode. A writing-case for the blind was obtained from London, and "with this instruction of the long clerked a corresponding member of the ment," continues Prescott, "I have writing the covery word of my historicalse This hands French Institute, succeeding Navarete, the covery word of my historicalse This hands are prescribed by the covery word of my historicalse This hands are prescribed by the covery word of my historicalse This hands are prescribed by the covery word of my historical states of the covery word of the learned the covery word of the large that the lightest of all distinctions of the lightest of all distinctions of the lightest of the lightest of all distinctions of the lightest o for as one cannot see what he is doing on the societies of Europe he was a member. n. at other side of the paper, any more than a per-Salem, Massachusetts, 1796; n. 1859. Parce, Richard, price, an English dissenting minister and political writer, who, at the commencement of the American war, distinguished himself by his zeal on behalf of republicanism, and published pamphlets on "Gvil Liberty and "Givil Government," for which he received the thanks of the city of London. He also wrots "Observations on the National Debt," in which he endeavoured to prove that the kingdom was on the eve of bankruptcy. Soon after the breaking out of the French revolution, he preached a dissourse at the Gol Jewry, in which he exulted over the misfortunes of the royal family of France, in such a manner as to call forth the keen admirections of Burke. His principal works, we "On the Importance of Christianity," A Review of the Principal Question and Difficulties in Morals," "Bissussion of the Doctrines of Materialism and Necessity, in a Correspondence with Dr. Pricette," D. at Tynton, Glamoranshire, 1723; p. 1701.

Parce, Rev. Thomas, a distinguished Welsh

Peters, Nev. Anomus, a unsungurated Nessacholar, whose life was passed as parfor to different congregations of his countrymen. The object of his life was to rescue Welsh literature from the neglect into which it had fallon. In 1829 he made a tour in Drittany, and published an interesting account of that country. His principal works are,—"An Essay on the Influence which the Welsh Traditions have had on the Literature of Europs," a "Oritical Essay on the Language and hiterature of whice," "Illistory of Wales and the Welsh Nation, from the early ages to the death of Lieuwithy any Grafflyd," and an Issay upon the "Comparative Merits of the Brandins of Andeent Literature in the Welsh, Irish, and Gaelic Languages." n. in Brecknockshure, 175; p. 1818.

PRICHARD, Rees, pritch'-ard, a Welsh divine and poet, who was educated at the University of Oxford, and spent his life as a rural pastor in his native country. His poems in Welsh, on religious subjects, have been often printed, and are very popular in Welss. B. about 1574;

PRICHARD, James Cowles, an emineut English physician and ethnologist, who received his education for the medical profession at Edinmankind, and to that subject his attention continued to be devoted till, in 1813, his "Physical History of Mankind" was produced. In that work, not only austenny and physichology, but also philology, was introduced, to found a systematic history of the races of mankind. This work has been several times reprinted, has been translated into French and German, and is generally admitted to be one of the best works of its class. Dr. Prichard also devoted much attention to the study of nervous and mental discusses, and was appointed visiting physician to the Gloucestersirie Lumatic asylung and in 1845 became one of the commissioners of lunacy. He was fellow of the Royal and president of the Ethnological Society, and and president of the Ethnological Society, and and president of the Ethnological Society, and and president of the Chundential of the seat of learning. His principal works were "On the Crania of the Lapanders and Finlanders," "On the Eastern Origin of the City Hindows," "On the Eastern Origin of the City Hindows," "On the D. Rerent Forms of Insanty in 801.

relation to Jurisprudence," and a "Review of the Doctrines of the Vital Principle," n. at Ross, Herefordshire, 1785; p. in London, 1848.

ROSS, IPPEROTRISHIE, 1763; D. B. DORAMI, P. PRIDLARY, John, pur'd, a learned English prelate, who was admitted to Exeter College, Oxford, of which he became fellow, and, on the death of Dr. Holland, was chosen rector. He was afterwards appointed regins professor of divinity, in which he displayed considerable talents. He also served the office of vice-chancellor, and in 1644 was advanced to the bishopric of Wortester; but was deprived of the revenues in the civil war. He wode extensively upon grammar, logic, and theology, and was described as "a plentiful foundin of all sort of learning." B. in Devonshire, 1578; p. 165.)

PRIDEAUX, Humphrey, a learned English divine, who, in 1677, published, under the lith-off "Marmen Oxonieusia," an account of the Arundel marbles, with a comment on there, which gained him great reputation; it also procured him the patronage of chamellur princh, who gave him a living at Oxford. In 1681 he was promoted to a prehend of Norwich, 1681 he was promoted to a prehend of Norwich, of which enthedral he became dean in 1762. Being disabled from public duty, through an Hip-performed surgical operation, he devoted himself to composition, and produced his "Cornication of the Old and New Perstament," an admirable work, which was translated into several languages, and passed through humerous coltions. Besides the above works, he was thauttor of "Directions to Churchwardens," "The Life of Mahomet," "The Original Right of Tithes." a, in Cornwall, 1683 p. 1724.

PRIESSNITZ, Vincent, preced-nitz, the founder of the hydropathic system, or system of curing diseases by water, was the son of a farmer in Austrian Silesia, and, after receiving some e lucation in the town school, was put to the work of the farm. After remaining at this employment for several years, his mind was turned to the subject of the "water-cure" by a singular accident. One day, while taking a eart loaded with barley to the fields, the horse became restive, bit him with his teeth, and, throwing him down, dragged the eart over his body. Two of his ribs were broken, and a medical man declared that, even if he recovered, he would remain a cripple for life. The future water-doctor, however, contrived, by placing himself in a certain position, so to expand has lungs, that his ribs were replaced; while, with a copious use of cold water, he kept down the inflammatory symptoms. In a short time has was quite recovered, and then commenced arplying, in other cases, the treatment which he di proved so beneficial in his own. He studed inedicine, and, in time, formed an establishment at Gralenberg, which was soon resorted to free all parts of Germany. Between the years 1829 and 1843 he had treated 1650 patients successfully, using neither medicine, bleeding, nor blistering. Water, open air, exercise, plain diet, and cheerful society, were his only remedies. B. 1799; p. 1851.

PRINERLEY, Joseph, preced-le, on English matural philosopher and theologica, who, a fit he age of 22, became assistant numifor to an Independent congrecation at Needla on Market, in Suifilis; aftion which he was chosen pastor of a congregation at Nantiwich, in Cheshire, where he also kepfs a school. In 1761 he removed to Warrington, as tuttor in the belles-letters in the academy there. His connexion with that insti-tution ended in 1767, when he accepted an invitation from the dissenters at Leeds, where he published several theological works, which attracted considerable notice and led to a sharp controversy. In 1773 he went to reside with the carl of Shelburne as librarian and companion. Several years afterwards he appeared as a champion of the doctrine of philosophical necessity, in which he had his friend Dr. Price for an opponent. While thus engaged in metaphysical and theological disputations, he pursued his philosophical inquiries with ardour; the result of which appeared in the "Philosophical Transor which appeared in the "Philosophical Frans-actions," and in separate publications, par-ticularly his "Experiments and Observations on Durrent Kinds of Air." His engagement with Lord Shelburne having been brought to with Lord Shelburne having used Drought 1, an end, br. Priestley, with a pension of £150 a year, retired to Eirmingham, where he became paster of a congregation of Unitarian discreters in 1780. He there published several of his works; as, "Letters to Eishop Newcome on the Duration of Christ's Ministry," and the "History of the Corruptions of Christianity," ("Richeds beauty high interactions and the second contractions of the statement of the contractions of the statement of the second contractions of the corruptions of the statement of the second contractions of the corruptions of the statement of the second contractions of the second This last brought him into a controversy with Dr. Horsley. Dr. Priestley, however, still per-severed, and published his "History of Early Opinions concerning the Person of Christ," In 1791 a riot happened at Birmingham, owing to an imprudent meeting of some of his friends to celebrate the destruction of the Bastille, Several houses were pulled down and burnt, and Dr. nonses were pulled down and ourne, and Dr. Priestley's among the rest; by which he lost his library, manuscripts, and philosophical ap-paratus. In consequence of this disgraceful transaction, he retired to London, and for some time officiated as paster to the Unitarian congregation at Huckney, of which Dr. Price had been minister. But his mind being greatly depressed by late events, he went to America in 1704, and settled at Northumberland, in the state of Pennsylvania. He was a fellow of the Royal Society, and of other learned bodies in different parts of the world. He lived to see his phlogistic system of chemistry universally exploded; yet he persisted in defending it to the last. He was also equally tenacious of his Sochianism. His writings are too various to be enumerated. The principal and best are his Charts of History and Bougraphy, 'his 'History of Electricity,' the 'History and Present State of Usewerles relating to Vision, Light, and Colours,' lectures on the 'Theory and History of Lamenary' and on the 'Trinciples of Oratory and Criticism.' In near Leeds, 1773; p. in America, 1804.

PRIM, Don Juan Masonia da Lor Co. (1914) Speinianism. His writings are too various to

PRIM, Don Juan, Marquis de los Castillejos, prim, a Spanish general and state-man, who took an active part on the side of Isabella II. in the civil war that followed her accession. Like most of the Spanish statesmen of his time, he was sometimes in favour and sometimes in disgrace, until his trial and impersonment for alleged high treason compelled him to retire awhite from public life. In 18:3-54 he fought on the side of Turkey in the Russian war, and in 1859-60, greatly distinguished himself in the war between Spain and Morocco, for which he was made a marquis and grandee of Spain, in 1861. In 1866 and 1867, he headed two movements against the government of Isabella II., but was compelled through their utter failure to leave Spain. He was not, however, destined to be long an exile, for in 1868 the troops and navy declared against the queen, who refired to France. Prim then became minister for war in the provisional government, and held the same post, with that of prime minister, during the regency of Serrano. B. 1814.

PRINGLE, Thomas, a Scotch poet and writer of works of travel, was the son of a farmer, and was educated at the grammar-school of Kelso and the university of Edinburgh. After kciso and the university of Edimburgh. After publishing several minor effusions, he started the "Edimburgh Monthly Magazine," having amony his condjutors Lockhart, Dr. Brewster, Hoger, and Wilson. In the first number ap-peared an article on the "Gipsics," grantitusity supplied by Scotl. This maradine afterwards became the property of the Mesers. Blackwood, and in time its title was changed to that of "Blackwood's Magazine," Princle had, how-ever, separated from the periodical, and after experiencing some pecuniary embarrassments, he. in 1820, went out with his brothers, who were farmers, to the Cape of Good Hope. familia of the Pringles had accompanied them, and soon a folerably prosperous community was formed. Through the influence of Scott and others, he subsequently obtained the post of librarian to the government at Cape Town. He also set up an academy, and starfed a news-paper, and was apparently on the high road to fortune, when his print, "The South-African Journal," having been declared by the governor to contain a libel upon him, Pringle fell under the ban of the government authorities, and in time became runned in his prospects. In 1926 he repaired to London, and sought to obtain the sum of £1000 as compensation for his losses, but without success. The remaining years of his without staces. The remaining years of mis life were spent as a working literary man. His chief works were, "A Narrative of a Residence in South Africa," "An Account of English Settlers in Albamy, South Africa," and several small collections of poems. His two works on Africa are exceedingly interesting, and give a picturesque, but at the same time truthful narrative, of what the author had seen. His poetry is threat and pleasing. B. at Blacklaw, Teviotdale, 1789; p. 1831.

Prinsie, James, prin'-sep, an eminent Ori-ental scholar, who went out to India at an early age as a subordinate in the Must department at Benares. In that city he collected a valuable mass of observations, which he published in an important work, entitled "Sketches of Benares." In 1832 he was appointed editor of the "Journal In 1852 he was appointed enter of the "Journal of the Asiatic Swiety," which was produced at Calcutta, to which place he had some time pre-viously removed. In 1832 he succeeded Wilson as secretary of the Asiatic Society. One of the as secretary of the Asiatic Society. One of the most important of his later researches was the de-diphering of some inscriptions which had bailted all previous Oriental scholars. He like-wise devoted humself to a profound study of Bactrian coins, and by his enlightened and indetatigable efforts succeeded in obtaining an almo-t unbroken series, from the days of the successors of Alexander the Great to modern times. He likewise furnished articles on chemistry, Indian antiquities, and numismatics to the journal of which he was the editor.

n. 1800; n. 1840.

Paios, Matthew, pril-or, an eminent English poet. Looing his father when young, his care He was not, devolved upon his uncle, a vintner, near Charing

Priscianus

Proudhon

afterwards took him home with the intention of bringing him up to his own business. Prior, nevertheless, still pursued his classical studies novertineess, still pursuod his classical studies as occasion permitted, which proved the means of his advancement; for happening to explain a disputed passage in Horace, to some company at his unule's house, the earl of Dorset, one of the party, became his patron, and sent him to St. John's College, Cambridge, of which he was chosen failow. In 1687 he wrote, in conjunction with the Hon. Charles Montague, afterwards with the Fron. Charles montague, a nerwards earl of Halifax, a burlesque upon Pryden's "Hind and Panther," in a poem entitled the "Story of the Country Mouse and City Mouse." The earl of Dorset introduced hun to court after he left the university; and in 1690 he was appointed English secretary to the congress at the Hague, and gave so much satisfaction that King William made him gentleman of his bedchamber. In 1697 he was secretary at the treaty of Ryswick; in 1700 he was for a short time secretary of state. In 1713 he was appointed secretary to the embassy in France; and had not been long there, when, going to see the curiosities at Versailles, the officer in set the curiosities at Versaines, the dincer in attendance showed lim the fine paintings by Le Brun of the victories of Louis XIV., asking at the same time whether Kimp William's ac-tions were also to be seen in his palace: "Ne sit," answered Prior, "the monutum its of m master's actions are to be seen everywhere but in his own house." In 1715 he was arrested by order of the House of Commons, and committed to prison. He was even excepted from the act of grace; but, in 1717, he recovered his liberty without being brought to trial. Besides his pooms, which are easy, lively, and elegant, he wrote the "listory of his Own Times." either in Dorsetshire or London, 1664; D. at Wimpole, Cambridge-hire, 1721.

PRISCIANUS, pris'-i-ai'-nus, an eminent Roman grammarian, whose work, "Do Arte Grammatica," is the most complete ancient treatise on the subject extant. His works were printed by Aldus Manutius, at Venice, in 1476. From several expressions in his works, he is believed several expressions in this works, ho is between to have been a Christian. He was so exact in his judgment and criticisms, that to "break Priscian's head" became a proverb for take grammar. Flourished in the 6th century. Probus, Marcus Aurelius, pro'-bus, a Roman emperor, who, from being a common soldier, rose to the highest military runk. After the death of the emperor Tacitus in 276, the Eastern army proclaimed Probus, as the reward of his valour and integrity. He was also acknowledged by the senate; after which, he turned his arms against the Gauls and Goths, whom he completely subdued. He next defeated the Samaritans, and made an advan-tageous peace with Persia. The interval of tageous peace with Persia. neace he employed in rebuilding cities and occupying his soldiers in useful works. The Persians again taking up arms, Probus prepared to attack them, but was murdered by his troops

Phoena, Giovanni di, pro-ché-da, an Italian gentleman, lord of the island of Procida, who distinguished himself as physician to the emperors Frederic II. and Cournd IV., both of whom PRODEROS, l'ierre Joseph prood-awng, a mo-loaded lim with honours and possessi... deem French writer on political economy, the Having been despoised of a great portion of his acquired considerable notoriety in 860 by pub-wealth by Charles of Anjou, he formed the lishing a work cuttled "What is Property?" resolution of depriting him of his crown, and a question which he himself answered in the Cross, who sent him to Westminster school, but placing it upon the head of Peter III., king of Arragon. With infinite subilety, he organized a conspiracy against Charles in 1282, and was a conspiracy against Charles in 1232, and was one of the prime movers of the great massacre of all the French in Sicily, known in history under the name of the "Sicilian Vespers." He became, at a subsequent period, the confidential adviser of the Aragonese princes of Sicily. B. about 1225; p. about 1203.

Proclus of Constantinofer, pro-klus, a Platonic philosopher, who wrote against the Christian religion, and in one of his works sought to prove that the world is eternal. He also composed Commentaries upon Plato, and other works. D at Athens, 455.

Procortus, pro-ko'-pi-us, a Greek historian, whom Justin I. took into his confidence, honoured him with the title of Illustrious, and appointed him were the tree of financies, and appointed him secretary to Belisarius. He wrote a "History of the Wars of the Persians, the Gauls, and the Goths," also a "Secret History." The best edition of his works is that of Bonn (in the series of Byzantine Historians) 1833. Flourished about the 6th century.
PROCOPIUS OF GAZA, a Greek rhetorician and theologian, who wrote commentaries on the books of the Kinrs and Chronicles, and on Isaiah, printed in Greek and Latin. Flourished about 520.

PROCTER, Bryan Waller, prok-ter, a modern English poet, generally known under the usendonym of Barry Cornwall. He was educated for the legal profession, and, during many years, held an important appointment as one of the commissioners of lunacy. His first volume of the commissioners of lunacy. His first volume of paems was produced in 1819, under the title of "Dramatic Scenes, and other Poems." His "English Songs," Menoir and Essay prefixed to an edition of shakspeare, "Marcian Colonna," and others, evinced, in their author, the posses-which was produced at Covent-garden Theatre, was highly successful. A collection of some charming essays and tales in prose by him was published in America. p. about 1790.

PRODICUS, prod'-i-kus, a sophist and rheto-rician, who taught at Athens, and had for disciples Euripides, Socrates, Isocrates, and Xenophon. The Athenians put him to death, on pretence that he corrupted the morals of their youth. Flourished 435 n.c.

PROPERTIUS, Sextus Aurelius, pro-per'-shi-us an eminent Latin port, who was the esteemed friend of Macenas, Ovid, and Tibulius. His clegies are usually printed with those of Catulius. A translation of them by "Oxford Hands" ap-peared in 1685. B. about 56 B.C.; D. 16 B.C.

PROTAGORAS, pro-tug'-o-ras, a Greek philoso pher of Abdera, who was at first a porter. He became the disciple of Democritis, to whose system he added remarks, doubting whether the gods existed or not, for which his books were burnt at Athens, and the author banished. Flourished in the 5th century B.c.

PROTOGENES, pro-toj'-e-nees, a celebrated Greek painter, who was the rival of Apelles, but there existed a close friendship between them. Flourished about 332 n.c.

first line of his work as follows: " All Property is Robbery." His other works, which are principally remarkable for their Utopian and impracticable character, are, "The Solution of the Social Problem," and a "System of Contradictions in Political Economy." In 1849 he at-tempted to form a "People's Bank" at Paris; but the scheme was broken up by the condemnation of M. Proudhon to three years' imprisonment, for alleged libel; upon which he took to flight but returned soon after and submitted to his sentence, and regained his liberty in 1852. For a pamphiet directed against the government of Napoleon III. and the Romish church, in 1858, he was again sentenced to a fine and imprisonment, on which he retired to Brussels, where he remained till his death in 1865. в. 1809.

PROTE, Samuel, an eminent English water-colour painter, who was the companion of Haydon in their student days; but, unlike that ambitious artist, Prout drew from nature "the ivy-mantled bridges, mossy water-mills, and rock-hull coftages which characterize the valley scenery of Devon." He was fortunate enough to attract the notice of John Britton the antiquary, and accompanied him as draughtsman in a tour through Cornwall. In 1805 he went to London, where he maintained himself by executing drawings for the printsellers of the metropolis, and by teaching. In time he won a high position, and began to produce his remarkable lithographic facsimiles of drawings made upon the continent of Europe. The most important of these were "Sketches made in Flauders, Germany, France, Switzer-land, Italy, &c." He also wrote "Hints on Light and Shade, Composition, &c." D. at Plymouth, 1783; p. 1852.

Plymouth, 1783; p. 1832.
PRUDENTIES, Clemens Aurelius, praedentshivas, a Latin poet, who was successively an advocate, a magnistrate, and a soldier, and distinguished himself in all these professions. His Latin poems were printed by Elzevir in 1667, with the notes of Heinsins. Plourished in the

with the noise of the continuous and ending the continuous and the continuous although the continuous tried in the Star Chamber for writing a likel against the queen, under the title of "Histriennasits; or, a bission of the continuous and th course on Stage Plays," For this he was sentenced to stand in the pillory, to lose both his ears, and to pay a fine of £3000. In another pamphlet he attacked Land and the bishops, for which he was condemned to lose the remanaler of his ears, to pay a line of £5000, to be branded on both cheeks, and to be impris ned for life. These atrocious sentences were rigidly carried into effect. The House of Commons released him in 1641. He sat in the Long Parliament; but, though he had been active in promoting the rebellion, he was an enemy to Cromwell, who caused him to be imprisoned. At the Re-storation he was made keeper of the records in the Tower. He wrote a very large number of books, chefly on polities and religion; also the "History of Archbishop Land," and the "Lives of Kings John, Henry 111., and Edward I." In at Swainswick near Bath, 1600; p. 1669.

PSALMANAZAR, George, sal-ma-na'-zur, a notorious impostor, who is supposed to have been a native of France. After obtaining a Good education in a monastery, he went to Germany, where he pretended to be a Japanese converted entered a Scotch regiment in Flanders, the chaplain of which brought him to England, where he passed for a native of Formosa, and to support the character, lived upon raw flesh to suppore the character, aven upon raw hesh, the wrote a pretended Formosan grammar, and a history of that island, which imposed upon many learned persons. At length the decei-was discovered, and Psalmannaar was abandoned by his patrons. He next engaged with the booksellers in compiling the "Ancient Universal History," his share of which shows considerable erndition. His latter years made ample amends for his former irregularities. B, about 1679; D. in London, 1753.

Prolemy Lagus, or Sother, tol'-c-me, first Greek king of Egypt, was the natural son of Philip of Macedon. He was the favourite and one of the best generals of Alexander the Great, on whose death he obtained Egypt, Libya, and part of Arabia, to which, on the death of Perdiceas, he added Corle-Syria, Pho-nicia, Judwa, and the isle of Cyprus. He made Alexandria his capital, where he built a light. house called the Pharos, as a guide to pilots for that harbour. He encouraged literature and that narroun. He encouraged interature and formed an academy, with a muscum, at Alexandria. Ptolemy is said to have written the "Life of Alexander the Great," 2nd other works, which are lost, p. 283 a.c.

c PHILADELPHUS, son and successor of the above, obtained his surname (which signifies brother-loving) in ridicule, for having put to death his two brothers. Ptolemy formed an alliance with the Romans. He was a great an annance with the romans. He was a great encourager of connucroe, for which purpose ho built a city on the Red Sea. He also con structed considerable fleets, both there and in the Mediterranean. He was a liberal patron of learned men, and caused the Scriptures to be rendered into Greek, in that version called the Septuagint. D. 247 B.C.
Prolemy Evergerus, the son and successor of the preceding, declared war against Sel Callinious, to avence the death of his sister Berenice. Ptolemy made himself master of Syria and Cilicia, and was extending his conquests when the news of a revolt called him to Egypt. He soon quelled the insurgents, and by the prudence of his reign acquired the name of "Emergetes," or benefactor. He was poisoned by his own son, 222 n c.

Prolemy Philopator ("father-loving"), ironically so called, from his crackty in poisoning his father. He also put to death his mother, brother, uncle, and sister, and is said to have exposed a number of Jews, on a plain, to the fury of his elephants; but those animals, instead of destroying the intended victims, fell upon the Egyptians; on which the tyrant, out of fear, conferred great favours on the Jewish nation, D. 205 B.C.

Proceny Epiphanes, or "Hustrious," succeeded his father Philopater, and, at the age of It, assumed the reins of government. During his minority, Antiochus the Great conquered large portions of his kingdom; but afterwards restored them to Ptolemy, when he gave him his daughter in marriage. Ptolemy was poisoned B.c. 181.

PTOLEMY PHILOMETOR, son and successor of the preceding, having declared war against Antiochus Epiphanes, was taken prisoner by him. The Egyptans then placed Physeon, his where he pretended to be a Japanese converted brother, on the throne, whom An idehus de-to Christianity. Being reduced to distress, he posed, and restored Philometor, who died of

B Would received in bacter against hexander Balas, king of Syria, n.c. 146. PTOLEMY PHYSCON, so called from the pro-minence of his belly, succeeded his brother Phi-lometor, and was a cruel and sensual tyrant.

on account of the persecutions which they endured the people of Alexandria emigrated into Asia; and his subjects having revolted against him, he murdered his son Memphitis from suspicion. D. 117 B.o.

PTOLEMY LATEYRUS ("gray pea"), so called from an excrescence on his nose resembling a pea, succeeded his father Physeon; but was soon after driven to Cyprus by his mother Cleopatra, who gave the crown to her son, Ptolemy Alexander. Lathyrus having mustered an army, invaded Judga, and committed great cruelties on the Jews; after which he marched to Egypt, but was unsuccessful. On the death of Alex-

Dut was unsuccessini. On the death of Alexander he ascended the throne. D. SI B.C.

PTOLEMY AULETES, which surname he obtained from his skill in playing on the flute, was the illegitimate son of the preceding, and ascended the throne after the death of his father. He ceded Cyprus to the Romans, with a large tribute, which so displeased his subjects, that they revolted, and placed his daughter Berenice on the throne. By the help of his allies, he recovered his dominions, and put his daughter recovered his dominions, and put his daughter to death. D. S. D. C.

POLEMY DIONYSTUS, or BACORUS, king of Egypt, the son of the preceding, ascended the throne with his sister Cleopatra, whom he married, according to the will of his father. Pompet the Great, who had been his guardian, fled into Egypt after his affeat at Phersaila, and was murdered by him. Polemy, who was no more faithful to Casar than he had been to his zival, and was a control at the Nile after hear defeated. was drowned in the Nile, after being defeated by the Romans, B.C. 48.

PTOLEMY, Claudius, an eminent Egyptian geographer and mathematician, is celebrated for his "System of the World," in which he placed the earth as the centre of the system, round which sun, planets, and stars revolved. His "Geography" describes the whole world as it was known in his day, and was the great text-book of the science of which it treats until the 15th century, when the discoveries of the Vene-tians and Portuguese demonstrated its errors. A small but correct edition of this curious work was published in the "Tauchnitz Classics," in was published in the "Tauchnitz Classics," in 1843. A very curious map, giving a view of Ptolemy's known world, was furnished by Gos-sclin, in his "Researches upon the Geography of the Ancients," published at Paris 1813. Flou-rished at Alexandria early in the 2nd century. PUBLICOLA. (See VALERIUS, Publius.)

PUBLICOLA. (See YALERIUS, Publius.) PUBLIUS SENES, publis, a comic poet of Syria, who was at first slave to a patrician named Domitius, who gave him his liberty.
His works are lost, but some quotations from them are preserved in the writings of ancient authors. Flourished at Rome, about 40 n.c.
PUPLENDORS, Samuel de, poof-fere-dorf, an eminent writer on universal jurisprudence, studied at Leipsie, where he applied himself to willoamby lay and the mathematics. In 1688 studied at Leipsie, where he applied himself to tion. Few artists were more industrions than philosophy, law, and the mathematics. In 1658 M. de Puquil. Besides his many oil paintings—he was appointed tutor to the son of Coyer, ambased of of the king of Sweden to the court of preaching the Gospel, in the Valenciennes Denmark; but war breaking out between the two countries, the family of the ambassador was my the churches of St. Sulpice and St. Roch, and thrown into prison, and Poffendorf with the results of the Mibrary of the Louver, and the versal Jurisprudence," which was printed at Diana Gallery at Fontainebleau.

1 He became 6 1864

a wound received in battle against Alexander the Hague in 1660. This work obtained for him the professorship of the law of nature and nations at Heidelberg; whence, in 1670, he re-moved, by the invitation of the king of Sweden, to Lunden, and was appointed professor in the university of that city. He was afterwards created a baron, and historiographer, by the Swedish monarch. In 1888 he went to Berlin, where he became counsellor of state. His other where he became counselior state. His other works are, "History of Sweden from 1628 to 1854;" "History of Charles Gustavus;" "His-tory of Frederic William the Great, elector of Brandenburg;" and treatise on "The Law of Nature and Nations." B. at Chemnitz, Saxony, 1632; D. at Berlin, 1604.

Pugin, Augustus, pu'-gin, an eminent French architectural draughtsman, who settled in London, and became an assistant to the architect Nash. He also published a number of works on architecture, the most important of which were, "Specimens of Gothic Architecturar from various Edifices in England;" "Specimens of the Architectural Antiquities of Normandy," and "Gothic ornaments." B. 1762; D. 1832. Puens, Augustin Welby Northmore, an eminent English architect, and the son of the preceding, under whom he acquired the elementary principles of his art. He was next engaged as the designer of furniture for the apartments at Windsor Castle, and subsequently aparaments at windsor cashe, and subsequently devoted himself to the production of Gothic designs for furniture, gold and silver smith's work, &c. About 1841 he embraced the doctrines of the Roman Catholic faith, and soon afterwards became extensively employed in dening ecclesiastical structures for the service ming educational structures for the service, that church. From his plans, churches, chapels, convents, and schools were erected throughout Great British. His best works are, the cathedral church of St. Marie, at Derby; the cathedral of St. George, Southwark, London; and the Roman Catholic churches at Liverdon; and the Roman Catholic churches at Liverpool, Manchester, Oxford, Cambridge, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne. For the earl of Shrewbury, who was his constant patron, he built a monastery and church at Airon Towers; he also designed the gateway to Magdalen College, Oxford, His latest employment was the designing and superintendence of the interior of the new palace at Westminster. His chief literary works were,—"Glossary of Ecclesiatical Ornaments; 1"

"Tyne Priedples of Pointed on Christian 1" were, "Giossary of Ecclesiastical Ornaments," True Principles of Pointed, or Christian Aichitecture," and "An Apology for the Revival of Christian Architecture." He unfortunately outlived his mental powers. B. 1800; p. 1852.
Puror, Alfel de, poz-zhol', one of the most able French painters of the 18th entury, was born at Valenciennes, the native town of Wattean, and Valendemnes, the native town of Watteau, and at a very early age became a pupil of David, whose peculiar manner—that of a school now nearly extinct—he inherited. In 1810, his picture of "Jacob blessing Joseph's Children" attracted the attention of comoissurs, and in the following year "Lycurgus presenting the Heir to the Throne" obtained the grand prize, and laid the foundation of the painter's reputation. Few artists were more industrious than M de Priol. Resides his many oil nathrings— 3 K

"Historical Dissertations upon the Valteline." B. 1695: D. at Milan, 1756.

QUARLES, Francis, quawrles, an English poet, who received the appointment of cupbearer to Elizabeth, daughter of James I., and gueen of Bohemia, after which he became secretary to Archbishop Usher, and chronologer to the city of London. He was a zealous royalist, for which his estates were sequestrated and his goods plundered. The loss of his manuscripts is said to have preyed so much upon his spirits as to oceasion his death. He wrote several works, the best known of which is his "Emblens, Meditations, and Hieroglyphics," Pope is supposed to have been considerably indebted to his works. B. near Romford, Essex, 1502; D. 1614.

QUATREMERE DE QUINCY, Antoine Chrysostom. kat'-re-mair, an eminent French archaelogist, who became a member of the Legislative Assembly in 1790; but having declared himself in favour of a constitutional monarchy, was thrown into prison during the Reign of Terror, and remained there thirteen months. His royalist principles subsequently led to his being condemned to death by the Directory; but he contrived to effect his escape. Under the empire he was allowed to return to his native country, where he led a retired and studious life. At the restoration of the Bourbons he received the appointments of royal censor, intendant-general of the public arts and monuments, and member of the Council of Instruction. He subsequently became member of the French Institute, perpetual secretary of the Academy of Fine Arts, and deputy for the department of the Scine. His principal works were, "Dictionary of Architecture," "The Arts of Design in France," and lives of Raffaelle, Canova, and Michael Angelo. B. at Paris, 1755; D. 1819.

QUATTROMANI, Sertorio, quat'-tro-ma'-ne, a learned Italian writer, who, through the influence of Paul Manutius, was admitted into the library of the Vatican, where he studied the Grock writers with great avidity. He was after-wards taken into the service of the duke of Nocera, who held him in great esteem. After the death of his patron, he accepted an in-vitation from the Prince de Stigliano, but did not long remain in his service. He translated the "Afneid" into Italian verse; and his works were printed together at Naples in 1714. a, at Cosenza, Naples, about 1541; p. about 1606.

QUERINI, Angelo Maria, quai-re'-ne, a cele-brated Italian cardinal, who at the age of 17 entered the order of Benedictines. In 1710 he travelled in Germany, whence he passed to Hel-land, England, and France, in which countries he contracted an intimacy with the most learned men of the age, particularly Newton, Bentley, Fenctor, and Montfancon. Benedict XIII, made him are hishop and cardinal, which dignities he filled with great reputation. Cardinal Querini formed a magnificent library, which he gave to the Vatican. His most important works were a Latin freatise upon the Antiquities and History of Coon; a Literary History of Brescial, Lives of Popes Paul I., 11., and 111.; and an edition of the Letters of Cardinal Polo. B. at Venice, 1680; D. at Rome, 1755. Sith letters of nobility on curing the dauphin of the small-pox. He was also member of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, and of the Royal Society of London. He gave much attention to agricultural and economic science, the study of which latter he may be said to have introduced into France, and upon which he wrote several treagrance, and upon which he wrote several trea-tises. He was the principal of the Society called Economists. His chief works are, "On the Effects of Bleeding;" "Physical Essay on the Animal Economy;" and "Treatise on Fevers." B. 1604; D. 1771.

B. 1044; D. 1774.
QUENNEL, Passpiler, kes-nel, a celebrated French controversialist, who studied theology, after which he became distinguished by his learning and piety; but being a zealous Jansenist, was obliged to retire, to Brussels, where he published his "Reflections on the New Pestament," which work was attacked by the Jesuits, and occasioned so much controversy, that Pope Clement XI, issued his famous bull, called "Unigenitus," against Quesnel's book. Through the intrigues of the Jesuits ho cas thrown into prison, and put in irons; but se effected his escape, with the assistance of a Spanish gentleman. He wrote a number of pieces of practical and controversial divinity. n, at Paris, 1631; p. at Amsterdam, 1719.

QUEVEDO Y VILLEGAS, Francis, kai-vail-do, an eminent Spanish author, who cultivated both poetry and prose, and his works were much esteemed; but some of them gave such offence that the author was thrown into prison, where be remained. The best edition of his works was published at Madrid in 1794, by Saneho, in 11 vols. Svo. His "Visions of Rell" have been translated into English. B. 1580; D. 1645. Quilaux, Claude, keel³-lai, a French physician and Latin poet, who, to avoid the resentment of Cardinal Richelien, retired to Rome, where he wrote his "Callipadia," a Latin poem, on the art of having beautiful children. In this piece he satisfied Cardinal Mazarin, who, instead of unishing him, gave him an abbey. In 1656, Juillet published a new edition of his poem, ledicated to the cardinal, substituting an eulogy astead of satire. He also wrote a Latin poem called "The Henriad." His "Callinadia" has n translated into English by Rowe. n. 1602;

p. 1661. nnes, qvis, an eminent English actor, ntended for the law; but, having a U who trong inclination for the stage, joined a comany of players, and, after performing at bublin and other place with appliause, was amount and other place with appeause, was negared at Covent Garden, where he played clastaff with the createst success. He be-ame the first actor of his time till Garrick appeared. In 1746 the rival actors performed agether in the "Fair Penitent," and exhibited m astonishing display of powers. Quin was apployed by Frederick, Prince of Wales, to instruct the royal children in clocution; and when was informed of the graceful manner in which George III, delivered his first speech from the throne, he emphatically said, "Ay, it was I sho taught the boy to speak," About this time h I a pension, having refired from the years before. n. in London, 1693;

p. at Bath, 1766

QUINAULT, Philip, ke'-nolte, a French dra-matic poet, who is considered the first author of

QUARLES, FRANCIS.

Raleigh, Sir W.

Rabedats, Esabcots.

REAUMER.

French operas. He also produced several tragedies and comedies of considerable merit. He was a member of the French Academy, and obtained a pension from Louis XIV. The works of Quinault were printed at Paris, with his Life, in 1715. B. at Paris, 1635; D. 1688.

Ournery. Thomas de. (See De Quincey, Thomas.)

QUINET, Edgar, ke'-nai, a modern French author and statesman, who, after pursuing his educational career in his native country with some distinction, repaired to the university of Heidelberg, where he completed his education in the most brilliant manner. In 1828 he was appointed a member of the scientific commission dispatched to the Morea, and in 1839 became professor of foreign literature to the Faculty of Letters at Lyons. An eloquent and ardent advocate of republicanism, the principles of which he defended both in his writings and in the councils of the nation, he was, after the council of the nation, he was, after the council of the nation he was, after the council of the nation of residence at Brussels, and devoted himself en-tirely to literature. As an author he was very prolific and diverse. His most important works were, "Modern Greece," "Art in Germany," "Liberty of Discussion in Religious Matters," "The Austrian, French, Spanish, and Neapolitan Crusade against Rome," which was an intan Crusade against Rome," which was an energetic protest against the attacks made upon the republic of Rome in 1848; "The Philosophy of the History of France," and a dramatic poem. He also contributed many interesting and valuable articles to the "Revue des Deux Mondes." In 1852 he married, at Brussels, the daughter of the Moldavian poet Assaki. B. at Bourg, Ain, 1803.

QUINTANA, Manuel José, keen-ta'-na, a cele-brated Spanish poet, who pursued the profession of advocate until the French invasion of Spain (1808), when he resolved to devote his pen to the denunciation of the foreign intruders. He drew up the manifestoes of the insurrectionary juntas, established a weekly periodical, wherein he persistently attacked the French, and, indeed, in many forms, proved himself the most eloquent and energetic literary antagonist with whom they had to contend. But, at the same time, he was an advocate for free government, and his opinions found no favour with Ferdinand VII. Upon his return to Spain, Quintana was seized, and imprisoned during six years, and was subsequently banished to an obscure town in Estremadura. In 1828 he was permitted to return to Madrid, in consequence of his complying with King Ferdinand's request that he should write an ode upon the occasion of his third marriage. Honours and fortune followed : he was appointed director-general of studies and of public instruction; became a senator and a peer, and received in public a crown of laurel from the queen of Spain. His odes written in favour of liberty are regarded as among the finest specimens of Spanish poetry. Mr. Prescott translated several of his prose biographies. B. at Madrid, 1772; D. at the same city, 1857.

QUINTILIAN, Or QUINTILIANUS, Marcus Fabius, guin-til-t-di, guin-til-t-di-nue, a celebrated orator and critic. At the commencement brated orator and ortife. At the commencement of the reign of Galba, he opened a school of the all the perfect of the form of the form of the form of the form of his nephews. His "De Institutione is very fine and gpirited, Besides the above Oratoria" may be justly pronounced the finest system of rhetoric ever written. This invalusystem of rhetoric ever written. This invalidable work was discovered by Poggio Bracciolini in 1417, in the abbey of St. Gall. The best edition is that of Burmann, 1720, Leyden. B. either in Spain or at Rome, about 42; D. about 117.

QUINTUS CALABER, or QUINTUS SMYRNÆUS, quin'-tus, a Greek poet, who wrote, in imitation of the style of Homer, a continuation of the "Iliad." The work was discovered by Cardinal Bessarion in Calabria, in the 15th century. Select translations from it appeared at Oxford in 1821. Lived in the 5th century.

